set aside the pending motion so that I may offer a motion to commit, which is at the desk.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the motion.

The assistant legislative clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Alexander] moves to commit the bill H.R. 4872 to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate with instructions to report the same back to the Senate within 1 day with changes to reduce the interest paid by student borrowers by 1.5 percentage points to 5.3 percent.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator from Tennessee would agree to modify his request so that the earlier amendments be set aside until a time designated by the leaders and this motion then be taken up at a time to be decided by the leaders, which is the customary practice we have been utilizing with previous amendments.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator from Montana would permit me to consider that request and then respond to him within a few minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. The Senator would withdraw the request and make the request later?

Mr. ALEXANDER. If I may consult with Senator Gregg, then respond. If you will make the request later, I would be grateful.

Mr. BAUCUS. OK.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Thank you very much.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, 19 million American families will be interested in this motion because it will reduce the cost of student loans which 19 million Americans have. This is the season of the year when a great many students have been admitted to a college or a community college and are making plans and looking for where they are going to get their money. This motion is aimed at reducing the interest rate on 19 million student loans from 6.8 percent to 5.3 percent. For the average student loan debt of about $1,500 or $1,800 for the average family, this would save that student $1,700 or $1,800 over their ten-year loan. More specifically, it would not only reduce the interest rate on these loans, but it would prevent the Federal Government from overcharging 19 million American college students on their student loans to help pay for the health care bill and other government programs.

One may say: Wait a minute, I thought we were debating the health care bill. How did we get to student loans? That is a very good question because we are debating over the weekend. Of course, we have talked about student loans. There have been proposals, but there have been no hearings in the Senate, no consideration of the Senate committee of which I am a member. Yet over the weekend, the Democratic majority said: Well, look, while we are at it, let's have another Washington takeover. Let's take over the Federal student loan program. Let's take a program which is working very well, in which 15 million American students have voted with their feet to say they would prefer to get a regular student loan backed by the government, which they get at their college campuses, through their community bank, through a nonprofit institution. Even though they do have an option for a government loan, three out of four students have said they prefer the student loan through the private lender. Yet over the weekend, the Democratic majority has said: While we are at it, let's take over the Federal student loan program.

That means that starting July 1, students have no choice. They go to the Federal Government and their student loan, all 19 million of them, which is a new experience for 15 of the 19 million.

The way they are going to do it—and this is all going to be set up in a very short period of time—is that they are now going to have to go to four federal call centers. So instead of going to their local lender or to their nonprofit institution, that can help them with their application form and see what their options are and encourage them as they make their plans for college, welcome to the new government loan program. They have no choice. That is what they are going to do.

What are the other aspects of this? Well, other than denying choice to 19 million students on more than 2,000 campuses who prefer the Federal loan program, the Federal Government is going to have to borrow another $½ trillion in order to make these loans. Let's think about that for a moment. What is the No. 1 issue that most Americans worry about today? It is that we have too much debt. What did this weekend takeover do? It adds $½ trillion to the Federal debt in order to make student loans, at the rate of about $90 billion or $100 billion a year for 4 or 5 years.

So we take away choice, we add to the debt, and we also put $1,000 people out of their jobs. These are a lot of loans, and so we have a lot of people in these organizations, such as Edsouth in my State, a nonprofit organization that helps students get their loans. So all these lenders are out of business and we have one big bank—the Federal Government.

The Education Secretary is the new banker of the year. He is a very good Education Secretary, but I don't know how good a banker he is going to be.

But here is the rub, and this is what my motion is about. The Federal Government is going to be borrowing money at 2.8 percent and loaning it to students at 6.8 percent and taking the difference and spending it on new government programs, including the health care bill. So we are going to be overcharging 19 million students to help pay for the health care bill. And, according to the most recent Congressional Budget Office estimates, about $8.7 billion of the overcharged money is going to go to pay for the health care bill.

My friends on the other side have already spent the money, of course. They have announced to everybody that we are going to spend it on this and on that and in this, but what they do not tell you is, where they spent the money. Where they get the money is overcharging students—overcharging students.

These aren't Wall Street financiers we are overcharging. This might be a single mom going to a community college in Tennessee who has a job but who wants a better job and so she borrows some money to go to the community college and the Federal Government is going to overcharge her to pay for some government program. She might not like that.

In fact, I think there will be about 19 million student loan holders across the country who will go to school next year and say: Wait a minute here. You mean you are overcharging me on my student loan to pay for this health care bill and to pay for other government programs? The answer will be: Yes, that is what we are doing, unless my colleagues support this motion.

The estimate by my friends on the other side is that their Federal takeover of the Federal student loan enterprise will save $61 billion. If they are correct, let's give it to the students. Let's reduce their interest rate. I mean, $1,700 or $1,800 per student in interest over 10 years is the average amount of savings, and that is a lot of money. Yet they may not get a lot of money to Congressmen and Senators in Washington, but to the single mom going to the community college who is borrowing the money to go to school in order to get a better job, $1,700 or $1,800 is a lot of money.

So in addition to the higher premium numbers, the higher taxes, the Medicare cuts, and the new cost to States, we are going to be overcharging on student loans. Let me use a specific example from Tennessee, if I may. I was at the University of Tennessee earlier this week. This is the University of which I used to be president. The University of Tennessee has 30,000 students, and 37 percent of them—or 11,251—have Federal loans. After July 1, all 11,000 students at the University of Tennessee, with these Federal loans from private lenders, are going to have to switch to the government loans, and the government is going to overcharge 11,000 students who used to be paying their student loans at Knoxville and use that overcharged money to pay for new government programs, including the health care bill.
They are going to do the same thing to the University of Tennessee at Martin. There they choose to use the private loan program. They like it better than the government loan program. They think it is more convenient for the students. There, 824 students have Federal loans today. They are going to have government loans. They are going to be out of those loans by July 1. They are going to have government loans, and the government is going to overcharge them to help pay for the health care program.

Maryville College—I will be there Saturday night to help dedicate their arts center. There, 824 students have Federal loans today. They are going to have government loans. They are going to switch from private to government loans. They will have no choice after July 1. I know a lot of these students. They come from modest families, in most cases. They are not going to be very happy to learn that when they switch to a government loan after July 1, and if they have an average-size loan, which is about $25,000, that over 10 years they have to pay $1,800 a year or $1,800 to help pay for the health care program or other new government programs.

In Carson-Newman College, it is 1,259 students. In East Tennessee State University, it is 8,187 students. In all of Tennessee, it is 200,000 students who have student loans who are going to be overcharged an average of $1,700 or $1,800 a year to help pay for the health care program or some other government programs. This amendment would say: No, we are not. If we are going to take over the student loan program, at least we are not going to overcharge the students and use it for the health care program. We are going to give the money back to the students.

The point of my amendment is very simple. We are going to reduce the interest rate we charge on 19 million student loans. We will reduce it from 6.8 percent to 5.3 percent and let the students have the savings instead of letting the government have the savings. That is what the other side has not told people about the student loans.

If we had an all-purpose opportunity to debate this in the Senate, if we had a committee hearing on it, if we had taken it through the regular process, maybe we could have pointed this out, but no, we do it over the weekend, put it in the paper, send it to the newspapers, jam it through with great breast beating and protestations: Look what we have done for the country. I am accused to that. I used to be a Governor. I remember lots of Members of Congress that I did a great thing in Washington and then send the bill to me to pay. And then, as Governor—in this case the health care bill will be the same thing. It will send to the Governor and to the States new costs—$800 million over 5 years, or $1.5 billion. That is about $300 million a year new costs that State taxpayers will have to pay.

As the Medicaid cost goes up, we will get the second blow to the students of Tennessee because either the State is going to have to reduce funding for public higher education—which I believe this health care bill will help perpetuate—or we are going to have to raise taxes, or they are going to have to raise tuition, or they are going to have to do all three. If I am a student at Maryville College, Carson-Newman, or the University of Tennessee, I am going to have to raise tuition. This health care bill is going to raise my tuition up.

All those students in California who are protesting a 34-percent increase in tuition probably do not realize the reason for that happening. The main reason is that over the years the Federal government has mandated the Medi- care program that the States pay about a third of, that the State budgets have grown and grown and the Governors, such as Governor Schwarzenegger in California, have had no choice but to raise taxes. And when you get down through the budget process you have had no choice except to cut other programs. Governors know when you get down through the budget process in the State, it usually comes down to Medicaid expansion. So a great university such as the University of California is on its knees, and if it even hoped to keep its quality, it raises tuition 34 percent.

My amendment will not help that problem. The law the President signed yesterday already will transfer to States these huge new costs that are going to permanently damage higher education and raise tuition. But what my amendment will do is say we are not going to 200,000 students in Tennessee for their student loans and use $8.7 billion to help pay for health care.

Sometimes I think the motto of the Obama administration is: If you can find it in the Yellow Pages, the government ought to be doing it. This is breathtaking. While we are taking over cars, banks, insurance companies, while we are taking over more of health care, we will also take over the FFEL program and add $3 trillion to the Federal debt, overcharge 19 million students, cause 31,000 people to lose their jobs and say “all in a day’s work.” That is what happened last weekend. Over the weekend that is the decision they made. Then over here bragging about how much we are going to do for everybody. We are going to do a little more for everybody if we have a chance to vote on this amendment because when we go home we will have a chance to say either I cut the interest rate on your student loan from 6.8 to 5.3 percent and give you the savings, or I voted to overcharge you $1,700 or $1,800 a year and give the money to the government to help pay for the health care bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD following my remarks a few communications I received from Tennessee.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Here is a letter from Vanderbilt University to Congressman Cooper from the Chancellor which says:

Our overarching concern with [this proposal] is that the legislation forces institutions, including Vanderbilt, to switch to direct lending.

Here is a distinguished university, one of the top research universities in the world. They have chosen—they believe it is best for their students and for their campus to use the private banks and non-profits. We know better, of course, than Vanderbilt University. What is best for the campus and best for the students. We say no, July 1, only the government.

In another letter the Chancellor writes:

Vanderbilt opposes the elimination of the FFEL program. We encourage Congress to carefully study the many alternate proposals. . . . In addition to our concerns about the proposed timeframe for this mandated conversion, we believe would come with this switch, we are very concerned that the proposed time frame for this mandated conversion is unreasonable.

As you know, one proposed change has to do with the Direct Loan (DL) program, in which the government acts as the lender, and the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) program, in which lending institutions provide loans to students. Vanderbilt has a long and successful history of participation in the FFEL program which has provided our students with superior loan products, service, and choice in their federal loans for many years.

Earlier this year, the administration proposed eliminating the FFEL program, requiring all institutions to participate in DL and requiring the projections in savings over 10 years from this switch to fund a mandatory Pell Grant and expand the Perkins Act.
Loan program. (Other estimates have put the ten-year savings figure at closer to $47 billion.) H.R. 3221 seeks to implement those proposals. Unfortunately, the legislation has attracted some new, and perhaps meritorious in their own right, we believe should not be attached to federal student aid legislation.

We strongly and explicitly support a number of provisions of H.R. 3221:

- Modest increases to Pell Grants. Any increase to Pell Grants, regardless of whether the increase is deep or shallow, will and will benefit undergraduate students. Although the bill does not create the mandatory Pell Grant proposed by the administration, if 60 percent of the projected savings to be invested in the Pell Grant program, moving it toward a $6,800 maximum grant by 2019.

- Converts Stafford Loan interest rates from fixed to variable. The bill provides $3.25 billion to change the fixed interest rates on subsidized loans to a variable rate capped at 6.8 percent.

Simplifies the FAFSA. We support reasonable efforts included in the bill to simplify the FAFSA for federal student aid programs.

- Creates Access, Completion, and Persistence Awards.

Our overarching concern with H.R. 3221 is that the legislation forces institutions, including Vanderbilt, to switch to Direct Lending. Of additional concern is the fact that the program does not direct all of the savings from this federal mandate back into federal aid programs. Vanderbilt opposes the elimination of the FFEL program. Vanderbilt opposes the elimination of the FFEL program. Beyond Student Aid. H.R. 3221 goes far beyond federal student aid and includes funding for other initiatives as well as K–12 school construction and early childhood education. We believe that all savings generated from the student aid programs should remain in these programs. These initiatives, while potentially meritorious, should be funded through avenues other than student aid programs’ savings.

H.R. 3221 truly is a mixed bag. While Vanderbilt supports the significant new investment in the Pell Grant program, we are concerned that the proposals that have significantly reduced the level of support for the Pell Grant program. We remain strongly opposed to the elimination of the FFEL program. Although it could bring low-cost Perkins Loans to millions of new students, we are troubled by proposals to eliminate the in-school interest subsidy and other changes to that program.

Vanderbilt remains committed to the federal student aid programs, which provide a foundation to our aid packages for both undergraduate and graduate students. We look forward to continuing to work with you to ensure that all capable and eligible students, regardless of financial circumstances, are able to access and complete post-secondary education.

Sincerely,

Christina D. West, Director of Federal Relations.
October 15, 2009, but as of the date of this letter, proposed legislation still has not reached the Senate for a vote.

With all of the above taken into consideration, the Board of TASFAA, on behalf of our entire membership, urges you to support “choice and competition.” But if not, we ask you to implement a reasonable timeframe for transition.

Sincerely,

MARIAN MALONE HUFFMAN,
President, TASFAA.

BAPTIST COLLEGE OF HEALTH SCIENCES,

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS: I ask you to support H.R. 4103 and S. 2796 to ensure uninterrupted FFELP funding of Federal Student Loans for students and parents attending colleges and universities across the country.

I am a financial aid workeratMiddle Tennessee School of Anesthesiain Nashville, in the Office of Financial Aid. I have been on staff there since 1982. Our role is to make sure that all eligible students are able to afford college education.

I have worked in the student financial aid profession since 1982, ALWAYS at FFELP schools. In my many years of experience, I have witnessed tens of thousands of students being well served by the FFELP system.

The idea of the Federal Direct Student Loan Programs certainly contributed to needed improvements to FFELP, and the two programs have served to keep each other “on their toes.” To shift now to a federal monopsony in the student loan business could prove to be a monumental mistake.

The Secretary’s assistant has noted that it is a federal bureaucrat who will make the choice. Could it be that you and your committee members would like IG’s to have the power to make that choice as well?

Schools have had plenty of time to choose between FFELP and Direct Lending. It is clear that FFELP works better for some schools and Direct Lending for others. I am finding, consistently, BOTH programs do a good job of serving needy students attending college.

As a student financial aid administrator for over thirty-five years, I have concerns regarding students receiving needed funds to attend post-secondary institutions in the 2010-2011 academic year. Regarding the student’s direct lending, we all have one common bond, and that is helping the students we serve.

All schools are planning for the 2010-2011 academic year, and we feel trapped. I implore you to consider extending the Ensuring Continued Access to Student Loans Act, H.R. 4103 and S. 2796. As a financial aid professional, I know firsthand the importance of these funds in meeting students’ educational expenses. I believe that competition breeds excellence and I am in favor of keeping both the FFEL and Direct programs in place.

An interruption in the delivery of these funds would seriously impact many students and make the neediest among them unable to attend college. This bill will ensure that sufficient funds will be available for students in the upcoming year.

Please Vote YES to H.R. 4103 and S. 2796!

Thank you for your understanding and support of our students!

Most Sincerely,
ASHLEY BIANCHI,
Acting Director of Financial Aid.

AND NOW FOR STUDENTS, BIG LENDER
(By Lamar Alexander)

While health-care reform occupies the spotlight, the Obama administration is pushing for another Washington takeover—Edsouth’s services from a federal call center.

Nonprofit lenders such as Edsouth use the revenue generated under the student-loan system to operate and provide these valuable services—but of course, these services cost money. If—under this latest Washington takeover—Edsouth and other nonprofit lenders are prevented from making the number of loans they make today, they will no longer be able to provide these services, depriving students of real choices in lending.

The student loan “Banker of the Year” will be the only student to tax payer left calling the shots; the education secretary in Washington. Imagine trying to get all Edsouth’s services from a federal call center. Congress has reduced subsidies paid to lenders twice in the past four years, investing the savings in Pell Grants and other programs. But if there really is $47 billion in savings to be found, Congress should return it to students as lower interest rates, not trick students by overcharging them so Washington can create more government programs.

Seven-eighths of students who applied for federal aid using the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) had an average loan debt of $24,435. Assuming a standard 10-year repayment at 6.8 percent, those students would pay roughly $9,400 in interest.

In February 2008, 15 million students chose federal loans over the private market and chose nongovernment lenders—and only 4 million students chose to get their loans from Washington.

If this Washington takeover happens, I propose that all 19 million-plus student loans made by the government carry this warning label: “Beware: Your federal government is overcharging you your representative can take credit for starting new government programs. Enjoy the extra hours you work to pay off your student loan.”

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee has the floor.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, would you let me know when 10 more minutes has expired, please?

I have a little history with the student loan program. I see the distinguished Senator from Utah is here. When he was the ranking Republican on the Senate Health and Education Committee 20 years ago, I was the U.S. Education Secretary. He even helped me in my confirmation process, for which I have always been deeply grateful. But he and I worked together during that time when the question of having a government loan program or a direct loan program came up. It was widely discussed. We had a Republican President and a Democratic Congress. We came to a compromise. The compromise was to say let’s have both. We will give students the option and help them stay on and keep the organizations on their toes. So if you are a student at the University of Tennessee, the University of Utah, you have a choice. You can either say I don’t want to fool with all these private lenders or the local bank or the nonprofit organizations in my State or Edsouth or others or the State organization. I want to go straight to the government. All institutions have that choice. That is 6,000 colleges and universities and 19 million students. Only one-fourth of them choose the government direct lending program.

In the United States of America where choice and competition is an important part of our culture, that usually teaches us a lesson. That would suggest to us that most campuses, most students, by overwhelming majorities, would choose to move out of the market to lining up to go to the government. Otherwise we would have the government grocery store, we would have the government car company. Actually we are beginning to sound like that. We all have a government insurance company and all banks would be government banks. Everything would be in the government.

They used to have a system like that in the Soviet Union. Ours did a little better over time. Generally, our motto has been if you can find it in the Yellow Pages the government should not be doing it. What is happening with this administration and this Congress is the reverse. If you can find it in the Yellow Pages, the government should be doing it.

Here is the situation that developed over the last 20 years. There are roughly 6,000 institutions of higher education in this country. Many people say all higher education is like the University of Tennessee or Harvard or University of California, but there are many kinds of colleges and universities—for-profit, nonprofit, private, public, historically Black or minority, community colleges, historically Black colleges, and private institutions. The genius of our system is that we let Federal dollars, either through Pell grants or through loans, follow the student to the institution of their choice. Choice and competition in our system of higher education has given us by far the best system of higher education in the world.

Of those 6,000 institutions, last year, 2008, 4,421 schools chose to use the regular student loan program. That is three out of four. About one out of four used the government loan, the direct loan program, the one that everybody is going to be made to use now. Currently there are just under 2,000 lenders who participate in the student loan program. They are banks and they are nonprofit institutions such as Edsouth in Tennessee.

Last year nearly $100 billion in student loans was made. Let’s keep in mind the government is going to have to run up a half trillion more in debt at a time when our debt is ridiculously out of control. That is this weekend’s newest Washington takeover that just occurred.

There is not definitive evidence to suggest that the Federal Government can make these loans better than lenders can make these loans. I don’t think the Department of Education has the manpower to do it. I think that by July 1 there is going to be constellation all over the country from families who have applied for student loans and are applying through their Federal call center or through the Internet.

Edsouth, a nonprofit provider in Tennessee, for example, has five regional outreach counselors who canvas Tennessee and provide counseling. They made 443 presentations to Tennessee schools to help students understand—remember, we have 200,000 of these students in Tennessee—to help them understand their options. They worked with 1,000 school counselors.

The U.S. Department of Education will soon be providing all of these services.

Senator Gregg earlier had written the Congressional Budget Office asking how much money this Federal takeover would save. They came back with an explanation that it is not $67 billion or $96 billion, which is a lot, but number being used today, but more like $47 billion. My own suspicion, and I cannot prove it, but my own suspicion, having been a university president, having been Secretary of Education and having watched this program for 20 years, is that in the real world the Federal Government is not going to make these 19 million loans more convenient for students. It is not going to be able to do it any cheaper. It is just going to borrow money at 2 percent, throw 31,000 people out of jobs, and the icing on the cake, and it is a sour-tasting icing, is that the 19 million students who have student loans after July 1 are going to be overcharged by the Federal Government, which will be borrowing money at 2 percent, lending it at 6.8 percent, and using the money to help pay for the health care bill and other programs.

Our friends on the other side, they would be saying—these are the guys who do everything on the bankers or the lenders—well, the lenders are charging too much money. Well, if they are charging too much money, reduce what they get.
You are saying there are $61 billion in savings, much of which comes from the fact that the Federal Government can borrow money more cheaply than private lenders can.

But then you are saying, we are going to say, not only are we going to spend it, we are going to overcharge these students. I can't believe the brazenness of this, and I believe neither will 19 million students understand it.

So I am glad to come to the floor today and talk about my motion, which I will be glad to introduce at the appropriate time. No Senate bill has been introduced. Our committee has held no hearings. We have not had a markup of this bill. This is a wondrous Washington takeover over the weekend.

We stick into the health care bill another Washington takeover, this time of 19 million student loans. On top of it: Congratulations, Mr. and Mrs. Work. You are going to be overcharged to be overcharged on your loan to help pay for the health care bill and other government programs.

I hope my friends in the Senate, on both sides of the aisle, will see the injustice. I will say: OK, the Senator is right, Senator ALEXANDER. If we are going to take it over, and if we are going to create $61 billion in savings, at least let's give the students the savings. Let's not give it to the government to overcharge the students, on an average $25,000 student debt, $1,700 or $1,800 over 10 years.

I think we need to have a truth-and-lending stamp that goes on every single student loan starting July 1 that says: Warning. Your government is overcharging you in order to help pay for other government programs.

We will let the single mom who has a job, who is going to school to help improve her circumstances, see what she thinks about the idea of her being overcharged to help pay for other government programs.

So my motion, when it is voted on, will do a very simple thing. It will say to the 19 million students in the country: We are going to reduce your interest rate on your student loan from a typical 6.8 percent to 5.3 percent. That is going to save you $1,700 or $1,800 on an average loan over ten years. It says: We are not going to overcharge 19 million students to help pay for the health care bill.

Before I yield the floor, I see my friend from New Hampshire is engaged in conversation. I wonder if I could address the Senator from New Hampshire through the Chair. Before I yield the floor, I wish to ask, through the Chair, whether that is what I should do.

Mr. GREGG. Well, I would like to ask the Senator from Tennessee a question on the substance of his proposal.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I will be glad to take the Senator's question.

Mr. GREGG. Because I do think it is an important proposal. As I understand it, what the Senator is saying is that they put this baggage on the train, which is the nationalization of all student loans in this country, the government is going to take them all over, which will be the fourth major nationalization event this administration has undertaken.

First, they nationalized the auto industry. Now, they are in the process of quasi-nationalizing the health care industry. Now they are going to nationalize the educational industry. If the House-passed bill passes, they will essentially be nationalizing the financial industry—or having the capacity to—because they can break up any company, whether they are healthy or not, under the Kanjorski amendment.

So my question is: They threw this proposal on the train, nationalizing the student loan industry, in order to use student loan money to finance the health care bill because this bill would have violated the budget rules if it did not have the student loan money basically paying for it?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I am afraid the Senator from New Hampshire is exactly right. According to the Congressional Budget Office's updated estimates, $61 billion out of this money that is being overcharged to students will be used to help pay for the health care bill.

The other money, except for a small part, will be used for other government programs. On both counts—one Washington takeover after another. That is why I am saying, I think we ought to hide the Yellow Pages from these fellows because if they find something in there that is being done in the private sector, they are going to say: Oh, we can cut out the profit, we can cut out the business; why does not the government do it?

Then, second, I mean this is astonishing to me. These are not Wall Street financiers going to community colleges in New Hampshire and Tennessee, these are people with jobs who are trying to improve their lot. Their student loan levels are already too high. We are worried about that. So we are going to take another $1,700 or $1,800 on a $25,000 average loan over 10 years. We are just going to say: Well, we will overcharge you. We are going to use that in government. The answer is, yes, to your question, Senator; $6.7 billion of the money taken from students by overcharging them on their student loans will go to help pay for the health care bill.

Mr. GREGG. If I can ask a further question of the Senator. If they did not have that $6.7 billion of student loan money being used to finance the health care bill, this reconciliation bill would fall; would it not? Because it would not meet the budget instructions of having $1 billion of savings.

Mr. ALEXANDER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GREGG. The Senator had a further question about whether the floor could be yielded. We are in the process of seeking a unanimous consent agreement.

Mr. BAUCUS. I was going to ask the Senator from Tennessee a question. Mr. ALEXANDER. I will be glad to have a question.

Mr. BAUCUS. Is it not true that the Congressional Budget Office stated in a letter, dated March 20, commented on the bill in a letter to the Speaker on page 13, where it states: The title as a whole—that is referring to the education title—that as a whole would reduce budget deficits in both the 10-year projection period and in subsequent years.

Is it not true that the Congressional Budget Office reached that conclusion and so states in their letter of March 20?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I do not have that letter in front of me, and I do not know what that has to do with my amendment.

What I am saying is, the Democratic majority is deliberately overcharging 19 million students to help pay for the health care bill. Those are the Congressional Budget Office's figures, not mine.

I would ask, through the Chair, to the Senator from New Hampshire, whether I should at this point yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. I appreciate the Senator from Tennessee's courtesy. At this time, we are ready to go forward with a unanimous consent request.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I yield the floor. The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I will propose a unanimous consent. Following that, I will state my intention on the order of votes, which I have yet to clear with the leader's office.

I ask unanimous consent that the total time on the bill be divided equally between the majority leaders or their designees and that the offering of amendments not add additional claims to the time.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. GREGG. Reserving the right to object, I would simply note that the next amendment on our side would be offered by Senator HATCH.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I would ask further unanimous consent—

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wish to finish up that business. It is something, I think, the Senator will appreciate.

It is my intention—I am not asking for a unanimous consent agreement, but it is my intention that the order of amendments would be, beginning with the Gregg amendment, Medicare; McCain, target provisions; then the Crapo amendment on taxes; then the Enzi motion to commit, regarding employer mandates; the Barrasso amendment regarding premiums; and then, next, the Grassley amendment regarding executive personnel should be in the exchange.

Mr. GREGG. As I understand what the Senator is asking, is that the voting order be in the order they were offered.

Mr. BAUCUS. That is correct. I am not asking consent. That is my intention, but there is no unanimous consent request at this time.

Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Tennessee. The Senator from Tennessee will want to submit his amendment back for the Record. He had withdrawn it. Can we do that?

I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be the Senator from Tennessee’s amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BAUCUS. Reserving the right to object, I might ask if the understanding be that the motion, as on the earlier amendments, that this motion be set aside until a time to be determined by the leaders.

Mr. GREGG. Why don’t we do that on every amendment we offer so we do not have to do that.

Mr. BAUCUS. That would be fine.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Alexander motion is pending.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield 15 minutes to the Senator from Michigan, under the motion.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, the debate which will come to a close this week has, in one sense, been going on for a century. But in another sense, it has been going on for a century.

In 1912, Theodore Roosevelt campaigned on the promise of a national health care program. Working-class members, Roosevelt said, are entitled to a basic standard of protection from injury and illness.

Wherever such standards are not met by given establishments, by given industries, are unprovided for by a Legislature, or are balked by unenlightened courts, the workers are in jeopardy, the progressive employer is penalized, and the community pays a heavy moral price.

Well, since Teddy Roosevelt said that, Presidents and Members of Congress from both parties, seeing the same costs Theodore Roosevelt saw in the failure to assure health care for all, have grappled with this issue.

The New Deal reform has largely fallen short. They have foundered for many reasons: Health care is personal and complex. The timing was wrong or the politics were difficult. Leaders on all sides failed to find the compromises that would have enabled them to get the job done. But the recurring theme is that time and again, reformers have failed to overcome the enormous obstacles that those who profit from the status quo have been able to erect. Because we have fallen short in the past, Americans today face a health care system that costs too much and too often delivers too little.

In our United States today, mothers and fathers worry that they can cut from the family budget to afford yet another increase in their health care premiums. Parents file for bankruptcy because their insurance fell thousands of dollars short in providing for a child’s lifesaving treatment. Needy workers in small businesses in this country involve medical costs, and more than half of those involve people who had insurance.

Small business owners eliminate health coverage for employees because they cannot afford another year of massive premium increases. Thousands of Americans who woke this morning with health care insurance will go to bed tonight without it.

Despite those tragic facts, entrenched interests have sought again to prevent reform to consign our Nation to an unsustainable status quo because what is good for the American people will not necessarily profit some company.

The health insurance industry has dominated health care decisions in this country for too long. How often have our constituents come to us with stories of insurance companies that deny them coverage of necessary treatment? How often have our constituents told us of insurance companies that deny coverage because of preexisting conditions or canceled coverage because of minor inaccuracies the company conveniently discovered just after diagnosis of a serious and costly illness?

It is time to end the unhealthy dominance of the health insurance industry. So I will cast my vote again against those entrenched interests and my vote will be for health care reform. I hope our colleagues will vote the same.

We have the opportunity to finish the task of overcoming the entrenched opposition to do what so many Presidents and so many Members of this body have fought for decades to accomplish. The months of debate have been difficult. They have too often been filled with too much heat and too little light, with exaggeration, with half-truth, with untruth, with innuendo designed to obscure rather than to inform. That is why reform in many ways from some previous debates on major reforms. When Congress approved Social Security in 1935, one Republican Senator warned that it would “end the progress of a great country.” When Medicare was debated in 1965, one critic charged that cooperation with the plan would be “complicit in evil.” Scare tactics of the past proved absurd, but they worked.

Now we get more scare tactics. A number of my Republican colleagues continue to claim that Congress will take over health care. They cannot afford another year of large government takeover of health care. The American Medical Association supports this health care plan. Surely the American Medical Association is not a supporter of a government takeover of health care. Then we are told this will hurt Medicare. Yet the association that represents more seniors than any other, AARP, endorses this health care plan.

The scare tactics are coming at it again, but there is a difference. While scare tactics were able to derail health care reform in the past, scare tactics are just not working this time. The American people have expressed their disapproval of wild, inaccurate claims in many ways, including personal conversations with most of us.

It is true that because health care is so complex, because changes must be phased in and transition periods are often necessary, many of the benefits of this bill will not take effect for some time. But improvements in health care for millions of Americans will take place almost immediately.

After President Obama signed this bill into law, small businesses immediately got a tax cut to help defray the cost of providing insurance to their employees. Within 3 months of the signing, the bill will allow people with preexisting conditions to access a special fund to help cover the gap until insurance exchanges, where they can obtain coverage, become operational. And retiree health plans will qualify for a reinsurance program to help control their costs. In federal law, the Government will begin helping States set up agencies to help consumers choose new health plans or to challenge unfair decisions by their current insurance plan. Eventually, those agencies will help consumers enroll in insurance exchanges that will help millions of people find dependable coverage that meets minimum quality standards at a price they are more likely to afford. Within 6 months of the President’s signature yesterday, insurance forms will have to take hold. New health plans will be required to let women see an OB/GYN without seeking insurance company approval. They will be prohibited from denying coverage to children based on preexisting conditions and required to allow children to remain on their parents’ policies until age 26. Insurance companies will have to provide preventive care without copays or deductibles, and they will be barred from setting lifetime coverage limits. Those historic improvements in our health care system will take place within the first 6 months after enactment of this legislation.

More sweeping changes will come with full implementation of this bill’s provisions. We will protect Americans of all ages from denial of coverage based on preexisting conditions, from annual limits on treatment, from exorbitant out-of-pocket costs, and from confusing and opaque language that disguises the cost or the scope of coverage. We will also get rid of the insurers who give customers a rebate if those insurers don’t spend enough revenue on patient care. We will fill the Medicare doughnut hole that hurts many seniors.

At its heart, this bill and its improvements in this reconciliation effort aim to tackle the central problems of our health care system—rising costs and the insecurity many Americans rightly feel about the lack of dependability of their insurance.

The cost of health care already exceeds the ability of many American families to pay, will price more and more of the system out of business and will present enormous problems for the Federal budget if not contained. We can and will make the health insurance system work for those who already have coverage by holding down those unsustainable increases in premiums. We are going to set in place a system that leaves so many of our citizens in ways we have been struggling to do in this Senate for decades and long before many of us got here.

To those who continue to oppose reform, I say to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, the reconciliation bill is important, not only to the people of Illinois but to the people of the United States.

Mr. BURRIS. Mr. President, I thank Senator WARNER. I compliment him for his leadership in getting the freshmen involved and engaged. I am sure we are getting the message out to the American people.

This piece of legislation, which was signed yesterday by President Obama, is historic. I am proud and appreciative that I had the opportunity to play a part. As you know, my position was for a very strong public option. But as to the issues that are in it, we deal with cost and accountability for the insurance companies. Therefore, it is a major piece of legislation which we want the public to understand.

We want the public to understand that for some people this law takes effect immediately. Small businesses benefit in that they will get a tax credit. Children will be no elimination for preexisting conditions. Secondly, for children there will be no elimination for preexisting conditions. Within the next 90 days, provisions will kick in on behalf of children. So there are a lot of things in this bill that will benefit all of us.

We have been trying to do this for over 97 years.

I say to my colleagues on the other side, the reconciliation bill is important. We're going to make some changes. The battle they are waging, not from the standpoint of policy but certainly from the standpoint of politics, seeking to make a failure out of this issue, is not really fair to the American people. The misinformation that they have been getting out about this legislation is not fair.

Not only are we going to see immediate benefits, but the long-term benefits of this legislation are also helpful.

SITUATIONS dealing with preexisting conditions—in 2014, that will kick in. I remember when my colleague was changing jobs, she needed to get insurance because she had a headache problem. They wouldn't insure her. I had to battle to get insurance for my daughter.

This is good legislation. It is history.

I want the American people to know that it is on the books, and we are going to make necessary corrections. The point is, however, how we got here.

I thank my colleague from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. I thank Senator BURRES for his comments. I know how hard he fought for this legislation, since day one.

This legislation is going to have wide-ranging effects for people from all across the Nation.

I now know my colleague, the Senator from North Carolina, wishes to speak. North Carolina and Virginia are neighbors. We both share a number of small businesses. We have a vibrant entrepreneurial flavor in Virginia and North Carolina. I know Senator HAGAN has been concerned not only on the overall aspects of health care but particularly how this health care bill is going to affect small business in her State.

I wish to now ask Senator HAGAN to tell us how this bill will affect people in North Carolina.

Ms. HAGAN. I thank Senator WAR-

NER. I appreciate the time for us to come down here and talk about the need for health care reform. The bill that was signed into law yesterday is getting us on that track.

The new and historic law, combined with what we are now considering in the Senate, is going to reform our health care system to reduce costs and improve patient care for those families in North Carolina and in Virginia and families across America.

In 1996, the average premium in North Carolina for a family of four was

jected, in 2016, to be $24,000. People cannot afford that. That is why we need to have change.

During decades of working to fix a broken health care system, this law controls exploding costs, increases access to health care, and reduces our long-term deficit, which I know we are very concerned about, by as much as $1.2 trillion over the next 20 years.

But in addition to containing costs, health care reform will improve access and quality of health care for millions of Americans. Right now, in North Carolina, we have 1.7 million people without insurance. They will now have access to a family doctor.

This bill provides immediate benefits to small businesses, middle-class families, and seniors in North Carolina. The small business owners whom I talk to to want to provide health care to their employees, but the costs are prohibitive.

This month, I received an e-mail from a small chiropractic practice in eastern North Carolina that had to drop its health plan for its employees because the rates doubled over the last 2 years. But today, 112,000 North Carolinian small businesses will be eligible for tax credits to provide health care to their employees.

Within the next 6 months, hard-working, middle-class families will be able to add their children up to the age of 26 to their health care plans. This will benefit about 870,000 young adults in my State.

This year, insurance companies will no longer be able to deny coverage to a child for a preexisting condition, such as asthma or diabetes. And it means insurance companies will no longer be able to drop your coverage because you get sick or because you file too many claims.

In North Carolina, 1.4 million seniors will receive preventive services with no additional costs, and 250,000 seniors will have their drug costs in the doughnut hole immediately reduced and eventually eliminated.

I am proud of these immediate benefits and our efforts to reform the health care system over the long term. The health care reform effort would not have been possible without the hard work of Capitol Hill staffs. I personally want to thank two incredible health care staffers on my team, Michelle Adams and Tracy Zvenyach, who worked countless hours for reform in our country.

Mr. WARNER. I thank Senator HAGAN. I appreciate her leadership on this issue. Again, I also appreciate her recognition of not only the Members who have been struggling with the bill for almost a year, but the staff members who help us put together the facts, put together the case studies, who help us crunch the numbers, as we try to make sure we get this right.

I now want to call on my friend, the Senator from Alaska. One of the things the freshmen have always said, as we have come to the floor over these months—as we have pointed out—is that the price of doing nothing is extraordinarily high to our economy, to our families, to our businesses, and that the status quo is not sustainable.

I know this has been a theme Senator BEGICH has echoed repeatedly on the floor. As we come to the closing hours of this debate, if you could share with us one more time why you think the status quo is unacceptable. What is the price of doing nothing? How would that affect the people and businesses in the great State of Alaska?

Senator BEGICH.

Mr. BEGICH. I thank the Senator. Thank you for your leadership, and especially as the freshmen group worked on the cost containment piece of this legislation. That was an important part we will see for many years to come.

Over the next few days we are focusing on making a good bill a little bit better. Yesterday, the President signed the landmark legislation moving health care reform into law. So over the next few days, again, we are going to work on making that bill a little bit better. You are going to see clearly the differences. You are going to see our side of the equation has worked hard on this legislation. Those who voted for health care reform are on the side of American families, not on the side of the insurance industry. We are on the side of seniors who will see lower prescription drug costs—because reform is going to work in that direction—not on the side of big drug companies. We are on the side of our small business—not business as usual.

I was truly proud to vote for and help pass that legislation last December. But as mentioned already this morning, there are many benefits that occur right now, this year. For example, there is help for small businesses. As you just heard, immediately, firms with fewer than 10 workers get a tax credit worth 35 percent of what they will spend now on health insurance. It will eventually ramp up to a 50-percent tax credit, and firms with up to 25 workers will get a partial credit. For small businesses—truly the backbone of the Alaska business community and this country’s business community—that is an immediate benefit.

Coverage for preexisting conditions: Within 3 months, people with pre-existing conditions and no insurance will get help. A $5 billion fund is being set up to provide them with affordable coverage.

Coverage for dependent children: Within 6 months, parents will be able to extend their policies to cover their dependent children up to the age of 26.

Some of these points you have already heard. As I said, this morning, but it is important to repeat them be-because I think in the noise over the last year and a half a lot of it got lost.

Another—a very important one—free preventive care: Within 6 months, all insurance plans must provide free checkups. This includes seniors on Medicare. And there is much, much more when you look at this legislation.

For my own State, the bill addresses many specific concerns I have heard in Alaska. It includes several of my amendments, including a panel to improve Federal health care in Alaska, increased loan forgiveness for thousands of new primary care providers, and added funding for community hospitals.

We also, as a team of freshmen, wrote a cost containment amendment that cuts prices for consumers, increases value and innovation in the health care system and, as mentioned earlier—let’s hear it—this money is a down payment: in the first 10 years, $134 billion, and in the next 10 years, $1.3 trillion in deficit reduction.

This bill is paid for—for paid for. These are many of the improvements. Again, these improvements will save lives; add $32 million people covered—making sure they have coverage—save seniors on prescription drug costs by closing the doughnut hole; save families, by providing tax relief to help them afford health care; and crack down on fraud.

It has been an enormous time in this last year and a half working on this. But I also want to say, the next 3 days will also be tedious and confusing to the public because what you will see on the other side is every imaginable amendment we would love to see—many of them we probably would love to vote for. I am not voting for any of them. The whole tactic is to delay the delivery, to ensure that people who want a family doctor will not get one, to protect the insurance companies instead of what we are trying to do to make sure people get a fair shake from their companies. So you are going to see next 3 days I think what is important for us is to remind Americans—Alaskans in my State—why this bill is important. It helps small business, families, seniors. It does it now. It is important. It is important for us to get it done. But do not be fooled by the next 3 days on what goes on this floor.

We have passed health care reform. All we are doing now is making a good bill better. I thank the Senator from Virginia. Mr. WARNER. I thank the Senator. Thank you for your comments. Thank you for your leadership, particularly on a series of freshmen amendments that dealt with cost containment. And if there exists after my colleagues speak, I am going to go back to that issue.

But I now want to ask my good friend from Oregon a question. No one has come to this body with more passion about making sure working families get a fair break, not only in health care but in the world of financial reform and issues that cut across the spectrum. I know one of the issues Senator MERKLEY has worked on tirelessly throughout this whole conversation is how to make sure the Oregon families get that fair break, get that fair shot, how to make sure health care is affordable.

I would like to share with our colleagues those Americans who are at home watching what this health care bill does to help those middle-class Americans, middle-class Oregonians to make sure they get that fair break, fair break in health care reform.

Senator MERKLEY. Mr. MERKLEY. I thank the Senator so much. It is a pleasure to come here with my colleagues on the floor.

I know when all of my colleagues go home, they hear stories from their constituents about our broken health care system. That certainly is what I hear. I hear it in my townhalls, I hear it on the street, as people stop me and share their story. And I certainly hear it in my mail.

I have in my hand a few of the stories citizens in Oregon have sent to me. To give you a sense of the type of frustration we are hearing, Don writes:

Mr. Udall. House Republicans have passed the reconciliation bill later this week. The President already has by executive order the authority to sign it into law. Mr. President, I thank Senator WARNER for leading us and pulling us through in this freshman effort. It has been a pleasure to work with all of my fellow freshman Senators on the floor again and to join them right now. Last fall, we gathered right here in this Chamber to fight for health care reform. As a group, we helped lead the charge to make quality, affordable health care accessible to all Americans. Yesterday, the change we have been fighting for became a reality. With President Obama’s signature, health care reform is now the law of the land.

This moment has been a long time coming. Teddy Roosevelt first called for health care reform nearly a century ago. His banner was taken up by a long and distinguished list of men and women who advocated for change. For too many years, New Mexicans, like Americans across the country, have struggled to find or afford health insurance. They have struggled to hang on to policies that get more and more expensive as they become more and more restrictive every day. With this reform, all of that begins to change.

No longer will insurance companies be able to discriminate based on pre-existing conditions. No longer will they be able to dramatically increase rates without public scrutiny. No longer will 32 million Americans worry every day about what would happen to their families if they get sick or are in an accident. I am proud to have fought for and supported this law in favor of this historic legislation.

This reform will benefit all Americans, including our country’s First Americans, the 1.9 million American Indian and Alaska Natives who have spent too many years suffering because the federal government hasn’t lived up to its promise to them.

With this reform, we begin meeting our obligations to Native Americans by reforming the Indian health care system, permanently reauthorizing the Indian Health Care Improvement Act. This law, which provides a framework under which health care programs for Native Americans are delivered, hasn’t been reauthorized in more than 10 years. As a result, American Indians and Alaska Natives are more restricted as likely as whites to be uninsured, and almost half of low-income American Indians and Alaska Natives lack health coverage.

Prior to this reform, no longer will Native Americans be forced to suffer needlessly. No longer will they have to go without treatment for chronic conditions like diabetes and heart disease.
No longer will they have to put off basic care like colonoscopies or cholesterol screenings.

I say again, this is a new day for health care in America. I am proud to have fought for, and voted in favor of, this historic legislation.

Yesterday, I began taking back control of our own health care. Today, the journey continues. I pledge to continue fighting every day to ensure New Mexican families and small businesses have the security and stability that comes with access to quality, affordable health care.

The reason I have fought so hard for reform is simple. For my constituents, the status quo is not an option. So it is the people of New Mexico I wish to talk about today. They are the reason I stand up every day and fight for comprehensive reform.

People such as Katheryn Whitesides—Katheryn lives in Clayton, NM. We met last year when she attended one of my health care town halls. Katheryn worked hard all her life. She had affordable insurance through her employer. But since she retired, Katheryn’s health insurance premiums have risen dramatically from $110 a month when she was working, to more than $800 a month today. Katheryn’s insurer recently denied a claim for a treatment she received. Now, on top of skyrocketing monthly premiums, she also owes about $4,000 in medical bills. That is more money than she receives from 5 months of pension payments.

As Katheryn herself said:

"It’s unsustainable for me. And I know I’m not the only one. I’m just looking for some relief—not just for me, but for all those people coming behind me."

To folks such as Katheryn, I say: Relief is coming. This reform will make health insurance more affordable by placing caps on out-of-pocket medical expenses. It will make it more affordable by providing premium assistance through tax credits for low- and moderate-income families.

I am fighting for New Mexicans such as Katheryn, and I am also fighting for New Mexico’s small business and for entrepreneurs such as Arvind Raichur. Arvind has owned a small business in Albuquerque for more than a decade. As the boss, he has made it a priority to provide his employees with good benefits. For years, he paid 100 percent of his employees’ health care premiums, but he is not sure how much longer he will be able to do that and stay afloat. You see, for the past few years, Arvind’s insurer has increased his company’s health care premiums by between 30 and 40 percent every year, and there is nothing Arvind can do about it.

As Arvind said:

"We’ve got no bargaining power. We’ve got no leverage. I’m insuring maybe a dozen people at my company here. It’s very hard. The insurance companies give you a 30 or 40 percent increase and that’s what you get. . . . It’s too big a bite."

To small business owners such as Arvind and their employees, I say: Relief is coming.

This reform will help small businesses by making it more affordable for them to offer coverage for their employees. It does this by providing tax credits for between 30 and 50 percent of premiums and by creating small business health exchanges to build a larger employee pool.

In New Mexico, the vast majority of our insured are employees, but they and their employers can’t afford coverage. These new tax credits will help our small businesses provide insurance for their employees at a cost they can afford.

For hardworking New Mexicans like Katheryn and for small business owners like Arvind, health care reform can’t come fast enough. Katheryn and Arvind can’t afford the health care status quo. Katheryn and Arvind are the reason I stand here today. To my friends on both sides of the aisle I say: Let’s get this done.

I am proud to be part of this body as we cast our final votes in favor of this landmark reform. With this final vote, we will finish this leg of the race. I look forward to building on this solid foundation in the coming months and years.

I yield the floor.

Mr. WARNER. I thank Senator Udall. I know our time is running out; just a final comment I wish to make.

As many of my colleagues know, I had the honor of serving as Governor of Virginia before becoming a Senator. I think one of the differences between an executive and a legislator is, as a former executive I realize that passing the bill is just the first step. What happens is going to be in the implementation afterwards.

The appeal I would make, particularly to my colleagues on the other side, is to agree with some of their points that we don’t go far enough on cost containment, but there are a lot of things in this bill where we grant the Secretary the ability to start experimental programs—on cost containment, on bundling of payments. How this bill is implemented is going to be where the rubber hits the road. I, for one, believe there is more we can do around this issue of cost containment, and I hope in the coming weeks and months, rather than being for repeal, they would find the common ground to make this legislation even better.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wish to let Senators know that we intend to alternate blocks of time, roughly a half hour on each side. So I ask unanimous consent that the next half hour be under the control of the Republicans and that the half hour thereafter be under the control of the majority.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida.

Mr. LeMIEUX. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily set aside the pending motions and amendments so that I may offer an amendment which I consider important.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida.

Mr. LeMIEUX. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment in full follows:

(Purpose: To enroll Members of Congress in the Medicaid program)

At the end of subtitle C of title I, add the following:

SEC. 1207. MEMBERS OF CONGRESS REQUIRED TO HAVE COVERAGE UNDER MEDICAID INSTEAD OF THROUGH FEHBP.

(a) In General.—Notwithstanding chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code, title XIX of the Social Security Act, or any provision of this Act, effective on the date of enactment of this Act:

(1) each Member of Congress shall be eligible for medical assistance under the Medicaid plan of the State in which the Member resides; and

(2) any employer contribution under chapter 89 of such Code on behalf of the Member may be paid only to the State agency responsible for administering the Medicaid plan in which the Member enrolls and not to the offeror of a plan offered through the Federal employee health benefit program under such chapter.

(b) PAYMENTS BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, in consultation with the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, shall establish procedures under which the employer contributions that would otherwise be made on behalf of a Member of Congress if the Member were enrolled in a plan offered through the Federal employee health benefit program may be made directly to the State agencies described in subsection (a).

(c) ELIGIBLE FOR FEHBP.—Effective on the date of enactment of this Act, no Member of Congress shall be eligible to obtain health insurance coverage under the program under chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code.

(d) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term ‘Member of Congress’ means any member of the House of Representatives or the Senate.

Mr. LeMIEUX. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment I am offering today.

I wish to thank my colleague from Virginia who asked us to think about the practical aspects of this health care reform. I just listened to my freshman colleagues on the Democratic side talk about all of the good things, in their opinion, this bill is going to do. There is one thing I didn’t hear them speak about. I didn’t hear them speak about the fact that 16 million of the 30-some million who have the opportunity for health care under this law, are going into Medicaid.

The practical impact my friend from Virginia asked us to think about is that our States right now are finding themselves in bankruptcy, realistically, because of the obligation to Medicaid. Our States, unlike the Federal Government, have to balance their budgets. Medicaid is a program that the States pay some 50 percent of, and they can’t make it work. We are finding out in Florida right now that this program—this new law—will cost Florida $1 billion in the next 10 years. Because they balance their budget and because they can’t print money, that means the dollars will go away from teachers, away from students, and away from police.

The point I wish to make today and the amendment I am offering is this: Several times, as I have been on the floor and heard from my Democratic colleagues, they made this point: Why shouldn’t the American people have the same health care that we in the Congress enjoy? Why shouldn’t they, as do all Federal employees, be able to pick from a comprehensive and rich catalog of benefits in order to take care of their health and the health of their families?

That is a good point, but what is going to happen to these 16 million new Americans? They are going to go on Medicaid. That is not the plan we have. That is not the rich benefits the Members of Congress enjoy. Medicaid—health care for the poor, which will now have some 50 million Americans in it after these 16 million join it—is a program in crisis. It is a program that is failing.

Let me give my colleagues some real examples. Right now we know patients on Medicaid can’t find doctors who will treat them. We know in California, for example, 49 percent of family physicians do not participate in Medicaid.

I entered this document into the Record last week. On March 17 the Seattle Times reported that Walgreens will no longer take new Medicaid patients in the city of Seattle. On March 15, the New York Times reported about Mrs. Vliet. She is in Flint, MI. She has cancer. For 2 years she has been receiving treatment, but now her doctor is dropping her from Medicaid. He says:

But after a while you realize that we’re really just losing money on seeing those patients, not even breaking even. We are starting to lose more and more money, month after month.

All across America, health care providers are dumping Medicaid, and we are about to add 16 million new people. So I wish to take a page from my friends on the other side because they say the American people should have the same rich benefits we have.

What I am proposing today with this amendment, the Members of Congress should have the same benefits as these 16 million new people and these 50 million Americans. Under this amendment, the Members of Congress will go into Medicaid. If it is good enough for 50 million Americans, it should be good enough for us.

So I have offered amendment No. 3586. It will require that the benefits that are paid for health care by the Federal Government for the 533 Members of Congress go to the State Medicaid agencies, and then we can all enjoy this program that 50 million people are in— Members of Congress. If it is good enough for 50 million Americans, it is good enough for Members of Congress.

I wish to call upon my distinguished colleague from Arizona whom I know wishes to speak on this issue as well. Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to engage in a colloquy with the Senator from Oklahoma, the Senator from Florida, and myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I strongly support the amendment. Let me also just for a moment point out where we are.

Where are we now that all the champagne has been drunk and all the celebration has gone on; the inside-the-beltway euphoria that has surrounded the adoring media? Here we are: We have a budget deficit that is still $1.4 trillion. We still have 9.7 percent unemployment. Beginning right away we have $½ trillion worth of Medicare cuts that will take place over the next 10 years—$½ trillion beginning right away, $½ trillion worth of tax increases over the next 10 years.

Beginning in 4 years, $2.5 trillion in new health care entitlements spending begin. The plan still puts government in control. It still mandates that every American must purchase a government designed and approved health policy. It still mandates that employers have to provide health care to their employees, pay a fee, and 330,000 Medicare Advantage members in my State are going to be exposed to drastic cuts.

Fortunately, we took out one of the sweetheart deals that now, at least the 800,000 who were carved out before in Florida will be subject to the same cuts. No one, no one, no one believes—the so-called doc fix—that the 21 percent cut in physicians payments for treatment of Medicare patients is going to happen.

You can put lipstick on a pig, but this is still a pig. I noticed the Senator from Illinois came to the floor this morning and said how great this is and how there is going to be real reductions in the deficit as a result of this legislation. I wonder what his response has been to one of the biggest corporations in the State of Illinois, Caterpillar, who sent him the following:

In our fragile economy, we can ill afford anything to do with medical malpractice reform. That is the dirty little secret. The dirty little secret in this body is that trial lawyers control the agenda, certainly as far as this legislation is concerned.

The State of Texas has reduced costs, has reduced premiums, and has increased the number of people who have been able to—lawsuit filings are down from defensive medicine increases for annual costs by 10 percent. Physician reimbursement is up, and medical malpractice insurance company in the State has sliced its premiums by 35 percent, saving doctors some $217 million over 4 years in the State of Texas. And I would like to ask my friend from Oklahoma why in the world we would not enact medical malpractice reform if we are truly interested in reducing the cost of health care in America.

The Senator from Oklahoma and our other doctor in the Senate, Senator BARRASSO from Wyoming, can testify because of their experience of the requirement to practice defensive medicine, which could be as much as $100 billion a year. So here we are, looking at dramatic increases in cost, and the President is going around the country saying that insurance premiums will go down. Individual premiums will go up between 10 and 13 percent. You know, facts are stubborn things.

So I would ask my friend from Oklahoma if he might talk a little bit about not only what is in this bill but what is not in this bill and medical malpractice reform is certainly something that anyone would logically assume would be part of any real reform if you are interested in reducing cost.

If you are interested in increasing government bureaucracy, I hear this bill will mean the insurance premiums or hiring of some 16,500 new IRS agents. We are trying to track down the facts behind that. So we are now embarked on one of the greatest expansions of government in the history of this country. Mr. COBURN. I thank the Senator for his question. If you look at Thomson Reuters and several others who have studied the health care field, the estimate for defensive medicine costs is $250 billion a year. It is not just that we order tests that protect us from frivolous lawsuits, but those tests have consequences. Some of those tests actually hurt patients or expose them to radiation or, in fact, limit our ability to do what is best for the patient because we are more interested in protecting ourselves.

Mr. McCAIN. May I ask the opinion of the Senator from Oklahoma to why he thinks there is no address of medium-sized special interest groups in the legislation that has the slightest impact on reducing health care costs?

Mr. COBURN. I think there are two reasons. One is because there is large support who wrote this legislation by those who benefit from higher doctors. That is pretty straightforward. And the doctor's only defense is to order tests which they need but which the patient doesn't necessarily need. The second is because they couldn't get—or wouldn't put it in the bill because they knew it would pass and the American people would agree with it. You know, it is beyond me.

But let me go to the point of this current amendment. I have delivered to some 6,000 babies, and 2,000 of those were Medicaid babies. Over half the babies I have delivered in my life I have cared for through Medicaid. The State of Oklahoma just cut, in February or March, Medicaid reimbursements 3 percent. They are going to cut it another 8 percent. Forty percent of the primary care doctors don't see Medicaid patients because the price that is paid for the coverage doesn't cover the cost, let alone any margin. It doesn't cover the cost of nurses, the rent, the malpractice, and everything else.

The second point is, of the specialists who are available, 65 percent of the specialists in this country won't see Medicaid patients. So when I am taking care of Medicaid patients, I have trouble finding somebody better than me in a specialized area to care for my patients.

What is the other thing we know about Medicaid? Even if you normalize for social factors, their outcomes are worse. The cost in terms of the number of procedures, the failure of therapeutics—all are worse.

So why is this a good idea? It is not just a political stunt. If Members of Congress are enrolled in Medicaid, the first thing that is going to happen is Medicaid and reimbursements are going to go up so that the availability of the finest and the best and the brightest in this country is available to Members of Congress. So it is not just a stunt to say we put our membership in Medicaid; it is a very important ultra-motive to improve Medicaid.

Think about it. If you are one of the 16 million people who are going to get health care under Medicaid, supposedly, in this bill—and I doubt that seriously, simply because we are going to see a marked decrease of 50 or 60 percent of doctors who won't see them—you think about what is going to happen. You may not go to the hospital. You may not find a doctor. You may have coverage, but you won't be able to get anybody to care for you. Is that coverage?

that care? Is that prevention? Is that management of chronic disease? No. None of that will happen.

So the whole idea of placing us in a leadership position into Medicaid is so that we will lead and fix it and make it work. The only one health care system worse in America than Medicaid, and that is the Indian Health Service. That is the only one that is worse. Everything else outside of those two programs is better. So why would we consign 16 million Americans to the one that is failing today? So the way to fix that is to put us into it. And I guarantee you, the self-interests of the Members of Congress will fix Medicaid and make it what it should be.

With that, I yield back to the original author of the amendment.

Mr. LE MIEUX. I thank my friend and colleague from Oklahoma.

How could anyone in this body not vote for this amendment? Why should we have better health care than the 16 million people whom we are going to put into Medicaid, and now will be 50 million Americans? Why should we have it better? Why should we have a gold-plated premium health care plan? Look, I pay $400 a month on the government program—$5,000 a year. Could I get that in the marketplace? Of course, I couldn't. Then I go to a doctor here in the Capitol, a whole staff of them, anytime I want to see a doctor. I get fantastic health care as a Member of Congress.

Why shouldn't we have the same health care we are subjecting 15 million new Americans to and 50 million Americans in total? As my friend from Oklahoma says, certainly won't that make the point to us that this health care system is failing? What will happen when a Member of Congress tries to find a doctor who will take him? What is going to happen when he tries to find a specialist and no specialist will take him? You don't hear our friends on the other side talking about the fact that half of the people getting coverage under this legislation are going into a failing system. That is not one of their talking points, but it is the truth. So I challenge my friends who say that they should walk among the least of us to vote for this amendment.

I want to turn again to my colleague from Arizona. He and I have expressed our distress about this bill for lots of reasons, but a specific reason is that we both represent States with lots of seniors.

We have this Medicare Advantage Program that is going to get $200 billion cut out of it. That will really affect our two States. So I wonder—and I would ask my colleague, the distinguished Senator from Arizona, to speak on this issue—how is this going to affect seniors in Arizona when we are raiding Medicare to start this new program?

Mr. McCAIN. I thank my friend from Florida. The fact is, Medicare Advantage is a program that provides seniors with choices. That is one of the reasons it is a major target of the other side—because it doesn't fit in, then, with the government mandates this whole bill. I am worried about the 11 million Americans who have the Medicare Advantage Program.

I would like to refer my colleagues to an article—I know the Senator from Utah is waiting, if he would just give me a minute of his time or we are today in the Wall Street Journal titled “Now, Can We Have Health-Care Reform?” And I want to quote from part of it, as follows:

Health insurers, and indeed Corporate America as a whole, are like monkeys who are caught by sticking a glass jar to the ground with a shiny trinket inside. They won't let go so they can't get their hands out of the jar. That trinket is the ruinous and regrettable $250 billion-year tax benefit for employer-provided insurance.

That is the elephant in the room, my friends.

Corporate America isn't brave enough to argue against a direct subsidy to its employer-provided, no matter the impact in insulating consumers from the true cost of their health care choices. Insurers are not brave enough to say: Give us a tax code that lets us go back to being insurers rather than a tax laundromat for the middle class's health care spending.

Almost any bill would have been worth having that fundamentally fund this tax distortion, regardless of its other elements.

We say this because any bill, including the one signed by the President yesterday, will be revisited many times in the future. Millions of pages of rules will be written by regulators before we see how it really works. Congress itself will return in predictable ways: It will reverse the proposed Medicare cuts that created ObamaCare's illusion of fiscal probity. It will tighten the mandate that requires insurers to cover the sick at favorable prices. It will not require that the young and healthy buy insurance at prices that subsidize the old and unhealthy.

More and more tax money will have to be found to keep the jalopy on the road. More and more administrative controls on medicine will attempt vainly to keep the jalopy from bankrupting the Nation.

Under the law just signed, employers have even more incentive than they did yesterday to lavish excessive health insurance on their high-end employees.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD this entire Wall Street Journal article.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, Mar. 24, 2010]

NOW, CAN WE HAVE HEALTH-CARE REFORM?

(By Holman W. Jenkins, Jr.)

A certain kind of person—we get emails from them all the time—understands exactly nothing about the health-care debate, but thinks they know who the villain is: the insurance industry.

Barack Obama is not one of them. In the desperate hours he played to public ignorance. But from the beginning, the industry was his ally because he set out to solve its biggest problem—which is not the same as America’s biggest problem.

We’ll let Angela Braly, CEO of insurer WellPoint, take the story from here. She was recently before the Congress to argue against her company’s proposed 39% rate hike in California. She explained the source was two-fold: rising medical costs and healthier customers demanding less coverage, forcing the sick to pick up the tab.

Now this sounds like two problems, but for WellPoint and other insurers it’s really only one problem. Once everyone is required by government mandate to buy insurance, the industry’s survival is no longer threatened: It can just pass on skyrocketing costs along to customers. Once customers can no longer refuse to buy the industry’s product, the problem of costs won’t be fixed, but it no longer matters, the insurance industry’s profit margins will be

There, no one sentence, we give you the failure of ObamaCare, the failure of the congressional health-care debate, the failure of health-care policies in this country.

Health insurers, and indeed Corporate America as a whole, are like monkeys who are caught by staking a glass jar to the ground. Once a monkey can no longer jump out of the jar, what they don’t let go so they can’t get their hands out of the jar. That trinket is the ruinous and regressive $250 billion-a-year tax benefit for employer-provided insurance.

Corporate America isn’t brave enough to argue against a direct subsidy to its employment costs, no matter how perverse its impact. It doesn’t want to lose the money insurers from those who find the cost of their health care choices. Insurers are not brave enough to say: Give us a tax code that lets us go back to being insurers rather than being lawyers, for the middle class’s health-care spending.

Almost any bill would have been worth having that fundamentally fixed this tax distortion, but this bill adds other elements. We say this because any bill, including the one signed by the president yesterday, will be revisited many times in the future. Million of pages of rules will be written by regulators before we see how it really works. Congress itself will return in predictable ways: It will reverse the proposed Medicare cuts that created ObamaCare’s illusion of fiscal prudence. It will tighten the mandate that requires insurers to cover the sick at affordable prices. It will tighten the requirement that the young and healthy buy insurance, or subsidize the old and unhealthy.

More and more tax money will have to be found to keep the jalopy on the road. More and more administrative controls on medicine will attempt vainly to keep the jalopy from bankrupting the nation.

Under the law just signed, employers have even more incentive than they did yesterday to lavish excessive health insurance on their high-earners while they have less incentive to cover low-end workers, or even hire them.

For the young, healthy or anyone not stumbling into a giant tax handout, buying insurance at the inflated prices available in the marketplace would be an even crazier financial decision today than it was yesterday—because now you can wait and buy it when you’re sick.

For insurers, the check is in the mail: So for them, the check is in the mail. Once everyone is required by government mandate to buy insurance, the industry’s survival is no longer threatened: It can just pass on skyrocketing costs along to customers. Once customers can no longer refuse to buy the industry’s product, the problem of costs won’t be fixed, but it no longer matters, the insurance industry’s profit margins will be

The one thing it doesn’t do (though it would be perfectly consistent with the Democratic goal of universal access) is incentivize a health-care marketplace based on competition in price and quality.

A worrisome trend in India does heart surgery the equal of any heart surgery in America, but does so at one-tenth the cost (and increasingly attracts a world-wide clientele) that we think low-paid doctors and nurses. The reason is that competition works in medicine as it does in everything else when the patient cares about getting value for money. This is the great low-hanging fruit of health-care reform. It continues to hang.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Utah for his indulgence.

The other side is going around the country right now telling the American people things that simply are not correct, including the fact that these budget projections we know are patently false, not because CBO gave us false numbers but because the assumptions were wrong. One of the biggest assumptions—and we will be talking about this more—is the so-called doc fix. Is there anyone who believes we are going to have a 21-percent cut in Medicare physi- cian payments this fall?

I would ask my friend, the Senator from Utah, who is very familiar with this issue—I know he has an amendment, but this is one of the reasons Americans are so angry. They know this is not going to be good for doctors’ pay- ments from Medicare by 21 percent, and that is a fundamental part of the assessments as to the cost by CBO. It is a sham perpetrated on the American people.

So I would say to my friend from Florida and my friend from Utah, we will be back on the floor probably this fall sometime or early next year, and we will be talking about the fact that this doc fix—the doctor payments pro- vision in the Medicare enrollees—was not cut 21 percent, as the other side is telling the American people that it will be. It is not fair to the American people. I would say to my friend from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. I agree with my friend from Arizona.

MOTION TO COMMIT

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending motion to offer a motion to commit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH] moves to commit the bill H.R. 4872 to the Committee on Finance with instructions to report the same back to the Senate within 1 day with changes to strike all cuts to the Medicare Advantage program and add an offset if the Department of Health and Human Services estimates that $600,000,000 per more Medicare beneficiaries, American seniors, and disabled individuals, will lose their current Medicare Advantage coverage or pay a higher premium.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, before I discuss my motion to commit to protect the Medicare Advantage Program for more than 10 million seniors, I would like to take a few moments to discuss the broader issue of health care reform.

To be honest, we have never seen anything like the issues facing our country right now. We are at a pivotal point in American history between private businesses and public government has never been so blurred. Gov- ernment effectively owns several of our Nation’s financial institutions, insurance companies, and auto manufactur- ers. These bills have been filed by govern- ment bureaucrats, and Washington is now in the business of running our health care system more than ever before.

Our fiscal outlook is bleaker than ever. According to the recent 10-year outlook by the Congressional Budget Office, the CBO, the current administra- tion’s policies would add $8.5 trillion to our already record national debt. CBO report also confirms that we would be facing a record deficit of $1.5 trillion this year, along with a dire pre- diction of our deficits only getting worse after 2015 and beyond.

Let me put this in perspective. Our deficit this year is $1.3 trillion by 2020 or 50 per- cent of our GDP. We are literally drowning the future of this Nation and the future of our kids and grandkids in a sea of red ink.

I deliver these remarks with a heavy heart because what could have been a strong bipartisan bill reflecting our collective and genuine desire for responsible health care reform turned out to be an extremely partisan exer- cise resulting in one of the largest big- government spending bills being signed into law yesterday. We are jamming through another 153-page addition of new taxes and spending.

Recent polls show that a majority of Americans remain opposed and skep- tical about all the promises of reduced deficits and lower costs under this legis- lation. Why? Because they know there is no such thing as a free lunch, especially when Washington is the one inviting you over.

According to the administration’s own Actuary at the Centers for Medi- care and Medicaid Services, CMS, the health care bill signed by President Obama yesterday will actually raise our total health care spending by $222 billion over the next 10 years. That does not even include the doc fix the distinguished Senator from Arizona was talking about, which is as much as $300 billion in the next 10 years. But the most cynical joke played by Washington on the American people in this entire exercise has been the promise of this $2.5 trillion tax-and-spend bill actually reducing our deficit. Nobody believes that.

The biggest bait and switch on the American people about the bill’s im- pact on the deficit is a simple math trick. If something is too expensive to do for a full 10-year period, just do it for 5 or 6 years. Most of the major spending provisions of the bill do not go into effect until 2014 or later—coincidentally after the 2012 Presidential election. And, after all, I am not a full 10-year score but rather a 6-year score. According to the Senate Budget Committee, the full 10-year score of the Senate bill would approach $2.5 trillion. We are already spending $2.4 trillion.

More importantly, let me also clarify what the Congressional Budget Office has said on the nearly $500 billion in Medicare cuts which my friends on the other side argue will magically not only extend Medicare solvency but also pay for a large part of this bill. This is like telling American families that they can spend the same magical dollar to not only pay their mortgage but also their credit cards. It is nonsensical. Here is what the experts at CBO said:

The key point is that the savings to Medicare trust fund . . . would be received by government only once, so they cannot be set aside to pay for future Medicare spending and, at the same time, pay for current spending on other parts of the legislation or on other programs.

By the way, did I mention that at a time when major government programs like Medicare and Medicaid are already on a path to fiscal insolvency, it is interesting to note that more than half of the newly covered lives, 16 million out of the 32 million, are simply being pushed out of Medicare Advantage. And if anyone thinks that States, that are facing more than $200 billion in deficits, will not be left holding the bag in the future, then I have a bridge to sell to you.

I have said all along that this is not a fight between Republicans and Democrats, but a fight between the Democrats and a majority of Americans who did not want this bill. In townhall after townhall and poll after poll and election after election, Americans begged Washington to listen to their voices. But Washington ignored them and used every means necessary—from backroom deals to procedural trickery—to get this bill passed.

We need to remember the real implications of these policies—not simply in terms of political legacies and ideological holy grails—but in terms of its impact on the future of our children and grandchildren. We need to ensure that they have the same opportunities to prosper that we have all been blessed with.

I would now like to speak for a few minutes about a motion to commit that I will be offering. My motion to commit states that if the Actuary of the Department of Health and Human Services certifies that 1 million Medicare Advantage beneficiaries lose their coverage or benefits, the cuts to the Medicare Advantage program will not go into effect. It is that simple.

It is important to point out that the bill the President signed into law yesterday would slash $120 billion from the Medicare Advantage program. This reconciliation bill would cut the program by an additional $66 billion for a grand total of $202 billion.

Before the health care reform bill was signed into law, I projected that the Advantage enrollment would have increased from 10.9 million in 2010 to 13.9 million in 2019. Now, Medicare Advantage enrollment will be 4.8 million less in 2019 due to the passage of the new health bill or almost 2 million less than the CBO projected.

CBO also projected that rebates for additional benefits and reduced cost-sharing offered through Medicare Advantage would be reduced by 50 percent from $135 per member per month to $67 per member per month in 2019. These lost benefits include lower premiums, lower copayments, and lower deductibles. It will also impact everything from hearing aids to dental and vision benefits. Most importantly, it would violate President Obama’s pledge “if you like what you have, you may keep it.”

Medicare Advantage works. Every Medicare beneficiary has access to a Medicare Advantage plan. Almost 90 percent of Medicare beneficiaries participating in the program are satisfied with their health coverage. It is time for us to stand up for more than 10 million seniors and ensure that this program is not used as a piggy-bank to finance Washington’s big government plans.

I appreciate my colleagues allowing me to go maybe a minute longer than I should have, but I urge my colleagues to support my motion to commit this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, have Republicans used up their time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republicans have 1 minute remaining.

Mr. BAUCUS. I don’t mean to be picky, but I assume they will yield back that minute.

Mr. HATCH. I will yield back the minute.

Mr. BAUCUS. I will yield 15 minutes to the Senator from Maryland.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, this is indeed a great day because we are passing real health care reform for American families, for American workers, for American small business, for seniors, and our communities. Health care reform will save lives. No longer will dreams and lives be endangered because people lose their health care insurance when they got sick, lost a job or had an accident.

I listened to the other side which says they listen to the people. You heard the old saying, “Men are from Mars, women are from Venus.” I think that party is from Mars and we are from planet Earth. I think they have been out in orbit. The planet Earth that I am on tells me to pass health insurance reform.

One of the reasons I am voting for this bill, the main reason I am voting for this bill, is the stories I heard from my constituents in Maryland—roundtables, townhalls, hearings, lots of letters, phone calls. They told me about the situation in their lives, where they were terrified that one big health care incident could lead them into bankruptcy. They were terrified that if they had changed a job or moved to a new health care community that would have offered great opportunity for them—they didn’t take it because they were not going to have health insurance.

When I listen to people, I think about the lady in Cumberland who works full time, but her employer does not provide health insurance and she is terrified that she is one sickness away from a catastrophic situation, or from Karen, in Kensington, whose father had to quit work because he had Crohn’s disease. He was making payments on his insurance, he was two payments short, and they canceled his insurance. It took him 6 months to try to get it back. He lost his coverage, and he was only 59 years old when he passed away.

Then there were the breast cancer survivors, the wonderful women and the men they love who are out there raising money for the cure. But even in a prosperous community such as Annapolis, a woman told me how she lost her job and with it her family’s health insurance, and when her insurance ran out, she was terrified she would lose her cancer treatment.

Walking around the diners—and I love diners. I see myself as a diner Democrat. In every diner it is usually multigenerational people. What do they tell me? Barb, don’t forget the old people. Senator Barb, no matter what, keep Medicare stable. If you are 50 years old, you are terrified your parents can lose their Medicare and it is going to fall on you. The sandwiches they are eating are eaten by the sand- swimmers generation. Worried about the old-timers’ health care, worried about keeping their own, and then trying to figure out how they were going to pay for college. Medicare has multigenerational implications.

This is why in this bill I am so proud of the fact that we are going to stabilize Medicare for another 10 years and do very important reforms in Medi-care.

I am also pleased to respond to the people who said no matter what, make health care available and affordable. For every parent who has ever worried about covering a child with a chronic illness, whether autism or cerebral palsy or juvenile diabetes, they will always be able to get health insurance. The small business owner, such as my own small business, which is a convenience store or my grandmother who had the best bakery shop, worried about how they were going to provide individual health care for themselves—this generation will not have to worry about that.

This bill is an exceptional one. We save Medicare, expand its solvency for another nearly a decade. We end the punitive practices of insurance companies. We end unfair accounting and require pay for it with an emphasis on wellness and quality, saying goodbye to quantity medicine and emphasizing quality medicine; goodbye to volume medicine and getting value for our dollar.

Some of the most important things we will do is close that doughnut hole. The doughnut hole has been hard to swallow ever since this bill was passed. We are going to provide a $250 rebate for seniors who hit the gap in the prescription drug benefit and also offer a better discount on prescription drugs.

I am also very excited and honored because of the role I played in making sure we ended the punitive practices of insurance companies to be able to buy health care.

For too long, in too many ways, they treated simply being a woman as a pre-existing condition. First of all, they charged us 30 percent to 40 percent more just simply to be able to get insurance. If we would have the punitive practices of denying us health insurance for a pre-existing condition. In eight States, domestic violence was viewed as a pre-existing condition. You talk about being abused—you were abused, and then you were abused by your insurance company. We are not going to be battered anymore by these companies. We ended that in this bill.

Then there was the hearing that shocked and chilled me, a hearing on gender discrimination in insurance. A woman told a compelling story, Peggy from Colorado, that after she had a C-section and a premature baby, the costs were high. She lost her health insurance, and she went to tell her baby, because she had a C-section, they would not give her health insurance unless she was sterilized.

I couldn’t believe it. That is what fascist countries do. That is what authoritarian regimes do. It was not the Taliban in Afghanistan, it was an insurance company in Colorado. We took that fight and ended those abusive practices in this bill.

But as the debate went forward, they wanted to take the mammograms away from us and they wanted to put mammogram and preventive services for women in the bill. They said it costs too much money.

I didn’t want to hear that. I asked the women to suit up and come to the floor and we offered an amendment. The good men of the Senate also joined us. Many remember we wore pink that day. Today we are in the pink as well.
Medicare—I am talking now especially about seniors who take fee for service—all seniors on Medicare pay for these overpayments, even if they are not in Medicare Advantage plans. How? Well, it is basically because every senior pays the same in Part B premiums, that totals about $80, on average. So seniors in traditional fee for service are paying for the overpayments for Medicare Advantage plans.

Medicare Advantage overpayments drain resources for the Medicare trust fund. If they are overpaid, that means they are draining excessive resources from the Medicare trust fund. In fact, the government estimates that Medicare Advantage overpayments speed up insolvency of the Medicare trust fund by about 18 months.

After that, there is no evidence that overpayments to Medicare Advantage plans—do not forget these are private insurers. Medicare Advantage pays Medicare, they are private insurance plans. There is no evidence that overpayments to them lead to better quality for Medicare beneficiaries.

In fact, they can end up spending more out-of-pocket dollars under Medicare Advantage plans than under traditional Medicare, even if they have certain conditions. The bill eliminates these overpayments by decreasing the statutory rates in place today and giving quality performance payment increases to high-ranking plans. We are paying more than we do today to high-ranking plans.

No senior in Medicare Advantage will lose access to any of their Medicare benefits under this proposal. We hear all these false claims across the aisle that these cuts, which cause more efficiency, prevent waste, prevent overpayments, are going to cut beneficiaries’ payments. That is not true. It is misleading.

Plans will not be allowed to lower or drop their basic Medicare benefits that seniors are entitled to under the Medicare Advantage Program. So there are no cuts in basic Medicare benefits. In fact, they are guaranteed. The reforms in this bill will ensure that the dollars for the Medicare trust fund go toward improving the quality of care for seniors, rather than to support the operations of private insurers. I think that is something the vast majority of seniors would prefer. I wish to make that clear because some of the statements made on the other side of the aisle are quite misleading, which leads me to another point.

Americans probably are a little confused about what is in health care reform because they hear all kinds of claims. Well, now that health care reform has passed, The President signed the bill yesterday. This is sort of to help, a fixer-upper around the edges a little bit. Americans can look for themselves as to who is telling the truth. They will want to look more closely than they have in the past because now it is law. Now it affects people.

Some people are going to ask: Gee, how does it affect me? I better find out. When people start to find out, they are going to learn—I say this somewhat presumptuously, but I believe it very strongly—they are going to find out that those who are claiming all the bad things about this bill, all the bad things about this bill, are basically not true.

They are also going to start to realize that all the good things in this bill, that a lot of proponents have been mentioning, represent, when down, they are pretty much true, the good things are pretty much true. I think once people start thinking closely, separating the wheat from the chaff, they will start to realize that not only are the Medicare Advantage charges false, but a lot of the other charges that some make about why the bill is so bad are also false. Again, I say, somewhat presumptuously, the prevention provisions, I think are very good and help seniors, are basically accurate.

One small, final point. The Senator from Florida offered an amendment basically requiring all Members of Congress to enroll in Medicaid. Now I ask the Senator, if that is a serious amendment, Medicaid is a vital program for vulnerable Americans. It should be treated very seriously and should not be used for political games.

I now yield the remainder of our time in this half hour to the Senator from Rhode Island.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. REED. First, I wish to begin by recognizing the extraordinary leadership of majority leader HARRY REID, Chairman BAUCUS, Chairman DODD, and Chairman HARKIN to get us to this point.

Commonsense and cost-effective health care reform is now the law of the land. The law the Senate and the House of Representatives passed now is whether we will make some important improvements to that reform or whether we will respond to the wishes of the insurance industry and others who want to preserve a broken status quo of higher premiums and dwindling coverage for middle-class families.

Yesterday, President Obama signed into law a health insurance reform bill that will cut the deficit by $134 billion. It is clear that health insurers actually provide Americans with the coverage that they pay for, and preserve Medicare for our senior citizens. That is no small achievement, and it would be a tragedy if the other side of the aisle persists in its effort to defeat health care reform by seeking to delay and undermine the package of improvements in the bill that we are now debating.

It sometimes gets lost in the heated rhetoric of the other side, but under the status quo, the healthy are faced with ever-increasing costs and the ill are denied care, dropped from coverage, and prevented from purchasing coverage. The new health insurance reforms will provide relief for every American. Indeed, under the law just signed by President Obama, these five reforms will take place by the fall of next year:

No child will be denied coverage because of a preexisting condition.

Small businesses will receive a 35-percent tax credit to purchase insurance for their employees.

Seniors on Medicare, who confront the doughnut hole, will receive additional assistance.

Health insurers will be required to spend more of their premium revenues on clinical services, with less going to administrative costs and profits, or else they must pay a rebate to policy holders.

And our State’s Community Health Centers will receive a boost in Federal revenues.

Rhode Islanders will particularly welcome this relief. Just last week, Rhode Islanders learned that health insurance premiums in the State will go up 10 percent this year. In the same week, they also received news that as many as 21 percent of individuals in the State will be without insurance sometime during this year. This is double the rate of uninsured just 10 years ago.

In Rhode Island, these two headlines, coupled with an unemployment rate of nearly 13 percent, have caused a perfect storm.

As the economy took jobs away from Rhode Islanders, it also took away their health insurance. The healthy hoped not to get sick, the sick started showing up in hospital emergency rooms, and those who still had access to insurance stopped being able to afford it.

Hospitals in Rhode Island can no longer shoulder the burden of the uninsured. Community health centers in Rhode Island can no longer shoulder the burden of the uninsured. Indeed, the economy can no longer shoulder the burden of the uninsured.

Today we are considering a bill that makes further improvements to the health insurance reform law. Indeed, these are changes that Americans have consistently said they want, and that is why we should support this bill. It is also why I intend to oppose the legislative maneuvers from the other side of the aisle. They are interested in over-turning the reforms. They are interested in turning the reform of our health care system, reforms which have replaced the costly status quo with a system based on more competitive markets. They are in favor of a system where the whim of insurance companies rule. They are in favor of a health care system in which costs continue to rise at astronomical rates each year for families and for businesses.

It may be politically heartening for the other side to try and slow down reform through a series of repetitive amendments, but I think Rhode Islanders and all Americans want us to pass the bill because it contains straightforward proposals.
First, this reconciliation bill, as it is known, would eliminate the so-called Corn-Husker kickback, which would have created an entirely inappropriate Medicaid reimbursement system exclusively for one State. Gone too are other provisions that would have unfairly supported the Corn Belt and no others.

Second, this bill begins the process of closing the Medicare prescription drug coverage gap, also known as the doughnut hole, which requires seniors to pay more for their medications than they otherwise would. This year a typical Medicare recipient would receive $250 when they enter the doughnut hole and pay less for drugs they purchase once they enter this coverage gap.

Third, at a time when so many of us are worried about government spending, this bill does more to reduce the budget deficit so that we can save up to $1.3 trillion in the next two decades. Those are real savings. I find it ironic that some on the other side oppose them.

Fourth, the bill makes sure the so-called Cadillac tax, which was intended to affect the most expensive health care plans, is reduced by 80 percent so that it hits its intended targets, not middle-class families.

Fifth, the bill recognizes that we should do even more to help struggling families afford health insurance, and so it provides new tax breaks to help make care more affordable.

As I said, in the next few days my colleagues on the other side of the aisle are expected to file and attempt to offer numerous amendments to this bill. These are tactics that are purely dilatory. That is, again, another reason why are elections in this Congress, of undercutting the most significant reform of health care in the last several decades.

But there is another aspect to this legislation which is vitally important; that is, the improvement to the student support system for higher education. It is the dream of every parent that their child will have a better life, and a big part of that dream is that they will have the opportunity to go on to college or even an advanced degree. This bill ends the student aid system for higher education, one of the top concerns of students to pay for their education. It is the engine that moves people forward. It is what expands our capacity and our capabilities in a complex world.

Now we have the opportunity so that we can, in fact, provide additional assistance through Pell grants, and we can do it by reducing billions from bank subsidies and reinvesting that in Pell grants. Approximately $42 billion will be freed up; over $35 billion will be committed to Pell grants. It will be expanded to additional recipients, and the maximum will increase to nearly $6,000. We will also provide in Rhode Island $7.5 million for information so that families and students can locate the best arrangements for their college education, for their financial aid. It will also invest $2 billion in community colleges, which have become a central part of our educational system, particularly for those people who are transitioning into the workforce or through the workforce.

One final point: It is particularly fitting that we are investing in the Pell grant, named after my predecessor Senator Claiborne Pell. His vision to give people the opportunity to higher education and to stand back and watch those things has been legitimized and vindicated over 30 years. I don’t think Senator Pell foresaw the Internet. I don’t know how much he used it even when it arrived. But he knew if we gave people the skills and talents, they would do great things. They have done great things.

With this legislation, they will do even more.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire is recognized.

Mr. GREGG. How much time does the majority have on their half hour?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the majority has expired.

The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, a couple comments need to be responded to because they are so patently inconsistent with the facts that they should be clearly rejected. It is almost as if somebody spent too much time at the movie “Alice in Wonderland.” The idea that by their own score, when you cut Medicare by $521 billion—$3.5 trillion cut out of Medicare by their own score, which is inaccurate, of course, because it doesn’t count the full 10 years—if you count the full 10 years, it is $1 trillion taken out of Medicare—the idea that seniors are not going to be affected by that type of a cut is absurd on its face.

The claim is, we don’t affect senior benefits. That is nice. That is like telling somebody they can have a car, but there is no engine in it. I mean, the simple fact is, when you cut the providers of seniors by as much as this bill cuts them, clearly it is going to be harder for the senior citizen to see a provider, a doctor, a hospital group. Or when you reduce the spending on Medicare Advantage, which is an insurance program that many seniors appreciate—CBO scores the reduction as being so large that over 11 million seniors will be thrown off that system—that affects seniors.

If they genuinely believe their language, “we don’t do anything about Medicare; we don’t do anything about seniors,” even though the score says they cut Medicare by $500 billion, their own score, and the CBO has said over 11 million seniors will be thrown off Medicare Advantage—if they believe that, if they believe their language, then they have to vote for my amendment. They have to vote for my amendment which makes it clear that we protect Medicare.

Then there was some other comment made that somebody was going to vote against our amendments, not because they don’t make sense but because they aren’t dilatory. I ask this majority leadership on the other side of the aisle that produced the largest piece of social engineering in our history: 2,500 pages, $2.6 trillion of spending, $1 trillion of cuts in Medicare when fully implemented. They produced in a closed room behind a secret door somewhere on that side of the Capitol, never open to the public, brought it to the floor of the Senate on a Saturday afternoon, filled up the tree, wouldn’t allow any amendments, and within 3 days forced us to vote on it on Christmas Eve. Then they took it over to the House, where they rewrote this trailer bill, again, in a secret room, behind a closed door, and brought that bill to the floor and didn’t allow anybody to amend that. But amendments are dilatory.

Why have an opposition party? Maybe we should just go with the way the House is doing it. The people who are legislature nave an attitude of the other side of the aisle. The American people are an unfortunate inconvenience. The fact that they have elected a Republican membership to this Senate and to the House, they act as if the representation of the American people is not an important aspect of the process.

When they cut up with ideas such as protecting the Medicare system or such as taking out the sweetheart deals or such as suggesting that the President and his people and the staff of the majority leader should be under the laws we are about to pass or suggest that we should live by the terms of the rhetoric which is, if your premiums go up, you won’t be impacted by the laws we are about to pass. They have done great things. They have done great things. That is nice. That is like telling somebody they can have a car, but there is no engine in it. I mean, the simple fact is, when you cut the providers of seniors by as much as this bill cuts them, clearly it is going to be harder for the senior citizen to see a provider, a doctor, a hospital group. Or when you reduce the spending on Medicare Advantage, which is an insurance should not be allowed. They should not be voted on, not because they don’t make sense but get rid of them; they are the opposition.

They are the American people speaking through their elected representatives and saying we ought to have a voice and they ought to be voted on and they ought to be given a vote based on the substance of the amendments, not on the fact that the other side of the aisle doesn’t like opposition.

It is wrong, but this attitude which pervades Washington now that says: The American people, we know better than you do how to live your lives. Why do you get in our way? We in Washington know how you should live. Just stand back. Let us make your decisions as to what you should do with your life, especially relative to health care. We will do a much better job. Certainly, don’t countenance any opposition. Don’t countenance any dissent, and, certainly, don’t hold us to our word.

For example, when we say people with incomes under $200,000 won’t be taxed or when we say premiums won’t go up or when we say everybody will be covered by the bill or when we say Medicare recipients won’t be impacted. Don’t don’t hold to those words by voting on amendments because those amendments are dilatory.

The arrogance is palatable and inexcusable.

Now we will hear from the Senator from Oklahoma who has another amendment that I am sure the other side will say is dilatory and inappropriate, even though it makes a heck of a lot of sense to me.

I yield the floor.

BENNY JOHNSON. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate from New Hampshire.

Mr. COBURN. I thank the Senator from New Hampshire.

As I contemplate what is happening at 62 years of age and looking back through my life, this is undoubtedly the greatest assault on liberty this country has ever had. It is not direct; it is indirect. But it is what the Senator from New Hampshire talked about; we are going to decide for you what you get.

What the American people still don’t understand is there are three areas in this bill that in the next 5 years will put the government in charge of everybody’s health care—what you can have, what you can’t have, and who can give it to you. That is what is coming.

So if you are a caregiver or you are a patient, you might think long and hard about the three provisions in this bill that are going to do that: a Medicare advisory commission, the cost-effectiveness comparative effectiveness panel, and the U.S. preventative task force panel. All of those are going to carry the force of law, and it will not just apply to government-run plans. If you are uninsured with an employer today, you are going to be told what treatments you can have because some group of bureaucracies in Washington are going to decide that. That is what is in this bill.

The Senator from New Hampshire mentioned several claims that have been made.

I ask unanimous consent to temporarily adjourn the pending motions and amendments so I may offer an amendment which is at the desk, No. 3556. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The assistant legislative clerk read the following:

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. COBURN] proposes an amendment numbered 3556.

Mr. COBURN. I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To reduce the cost of providing federal funds by eliminating fraudulent payments and prohibiting coverage of Viagra for child mo-

The amendment will prohibit prescriptions for child molesters. Nobody can disagree with that. It is not in the bill. It is the current state. But if this bill goes through without this amendment, your tax dollars are going to be paying for Viagra for child molesters. That is what is going to happen. There is an Executive order that this will override. The bill overrides the Executive order.

A Government Accountability Office audit of Medicaid found 65,600 instances of improper prescriptions costing $65 million over the last 2 years, including thousands of prescriptions written for dead patients by people prescribing and posing as doctors. The audit focused on 10 types of frequently abused prescriptions, drugs in just which means this audit, which is just over 5 States, multiply by at least 10, and you get $650 million worth of fraud in prescriptions in Medicaid alone. We are not going to address that.

Sixty-five doctors or pharmacists were banned from Medicaid for writing prescriptions or illegally sell-

About 1,800 prescriptions were written for dead patients and 1,200 prescriptions were “written” by dead doctors—just in those five States.

unamended, will reverse. Mr. President, 800 convicted sex offenders in 14 States received Medicaid-funded prescription drugs for erectile dysfunction. That is according to a 2005 survey. The predators’ victims have been as young as 2 years old. So we have convicted sex offenders, rapists, and child molesters who were taking Federal tax dollars and buying a drug so they can act again.

In Florida, 218 cases; New York, 198 cases; Texas, 191 cases, and it goes down the list.

This amendment would prohibit the new health care exchanges from providing coverage of ED drugs to convicted child molesters and convicted rapists. It is pretty simple.

The claims that are made on this bill are outlandish. As somebody who has practiced medicine for 27 years, 50 percent of my patients were Medicaid patients. And if you do not fix some of the things in this bill is destroy the best doctor-patient relationships in the world. That is what you are going to do.

You are going to put 16 million people into a failing Medicaid system that the States cannot afford. Almost every State is cutting Medicaid reimbursement. At this time, only 40 percent of the doctors in the specialties will see Medicaid patients. It is going to go to 20 percent. So we are going to put 16 million people in a system, and then they are not going to be able to find a doctor. Because of the costs, in my own State, we are going to have an 11-percent cut reduction in Medicaid reimbursements, which is only 75 percent of Medicare.

What do you think is going to happen in all the States in the country when the Medicaid reimbursement goes down and you are not going to pay the Medicaid? You are going to call it care. You are going to rub your shoulder, rub that medal on your shoulder, and say: Oh, we fixed health care. You are going to promise them they are going to have care, not going to have care. They are going to have a card, but they will have no care. We are going to have Indian Health Service-type care in Medicaid because nobody is going to be there to care for them.

The claims under this bill keep me sleepless at night—not because of Washington but because of those 10,000 Medicaid patients I have taken care of through my career for whom I know you are thinking of destroying what care is left for them. You can claim otherwise, but the facts are going to prove you wrong. We are seeing it in every State in the country right now—the cuts to Medicaid reimbursements.

So I urge you to help save $650 million a year by getting rid of fraudulent prescriptions, eliminating prescriptions for convicted child molesters for erectile dysfunction, and recreational uses with drugs such as Viagra. The American people do not want to pay for that.

To vote against this amendment, to not fix something that is very obvious, is criminal—it is not just not right, it is an active aid to help those who would hurt our children. I yield to the minority whip.

Mr. KYL. Thank you, Mr. President. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I would say, we are fortunate to have a real doctor, a physician, Dr. Tom Coburn of Oklahoma, as one of our colleagues in the Senate to talk about the real impact of legislation like this and he sees this as when he treats his patients. I think his words deserve a lot of attention.

I just want to briefly address this morning a couple of the claims my Democratic colleagues are making about this new legislation, claims that are simply false.

The first one: There is a big tax cut. One of my colleagues said this is the biggest tax cut we have ever had. There is no tax cut for taxpayers in this bill. What the act is, rather, a direct payment to insurance companies. I find it very odd that is called a tax cut. When I think of a tax cut, I think of money remaining in the pockets of taxpayers so they do not have to pay taxes they have been paying in the past. That is not what is in this bill.

What the bill does is to provide a subsidy to insurance companies to disperse government-mandated insurance. It is not a tax cut for taxpayers. In fact, most health care tax relief goes directly to the insurance companies. It never touches—you never touch the money—it never touches an American family’s pocket.

These premium subsidies are delivered straight from the U.S. Treasury to help insurance companies, as I said, to purchase this government-mandated, government-approved insurance. They are not extra dollars in people’s pockets, as the chairman of the Finance Committee said. They are, rather, advanceable, refundable tax credits, which is code for a new tax entitlement. In fact, that is exactly the way it is recorded in the Federal budget. It is recorded as a spending program, the reason being that the people receiving these so-called refundable credits paid very little if any taxes. These are folks who do not pay taxes, so they get what is called a refundable tax credit. But even then the money goes directly to the insurance companies, not to them. I always thought you had to pay taxes to get a tax cut, but not in the rubric of this legislation.

According to the Joint Committee on Taxation, only about 8 percent of all taxpayers making under $200,000 a year would actually benefit from this government subsidy for health insurance. The remaining 92 percent would receive no tax benefit under the bill.

I have to say, when we are talking about tax cuts, we have at least put in a little word about the tax increases in the bill because that is where the bill focuses, on taxes. It taxes many of those who have health insurance and taxes people if they do not have health insurance.

The taxes in the bill hit families. They hit seniors and the chronically ill, small businesses, those who have flexible spending accounts, and those who use medical devices. All of those things would create a tax. The vast majority of the people who pay these taxes are not high earners. As the Congressional Budget Office has said, whenever there is a tax on some other entity that delivers health services, that tax flows directly through to the taxpayers in virtually the same amount of money.

In fact, in order to collect all of these taxes, and especially the tax that is imposed on people if they do not buy this insurance, the Internal Revenue Service estimates it is going to have to have between $5 billion and $10 billion more just in order to collect the taxes. It has been estimated this would require 16,500 new IRS agents. Welcome to your friendly new health care bill.

The second aspect my colleagues have been talking about is the last 48 hours: The elimination of the problem of preexisting conditions in acquiring health insurance. The implication is that Republicans have not supported help for people who have pre-existing conditions. That is not true. We have made that point clear. We made that point clear in the meeting we had with the President at Blair House. The argument is about the best way to do it.

As you will see in just a moment, it turns out this bill has not done it very well. Republicans have suggested there are a lot of different ways to get to this problem—State reforms, risk pools, more competition, some subsidization. All of these things can help us with this problem. But for all of the Democrats’ central planning in this bill, it looks as though the problems are already arising as a result of their specific provision to deal with this problem.

According to a brand new Associated Press story of March 24, President Obama’s claims about preexisting coverage for children are not what they seem. The article notes that “the letter of the law”—which Democrats took upon themselves to write behind closed doors—“provided a less-than-complete guarantee that all of the Democratic central planning in this bill, it looks as though the problems are already arising as a result of their specific provision to deal with this problem.”

In your rush to do these things—behind closed doors, without proper vetting, always voting no on any attempts to correct it—you end up with problems like this, and they are going to have to somehow go back and try to fix this. If this blunder is discovered on the first day this law takes effect, how many more errors will be discovered in the next days and weeks, as people learn about the 2,732 pages of this new health care law, and the 150 pages of the reconciliation bill that is on the floor right now?
If you cannot draft a bill properly to protect children with preexisting conditions—which is a centerpiece of the bill’s so-called immediate deliverables—then how are you going to be able to successfully make one-sixth of the economy work through this imperfect process? Finally, I have talked about two things. Our Democratic friends are crowing about, another one of which, it turns out, I think are worth crowing about. How about the things they are not talking about? The things that Americans are very concerned about?

Democrats love to talk about people who are allegedly helped by the legislation. How about those who are hurt by the bill? How about talking about senior citizens whose care is going to be jeopardized as a result of this bill? Seniors in my State of Arizona are very worried about the Medicare cuts. There are over $½ trillion in Medicare cuts in this bill.

Well, our Democratic friends do not like to talk about that. But it is a reality. It is in the bill. The reconciliation bill slashes more than $½ trillion from Medicare and contains a whopping $202 billion reduction in Medicare Advantage. That is more than in the bill the Senate passed last December. But you do not hear about that. Medicare Advantage beneficiaries in my State like the health care they have right now, and it is simply not true if they like their health care they get to keep it.

This bill takes away health care benefits away from seniors who are on Medicare Advantage. That is the truth. It may be an inconvenient truth for our colleagues who like to stress what they think is good about the bill but conveniently ignore things that are going to hurt their constituents and certainly going to hurt my constituents.

My senior citizens in Arizona do not want the government taking away their health care. Our seniors are very concerned as a result of this bill? Seniors in my State of Arizona are very worried about the Medicare cuts. There are over $½ trillion in Medicare cuts in this bill. We do not pay them enough. Mayo Clinic patients. They cannot afford to because they are no longer taking new Medicare patients because he does not accept Medicare Direct. Medicare Advantage coverage, I’ll also lose my State of Arizona are very worried about the bill? How about talking about senior citizens whose care is going to be jeopardized as a result of this bill? Seniors in my State of Arizona are very worried about the Medicare cuts.

(From the Arizona Republic, Mar. 24, 2010)

(By Robert Robb)

Democrats tend to discount the influence of economic incentives on human behavior. They had better hope they are right because the incentive to the health-care bill point toward an explosion in costs.

The health-care bill is built upon a fundamental tradeoff. Health-insurance companies will be treated like utilities, having to take all customers irrespective of health status with sharp limitations on pricing and underwriting. To pay for this increase in costs, everyone will be required to purchase health insurance.

This is an attempt to force the young and healthy to subsidize the health care of the acutely or chronically sick through the premium mechanism. But, as finally passed, the incentives and timing are badly misaligned. The health-care bill point toward an explosion in costs. The health-care bill point toward an explosion in costs.

The implementation timetable for the bill accentuates the misaligned incentives. Insurance companies are saddled with additional costs right away.

They will have to accept children with pre-existing conditions and carry children on their parents’ policies up to age 26. They can’t impose lifetime benefit limits. Any new policies have to cover preventive services without charge or deductible. But the individual mandate, the source of new revenue to cover the additional costs, doesn’t kick in until 2014.

Moreover, the penalties start very low, only $95 in 2014, while the requirement to accept all comers irrespective of pre-existing conditions applies fully that year. So, the individual mandate, the source of new revenue to cover the additional costs, doesn’t kick in until 2014.

This misalignment of incentives in the individual market and the penalty mechanism is the cruelest misalignment in the group market.

The penalty for employers (with more than 50 employees) not providing health insurance is $2,000 per employee, payable on average two to four times that to provide health insurance. The penalty for employers (with more than 50 employees) not providing health insurance is $2,000 per employee, payable on average two to four times that to provide health insurance.

Employers do it now to compete for employees, since the current individual market isn’t an attractive alternative. But, under the bill, the federal government is setting up a heavily subsidizing an individual market with generous benefits.

So, the incentive will be for employers to drop health-insurance coverage, pay the fine, and allow their employees to go shopping in the subsidized exchanges.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates that 8 million to 9 million Americans will be covered by employer-provided health insurance. I think that’s a gross underestimate. Moving people into the individual market could be a good thing, but if individual health insurance operated like other individual insurance products, where people pick up the cost of small stuff and insurance big stuff. But the individual market mandated by the bill requires first-dollar coverage and sharply limits deductibles and co-pays.

So, the bill gives incentives to move people into an individual market with even less cost-control incentives than the existing system, where at least employers worry about the tab. It also gives people an incentive not to participate in the new system until they are actually sick. If incentives matter, there are likely to be sharply insurance-rate increases and insurance-company bankruptcies.

Contrary to the rhetoric on the right, it is possible to treat health care as a public good without rate regulation and rationing. And those are the inevitable next steps down the health-care road the Democrats have taken the country.

Mr. KYL. Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

AMENDMENT NO. 3668

MRS. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily set aside the pending motions and amendments so that I may offer an amendment which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To protect the right of States to opt out of a Federal health care takeover)

At the end of section 1002, insert the following:

(c) Right of States to Opt Out of Federal Health Care Takeover.—Section 1221(d) of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is amended by adding the following:

“(1) by striking ‘Nothing’ and inserting:

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), nothing’; and

“(2) EXCEPTION FOR OPT OUT OF HEALTH CARE REFORM.—The provisions of, and the amendments made by, this Act shall not preclude any State law enacted after the date of enactment of this Act that exempts the State from such provisions or amendments, including any State law relating to provisions and amendments relating to the individual mandate, the employer mandate; taxes on prescription drugs, taxes on medical devices, taxes on medical services, taxes on tobacco, tax cuts, and the unfunded expansion of Medicaid.”.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, the amendment I offer today is to allow States to opt out of this health care bill. If ever there was an encroachment on the tenth amendment, this bill is it.

We are hearing from State leaders all across the country asking Congress to abandon this bill. It is an unconstitutional preemption of State innovation. State prerogative, and States rights they are guaranteed in the Constitution by the tenth amendment. Thirteen States have now filed suit against this legislation because the leaders in those States know the detrimental impact this preemption of States rights will have on their unique situations. States are the most well equipped to design and approve governmental programs to address the needs of their citizens. My amendment would restore the tenth amendment rights reserved for the States by allowing State legislatures to pass legislation that would allow them to opt out of this bill and the Federal takeover of their health care system with its mandates, many of which unconstitutionally.

Let’s walk through the harmful provisions in this bill from which the States could opt out.

Taxes, the job-killing taxes. The bill imposes 10 years of taxes, about $1 trillion, on individuals and businesses as well as pharmaceutical companies, insurance companies, and medical device manufacturers. Some of these taxes will start almost immediately. More than $100 billion in taxes on prescription drugs, medical device manufacturers, and insurance companies will begin to take effect before the actual supposed benefits of this bill would come into play. Studies show these taxes will be passed on to consumers. There is no doubt about it. Of course they are going to be passed on to consumers. They are going to be collected for years before there are any supposed benefits. Then there are the taxes on those who can’t afford insurance which are unfunded—$985 per individual or 2.5 percent of household income. Employers will be hit with new taxes. The penalty could be as high as $2,000 or $3,000 per employee.

What is this going to do to the small businesses of our country, which create 70 percent of the jobs? At a time when families are struggling, at a time when our businesses are struggling, at a time when our economy is at an all-time low—not all-time low, but almost all-time low; certainly bad—businesses aren’t hiring. Why aren’t they hiring? They aren’t because they have a fear of the future. They don’t know what to expect going forward. They are not going to start hiring people until there is a comfort level that the economy has stabilized and that we are in a real recovery mode. Yet, when people feel that way and when small businesses feel that way, what is the biggest deterrent to that occurring about to day? OK, that’s getting big and I can hire new people? More taxes and more mandates and more burdens. That is what is going to keep them from taking that leap to hire more people. So it is like a vicious cycle. We are not going to get out of as long as we are continuing to put on more taxes, more expenses, and more mandates.

We know premiums are going to go up. Premiums are already going up. Our purpose in this bill should be to bring premiums down by lowering the cost of health care, not by increasing the cost. That is so counterintuitive. It could only be thought of in Washington, DC.

Cuts to Medicare. The Senate bill includes over $75 trillion in cuts to Medicare. About $135 billion of those are in cuts to hospitals.

Mr. President, in conclusion, the Medicare Program is unsustainable. The Chief Actuary of Medicare has said that as much as 20 percent of Medicare’s providers will either go out of business or will stop seeing Medicare beneficiaries.

Millions of seniors, including those who have chosen Medicare Advantage, will lose the coverage they now enjoy. Medicare is being used as a piggy bank and it needs every penny that has been deposited.

We cannot pay for reform on the backs of our seniors. Cuts to hospitals will threaten access to care for seniors in our States.

Third, this bill imposes on States an unfunded mandate to expand the Medicaid Program. Putting millions of individuals in to Medicaid is a fast way to quickly reduce the number of uninsured.

Yet by doing so, the Federal Government is sending a very large check to the States, $20 billion to be exact, with a note that says “We decide—you pay.” At a time when so many States are struggling to balance their budgets, pay their teachers, improve transportation, maintain services, this bill imposes more costs.

How much more are we going to ask of our States?

States are in the best position to determine what is right for their citizens. Yet this bill will take away their right to innovate and determine fiscally responsible and effective ways to offer affordable health insurance coverage.

In big government style, this bill manipulates the idea into a one-size-fits-all solution for every single State.

Plus, states should have the option of implementing tort reform as we have done in Texas. Yet under this bill States are actually punished for implementing tort reform. Tort reform is essential to bring down the cost of health care. This bill stifles the ability to achieve this commonsense option.
amount of misinformation out there about what it does and what it does not do. To tell the average American that this is truly historic legislation doesn’t get to them. They want to know how it is going to affect them.

I feel like it is the more the American people learn about this bill, the more they will like it. I believe this for two reasons. First: People very quickly come to see that the myths and the lies that some have put forward about this bill will not come true, because they are not in reality, and now we are in reality—we are in health care reality—because the first part of the bill has passed, the major part, and we will pass the second part.

Second: There are so many good things in this bill that people like and need. As people learn the truth as to what those things are, many of which will improve their lives—some immediately and some in a few years—they become more confident they will not only like health care reform but embrace it. When the crime bill was passed in 1994, at first the same thing happened. There was a parade of horribles. But over the years, we saw that it reduced crime and made America a better place, and it became a very popular piece of legislation. I believe the same thing will occur with this health care bill.

So today I wish to take the rest of my time to describe to average Americans how this bill will affect them. The No. 1 group, the largest group of average Americans, is those who are covered by their employer plan. First, you will always have coverage. For people who have been scared into thinking they might lose their health coverage or have the government telling them what to do or what treatments they could or could not receive, they are going to have more choice. And for people who have been scared into thinking they might lose their health coverage or have the government telling them what to do or what treatments they could or could not receive, they are going to have more choice. And for people who have been scared into thinking they might lose their health coverage or have the government telling them what to do or what treatments they could or could not receive, they are going to have more choice.

I had a firefighter employed by the city of New York on Long Island last week say to me: Don’t pass the bill. I will lose my benefits. That firefighter will see his benefits will not go up and up and up, and their employer will not continue to ask them, as they have now, to pay so much more and to get so much less back.

We cannot claim premiums won’t go up at all, but we know they will go up much, much, much less. The likelihood of the employer calling a person, the average person, a worker in their company and saying: Jim, Mary, you are a great worker. I love you. I want you to stay in my company, but I am eliminating your health care benefits. I am cutting them back, will be greatly reduced over the years as this bill becomes law and works its way.

Beneficiaries, those on private health care, won’t pay higher Medicare taxes. They will not change their choice of doctors will not change. They will be much better off, and they will learn that.

Second: To small business owners who are trying to do the right thing and provide health insurance coverage to their workers and now find that costs are increasing, which makes it more and more difficult every year to keep those employees on health care, they are able to do that because there is a generous tax credit to make it more affordable to provide coverage for their employees. The average small business person is going to like this bill because the average small business owner want their employees to have good health care coverage, but they can’t do it alone. Now they are going to get some help.

What about to the small business owner who aches because he or she can’t supply insurance because the employee has a preexisting condition or just because it is too expensive? They are going to find they will now able to provide insurance for those folks.

What about all of those families with kids who are going to college and they worry, once the kid gets out of college, they are not going to have health care? They are going to find that they are covered up until their 26th birthday on their parents’ plan. They have to be 26.

This is going to start this year. What is a relief to millions of American families and millions of American students. I know this personally. My daughter is graduating from law school. When the bill passed at 1 a.m., she called me. She said the law provides the insurance for her and her boyfriends, who are 19 and 20. She said: Dad, I have been worried what I am going to do about health insurance next year. She is out in the job market. Now I don’t have to worry. That phone call will be repeated by hundreds of thousands and millions of students to their parents in the next while. So it is great for them.

What about retirees who are not yet eligible for Medicare, the person who fears that because they don’t have their job or they are retiring at age 60 or 62, 61, what are they going to do? This bill will provide more assistance to bring down premiums. It will provide more choices to these retirees who right now have either no health insurance or a policy that is so expensive they can’t afford it.

What about average Americans who worry because say they have early stages of diabetes and their health care doesn’t cover prevention? Average American families will see the Senator from Iowa is here, who has been a leader in the fight for prevention—will now get prevention in their benefits. For the average American who has recently gotten sick or who might in the future, they don’t have to worry that their insurance company will take away their benefits. They will not be able to do that the way they do now. We won’t have to hear stories anymore of health insurers looking for any excuse to cut sick people off from their insurance.

What about those tens of millions on Medicare who, again, have been scared and worried that Medicare will change? Yes, Medicare will change. It will get stronger and still preserve the exact same benefit to every person on Medicare.

Before this bill was signed into law, Medicare was going to go broke in 7 years. It has been given an extra decade. That should be a huge load off the shoulders of people who worry about Medicare.

In addition, the doughnut hole will be closed and all those Medicare recipients on prescription drugs will get relief—more relief.

For the average senior citizen, as they learn about this bill, they are going to like it like the people saying to say this was a great thing. It kept Medicare as is, surviving much longer than previously predicted. If we had done nothing and Medicare was about to go broke, guess who would have paid the price. Those senior citizens on it.

What about young women looking for health insurance? Health reform means she will not be charged a premium 150 percent more than a young man’s. Health reform ends that gender discrimination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, in conclusion, I will just say this: In November, this bill will be a positive—a strong positive for those who supported it. Those who were in favor of it will benefit. Those who opposed it will come to regret their opposition as they see the positive impact and what is not in this bill. It is not just a triumph for history; it is a triumph for the average American.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield to the chairman of the HELP Committee—but the Energy Committee, Senator BINGAMAN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I think my friend and chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator BAUCUS. I congratulate him on his leadership on this issue for many months.

I rise in strong support of the reconciliation bill that is before us. It is a historic time for our Nation. I am very glad that after decades of effort, national health reform has become law and that we are considering this set of changes to the law through this reconciliation bill.

There is considerable confusion about what health reform, in fact, will accomplish. It is not surprising that there is confusion when one considers all of the nefarious charges that have been made and claims of nefarious provisions within the legislation. I am glad to see that most Americans, according to polling, believe the actual provisions that are described to them that are contained in the bill are merited and deserve debate.

Simply stated, the law has four main goals. It reforms health insurance markets to ensure Americans have access to affordable care that meets their needs. Second, the bill improves the efficiency and quality of health care and does it in a way that helps contain rapidly rising costs. Third, the bill improves access to primary care and preventive services. Fourth, the bill significantly reduces the Federal deficit over the coming decades.

I think we need to focus on what the effect of the legislation will be on particular individuals and families in our State. I look at our circumstance in New Mexico, which I am proud to represent. Let me pick out a few examples.

First, there are families there who are very happy with their current coverage. For these folks, reform ensures they can keep that coverage. They do not have to purchase any new coverage offered through health insurance exchanges. The reform will help protect their coverage and introduces important policies to put downward pressure on health care costs. In addition, requirements that the coverage continue to be meaningful, and significant improvements in the overall quality of and their access to health care.

Small business owners or the people who work for small businesses—a third of the people in my home State fall into that category. For those who do offer coverage, we know that without reform, they have difficulty affording and keeping meaningful and affordable coverage for their employees. Premiums are rising quickly. These costs threaten the financial stability of these small businesses.

CBO tells us that for small businesses, the impact of reform will be very significant. First, the businesses would have the option to come to the new health insurance exchanges and would have a guaranteed source of meaningful coverage for themselves and their employees. In addition, small businesses may qualify for tax credits for up to 50 percent of the cost of coverage. For businesses receiving tax credits, their employees' premiums would decrease by 8 to 11 percent compared to their costs under current law. Small businesses and their employees do well.

What about individuals purchasing coverage in the individual market? This is particularly important in my home State, for over half of the workers in New Mexico are not offered employer-sponsored coverage. We have the highest percentage of workers without coverage of any State in the Union.

Like small businesses, individuals today have great difficulty in navigating insurance policies, securing affordable and meaningful coverage. This reform will provide these individuals with the options to come to new health insurance exchanges and have a guaranteed source of meaningful coverage for themselves and their families. The Congressional Budget Office predicts that the subsidies enrollees would pay would reduce the premiums they otherwise would have to pay by 50 to 60 percent.

Among higher income enrollees in the individual market who would not receive new subsidies—only about one-fifth of new enrollees—average premiums would increase by 10 to 13 percent. This is consistent with estimates of the impact in my home State of New Mexico, where average families may see a decrease in premiums of as much as 60 percent as compared to the premiums they would pay without reform. In addition, about two-thirds of New Mexicans could potentially qualify for subsidies or Medicaid.

This reconciliation bill also contains important provisions to help Americans obtain a quality education. The higher education provisions of this bill will help put college within reach for more Americans. By eliminating subsidies to private student lenders, the bill supports large Pell grant increases for low-income students, direct loans to States to help low-income students enter and succeed in college, and major new investments in minority-serving colleges and universities. And it does this without raising taxes; in fact, the CBO estimates that lost opportunities reforms will reduce the deficit by over $10 billion over 10 years.

In challenging economic times, we can no longer afford to subsidize private lenders at the expense of college students. In my home State of New Mexico, this bill will provide almost $240 million in new Pell grant funding and an estimated $95 million for Hispanic-serving institutions and tribal colleges over the next 10 years. In supporting economically disadvantaged college students through this bill, we help them to achieve the American dream. We also strengthen our economy by ensuring that we continue to have the smartest, most competitive workforce in the world.

It is clear that the legislation before us and the new health reform law signed by President Obama yesterday are important steps forward for our country. Once we get beyond the rhetoric, this bill, as does Senator BAUCUS. The PRESIDING OFFICER, the distinguished chairman of the HELP Committee, Senator HARKIN. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I thank my friend from New Mexico for his kind words, and I thank him for the great work he did on getting us to this point.

I have a limited amount of time. I want to respond to the motion to commit made by the Senator from Tennessee yesterday that would reduce our discussions in Pell Grants, so I would like to replace them with lower student interest rates.

We all want lower student interest rates. I am, quite frankly, surprised. I do not remember my colleague from Tennessee or other colleagues on that side of the aisle raising much cane around here when the private bankers and Sallie Mae were charging students over 20 percent interest. I did not hear a peep out of the other side.

We have capped all of those interest rates now, and we are changing this program to a direct loan program to get the middlemen out. By cutting out the middlemen, by cutting out the huge subsidies to the bankers, we are able to save over the next 10 years, which we are using, again, to put into the Pell Grant Program to help our students.

I said yesterday, and I repeat, think about the present status quo with this indirect guaranteed student loan program. Think about how bizarre it really is. The Federal Government pays fees to private banks to make entirely risk-free loans using taxpayer dollars. The loans, which are already guaranteed by the Federal Government, are then sold back to the Federal Government. The banks then pocket tens of billions of dollars, taxpayers' dollars, in fees and easy profits at absolutely no risk to them whatsoever. This has been going on for far too long. What this bill does is it ends that. It takes all those savings that otherwise would go to Sallie Mae and to the banks and puts them into Pell grants.

I would also say that our students have too much debt—way too much debt; 73 percent of 4-year college graduates in my State of Iowa graduated with debt that averaged over $28,000. The national average is $23,200 for a student graduating from college. My Iowa students have the second highest debt loads in the Nation. We are taking charge of that.

Three years ago, in the College Cost Reduction and Access Act of 2007, we created the Income-Based Repayment Program. It is the case that a borrower's payment would be capped at 15 percent of their net income after adjustments are made for living expenses and provided total loan forgiveness after 25 years. We targeted that assistance to people who had the most difficult time repaying their loan.

More can be done. Here is what we did in this bill. Starting in 2014, a new borrower will only pay 10 percent interest on Pell grants. They will be eligible for total loan forgiveness after 20 years. This is going to make college much more affordable for students even after they graduate.

If my friend from Tennessee wants to look at ways of reducing interest rates, I am all for it. Some of the biggest users of credit cards are kids in college, and look what they are being charged under credit cards—well over 20 percent, 30 percent sometimes on their credit cards. And they need that for immediate needs. If you are a parent with a kid in college, you know what I am talking about. If you really want to help students, how about capping the interest rates they can charge on credit cards. I advocated that 20 years ago. We cap it at 12 percent. They cannot charge any more than that. But I do not hear my friend from the other side talking about that. We would do more to help our students than just about anything else.

Three years ago when we cut the interest rates on student loans, we were criticized by the Republicans for not doing enough to increase Pell grants. Now we are being criticized for doing too much on Pell grants and not enough on interest rates for students. We see what this is. It is just another attempt to try to kill this reconciliation bill. That is all it is. Of course I am for lower interest rates. Who wouldn’t be? Of course we are all for making the interest rates lower. When this reconciliation bill is through, I intend to come to the floor on some bill that probably will be coming up—maybe a financial bill or something like that—and I will be proposing at that time that we have lower interest rates. I ask my friend from Tennessee to join us in that effort at that time. But now is not the time and this is not the bill on which to do this.

We have to get our reconciliation bill through. Every amendment being offered by the Republicans is no more than an attempt to stop and kill this reconciliation bill and we cannot allow that to happen.

We are going to have an education bill this year. We are going to have an elementary and secondary education bill I hope sometime this year. Higher Education Act changes are in this reconciliation bill. We are going to make sure the students have the money to go to college and Pell grants for the lowest income students. And, yes, we have capped interest rates at 6.8 percent. Could be worse. I imagine. I am sure my friend, when we have another bill up that addresses this, let’s see if we can get lower interest rates. I would be glad to work on that issue at that time. But right now, let’s put the savings, the $61 billion that we are saving—let’s do what this bill does: put it into better Pell grants so the kids can get into college in the first place.

We also put $2.5 billion into something we carefully crafted for far too long: that is, our Historically Black Colleges and Universities and other Minority-serving Institutions. So a big chunk of that money goes in there so they can also get a good education. Again, this bill was carefully crafted. We put the money in there in the Pell grants. Let’s keep them there and let’s address the issue of the interest rates later on. I invite my Republican friends to join with us in doing that, especially on credit cards when that issue comes up down the pipe.

Again, I urge my colleagues, when the vote comes up, to defeat the Alexander motion to commit and to keep the money in there for Pell grants.

I yield 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wish to say a few words about how much this underlying legislation helps small business. We hear a lot of claims to the contrary, and I wish to set the record straight.

Essentially, small business people in America today spend about 18 percent more than the large businesses for the same health care coverage. Why is that? Because the small businesses have to buy insurance through brokers—because administrative costs are higher for them compared to big businesses, and adverse selection hurts them much more than big business. There are a lot of reasons why small businesses pay 18 percent more for health care than big business.

This legislation contains $37 billion in small business tax credits—$37 billion in small business tax credits—most of which go into effect this year, not later but this year, tax credits for a businessperson who wants to offer health insurance for his or her employees. Add to that insurance reforms, which are very much going to help small business. What are they? Preventing insurance companies from discriminating against small employees based on preexisting conditions, preventing discrimination on the basis of older or sicker employees, discrimination based on the plan or discrimination against those whose employees work in dangerous industries.

All these insurance reforms are going to help small business. I might say the Congressional Budget Office also estimates the Senate bill will lower premium costs by nearly 7 percent for small businesses—lower premium costs, not increase them, as has been suggested, but lower premium costs for small business.

The bill also provides for State-based exchanges. That is going to help small business because that will require more competition among insurance companies. That will help give better rates and better quality insurance to small businesses.

I might say this as well. The legislation exempts small businesses—that is a business with 50 or fewer employees—from the requirement that employers that do not sponsor health care insurance pay a fee for their employees receiving premium tax credits. That is an exemption for small businesses with fewer than 50 employees from paying any penalty if they do not provide insurance.

So I wished to make it very clear that this bill very much helps small business—and I repeat—with $37 billion in small business tax credits, along with the other reforms I gave.

Mr. Chairman, how much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 1 1/2 minutes remaining.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I don’t know if Senator MCCASKILL is in the Chamber. I doubt she wants to take 1 1/2 minutes. If not, I will yield back the 1 1/2 minutes.

I understand Senator MCCASKILL is here now and wishes to speak, so I will try to find a way to squeeze in as much time as I can.

You are on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mrs. MCCASKILL. Mr. President, I am confused about why the hearing we had scheduled this afternoon cannot go forward. The subject matter of this hearing is oversight of the contract that is engaged in police training in Afghanistan in the Subcommittee on Contracting Oversight. This is a hearing that is getting to the heart of the matter; that we have a real problem with the mission part in Afghanistan of police training because of problems with these contracts—problems with oversight at the State Department.

We have now canceled the hearing because we have been told we can’t have it. The witness from the State Department has been canceled because the witness from the Defense Department has been canceled, and the inspectors general who were coming to testify about a GAO report that just came out last week that was damning in its criticism in the oversight of these contracts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mrs. MCCASKILL. I don’t get it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, is there an order providing for the next half hour?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is not.

Mr. BAUCUS. I ask unanimous consent that the Republican side control the next half hour and that the majority control the half hour following that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Mr. GREGG. Reserving the right to object, that would be a half hour off, so we should have the half hour after that because you got the first half hour.

Mr. BAUCUS. We won't worry about that yet.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, the Senator from Maine is recognized.

Mr. SAWYER, Mr. President, I wish to thank the Senator from New Hampshire very much for his leadership and for consideration of the time today.

As consideration of health care reform draws to a close in the Senate with the pending reconciliation bill, I cannot help but arrive at this moment with a sense of profound disappointment in considering what might have been, rather than what has actually occurred with respect to one of the foremost priorities of our time.

As I stated as a member of the Senate Finance Committee at the conclusion of our markup of health reform legislation last October, this is one of the most complex set of issues ever placed before the Senate at the same time. I have said the reality that crafting the right approach is arduous in no way obviates our responsibility to make it happen, given the enormous implications of reordering more than $3 trillion in health care expenditures over the course of our lifetime.

As stated, part of the history we made this week is that, for the first time, a truly watershed bill became law purely along partisan lines.

Well, if there is one thing I have learned, it is the only way to allay people's fears is by systematically working through the concerns, the issues, and the policy alternatives from all sides. When we hear proponents portraying the passage of health care reform as the equivalent of landmark legislation of the past, what they fail to note is those efforts were all bipartisan.

Regrettably, part of the history we made this week is that, for the first time, a truly watershed bill became law purely along partisan lines.

As mentioned in the floor last November, it is almost impossible to imagine how transformational legislation over the last nearly 100 years, such as Social Security, Medicare, and civil rights could have been as strongly woven into the fabric of our Nation had they been the work of one party alone.

As we have extended that bipartisan legacy, the majority had 60 votes for health care reform, so they had a choice. They could have worked collaboratively to develop a more balanced, effective, and credible approach that, even if it ultimately failed to attract many Republican votes—could have resulted in legislation more widely embraced by the American people because, in the final analysis, no one party or person has a monopoly on good ideas.

That is precisely the reality that originally brought six of us together in the Senate Finance Committee in the so-called Gang of 6, to the credit of Chairman BAUCUS, who convened a meeting last summer, along with Ranking Member GRASSLEY, and that the chairman and ranking member referenced earlier in the debate on the floor, that was the only bipartisan effort in any committee of the House and Senate. Certainly, that has been true and indicative of their collaborative, cooperative relationship. As the chairman pointed out less than a week after work, for over 4 months, to debate policy and not politics because we were attempting to reach bipartisan consensus on reform legislation.

While we ultimately did not reach an agreement, given our discussions were ended prematurely by an artificially imposed deadline, our efforts did, in many ways, form the foundation for the subsequent Finance Committee legislation that, while far from perfect, produced bipartisan reforms, including benefits included in the practice by the insurance companies that have been discussed so often. We tried to navigate the ideologies on both ends of the political spectrum.

At the same time, as I stated at the conclusion of the Finance Committee markup, the issue of affordability remained one of my paramount concerns. I further expressed that we could not create vast, new bureaucracies and governmental intrusions. Finally, I said the people were sick of the process. Out of the committee was to continue to work to improve the legislation and, therefore, it would be imperative moving forward that the majority in the Senate give deference to the scope and the complexity of this issue, earn broader support, and resist the impulse to retreat into partisanship.

Yet regrettably, since the Finance Committee vote on October 13, the wheels essentially came off. The process went closed 31 times with only one party represented. Long gone was the transparency of the Finance Committee debate, and what came to the Senate floor was a 2,400-page bill—900 pages longer than the Finance Committee bill—that we were forced to complete by Christmas Day, after a mere 21 days on the floor. In looking at a relative equivalence in terms of basis for benchmark legislative, the Senate debated the Civil Rights Act of 1964 for 57 days. We during a bill that was just considered—that we just voted on this past Monday—we disposed of 45 amendments. That is 17 more than we addressed in the amendment process on health care reform legislation in December. What exactly were people afraid of?

Think what we could have been celebrating today if we would have had the opportunity to develop an open amendment process we had been promised or even if we had had, as I urged, that bipartisan summit last October instead of just last month. If it was a good idea now, it would have been a good idea then. Imagine if everyone had the opportunity to sit down with the actual legislative language and work through all the issues, determining what works and what doesn't work. We could have crafted a better product. But now we will never know.

We could have, instead, developed something practical, rolled out in phases, and demonstrated the benefit critical, given we are already in treacherous economic and fiscal waters.

It is not as though we lacked the time. After all, the major provisions of this initiative do not even take effect until 2014. In fact, CBO has said that with the majority of the reform measures not scheduled to commence until then—4 years from now, by year 2013—there will still be 50 million uninsured Americans, exactly the same number as today.

There are those who will argue that the Senate-passed legislation was basically the same bill that emerged from the Finance Committee. But the facts tell a story of a different bill that, far from improving upon the finance measure, as I had indicated would be critical, instead went against the opposite direction from what Americans wanted—with greater bureaucracy, more taxes, and ill-conceived measures that will cost our Nation jobs rather than help to create them.

Look at this chart, with respect to the employer mandate, to cite some examples. Something of critical importance to me, as ranking member of the Senate Small Business Committee, the Finance Committee proposal contained no employer mandate per se, forcing firms to offer health insurance. Rather, it specified that if a firm chose not to offer insurance and any of its workers received subsidized coverage in the exchange, the firm would pay a penalty equal to the lesser of an average credit amount that the employee received in the exchange or a flat $400 fee for all its workers.

While I would have preferred a zero penalty, the Senate-passed bill actually got worse, as you can see with this chart. First, penalties nearly doubled from those in the Finance Committee package to $750 per employee. Then it greatly expanded the instances in which penalties would be applied, requiring employers with more than 50 full-time employees who don't at least offer coverage and have even one full-time employee receiving a subsidy through the exchange to pay $750 for each of its full-time workers.

Under the reconciliation package that is pending before the Senate, firms with more than 50 workers would have to pay $2,000 per employee with just the first 30 employees exempted. That is a 167-percent increase over the $750 in the bill that was just signed into law. So we have gone from $400 to $750 and now to $2,000.

In the end, neither full-time workers and seasonal workers will now be counted in determining whether the mandate will apply. That will be devastating. It will be devastating to small firms, middle-sized firms, restaurants, retailers, and seasonal industries, such as those in my State of Maine, that will be subject to this mandate, which now produces $52 billion in revenue, up from the $27 billion in 2002. We have become major tax increases, not to mention the unprecedented shift in the way we pay for employer reimbursement that we have to extend this week for another month because it is a month-to-month problem. We need a 10-year fix. That will be over $200 billion but, rather, we are taxing it for other purposes rather than into Medicare. But unfortunately, that’s what becomes of a broken process.

Exactly how is this going to help our Nation’s greatest job generators—our small businesses—that we are depending on to lead us out of this downturn? Now let’s look at the Medicare taxes, the so-called finance bill to not contain any form of Medicare taxes. We did not increase Medicare taxes. The Senate bill that just now became law, signed by the President yesterday, included $87 billion in Medicare taxes. That disproportionately affects small businesses because they apply to the income those businesses would normally reinvest.

Plain and simple, this .9 percentage point increase in Medicare payroll taxes is a job killer, as it essentially takes 3.8 percent of the personal percentage point of capital from the very small business owners we are depending on to create jobs, who are more than likely to employ between 20 and 250 employees, all at a moment when we should be looking for ways to help bring capital into small businesses.

If that were not bad enough, here we have reconciliation that is pending before the Senate that compounds the mistake with a 3.8-percent Medicare tax that is unnecessary because it is imposing a payroll tax on investment income. When combined with a capital gains tax increase the majority is planning for the end of this year, this 3.8 percent tax will raise the capital gains tax rate to an astonishing 23.8 percent, which is a 67-percent increase in taxes on investment during these precarious times.

Taken together, it is a grand total of $210 billion in Medicare taxes. So we went from the Finance Committee at zero to the Senate-passed bill that became law yesterday at $87 billion, and now in the bill pending before the Senate, we have a grand total of $210 billion in Medicare taxes.

It is a hidden tax, by the way. It is not indexed for inflation, so it will be similar to the alternative minimum tax that is going to continue to erode more and more people in this tax. It is a major tax increase on individuals, small businesses, on capital, at a time when we desperately need that capital to be reinvested to create more jobs.

Again, we have gone from zero to $210 billion in new taxes in Medicare. Do we seriously believe this is the time we should be instituting these breathing and job-killing increases, not to mention the unprecedented shift because not one dollar gets reinvested in Medicare—not one dollar—not to mention it is not addressing the physician problem with a 21 percent reduction in provider reimbursement that we have to extend this week for another month because it is a month-to-month problem.

We need a 10-year fix. That will be over $200 billion but, rather, we are taxing it for other purposes rather than into Medicare. But unfortunately, that’s what becomes of a broken process.

Look at what two of the largest organizations representing small business in America stated upon passage of the finance bill. The National Federation of Independent Business said at the time the finance bill passed on October 13:

Fast forward to the Senate-passed bill in December that now became law as a result of the President signing it yesterday. Now what does NFIB, the National Federation of Independent Business, say?

The impact from these new taxes, a rich benefit package that is more costly than what they can afford today . . . [and] a hard employer mandate.

The one I deferred to earlier—equally disastrous for small businesses. On March 21, they said:

We couldn’t have been clearer how damaging this bill will be to America’s small businesses and the economic recovery of this country.

Particularly in these precarious economic times, shouldn’t that make us all deeply concerned?

Now consider what the National Small Business Association released this weekend. I have that on a chart as well.

We have continued to work positively for needed changes . . . but it is now clear that most of these recommendations have not been accepted. . . . We understand that it is impossible to assess a significant reform such as this one without some objections from nearly every constituency. But our objections to this bill go beyond those reasonable expectations, so we do better.

To which I add, I could not agree more. They say they oppose the health care reform bill with regret but they base it on all the significant issues that have been incorporated in this legislation that will be damaging to small businesses. I do not agree more.

Furthermore, I am deeply troubled by the manner in which the Medicare tax increases in this bill are to be utilized—$210 billion. According to CBO, and this is their exact words:

To describe the full amount of the Medicare trust fund savings as both improving the government’s ability to pay future Medicare benefits and financing new spending outside of Medicare would essentially double count a large share of those savings and thus overstate the improvement in the government’s fiscal position.

So, No. 1, talking about the fact of the reduction of deficit, it is not going to improve that; and No. 2, whether or not it can be plowed back into Medicare, obviously it is not going to affect Medicare’s insolvency issue because it is going to go to other purposes and is not intended for the Medicare trust fund. How are we going to strengthen Medicare when these new tax dollars are being diverted from their original intended purpose of actually paying for Medicare benefits?

The most fundamental difference in the legislation we passed in the Senate Finance Committee on October 13 and in the pending reconciliation bill, is the so-called CLASS Act. While proponents point to estimates that this provision would raise $72 billion over the first 10 years, that savings only occurs as a result of a fiscal shell game of using funds promised to pay beneficiaries later to lower the deficit today. As CBO says, “The program would pay out far less in benefits than it would receive in premiums over the 10-year budget window,” raising $70 billion in premiums that will fund benefits outside the window, and as a result, CBO further concluded that “in the decade following 2029, the CLASS program will begin to increase the deficit.” Again, this is exactly the wrong direction for America.

Perhaps most disturbingly, we don’t even have answers from CBO to many of the most fundamental questions in the minds of Americans, the minds of small businesses—what will be the true impact? Those were questions I posed to CBO on December 3 to which I still don’t have the answers. What provisions in the legislation will be designed to facilitate and lower premiums, and to what extent would those provisions or other obligations limit their outcome? What would go up and what would go down? We need to know what is going to drive up premium costs and what is going to lower premium costs. Indeed, the headline on Tuesday in my home State newspaper the Portland Press Herald was “Mainers Wait and Wonder: How Will Reform Affect Us?”

That is why I also requested from CBO specific state-by-state analysis of reform’s effects on premiums, because while we do have from CBO a national average for premiums, what they would be for minimum creditable coverage under the new law, the reality is that cost will vary widely from State to State. That is why I proposed and I asked CBO what the impact would be of opening up the legislation to extend the “young invincibles” plan, that catastrophic coverage for young people, to Americans and the exchanges that could drive up premiums that would not have the Affordable Care Act subsidies to that coverage as well so everyone at least has one affordable option to purchase health insurance.

Why? Because the Federal Government is requiring for the first time that individuals purchase health insurance—that is, first, individual mandates; second, it sets new standards in the plan and the exchanges that could drive up premium costs for certain individuals and small businesses. So we haven’t even answered the question: are affordable choices available? Yet we do not even have substantiation whether provisions of this reform will make health care costs higher or lower. In fact, there is actually a presumption in the legislation that costs may well go up. I find it telling that the excise tax on high-cost insurance in this reconciliation contains a fail-safe provision, referred to as a health cost adjustment rate, that automagically raises the threshold to higher numbers. That was described in the House Democratic summary of reconciliation. They put it this way:

CBIO is wrong in its forecast of the premium inflation rate between now and 2018.

Maine is a high-cost State, regrettably, because it is not a competitive market. We have high-cost plans, along with 16 other States. But given that the bill already provides for thresholds as high as $33,900 for individuals and $66,450 excluding vision and dental benefits before triggering the excise tax, those thresholds are significantly higher than those that were passed in the Senate-passed bill yesterday. Now they will be further raised to higher under the pending reconciliation.

The question is, Why exactly would we still require a medical inflation adjustment for 2018, 8 years from now, that raises those thresholds even higher? What is the purpose of the medical insurance reinsurance in medical costs as a result of this legislation that was signed into law and the pending reconciliation? It says they simply do not know. The fall-safe automatic increase in the threshold clearly assumes this legislation still may not address runaway costs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. Hagán). The time of the Senator has expired.

Ms. SNOWE. I ask unanimous consent for 1 additional minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. SNOWE. Madame President, these are the thresholds. Eight years from now—the legislation suggests that because of inflation for medical costs that outpaces inflation two to three times, they are saying that 8 years from now, we don’t have certainty in medical costs even with the passage of this legislation having taken effect as a result of yesterday. It is precisely because of this uncertainty that I will be offering amendments to address these very issues.

Somehow, the high worth of legislative, of deliberating, of ironing out our differences has been cast aside in favor of either/or propositions when we could have risen to the monumental challenge with the best possible solution to strengthen America’s health care today and for generations to come. I profoundly regret that this process has provided far too few opportunities to forge legislation that would stand not just the test of our time but for all time. We could have done better and we should have done better.

I yield the floor, and I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD:

NSBA OPPOSES HEALTH CARE REFORM BILL, HAGAN, SNOWE.

Despite the extraordinary need of small businesses for health care reform, the National Small Business Association cannot support the reform bill currently pending before Congress. This bill will place significant new pressures on small businesses to both offer and pay for employee health insurance, starting with the unnecessary costs of reform. With new provider-level reforms that could contain costs and enable small businesses to afford this commitment will not be possible for small businesses if at all. We cannot justifiably expect that small companies caught between these twin pressures will see their ability to grow, prosper, and create jobs greatly diminished.

As long-time advocates of fundamental reform of the health care system, we had high hopes for a reform measure that could be more tailored to small business and small businesses’ needs and responsibilities, rather than all-encompassing employer mandates and a start on transforming the delivery system while containing health care costs to unsustainable levels.

The shortcomings, though, also are significant.

Small business health premiums will continue to increase sharply, as even the Congressional Budget Office has determined. The legislation to encourage cost-conscious consumer behavior, aside from the unnecessarily blunt “Cadillac tax,” which will not begin to have an effect until at least 2018, and which is insufficiently transparent and imposes unintended administrative burdens on small businesses.

The previously mentioned delivery system reforms are positive, but are too back-loaded, giving powerful vested interests years to water them down or remove them entirely. Even if implemented, they are not likely to have a significant impact for a decade or more. Malpractice reform, absent from the current legislation, would make those reforms much more effective.

However, from the perspective of most small companies, the large increases in “free-rider fees” are troubling. If there was once a distinction between an employer mandate and a free-rider provision, it seems to have been lost.

The very large tax increases on both earned and unearned income could have a significant effect on many small business owners and their ability to reinvest in their companies’ growth. These increases are in addition to the administration’s current budget proposal which calls for significant income tax increases on the same individuals. Together, these taxes will create a steep increase in marginal tax rates on the very entrepreneurs we need to be investing and creating jobs.

NSBA has stood apart from many other businesses advocating for modifications on health care reform, preferring to be a non-partisan, thoughtful, and member-driven organization. We have continued to work positively for health care reform legislation, but it is now clear that most of those recommendations have not been accepted and that the bill is in its final form. We understand and the greatest significant reform such as this without some objections from nearly every constituency. But our objections to this bill go beyond those reasonable expectations. Congress can do better. A sense of urgency on cost containment is the place to start.

NFIB STATEMENT: SENATE HEALTH BILL
WASHINGTON, DC, Nov. 19, 2009.—Susan Eckerly, senior vice president of the National Federation of Independent Business, the nation’s leading small business association, issued the following statement in reaction to the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

“Small business can’t support a proposal that does not address their No. 1 problem: the unsustainable cost of health care. With unemployment at a 26-year high and small business owners struggling to simply keep their doors open, this kind of reform is not an option. What we need to encourage small businesses to thrive.

“We oppose the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act due to the amount of new taxes, the creation of new mandates, and the establishment of new entitlement programs. There is no doubt all these burdens will be paid for on the backs of small business. It’s not possible that at the end of the day, the costs to small business more than outweigh the benefits they may have realized.

“Small businesses have been clear about their needs in health care reform; they especially need reform, but these reforms can’t add to their cost of doing business. The impact from these new taxes, a rich benefit package that is more competitive than what they have today, a new government entitlement program, and a hard employer mandate equals disaster for small business.

“We are disappointed that, after so many months of discussion, small business could be left with the status quo or something even worse. Unless extreme measures are taken to reverse the course Congress is on, small business will have no choice but to hope for another chance at real reform down the road.

“Congress is running out of opportunities to prove to small business that they are serious about helping our nation’s job creators. We hope that the current debate will produce a bill that small businesses see as a solution and not another government burden.”

MAINE WANTS AND WONDER: HOW WILL REFORM AFFECT US?
(John Richardson)

Terri Grover of Portland watched from her home Sunday night as Congress finally passed health-care reform legislation.

She didn’t realize that her 22-year-old daughter, a senior at Bates College, was glued to the television, too.

Daughter called from college last night at 10:40 and said, “They passed it, they passed it! Does that mean I’m going to get insurance?” Grover said.

Grover is pretty sure the answer to that question is “yes.”

The legislation, which still needs to be signed by President Obama and then amended by the U.S. Senate, says dependents will be eligible to stay on their parents’ policies until they turn 26.

While Grover is still nervous about all the details in the complex reform package, some of which have yet to be finalized.
Some Mainers, including Grover, said Monday that they’re excited about the legislation. Others said they fear that the added costs and regulation will just make matters worse. All agreed, however, that there is much uncertainty and confusion about how it will ultimately affect their health care costs, their jobs and their businesses.

“We all want to know,” Barbara Thorso of South Portland said Monday afternoon between bingo games at the city’s community center.

Thorso, 87, is president of the Three Score Plus Club, which hosts the weekly gathering.

“We all are wondering. This bill is going to cover us,” Thorso said. “I would like to have an understanding of what’s in the people’s pocketbook. I want some clarity.”

The 10-year, $938 billion bill will eventually extend coverage to 32 million uninsured Americans, prohibit insurance companies from denying coverage to sick people, and create insurance marketplaces, called “exchanges,” intended to make coverage more affordable.

Other changes will be more immediate, such as subsidies to help senior citizens pay for drugs and the requirement to let dependent children remain on their parents’ health insurance plan until age 26.

“It’s really too soon to know how all of this is going to unfold. Some of the provisions of the bill don’t go into effect until 2014, or later,” said Ellen Pelletreau, director of the Maine Association of Health Plans, an association of health insurance companies.

“In truth, I’m trying to understand it, to dissect it so we can know what the impacts and (employers’) responsibilities are, and that’s going to take some time,” said Dana Connors, president of the Maine State Chamber of Commerce.

“Some say it is . . . does it reduce costs, does it add costs?”

Parker Williams of South波特 said he believes that the legislation will hurt businesses and cost jobs. “Where are they going to get the money to pay for it?” said Williams. “It will take 10 years before it will start to save money.”

Ann LaForgia of South Portland said she has more faith in President Obama.

“Most of the people our age are very concerned,” said LaForgia, who is 64. “I’m really hoping this will work. If it doesn’t work, I think I will consider voting for a Republican. I’m more worried about the younger people.”

Toni Fizell and Sharon Haskell, both of South Portland, are being directly affected by the legislation. Fizell, who is 59, has no health insurance.

Haskell, who is 63, expects that she will be uninsured, too, after her rate goes up in June.

Both are more nervous about the bill than optimistic.

“It’s scary to listen to (the debate),” Fizell said. “Everybody has to have insurance. . . . How are they going to enforce that?”

The bill will eventually require people to buy insurance or pay fees, and it includes subsidies to help people who can’t afford it.

Haskell, who lost her job and her employer insurance last year, said she doesn’t expect any help from the legislation before she turns 65 and is eligible for Medicare. “I’m just going to look for something part time and probably not pay too much,” she said.

Grover, who celebrated on the phone with her daughter, is confident that the legislation will be an improvement, despite all the details.

“People will be able to search for the right career for them rather than search for any job that will give them health insurance,” she said. “I wish the whole thing went into effect faster.”
He went on to say:

No one is going to take away your benefits, that is plain and simple truth.

Well, if it is plain and simple truth, then this body has no choice tonight but to take my amendment, to pass my amendment, to incorporate it in the health care bill, the reconciliation bill, and to make sure that when we finish our business, whether that is tomorrow or the next day, that, in fact, it is very clear in the health care bill who is covered. It is not just TRICARE for Life; it is TRICARE; it is spina bifida for the children of Agent Orange exposure; it is the CHAMPVA program, which covers spouses, children, and the severely disabled of those killed in action.

My hope is that all of my colleagues will see the wisdom in supporting this bill, that they will not look for another avenue to do it in, that they will put it in the fix bill, and they will not leave it up to Secretaries to give us the assurance when we have set up so many outside panels to interpret for the American people what their coverage is going to be in the future.

I think sometimes we can forget the complicated maze this bill creates, where we will actually have nonproducers determining whether your coverage is sufficient that you constructed or that your employer provided for you or that you went out as an independent and bought, and if it does not meet the standard of minimum essential coverage, then you could open.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. BURR. I thank the Chair.

Then you could be exposed to a fine because a government bureaucrat has determined that the coverage, the health care coverage you bought, that you were given, is not sufficient enough to meet the minimal essential coverage this bill crafted.

Well, very simply, there are veterans around the country who know they have been left out—their spouses, their family members, their kids with disease. Tonight we can assure them they have been left out—their spouses, their children, and the severely disabled of those killed inaction.

Mr. BURR. As a member of the committee, and I side myself with the chair and the ranking member that I have no personal objection to continuing. There is no objection on our side of the aisle. Therefore, I would have to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I yield to the distinguished senior Senator from California, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, 10 minutes.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the distinguished manager of the bill for his presentation.

It was only in the last few years that I began to see how much medicine had changed in America. We walked into a doctor’s office, and it was not like one secretary in my father’s office; it was a bank of files and pressure and lines waiting to be seen. I realized that there were so many people who did not have good health care, who worried about losing their health care, and, in fact, were losing their health care; that this kind of reform suddenly was open to me.

Then I looked at some statistics because I thought, America is spending all of this money, spending nearly 15 percent of our GDP on health care, we must be getting substantial bang for the buck. And here is what I found instead.

According to the World Health Organization, the top health care systems in the world begin with France, No. 1, California, my State, a State of nearly 40 million people. So over the past 2 years, California has lost insurance for 2 million people, bringing the total of those up to 3 million who have no insurance whatsoever.

Then you see companies, when the people get sick with HIV, with full-blown AIDS, will just simply cancel their policies and throw them out. Then you learn that there is such a thing as a preexisting condition. We all come with certain preexisting conditions, or probably at one time in our life we will have one.

We find there are companies that will not grant insurance if you have a preexisting condition. In my 17 years in the Senate, 18 years in the Senate, we have had numerous people write and say: I have been denied this treatment, or, I have been denied this treatment. Would you please try and help me? And we do. Sometimes we win, and we get a procedure for them that they had been denied by their insurance company. So it is extremely important to know what this bill will do: that it will essentially cover 32 million or 95 percent of the people of this country with some form of insurance.
When the exchanges are functioning, they will have real choice if they wish it. Their insurance will not be taken away from them. Right away, this year, yesterday, those of us who were at the White House heard the President say that immediate gains will take place. For $5 billion, 500,000 high-risk pool, helping to provide coverage for those who are uninsured because they have been denied coverage by one of the big medical insurance companies.

Also children with preexisting conditions can no longer be discriminated against. So the family with the juvenile diabetic who cannot get insurance because the child is a juvenile diabetic will be able to get that insurance.

That is important. We have learned that the notorious doughnut hole which takes place when you spend a certain amount on your pharmaceuticals—there is a hole in the middle at which point there is no help, and each situation was expected to receive $250 to help them through that time.

A child can remain on a parent’s policy until the age of 26. These are some of the things that happen right away. A couple years will be expanded to 95 percent of all of the premiums. Once you have this market share and control, you can raise premiums with abandon. Earlier this year, a company, a subsidiary of WellPoint, sent out notices to 800,000 Californians and said: We are raising your premiums went up 39 percent for those not in a group policy who held individual policies. Can you imagine getting a notice that your premiums would increase 40 percent? To add insult to injury, they then said: We won’t be able to implement that law until the age of 26. These are some of the things that happen right away. A child can remain on a parent’s policy until the age of 26.

The important point for us to remember today and tomorrow, as we go through the process, is that the bill is now law. The question before us now is how best to implement that law so that the benefits can be put into place and the detriments I was worried about can be addressed. There are a number of strong points in this bill. Many of my colleagues have laid them out. As we know, insurance companies will be prohibited from denying health care coverage to children with preexisting conditions. Young adults will be able to stay on their parents’ insurance plans until they are 26. Uninsured Americans with preexisting conditions will have access to affordable insurance options. Insurance companies won’t be able to drop people from coverage when they get sick, and they will be banned from implementing lifetime caps on coverage. Seniors who hit the Medicare Part D doughnut hole gap in coverage will get a $250 check to help with the cost of prescriptions and the doughnut hole will be completely closed by 2020.

Access to insurance over the next couple years will be expanded to 95 percent of all of the premiums. It will implement reforms designed to slow skyrocketing health care costs. Working families will not have to worry about losing health insurance or facing bankruptcy because of job loss or because of illness. Insurance companies will be required to spend the majority of their money on patient care.

The law will also provide tax credits to help make health insurance available for individuals, expand access to Medicaid, create a regulated marketplace where people can shop for the health insurance plan that best meets their needs, and will prohibit insurance companies from refusing to sell or renew policies due to an individual’s health status. These are just some of the positive points of the law.

In fairness—and I understand and appreciate some of the frustration on the other side—there are serious problems with the bill. I don’t think automatic cuts in Medicare this law proposes. In fact, I voted against them. I share the concerns by my Democratic colleague, Congressman Rick Boucher of southwest Virginia, regarding the potential negative impact these cuts could have on rural areas, particularly the population of southwest Virginia. This legislation proposes to cut approximately $450 billion from Medicare spending over the next 10 years at a time when Medicare is already mired in debt and, as we know, a bow wave of baby boomers is going to start hitting the Medicare system immediately. Medicare Advantage, which provides better benefits than traditional Medicare, is a valuable tool in rural and underserved areas and that program does little to address the historic disparity in Medicare funding between urban and rural areas.

I am also concerned about the cost and spending projections of this legislation. There is a great debate going on right now about the real cost of this bill. Former CBO Director Douglas Holtz-Eakin estimated, in an article in the New York Times recently, that the bill may increase the deficit by $143 billion over that same period, but it includes a number of unlikely assumptions to improve those cuts could be of them. The system for reimbursing Medicare doctors, called the sustainable growth rate, is widely agreed to be broken, but we have not tried to fix it. That is a $250 billion ticket. Many, including myself, believe the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports Act, the CLASS Act, is structurally unsound. I voted against that as we were considering the bill.
In addition, as my colleague Congressman GLENN NYE from the Norfolk-Virginia Beach area pointed out, there is a great deal of concern among families and small businesses regarding the impact of this bill. And the point is, the bill is now law. The question is how to make the law a better law. The process that got us here has been ugly. It has diminished the trust and respect some citizens hold for our own government. We need to restore that trust through a genuine bipartisan effort on both sides of the aisle to fix the problems in the law. We also need to start working together again across the aisle, on this and other issues that confront us, in a bipartisan sense and a sense of shared responsibility about the many problems facing the country. We are now prepared to begin a series of votes through the reconciliation process that ultimately, quite frankly, is going to mean little or nothing in terms of the outcome of this legislation. They are not going to seriously address the problems in it. I understand the concerns on the other side. I respect them. These votes in many cases are politically necessary for the other side. But I call on my Republican friends to begin to work with us right now on this side to address the inequities that we are concerned about, to implement cost controls, to work together for the good of the country once this next couple of days is done. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I gather I have at least 7 minutes assigned to me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Ten minutes remains.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I ask that the Chair inform me if I am not finished when there is 1 minute remaining on my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will so inform.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, a good friend once wisely said to me that it is only a very short road that has no turns. The road that health care reform has traveled to get to the Senate has been very long and has had many turns. Its path to us might well be described as tortuous, with all that word has come to mean. As I said when I explained why I was voting for the Senate health care reform bill, any piece of legislation this big, this complicated, and this transformational is unlikely to be perfectly pleasing to anyone. That is true for me. In the end, each of us has to ask ourselves, do the positives in this legislation outweigh the negatives? Does what pleases us in it outweigh what worries us? Let me begin with the measure before us now.

The reconciliation act that is before us preserves most but not all of the health care system needs to be changed: reforming health care delivery to put a brake on the skyrocketing costs of care for individuals, families, and businesses; ensuring that better regulating health insurance companies to protect consumers, including those with preexisting conditions; and helping millions of middle-income Americans who cannot afford health insurance; all the outcome to now worry that the bottom line consequence. For me it is particularly noteworthy that the Senate bill, plus the reconciliation act, achieves all that progress without a government takeover of health care or health insurance. That would have been a very costly deficit-exploding mistake and would have fundamentally and adversely altered the traditional American balance of power between the public and private sectors that I worry that the so-called public option so strenuously and why I am grateful it is not in the reconciliation act the House has sent us. Those are the big and good things I appreciate in this health care reform package.

What worries me about it? First, the size of this proposal concerns me, particularly at this time of national fiscal indebtedness and economic stress. I wish we had chosen to achieve health care reform step by step, beginning with delivery reforms that would lower health costs and expanding middle-class access to affordable health insurance and then more aggressively regulating health insurance companies. But there was never enough bipartisan support for such step-by-step. I wish I could find it. So now, along with each of my colleagues, I must vote on the proposal before us, not on one wish we had before us.

My biggest concerns about this proposal are its prospective fiscal consequences. I worry that the savings this bill achieves in Medicare and the revenue it raises from new Medicare taxes to help pay for health care reform will soon be urgently needed to save Medicare and children from running out of money it needs to pay the bills for seniors’ health care. Most of all, I worry that the bottom line consequences of this health care reform will be to increase our already ominous national debt. I am, of course, greatly encouraged by the conclusion of the independent, nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office that this health care reform legislation would only not increase the debt but actually decrease it by more than a trillion dollars over the next two decades, and that its savings in Medicare will not only pay for part of health care reform but actually extend the solvency of the Medicare Hospital Trust Fund.

According to the Chief Actuary at the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, the solvency of the trust fund will be extended by 10 years as a result of the Senate health care reform bill that is now law. However, for those good and significant things to happen, future Congresses will have to be very disciplined and keep the promises that are made in this legislation to reform health care delivery to cut costs. Most of those reforms will couple time be opposed by providers and beneficiaries. The record of Congress in resisting such pressure to achieve the costly status quo is not encouraging.

So in the end, I have weighed the pluses and minuses, and I have decided to vote for this health care reform package, choosing its real change over the broken status quo, raising my hopes above my fear, and adding, if I may, a personal prayer that future Congresses and Presidents do not weaken the reforms in this bill that will stop the constant increases in health care costs and help reduce our national debt.

That will happen best if we can achieve the bipartisanship in overseeing the implementation of this historic health care reform legislation that we, unfortunately, were not able to achieve in its passage.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, first, I thank the Senator from Connecticut for his very thoughtful endorsement of this legislation. He is one of the more thoughtful Members of this Chamber, and I want to very much compliment him on his process and his conclusion.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I do not think I have much time remaining—3 minutes. Thank you very much.

The Senator from Maine raised the issue of Medicare solvency. I want to remind my colleagues that health care reform extends the solvency of the Medicare trust fund. Whether it is 9 years or 10 years, I am not sure exactly, but the Medicare trust fund is extended for at least that period of time, which I am sure gives great comfort to seniors and near seniors. Health care reform is exactly what the doctor ordered for Medicare’s long-term health.

The Senator also mentioned a letter from an outside group raising concerns with health care reform. Let me add for the record three of the many letters of endorsement that health care reform has received. The first is from the American Medical Association. I want to remind my colleagues that health care reform extends the solvency of the Medicare trust fund. Whether it is 9 years or 10 years, I am not sure exactly, but the Medicare trust fund is extended for at least that period of time, which I am sure gives great comfort to seniors and near seniors. Health care reform is exactly what the doctor ordered for Medicare’s long-term health.

The Senator also mentioned a letter from an outside group raising concerns with health care reform. Let me add for the record three of the many letters of endorsement that health care reform has received. The first is from the American Medical Association. I want to read one sentence:

After careful review and consideration, the Board of Trustees of the American Medical Association supports passage of the health system reform legislation under consideration... as a step forward in the journey to provide health care for all Americans.

In addition, I have a letter from the Federation of American Hospitals:

On behalf of the Federation of American Hospitals and our more than 1,000 hospitals throughout the United States, I express our strong support for health reform and the Reconciliation Act of 2010. This legislation is long overdue, and we urge all Senators to seize this historic opportunity...

It is signed by Charles Kahn of the Federation of American Hospitals.

I also have a statement here from the AARP, the association of retired folks.

Basically it states:

After a thorough analysis of the reform package, we believe this legislation brings us so much closer to helping millions of older Americans get quality, affordable health care.

Again, that is from the AARP.

So there are many letters of endorsement, and I ask unanimous consent that these three letters be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material referred to in order to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Chicago, IL, March 19, 2010.

Hon. NANCY PELOSI,
Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR SPEAKER PELOSI: After careful review and consideration, the Board of Trustees of the American Medical Association (AMA) supports passage of the health system reform legislation under consideration in the House as a step forward in the journey to provide health care for all Americans.

When H.R. 3590 was being considered in the Senate, the AMA supported its passage while expressing opposition to certain provisions that we believed could be resolved in the conference committee process. Working with the Administration, congressional leaders and their very dedicated staff, significant progress was made toward resolving our most serious concerns. Unfortunately, there are issues in H.R. 3590 that cannot be addressed through the current reconciliation process and need to be addressed by Congress and the Administration.

This forced us to weigh very carefully whether the legislation, on balance, will enhance patient care and the fundamental patient-physician relationship. By extending coverage to the vast majority of the uninsured, improving competition and choice in the insurance marketplace, promoting prevention and wellness, reducing administrative burdens, and promoting clinical comparative effectiveness research, we believe that H.R. 3590 marks an important step toward improving the health of the American people, but our work here is far from done. Additional congressional action is needed to address outstanding issues.

We look forward to working with you on the next steps to strengthen our health care system.

Sincerely, JAMES ROHACK, President.

Hon. HARRY REID,
Majority Leader, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MAJORITY LEADER REID: On behalf of the Federation of American Hospitals (FAH) and our more than 1,000 hospitals throughout the United States, I express our strong support for health reform and the Reconciliation Act of 2010, together with the recently enacted Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, advance this shared goal by expanding health care coverage to 32 million Americans.

Equally vital, they provide a framework for health care reform that will improve health care for Americans, and, by extension, strengthen our economy and global competitiveness by reducing costs and increasing efficiency.

That is why hospitals will forgo $155 billion in Medicare and Medicaid payments over 10 years as part of a shared sacrifice to bring about the benefits that health reform will deliver to all Americans.

It is no exaggeration to say this is the last opportunity for legislation about durable reform that will make a real difference in the lives of all of us. The time for action has come, and the FAH urges all Senators to work toward passing the reconciliation package without amendment.

Thank you for your strong and unwavering leadership.

Sincerely, CHARLES N. KAHN III, President.

AARP STATEMENT ON HISTORIC HEALTH INSURANCE REFORM PACKAGE

WASHINGTON.—Today, AARP Board Chair Bonnie McKown Cramer issued the following statement:

The AARP is pleased that Congress has enacted an historic health care reform package that will improve health care for older Americans and their families. For more than two years, AARP has fought for health insurance reform that helps Americans 50-plus get the care and medications they need at a price they can afford.

Cramer’s statement follows:

“After a thorough analysis of the reform package, we believe this legislation brings us so much closer to helping millions of older Americans get quality, affordable health care. For too long, our members and others have faced spiraling prescription drug costs, discriminatory practices by insurance companies and a Medicare system awash in fraud, waste and abuse.

“The legislative package tackles some of the problems insurance company abuses and protects and strengthens guaranteed benefits in Medicare, the program millions of our members depend on to provide crucial care for millions of older Americans. It also closes the ‘doughnut hole,’ a gap in prescription drug coverage that is life threatening for many. It would also stop lawmakers from forcing people out of coverage because they have an existing health problem or arbitrarily limiting the amount of care someone can receive. It also limits insurance companies’ ability to charge higher premiums based solely on age. And it improves efforts to crack down on fraud in Medicaid, strengthening the program for today’s seniors and future generations.

“For every American who has struggled with the economics of health insurance—and for all those at risk of losing their current coverage with the next job loss, illness or premium hike—this package presents the best hope to offer health security for them and their families. We understand that significant work remains even after this package becomes law, but we cannot lose the opportunity to build on this law and pass the next big step that is now due.”

“We urge Congress to seize this opportunity to improve health care for all older Americans and their families in every state they live in.”

Also today, AARP CEO A. Barry Rand sent a letter to every member of Congress, urging them to put the health of Americans age 50-plus first and vote “yes” on the legislative package.

AARP members can see how their representatives voted on the health insurance reform package by going to www.aarp.org/govwatch.

AARP’s Government Watch is a one-stop go-to news source for tracking and publicizing every designated key vote on issues facing Americans age 50-plus. A “Key Vote Summary” highlighting votes on these issues will be published at the end of each congressional session.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I now ask for 1 hour of debate evenly divided, a half hour on the Republican side and a half hour on the majority side. I ask unanimous consent that we proceed in that respect.

I note that the next half hour will be under the control of the Republicans and, as I said earlier, the next half hour is to be controlled by the majority. I note that thereafter the Republican side will be due on the record within 3 minutes longer than the half hour and, I propose that we balance that out in the next consent.
Ms. COLLINS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily set aside the pending motions and amendments so that I may offer an amendment which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Maine [Ms. COLLINS] proposes an amendment numbered 3638.

Ms. COLLINS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To improve the bill by waiving the $40,000 penalty on hiring previously unemployed individuals.

At the end of section 1003, add the following:

(9) UNEMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS.—

(ii) EXCEPTION FOR REPLACEMENT WORKERS.—Clause (i) shall not apply to an individual who is employed by the employer to replace another employee of such employer unless such other employee separated from employment voluntarily or for cause.

Ms. COLLINS. Madam President, I rise to speak to paragraph (6) of the amendment I have offered which would waive the job-killing fines in the reconciliation bill in cases where an employer hires an unemployed worker.

I think these penalties will come as a surprise to most Americans. With unemployment at 9.7 percent, and a real concern that we may be on the brink of a double-dip recession, most Americans will be shocked to learn that Washington wants to slap fines on small businesses that choose to hire unemployed workers. But the new health care law does exactly that.

Incredibly, this reconciliation package makes this problem even worse. Here is how. In the reconciliation package, small businesses that cannot afford to provide health insurance to their employees would be fined $2,000 for each worker on their payroll. The way the formula works, the fines kick in at $40,000 when a small business reaches 50 employees. After that, they go up at a rate of $2,000 for each new worker.

Imagine what this will do to job growth. Our country relies on small businesses to create new jobs. In fact, time and time again, you will hear on the Senate floor that small businesses are the engine of the American economy. I certainly agree with that. But this reconciliation bill creates a wall—40,000 dollars high—around any small business that wants to grow past 49 workers.

Think what these job-killing penalties will mean to the unemployed.

More than 8 million Americans have lost their jobs in the past 27 months. More than 6 million have been unemployed longer than 27 weeks. But beyond even these grim statistics, the true picture of unemployment in this country is actually far worse. Broader measures of unemployment show that 16 percent of the American people are without jobs or cannot find full-time work.

I recognize some in this body will argue we should not be bothered with these penalties now because they do not become effective right away. But those who would say such a thing simply do not understand how small businesses work. We are not talking about big multinational conglomerates here. We are talking about Main Street businesses that are already struggling. Many of these family-owned enterprises. They do not look at their employees as interchangeable parts, and they do not make hiring decisions to get rich quick. When they bring a new employee on board, they are choosing someone who they know will become part of their team and the face of their business to the community they serve.

Having these fines on the books will discourage job growth now, no matter when they become effective, because small businesses will not hire and train workers today just to fire them tomorrow when these penalties go into effect.

Ironically, less than a week ago, the President signed into law the so-called Hiring Incentive Reinvestment Act, which was authored by Senators Schumer and Hatch to provide a temporary tax credit to encourage companies to hire unemployed workers. That is a creative idea, and I supported it. But for the life of me, I do not understand how a week later we could vote for a bill that imposes fines that will hit small businesses when they hire new workers.

This makes no sense to me, and it is completely contrary to the policy we passed to encourage tax credits to encourage businesses to hire workers who are unemployed. With this bill, we are going to fine them if they hire workers who are unemployed if they cannot afford to provide them with health insurance. That is why I am offering this commonsense amendment. It would waive the fines, the onerous fines that are in the reconciliation bill when small businesses and medium-size businesses hire workers who were previously unemployed.

The formula which workers qualify is exactly the same one we adopted in the jobs bill passed by this body last week. It is the height of irony that we would even consider imposing penalties and fines on businesses that are hiring more workers, particularly during this difficult economic time.

I encourage my colleagues to support this commonsense amendment.

Thank you, Madam President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily set aside the pending motions and amendments to offer an amendment which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. THUNE] proposes an amendment numbered 3639.

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To ensure that no State experiences a net job loss as a result of the enactment of the SAFRA Act.

Beginning on page 123, strike line 10 and all that follows through page 124, line 10, and insert the following:

SEC. 2201. TERMINATION OF FEDERAL FAMILY EDUCATION LOAN APPROPRIA-

Section 421 (20 U.S.C. 1071) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), in the first sentence of paragraph (6), by inserting ‘‘, except that no sums may be expended after June 30, 2010, with respect to loans under this part for which the first disbursement is after such date if the Secretary certifies that no State will experience a net job loss as a result of the enactment of the SAFRA Act’’ after ‘‘expended’’; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

‘‘(2) no funds are authorized to be appropriated, or may be expended, under this Act or any other Act to make or insure new loans under this part (including consolidation loans) for which the first disbursement is after June 30, 2010 if the Secretary certifies that no State will experience a net job loss as a result of the enactment of the SAFRA Act, except as expressly authorized by an Act of Congress enacted after the date of enactment of the SAFRA Act.’’.

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, I have another amendment and I ask unanimous consent to temporarily set aside the pending motions and amendments so that I may offer another amendment which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
The clerk will report.
The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. THUNE], for himself, Mr. COBURN, and Mr. CRAPPO, proposes an amendment numbered 3640.

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To repeal the CLASS Act)

At the end of subtitle B of title II, add the following:

SEC. 2304. REPEAL OF THE CLASS ACT.

Title VIII of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and the amendments made by that title are repealed.

Mr. BAUCUS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes, 3639 and 3640.

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, might I ask the Senator from South Dakota if he could identify his two amendments for the sake of clarity?

Mr. THUNE. Sure. I would ask the Chair, is there a number on those amendments?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes, 3639 and 3640.

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, in speaking to both these amendments today, I wish to make a couple of observations about the reconciliation bill that is before the Senate. Of course, it does make amendments and modifications to the Senate-passed health care bill that went through the House last week and the House adopted many of these changes. I think the thing that perhaps didn’t get discussed as much as it should have throughout the course of the debate, the impact this is going to have down the road on future generations.

Obviously, the other side, of course, talked about the additional expansions of coverage that are in the bill. Folks on our side talked about the impact it is going to have in the form of higher taxes on small businesses, the Medicare cuts that are going to impact seniors across this country, the higher premiums many Americans are going to be faced with. Those are all still fundamental features of this bill. In fact, many have gotten worse through this reconciliation process because the tax increases are now $50 billion higher than they were before. So now we are raising taxes even $50 billion more than we were previously, which is $3.5 trillion. The Medicare cuts have now gone from $465 billion over the 10 years in the bill that left the Senate in December, and the Medicare cuts now have been increased by $66 billion. So we are raising cutting cutting Medicare even deeper, and at the same time adding gimmicks that I think understate the true cost of this bill.

We have all talked about this throughout the course of this debate. The other side has said it is $1 trillion or $900-some billion over 10 years, but when you look at the way it is scored, there are 10 years of revenues, 10 years of tax increases, and only 6 years of spending, so that understates the cost over 10 years.

We have a number of other budget gimmicks, some of which I will speak to in a moment, but if you look at it when it is fully implemented—and I think that is the number the American people need to focus on—when this is fully implemented, it is $2.5 trillion of expansion of health care in this country, and it is going to be greater intervention than we have ever seen before by the Federal Government in the delivery of health care in this country.

I wish to speak for a moment—because one of my amendments deals with this issue—on how the cost of this is being understated because of the various gimmicks and tricks being used. The CLASS Act is a program that is created in a program where there is an assumption that there is $70 billion available in the CLASS Act to pay for this new health care entitlement. What it does is it creates a new entitlement. As if the existing entitlement programs we have that are already on the way to bankruptcy aren’t enough, we now have to add another one to it. So the CLASS Act is a long-term care entitlement program, which in and of itself perhaps isn’t a bad idea if it ended properly and if the premiums that are going to be paid by people for long-term care insurance were actually going to go into the payment of benefits.

What this does is it assumes $70 billion from this new CLASS Act program, the proceeds from which would be used to pay for this new health care entitlement program. So it overstates the amount of revenue that is coming in by $70 billion. How is that? At some point, if you are an elderly person or perhaps even a younger person today who wants to buy into this new CLASS Act long-term care program, you would pay premiums. Those premiums, allegedly, would go into a fund that would then be available to pay benefits when the time came to pay benefits. That is not going to happen because you are taking that $70 billion and you are spending it on this new health care entitlement program. So at the future, when those people who have gone into this program thinking they are paying these premiums so they can derive a benefit at some time in the future if they need to, when the time comes on pay out that benefit, there will not be any money. So what happens? It is borrowed. It is added to the debt. So you have another $70 billion that goes on the backs of our children and grandchildren to pay for this new entitlement, which again, underestimates the cost of this bill.

That is the CLASS Act bill, and my amendment would strike that from the underlying bill. By the way, I offered that during the debate on the Senate floor during the health care discussion we had the first time around, and I got 51 votes for it. There were 12 Democrats who voted with me in support of repeal of the CLASS Act.

One of the reasons I think there is so much bipartisan opposition to it is because everybody recognizes what a sham this is. The chairman of the Budget Committee, Senator CONRAD from North Dakota, said: This is a Ponzi scheme of the highest order, something that Bernie Madoff would be proud of. That is what he said about the CLASS Act. Even the Washington Post went so far as to make the statement that the CLASS Act is a gimmick designed to pretend that health care is fully paid for. That is what the Washington Post editorialized about the CLASS Act—a gimmick designed to pretend that health care is fully paid for.

So you take that $70 billion off the overall revenues that come in under the bill and you are already creating a $70 billion hole. You add to that the $29 billion in Social Security payroll taxes that are assumed are going to go into the coffers of people who get hit with high-end Cadillac tax, currently paying out to their employees in the form of health care benefits that are tax free, start shifting to taxable benefits. Therefore, there would apply. That would generate another $29 billion in Social Security payroll taxes. But, there again, those are payroll taxes that at some point are going to have to be paid, but we don’t assume that here. We assume it is going to go on to fund this new health care entitlement program. So it is another $29 billion that at some point in the future, when somebody decides: I want to draw my Social Security benefits, these benefits are going to be there. Therefore, we put it back on the debt. More borrowing.

So we have $79 billion, $29 billion, and then we have the implementation cost of this, which CBO has not fully given us because they don’t know what it is going to cost in the outyears. But based upon what they have given us of what it is going to cost in the near term, we have extrapolated that it will cost about $114 billion to implement and to pay for health care in the budget, and then we have the CLASS Act. When you add that onto the cost, none of which is accounted for in the underlying bill, you have another $114 billion in cost of this thing not paid for.

Then, we take the Medicare double counting, which is interesting, because you have these cuts that are going to occur in Medicare; you have these payroll tax increases that are supposed to occur in Medicare that are going to generate, collectively, $529 billion in additional revenue. So again, what is wrong with this picture? The assumption is, these are Medicare payroll taxes that are going to go into a Medicare fund, that, at some point in the future, will pay Medicare benefits. Yet, at the same time, we are saying these Medicare revenues are going to be used to finance this new health care expansion.

So what are you doing? You are double counting. You cannot spend that money twice. We are taking $529 billion in Medicare cuts, in Medicare payroll tax increases that supposedly would go into a Medicare trust fund to pay benefits, but in the current context, to beneficiaries, recipients of those funds, but, no, we are going to spend that on this new health care entitlement.

What happens then? Someday in the future that Medicare recipient is going to say: OK, it is time to pay out these Medicare benefits. I have reached the appropriate age, I am eligible, and I want to get into the Medicare Program, and all that money that was supposed to have been in the program to pay for those benefits isn’t there anymore. Because it was spent on this new health care entitlement program. So what happens? To pay those benefits, the Federal Government will then have to borrow—more debt that goes on the backs of our children and grandchildren—another $529 billion.

So the last point I will make is—because I have another amendment that addresses this issue—this reconciliation bill did something that obviously was not included in the health care bill that passed the Senate the first time; that is, this takeover of the student loan program in this country. It is something that has been proposed around here for some time. The way student loans are distributed across the country today is we have 2,000 lenders out there who make these loans. Students can go there and get these loans. What this will do is eliminate that model, will draw all these student loans into Washington, DC. There will be 315 centers where students will go to get their loans. What does that do? Well, first off, it kills a lot of jobs. I have 1,200 jobs in South Dakota that are related to the student lending business, and those are all now going to be bureaucratic jobs in Washington, DC. There are 31,000 jobs across the country where you have people who are working in the student loan business. Those jobs are in jeopardy because that is all going to be drawn into Washington, DC. Don’t think that American people have effectively focused on what is being done in this reconciliation bill above and beyond the bad stuff that is related to health care.

So we have this student loan program which is coming back into the Federal Government and a lot of the revenues now are being earmarked for other things. They are being earmarked for the health care bill: $9 billion is being used to pay for the health care expansion; $10 billion is going toward the Medicare program, but we have another $19 billion coming out of the student loan program. Who is going to pay for that? Students are. Students are going to pay for it in the form of higher interest rates on their loans. Essentially, we are now not only taxing small businesses, cutting Medicare recipients, but we are also taxing students to pay for this expansion of health care.

We have another $19 billion which, at some point in the future—of course, this is all going to have to be paid for again by our children and grandchildren. We have all the double counting that is going on and all these gimmicks that are being used to understate the cost of this bill. When you add it all up, $143 billion so-called budget savings ends up in a $618 billion cost. In other words, as the other side has said, a $143 billion budget surplus because of this health care expansion, if you take out all the gimmicks—the CLASS Act, the revenues, the Social Security payroll tax on student loan revenues which are double counting, the Medicare double counting, and the student loan program—we have a real deficit of $618 billion in the first 10 years. If you extrapolate that out into the second 10 years, it is $1.8 trillion that will have to be borrowed under this bill to pay for the costs of it. That is the cost that we know today. That is all going to be passed on to future generations, to our children and grandchildren.

The dirty little story that hasn’t been told in this whole debate is how much this is going to cost future generations because of the enormous debt we are piling up and all the games and the gimmicks and the chicanery that are being used to understate the true cost of this: $183 billion “savings” in this bill. When you take out all the double counting, all the gimmicks, we end up with a $618 billion deficit in the first 10 years. That is tragic.

That is why I am offering this amendment to strike this CLASS Act. We shouldn’t be creating another new entitlement program we can’t pay for the entitlement programs we have. They are all going bankrupt, and we are going to create yet another one, which is going to lay more debt on the backs of our children and grandchildren.

The other thing I wish to mention just briefly in closing speaks to the other amendment. The other amendment, as I said, because of this takeover of the student loan business in this country, there are lots of States that are going to lose significant numbers of jobs. My State has over 1,200 jobs related to student lending: Minnesota, 675; Iowa, 526; Nebraska, 891. There are lots of places around this country where this takes place, private sector jobs. We are going to do away with those and bring all those jobs back to Washington, DC, and make students come to Washington to get their student loans, as it turns out, the Wall Street Journal article and some of the proceeds of that program to pay for the cost of a new health care program.

What my amendment essentially would do is say the Department of Education has to certify that there will be no jobs lost across the country associated with this takeover of the student lending business and bring all that power and consolidating it all in Washington, DC.

So those are the two amendments I offer. I hope my colleagues will vote for those. This is bad policy in so many ways, but in taking over yet another industry in this country that is creating lots of jobs before killing a lot of jobs is the wrong way to move forward when you are trying to pull an economy out of a recession.

I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDENT. The Senator from Texas.

MOTION TO COMMIT

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily set aside the pending motions and amendments so I may offer a motion to commit, which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the motion.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CORNYN] moves to commit the bill H.R. 4872 to the Committee on Finance with instructions to report the same back to the Senate within 3 days with changes to strike the 3.8 percent tax on net investment income.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, my amendment is a motion to commit the reconciliation bill back to the Finance Committee to report the bill back without a brand new tax on savings and investment for certain taxpayers. This is an additional 3.8 percent tax on savings, which includes dividends, capital gains, ordinary savings for many consumers, many Americans who have not had to pay before but which this bill will impose. This is a $143 billion tax hike on those categories of income.

This is a mistake for a lot of reasons. One, it will discourage the very thing we need to be doing more of, which is saving. It will reduce productivity, and it depresses wages and the standard of living for millions of Americans. Simply put, increasing taxes, particularly during a recession, on the very sectors of the economy that we want to invest and to create jobs is a terrible mistake.

According to forecasts by the Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation, a 2.9 percent tax increase—not 3.8 percent but a 2.9 percent previously proposed—would depress economic growth by 1.3 percent and reduce capital formation by 0.4 percent.

The damage to jobs and economic growth during a recession when unemployment is at 9.7 percent would be even greater under the current proposal because we are talking about a 3.8 percent tax, not a 2.9 percent tax, during a recession. The Wall Street Journal article and this report from the Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation.
Not only will this motion protect jobs and the investment security of taxpayers, it will also make sure the reconciliation bill does not break yet another one of President Obama's promises. This is just another one of the President's promises that have been broken by this bill when he said, talking about this bill:

"Everyone in America—everyone—will pay lower taxes than they would under the rates Bill Clinton had in the 1990s."

But the truth is, this additional tax on savings and investment will make taxes higher than they were even back in the 1990s when Bill Clinton was President of the United States.

I ask my colleagues to support my motion to commit this bill to the Finance Committee.

I also ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks two articles—a March 17 Wall Street Journal article entitled “ObamaCare’s Worst Tax Hike” and a report I referred to a moment ago from the Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, this is not the only job-killing provision in this bill, this brand new 3.8 percent tax increase that will attack savings and investment. Other examples of job-killing proposals in this bill include increased government-approved insurance tax. This tax is increased to 3.8 percent. It will hit thousands of small businesses that file as subchapter S corporations and pay taxes at individual rates. In addition, this revenue will not be used to pay for Medicare but will be used to fund a brand new entitlement.

Another job-killing proposal in this bill includes new taxes and fees on health care consumers. That is right, the very people for whom we are trying to lower costs and trying to make health care more affordable, many will have to pay additional taxes and fees to the tune of $100 billion which both the Congressional Budget Office and the Joint Tax Committee have confirmed will inevitably be passed down to consumers.

Then there are the higher premiums for individuals who do not get their health coverage from their employer but who are on their own in the market. We are talking about a lot of small businesses, individuals, partnerships, sole proprietors, and the like. One consulting firm concluded that premiums in the group market could go up as much as 20 percent because of the mandated government-approved insurance policy that has to be sold under this bill. CBO said they concluded a somewhat lower level—between 10 and 13 percent. But still, if the purpose of health care reform is to make health care more affordable, this bill simply goes in the wrong direction.

Then there is the employer mandate. I met this morning with representafund his health insurance overhaul. Social Security taxes for retirement and medical programs for the elderly taxes have always been levied on wages, as a form of social insurance. Extended the Hospital Insurance surtax on capital gains, dividends, interest, and certain other income of upper-middle class and wealthy taxpayers would:

- Raise approximately $39 billion yearly (at 2009 income levels);
- Affect only a small number of upper-income individuals.

In reality, on a dynamic basis, the 2.9% surtax would, after the economy has adjusted to it:

- Depress GDP by about 1.3%;
- Reduce private-sector capital formation by about 3.4%.

Cut the wage rate by about 1.1%, and hours worked by about 0.2%;

- Reduce the after-tax income of the people in the income range appropriately not touched by the proposed 2.9% surtax by 1.1–1.2%;
- Lose about 70% of its anticipated income tax revenue gain due to lower GDP and incomes across-the-board.

Decrease other federal tax revenues, causing total federal receipts actually to fall by about $3 billion yearly (at 2009 income levels).

DISCUSSION

Capital formation is very sensitive to taxes on capital income, and reduced capital formation reduces labor productivity and wages across-the-board. We estimate that the proposed surtax will depress capital formation, GDP, and wages. The resulting loss of income, payroll, corporate, excise, and other taxes will offset the assumed revenue gains. The wage depression will affect all income levels, and the tax burden will not be confined to the top income earners.

The 2.9% passive income surtax (equal to the Medicare Part A—or Hospital Insurance—payroll tax rate) would be imposed on dividends, capital gains, net capital income, and other income from saving and investing. The tax would hit couples with more than $250,000 in adjusted gross income (2009 AGI). The Senate considered that but dropped it as ill-advised and instead opted for a 0.9% surtax on wage and self-employment income only, building on the existing payroll tax. Any surtax on capital income would be especially damaging, and the “cliff” in the Obama Administration’s plan would compound the harm and is especially inequitable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, has the time on the Republican side expired?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 25 seconds remaining.

Mr. BAUCUS. I assume they do not want to use those 25 seconds, hearing no objection.

Madam President, we have several speakers. We are waiting for Senator Baucus. Senator Sanders, Senator Nelson, Senator McCaskill. I do not see any of them right now.

While we are waiting, I wish to make a point about CBO’s analysis with respect to personal income tax.

The Congressional Budget Office says that the health care reform bill will lower premiums for all—Americans—all. The Congressional Budget Office said health insurance premiums are expected to fall 1 to 2 percent for the same plan in the individual market and the small group market, up to 2 percent lower. Let me repeat that. The individual market for the same plan, the Congressional Budget Office says premiums will fall under this legislation. They will be lower, they will be less by 14 to 20 percent than the same plan in the individual market, as people buy insurance individually, and premiums for the small group market—that is roughly small business—would be up to 2 percent lower than currently.

Why is all that? It is basically because there are savings. The savings come from lower administrative costs, increased competition, and from better pooling of risk.

The analogy I like to refer to is Orbitz and Travelocity. Today with Orbitz, you shop online for an airline ticket. You look for fares and you look for times. The same type of operation will occur with respect to insurance—you get on the exchange and shop for insurance.

I see the Senator from New Hampshire is now on the floor. I yield 4 minutes to the Senator from New Hampshire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mrs. SHAHEEN. Madam President, I thank Senator Baucus.

I am pleased we are here building on the success of the health care reform legislation that was just signed into law. Our resolve is strong, make no mistake about that. We must continue our work in making a good bill even better.

The legislation we are now considering makes great strides to strengthen the new law. It will provide more tax relief for families to help them afford health care and more help for seniors to pay for prescription drugs.

I have talked with seniors throughout New Hampshire who struggle with the high cost of prescription drugs. The Medicare doughnut hole, as it is known, causes great stress in family budgets when seniors have to pay full price for the drugs they need, people such as Sue Quinlan from Portsmouth, who wrote to Senator Baucus about her experience with the doughnut hole. She wrote:

This year, because of my illness, my drug costs have doubled, and in September I experienced the ‘‘donut hole.’’ This meant that when my Total Drug Cost reached $2,400 for the year, I was on my own.

She went on to say:

You know you are in the donut hole when a prescription you have been able to afford for now, like $364.77, you know you are in the donut hole when the mail order prescription company calls to warn you that your order is going to cost $728.82 and wants to confirm that you really do want them to send it, and you have no choice except to send it unless you want to stop taking the medications. You know you are in the donut hole when the pharmacist gives you a sympathetic smile when they hand you your order.

Under this bill, seniors such as Sue no longer need to worry. They will get a discount on medicine critical to their health, and we will begin to close the doughnut hole. Seniors will now have access to affordable drugs on which they depend. We have all heard the story of seniors breaking their pills in half or skipping their daily doses because of the cost. Under this bill, a senior with high cholesterol and heart disease who relies on Lipitor and antihypertension medication to stay healthy can take those drugs with peace of mind and less financial stress.

This bill will expand affordable coverage to 32 million Americans. The bill will provide the same Medicaid deals for every State so that the Federal Government will help share in the burden of providing coverage for new populations. The bill also builds on the previous bill to attack average for new populations. The bill also will provide the same Medicaid deals for over 77,400 small businesses through the State of Wisconsin are eligible out the State of Wisconsin are eligible now for tax credits starting this year to help purchase health insurance for business owners and their employees. No longer will small businesses be vulnerable to insurance practices of raising rates on a year-to-year basis due to the act.

We have taken an important step with the enactment of that bill, but as you know, our work is not done. The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is a work in progress, and Congress must be committed to strengthening and adjusting this law as necessary in the years to come. The first step, of course, is for the Senate to pass the Health Care Education Reconciliation Act of 2010, which the Senate is now debating. This bill will strengthen our health care reform law to ensure that health insurance is even more affordable for working families and those seniors actually pay less for prescription drug coverage.

Taken together with the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, this bill would help Wisconsinites purchase good, affordable health insurance and health care. As a result, this year children will no longer be denied coverage for preexisting conditions, insurance companies will no longer drop Americans because they are sick, young Americans can remain on their parents’ coverage longer, and the Medicare doughnut hole that shortchanges seniors and others will be closed. The law of the land. But we have to do more, and passing this bill is the next step.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired. Mr. FEINGOLD. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Madam President, for too long, my constituents have been at the mercy of the health insurance industry which has dictated how and whether they get health care coverage. Wisconsin business have been forced to pay through the nose for skyrocketing premiums. Those days are now coming to an end thanks to the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

We have taken an important step with the enactment of that bill, but as you know, our work is not done. The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is a work in progress, and Congress must be committed to strengthening and adjusting this law as necessary in the years to come. would have come at the expense of seniors living in areas with high medical costs, such as my State of Florida. I was able to pass an amendment in committee that fixed that problem fairly.

Under this reconciliation bill, the President, in his speech, mentioned that we are putting the seniors—those in those Medicare Advantage insurance companies, and this, upon close inspection, also treats seniors fairly. It puts companies on the hook for their performance. If they do not provide quality service, their reimbursements. Their enrollees are, among other achievements, quite significant.

It has been said by many folks in other countries that they need in an affordable way. Those seniors—those in the doughnut hole, there is nothing to keep drug companies from continuing to jack up the prices until that discount is meaningless.

I also hear from folks who are frustrated that in other countries folks are getting the very same drugs for much less than we pay here. I had an amendment that would have required the drug industry to pay its fair share of the tab for health care reform. It required the drug manufacturers to give the government breaks on drugs for a lot of our low-income seniors, and that would have saved us $106 billion of taxpayer money, which was more than enough to fill the doughnut hole altogether and then make a dent in offsetting the Federal deficit.

So I intend to come back and revisit this. In the meantime, I want to say this reconciliation bill deepens and extends the promise of the health care reform bill that was signed into law just yesterday. I stood with the President when he put pen to paper yesterday. I think it is great we have begun the process of health care reform.

It has been said by many folks in many different ways that we are not putting forth for ourselves, but we are placed here for each other. Well, here we are, and here we are debating legislation that stands to improve the lives of tens of millions of Americans. So despite its flaws, I will vote to pass this legislation.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Florida for his very considered and thoughtful conclusion in deciding to vote for this legislation. I deeply appreciate that very much. He is a wonderful member of the committee.

Mr. President, I yield 7 minutes to the Senator from Vermont.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. SANDERS. I thank the Senator from Montana for yielding.

Mr. President, my Republican colleagues have reached the conclusion that this is not a perfect bill. Well, they are right. While my problems with this bill are very different than theirs, I do hope that in the weeks and months to come, after we pass this reconciliation package, we will improve it. But I would ask my Republican colleagues to tell me something: When they controlled the White House and they controlled the Senate and they controlled the House, when President Bush was our President—during that period—7 million more Americans lost their health insurance and health care costs soared. Where were they then in talking to folks? We are going to tell you one substantive idea during that period about how we were going to lower the cost of health care for Americans and provide health insurance for all of our people?

I hope that after we pass reconciliation we are going to improve this bill. In that regard I want to thank Majority Leader REID who has promised us—Senator MERKLEY, myself and others—that we will have the chance to vote on a public option provision. I think millions of Americans understand that public option is a choice that people should have—the right to go outside of the private insurance companies for their health insurance. That public option will provide competitive pressure on the insurance industry to control soaring health care costs. So I very much appreciate Senator REID telling us that we are going to have a vote on that issue within a couple of months.

This bill is a strong step forward. It is no small thing that we are providing health insurance to 32 million more Americans. It is no small thing that we are moving to eliminate preexisting conditions as a grounds for rejecting someone for health care. It is no small thing that we are beginning to fill that doughnut hole so that seniors will be able to get the prescription drugs they need in an affordable way. Those are, among other achievements, quite significant.

But having said that, after the passage of this legislation, we still have to deal with the reality that we will continue to spend far more per capita on health care than any other major country.

A few days ago, we had the Ambassador from Denmark visiting Vermont. In that country, they provide quality care for all of their people, and they do it spending about 50 percent of what we do because they have eliminated private insurance companies and all of the administrative and profiteering costs associated with private insurance companies. I hope we will one day at least evaluate the option to move forward with a single-payer, Medicare-for-all program, which I think ultimately is the way we are going to go as a nation if we are going to solve the need for comprehensive universal and cost-effective health care for all of our people.

I do want to say a word on one aspect, one provision of this bill which I think is enormously important, and I am very excited it is included in this bill. Again, I thank Senator REID for his help in making sure it remained in and is amply funded. That is that in this legislation we are going to take a giant step forward in providing primary health care to the people of this country through a major expansion of the National Health Service Corps. This legislation provides enough funding so that we are going to create, over the next 5 years, 8,000 new health center sites, more than doubling the number that currently exist. We are going to increase access for primary health care, dental care, mental health counseling, and low-cost prescription drugs by doubling the number of Americans with access to community health centers from 20 million to 40 million in every State, and in every region of this country. That is a huge step forward in providing basic health care to millions of Americans who today cannot access that care.

While we do that, we are also going to significantly expand the number of doctors, the number of nurse practitioners and dentists that we desperately need in order to provide primary health care to our people.

This legislation—over a 5-year period—triples the amount of money going into the National Health Service Corps, a program which provides debt forgiveness and scholarships for those doctors and dentists who will be serving in underserved areas throughout this country.

Through the National Health Service Corps, we are going to support an additional 17,000 new primary health care doctors, dentists, nurse practitioners, and mental health professionals. What this means is that if somebody has no health insurance, if somebody has Medicare, or if somebody has private health insurance, that individual is going to be able to walk into a community health center and get the high quality care they need. The incredible thing, and this is quite remarkable, is that by doing this we are going to actually save taxpayers money because we are going to keep people out of the emergency room, which is the most expensive form of primary health care; we are going to prevent people from becoming sicker than they should and ending up in the hospital at great expense. Based on a study by the Geiger-Gibson Program at George Washington University, it is conservatively estimated that, by investing $12.5 billion in health centers and the National Health Service Corps, we would save Medicaid alone over $17 billion over the next 5 years.

This legislation is going to be very significant in providing the primary health care that we need as a nation, and I am very appreciative it is part of the bill.

Mr. President, as I conclude, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the findings of the study by the Geiger-Gibson/RCHN Community Health Foundation Research Collaborative, George Washington University, dated October 14, 2009.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FINDINGS

Since health centers are non-profit entities that operate subject to comprehensive federal standards, our models assume that health centers will serve as many patients as their revenues permit. As a result, the number of patients at health centers depends on the revenue available to health centers and the distribution of insurance coverage among health center patients. The Senate provisions increase health center revenue in three key ways: (1) by increasing federal health center grants; (2) by increasing Medicaid revenues as a result of expanded Medicaid coverage; and (3) by assuring higher private insurance revenues as a result of the extension of the Prospective Payment System (PPS) to health center patients insured through a health exchange. By lowering the number of uninsured patients, health reform thus will allow health centers to use their grant funds to reach additional uninsured patients, thereby increasing the number of patients who can be served.

It is important to note that both federal health center grants and payments under Medicaid and private health insurance represent only a portion of total center revenue. Other important sources include federal, state, local and private grants or contracts. As in our prior report, we conservatively assume that these other funding sources will grow by only five percent annually.

We estimate that by 2019, these combined policy changes would roughly triple the number of patients receiving care at health centers. The number of patients would rise from an estimated 19.0 million in 2009 to 44.2 million in 2015 and to 60.4 million by 2019. In order to expand to serve this many patients, we assume that the number of health center patients served at health centers will rise by 41.4 million over the 2009 level of 19.0 million in total medical savings. (Following the approach used by the Congressional Budget Office, we estimate only the additional savings due to increases in the number of patients who receive their health care through health centers will lead to $69 billion in total medical savings. (Following the approach used by the Congressional Budget Office, we estimate only the additional savings due to increases in the number of patients served at health centers. We estimate that the additional 19 million patients already served in 2009 create medical savings of $24 billion in that year alone; savings from the existing 19 million patients are not included in the estimates given in Table 1 above.)

This estimate includes all medical savings, whether public or private. From the federal perspective, the critical question is federal savings. We estimate savings attributable to federal spending by focusing on federal Medicaid savings, accounting both for the increased volume of Medicaid patients and the effective increases in federal matching shares for Medicaid. (There are also state Medicaid savings not included in the estimate of federal savings.) This calculation yields an estimated federal Medicaid savings of $22.5 billion in 2019 and $105 billion between 2010 and 2019. This is a conservative estimate of federal savings, since there would also be state Medicaid savings as well as in the federal subsidies spent to purchase health insurance through exchanges.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, how much time remains on our half hour? The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. There remains 2 minutes 40 seconds.

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield 2 minutes 40 seconds to the Senator from Missouri.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mrs. MCCASKILL. Mr. President, we have had a lot of that childhood story we all learned of “Chicken Little.” We have had a lot of Chicken Little around this building in the last few months: The sky is falling, the sky is falling. You know, I woke up this morning, I looked up and the sky was not falling. Every day that goes by in America people are going to realize the sky is not falling. In fact, as time goes on that sky is going to get bluer and brighter because people in America are going to realize this bill is not full of booby traps, it is full of good things that will reform health care.

I rise this afternoon to take a couple of minutes to talk about a new low of obstructionism, taking game playing to a whole new level. In 10 minutes I was supposed to convene a hearing on the contracts for police training in Afghanistan. This is a very important part of our mission in Afghanistan, the training of local police departments. There was a witness who was going to be there from the State Department, a witness there from the Defense Department, the Inspectors General were going to be there.

Just last week GAO wiped out a contract that had been let on police training because of problems by the contract was competed. So this hearing was timely and it is important. We cannot succeed in Afghanistan if we do not have effective police training. These contracts are problematic. The State Department is supposed to be overseeing them. We have hundreds of millions of dollars not accounted for.

So what do I find out this morning? The Republican party is not going to let us have the hearing. What in the world? Why in the world are we not being allowed to work this afternoon? Why in the world are we not able to ask questions at a hearing in a few minutes as to why the police training is not going well in Afghanistan and how we can do better.

Our men and women are over there and they are at risk if we do not get this right. I don’t get it. I don’t get what the purpose of saying no is. I don’t get what we accomplish. We are sent here to work. We are paid by the people of this country to work. The idea that I had to call these witnesses and say go home because the Republicans will not let us have a hearing—somebody has to explain this to me. Disagree with us, debate, vote no—but let us work. I implore you: Let us work.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator’s time has expired.

The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I have one unanimous consent request that we continue alternating sides of the debate. I ask consent we continuing alternating back and forth, and the next half hour be on the same side.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, for the information of Senators, the final block of time is reserved to be under the control of the chairman for concluding remarks; that is, prior to a series of votes. I make that statement for the information of Senators.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 3579

Mr. ROBERTS. I ask consent to call up Roberts-Inhofe-Brown amendment No. 3579, and I ask unanimous consent Senator CRAPO be added as cosponsor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS], for himself, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. BROWN of Massachusetts, and Mr. CRAPO, proposes an amendment numbered 3579.

Mr. ROBERTS. I ask unanimous consent to the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. INHOFE] proposes an amendment numbered 3588.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent we dispense with the reading of this amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To exclude pediatric devices and devices for persons with disabilities from the medical device tax)

On page 99, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following:

(e) EXCLUSION OF MEDICAL DEVICES FOR PEDiatric USE AND PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of section 4191(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by subsection (a), the term "taxable medical device" shall not include any device which is primarily designed—

(A) to be used by or for pediatric patients, or

(B) to assist persons with disabilities with tasks of daily life.

(2) EXPANSION OF AFFORDABILITY EXCEPTION TO IN DIVIDUAL MANDATE.—Section 5003A(e)(1)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by section 1501(b) of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and amended by section 10106 of such Act, is amended by striking "8 percent" and inserting "5 percent".

(3) APPLICATION OF PROVISION.—The amendment made by paragraph (2) shall apply as if included in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, President Obama repeatedly promised during the campaign that no one making under $250,000 per year would see their taxes increase. However, the Democrats claim to spend $2.6 trillion in new health care at a time when the country cannot afford the promises they have already made and we have a record 1-year budget deficit. $1.4 trillion.

We hear President Obama always talking about what he inherited from George W. Bush. What he inherited was nothing like what he did. He actually raised the deficit $1.4 trillion in 1 year. That is more than President Bush did in his last 5 years.

The HELP bill, which recently passed the House, represents an unprecedented expansion of government control and increases taxes on Americans during a difficult economic time. But the Democrats did not stop with one expensive health care bill. Now the Senate is debating a fix-it bill which increases taxes an additional $50 billion on the American people.

Reading through the legislation, I am struck by a myriad of ways this raises taxes on American citizens, from job-creating small businesses to middle-income families—over a half trillion dollars of new taxes.

If you happen to need a medical device—that is what we are talking about right now—you get taxed under the bill. Section 9009 of the recently passed health care bill imposes a new tax on assistive devices, which includes items such as pacemakers, ventilators, and prosthetics, and incubators for premature babies. The fix-it bill—I call this the payoff bill because as you all know the Speaker of the House had to pay off these individuals. I understand how that works. That is what this bill is all about right now. That is why it needs to be amended. This is what we are currently debating. It actually expands to include more medical devices, including compressions, elastic bandages, most hand-held dental instruments, and examination gloves.

I am joining with my Republican colleagues to propose an amendment striking the tax on medical devices.

Additionally, I have filed amendment No. 3588—that is what we are talking about now—that will strike this expansion of taxes on assistive devices for two of the most vulnerable populations, children and individuals with disabilities.

I have previously spoken on the floor about this new tax and how it hurts Americans. Let me remind you of a couple of examples.

My son-in-law Brad Swan installs pacemakers and defibrillators. I know this is true because he lives right across the street from us. At 1 o’clock in the morning he was called to an emergency involving a young 8-year-old boy with no heartbeat whatsoever.

He was born with congenital heart disease, was able to have a pacemaker put in that morning, right after he was called, and now he has a full, healthy life ahead of him. My older sister Marilyn faced a similar situation and is alive and healthy today. the brave men and women in the military and our veterans who have sustained injuries defending this country during the wars. My amendment would prevent this new tax from raising costs or hurting access for American soldiers and veterans. The Veterans Health Care System—used by the TRICARE program and the Veterans Health Care program. We must protect our wounded warriors who rely on these life-saving and life-enhancing medical devices. I urge my colleagues to stand up for our brave warriors and support this amendment.

Let me tell you, I hope my colleagues on both sides will stand up for the wounded warriors. I hope they will stand up and realize that these folks should not be hammered with higher costs on medical devices. We owe them a debt of gratitude not more taxes. The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I wish to speak in support of Senator INHOFE’s amendment No. 3588, which would be to exclude medical devices for children and persons with disabilities from a medical device tax. I know that when you talk about a medical device tax and if it is on the manufacturers, you are going to say: Well, what should I be concerned about that for because some manufacturer is going to pay it. Well, don’t fool yourself. You corporations don’t pay taxes, only people pay taxes, and there are three categories of people who pay taxes: stockholders or employees or consumers. And I will bet in most cases consumers end up paying for that.

So this provision in this bill is much broader than the Inhofe amendment would apply to, but I think Senator INHOFE has picked out a very important aspect of doing taxes, the extent to which vulnerable people whom you call children and persons with disabilities are consumers who shouldn’t be paying for a tax to pay for a bill that 59 percent of the people in this country say they are against. But because the majority party and the President want to make history, just make history, don’t worry about the people at the grassroots of America, what they think.

So there are all these taxes and all of these. The people—compliment Senator INHOFE for his leadership in at least trying to reduce this burden on people who are very vulnerable, people with disabilities.

Of the many taxes in this bill, I am especially worried about the tax on medical devices. What will happen when the Democrats impose a new tax hike on $20 billion of these innovative medical devices? During the markup of the Finance Committee bill, I asked the question to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, and I compliment the nonpartisan Joint Committee on Taxation.

For people who might not understand the emphasis of “nonpartisan” about the Congressional Budget Office and the Joint Committee on Taxation, I would like to say it is very important that you understand that because everyone thinks everything connected with Congress is totally political. Well, these are professionals who are around here. They are elected by their colleagues, including Senators and Representatives, and then their job is, in a professional way, to look at what things cost and how much money certain taxes will raise. So they are kind of like God around here. They are the economists who are arriving at the numbers. You know, it takes votes to overrule something on a point of order. So explaining what nonpartisan is with the Congressional Budget Office and our constituents understanding that so they understand we are not quoting a Republican or a Democrat, we are quoting professionals, I think is very basic to understanding the points individually make so that they are accepted as intellectually honest.

In this particular case, where these two offices—both of them said these excise taxes will be passed on to consumers in the form of higher prices and higher insurance premiums. When I began my remarks, I said that is what is going to happen. Well, Chuck Grassley said that, but I want you to know that is what these professionals in the Joint Committee on Taxation and the Congressional Budget Office backed me up in saying.

Who are the consumers of these devices? I have the exact language here of how these things are going to be passed on to consumers so that you know, you see the document right here. Who are these consumers of these devices who bear the burden of the new medical device excise tax? I would like to tell the story of the Tillman family, a family who would bear the burden of this new medical device tax.

At only 5 months old, Tiana Tillman had her life saved by a medical device. This story has received a lot of attention because Tiana’s father is a professional football player for the Chicago Bears. However, lifesaving stories like this happen all across the country.

When Charles Tillman reported to training camp in 2008, it was not long before his coach told him his 5-month-old daughter Tiana had been rushed to the hospital. When they arrived at the hospital, Tiana’s heart rate was over 200 beats per minute. The doctor told Charles and his wife Jackie that Tiana may not make it through the night.

Tiana survived the night, and after a series of tests, she was diagnosed with cardiomyopathy, that is, an enlarged heart that is unable to function properly. Her condition was critical, and without a heart transplant, she would not survive. But finding pediatric donors is very difficult, and many children do not survive that long wait time.

Tiana was immediately put on ECMO, a device that would help the functions of the heart while Tiana waited for a transplant. However, ECMO is an old device that has many shortcomings. The Tillmans waited for one of two outcomes: either Tiana would receive the transplant or she would die waiting on ECMO.

If you want to know, ECMO is E-C-M-O, an acronym. But then doctors told them about the new pediatric medical device called the Berlin Heart—Berlin Heart is an external device that performs the function of the heart and lungs—the Tillmans decided to move forward with the Berlin Heart. After 13 days of being on ECMO without any movement, Tiana underwent surgery to connect the Berlin Heart.

After the operation, you can see Tiana in that photo. It pumped her blood through her body—a job her heart could not perform on its own. Doctors said the Berlin Heart helped Tiana regain her strength because she no longer had to suffer from the paralytic medication and finally moving.

Not long after Tiana connected to the Berlin Heart, a donor was found and Tiana underwent an 8-hour transplant surgery. The risky surgery was a success. Thank God. Usually it takes some time for a new heart to start working, but doctors said that due to Tiana’s strength, her new heart started working immediately.

Now you see Tiana today. She probably loves her mother, the Berlin Heart. She is a happy and healthy 2-year-old girl. She enjoys playing on her swing and watching her dad play football.

Without the Berlin Heart to keep her alive and help her to gain strength, she might not, in fact, be alive. Democrats would increase costs for families such as the Tillmans with this tax, particularly. But it will be relieved somewhat if we adopt the Inhofe amendment. In fact, the Democratic bill would tax most pediatric medical devices. I wish to make clear that any vote against the Inhofe amendment is an endorsement of the tax on devices such as the Berlin Heart and many others children across this country rely upon. Not only that, it would also probably have a great impact upon research that brings about some of these miracle medical devices that make a difference. Taking money away from research at businesses is going to delay the miracle things that come along, whether they are pharmaceuticals or medical devices.

We should not be discouraging that. In the rest of the world, there has not been as much research done in the rest of the world as is done in the United States. Maybe go back 50 years ago and you had Germany and other European countries very much involved. But their government taking over everything and their high rates of taxation are going up now for research. So the United States has been the beneficiary of that. Our pharmaceutical industry and medical device industry have taken advantage of it. So much new development around the world in the enhancement of these devices as well as pharmaceuticals have come because of the research we do. This tremendous tax burden that the American consumer is going to face from money coming in to fund this bill, which isn’t going to drive down health care costs, is going to stymie a lot of innovation we should not want to stymie.

I ask my friend how many times my side has remaining?
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate has 3½ minutes remaining.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I will take that 3½ minutes to comment on another aspect of the bill. This is not on the Inhofe amendment, at this point. It is something unrelated to health care, but in a sense it is related to health care. This is the nationalization of the student loan program. If a long time ago, on behalf of their students have had the benefit of going with a direct student loan from the government or getting it through the banks. They have voted by their feet, by the overwhelming amount of them going into the banks to get their student loans. Now this reconciliation is going to nationalize student loans, have just direct loans. There are about 31,000 people around the country who have something to do with student loans. Those people I represent, for the people across the country to take its place. Do you think college students are going to get the service they get when they have to deal with the Federal bureaucracy redtape? I don’t believe so. But there’s supposedly a certain amount of savings in this. I don’t know whether it is real savings, but the CBO, which I say is God around here, scored it as a certain amount of savings, even considering the fact that the government is going to have to borrow 5½ trillion to get this program underway. They are going to use those supposed savings from the student loan program to fund this bill, the health care bill.

We are in a situation that is just something that common sense Americans just are not able to understand. But it is something, I suppose, you would expect to happen in Washington, DC, which is an island surrounded by reality, that you are going to have college students who are going to pay 6.75 percent interest on their loans to the Federal Government that the government only pays 2.75 percent to borrow, that you are going to be taxing college students to pay for health care. It doesn’t add up, at the very same time that too many of us in this body are complaining about the increased cost of education.

I hope the college students will speak up in this particular instance about what is being done, that college students should not be taxed to provide health insurance. But this whole health care bill taxes everything. It just seems like everything.

How many minutes are remaining?
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator has expired.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from New Jersey, Mr. LAUTENBERG.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I thank Senator BAUCUS for his leadership on this health care reform effort that is underway.

This is the most astounding thing. For all these weeks, our friends on the other side have said no, no, no to health care. Not one good word. Not one good word. Ye, we should cover 32 million people who don’t have coverage; yes, we should cover young people who want to join their parents’ health insurance policy. They said no to small businesses that need help in providing affordable health coverage to their employees.

Many know that recently I was stricken with an illness. Five weeks ago this time, I was in an ambulance on my way to the hospital, bleeding profusely, very sick. I was lucky. I had health insurance. The nurses were there waiting for me. They were there to give me transfusions. They were there to care for me. I had nursing care, and I came through a crisis, as my children stood by, my four children stood by with their fingers crossed, pleading for my health to return. It was because I had health care coverage that I am standing here today on my way to a full cure—less hair but still there. The fight for the people I represent, for the people across this country who are being denied coverage in any way they can do it.

What we see is obstructionism at its worst. I have yet to hear them say: Let our conscience come out here and say we ought to cover these people, that we ought to make sure health care is affordable.

The night I was brought into the hospital and was so fortunate enough to have health care, I had, during the days of recovery I thought: What would happen if I were 40 years younger, had two or three kids, had no health care coverage, and I came in, in this kind of critical condition? The chances of my walking out of that hospital and my family have.

So I say to my friends on the other side, they are not bad people, they are just totally wrong. They don’t want to encourage the people to find insurance that is affordable through the exchanges that are provided. They don’t want to permit people who are there without coverage, who would force their way into an emergency room, perhaps, and say: Look, I am very ill. I have no pep, I feel terrible. Take care of me. Yes? Take a number like you do in a supermarket. You get to 42, you will get to you. Don’t worry about that.

Well, I worry about it because I know a different kind of America. I know an America that was there for me when I needed an education. I know an America that is there for people. I get letters from them all the time. I say thank you for helping us to be able to afford a better education. Thank you for the things you can do.

I say to my colleagues on the other side: Open up. Tell the truth. If you don’t want to give those people affordable coverage, then throw in the coverage you have. Throw in your policy.

When you say no to the 32 million people, say: I mean it when I say no. I am giving up my coverage similar to those people out there. Tell the truth about how you feel about the people who stand there without coverage, worrying every day whether an illness is going to rob them of their jobs, of their opportunity to perform their parental duties or any duties. That is what ought to happen. Stand. Vote no, vote no against anything that improves or might improve this insurance and say: No, I mean it when I say no. I mean it. I am willing to give up the coverage I and my family have.

I am talking to the Senators on the other side. Say no and mean no. But mean it for yourselves as well as the people outside who are begging for the coverage.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I thank my good friend from New Jersey. I am reminded how he led the fight years ago to stop cigarette smoking in airplanes. I was so pleased when he did it. I hope many millions of Americans who are still pleased. It was he who did it.

I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Oregon, a big leader in health care reform. He has been working health care reform as long as I can remember. I thank the Senator from Oregon.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, before he leaves the floor, let me echo the praise for our friend from New Jersey, who has prosecuted the case against cigarettes for so many years. We are thankful to him. What a strong advocate he is.

I thank the chairman for all well for all his efforts. I wish to highlight a couple provisions he and I worked on together that speak to the headlines we are seeing in this morning’s newspaper; in particular, the provision he and I partnered on that allows States to innovate and take new approaches in terms of addressing health care challenges. We all read today about how roughly a dozen States are already challenging the important, recently-signed health care law on the grounds that the individual mandate is unconstitutional. He and I worked very closely together to ensure that States could have a waiver to, in effect, go out and set up their own approach. In fact, counsel to the Senate Finance Committee specifically said, in response to our questions during the markup of health reform, that if a State could meet the general framework of our legislation, it did not have to do it with an individual mandate.

I thank the chairman for stepping up and empowering the States. I want the country to know that under the legislation Chairman Baucus worked on with me, every State does not have to litigate. They can innovate. They can go out and look at fresh approaches to address our health care challenges. That would include doing health reform without an individual mandate. I have followed the discussion on the floor over the last couple days about how somehow reform would Europeanize the health care system. On the fact that Chairman Baucus has done, with Section 1332 of the health reform bill, similar to what I sought to do in the legislation I drafted that had bipartisan support, is to send a message to all the States all across the country that we invite them to come up with the kind of fresh, creative ideas that are going to help us hold health care costs down. In fact, the chairman and I spent a lot of time trying to make sure States could tailor their own health insurance exchanges, which would be fresh marketplaces, so that, for example, an approach in Montana or Oregon that folks there thought made sense, could be entirely different than a strategy New York would try on its own. Not only is section 1332 a provision that allows for State innovation, but, as the chairman knows, there is also another approach that our colleague Senator Cantwell came up with that advances similar State innovation allowing States to set up a basic health care plan.

So my message to these States talking about litigating right now is, why would you say at this point you are going to go out and go to court and sue everybody in sight when, in fact, what the President signed yesterday gives the States the authority to come up with their own approach? Senate Finance Committee counsel is on record as saying States could do their own approach without an individual mandate. I hope—given the amount of attention that is being paid this afternoon to the question of States filing these lawsuits, alleging the law is unconstitutional—given the amount of attention that is being paid this afternoon to the question of States filing these lawsuits, alleging the law is unconstitutional, I hope—one of those States will take a look at section 1332 that, in my view, ought to be attractive to elected officials all across the political spectrum who share the view that individual mandates are not something we would like to empower the States.

Another area where innovation is encouraged to occur is the Medicare Advantage provision in our legislation. We have had a lot of discussion on the floor about Medicare Advantage. Having been involved with this program for a number of years, and its predecessors during the days when I was codirector of the Gray Panthers, I wish to offer up another approach that can bring Medicare Advantage created equal. Two years ago, we heard testimony in the Senate Finance Committee about some Medicare Advantage products that, as far as I am concerned, are so shoddy and so disreputable that it is no wonder the people who sold them ought to be in jail. We have taken steps to add consumer protection to the Medicare Advantage Program. On the other hand, there are very good Medicare Advantage Programs in our part of the country that have been able to win recognition from the Federal Government as high quality plans. In fact, under this legislation, plans that have earned a high quality rating from the Federal Government on the basis of, for example, how they manage chronic conditions, the kinds of screenings they do of a preventive nature, and their responsiveness to member complaints, when they get a high rating from the Federal Government on the basis of such criteria and earn those extra stars, they will get bonus payments. This was an idea the Chairman worked closely with me on when the legislation was advanced by the Finance Committee. We will probably have further discussions on the floor about Medicare Advantage, but I only come to the floor today to say—for those who are interested in promoting quality; for those who believe that no matter how much you do to contain costs, you also have to beef up quality—take a look at the work that was done with respect to Medicare Advantage. It acknowledges that not all Medicare Advantage is created equal.

(Mr. Merkley assumed the Chair.)

Mr. Wyden. The Presiding Officer in the Senate, who has just joined us, knows that our home State has the largest percentage of folks in Medicare Advantage than any other State in the United States: over 40 percent. They happen to be in good plans with those high ratings I mentioned from the Federal Government as high quality plans. That is, in my view, the kind of approach that can bring the American people together and help us implement the law in a fashion that is in line with what Americans want: good quality, affordable care, and reform that works for them.

Mr. Chairman, I thank you for this time and particularly for your help on those two provisions that I think ought to appeal to both Republicans and Democrats in the days ahead.

Mr. Baucus. I thank the Senator very much.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. Baucus. Might I inquire, Mr. President, how much time remains on this side for this block?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifteen minutes.

Mr. Baucus. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes—5 minutes—to the Senator from Colorado.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. Bennet. Thank you, Mr. President. I say thank you to the Senator from Montana for his generosity. I will not take 10 minutes. I know the Senator from Pennsylvania is here.

Mr. President, I stand here today for the millions of Coloradans and American families who are sick and tired of the name calling, the bickering, and the partisanship in Washington.

I am here today for over 800,000 uninsured Coloradans who will now have a fighting chance to get the health care they need.

There for the 1.2 million Coloradan children who will never again be at risk of being denied coverage because they have a preexisting condition.

I am here for the 70,000 small businesses that will get a tax cut to provide health insurance, so they do not have to make the terrible choice between providing health care coverage for their employees and keeping their doors open.

There for the hundreds of thousands of seniors who depend on Medicare and expect us to protect and preserve it for generations to come.

We have passed a bill that makes our country more competitive, ends insurance company abuses, gives people more coverage, and starts putting our country on a more sound fiscal footing for the next 20 years.

I join those on this side of the aisle and on the other side of the aisle who have said that this is a not a perfect piece of legislation. No piece of legislation is perfect. But it is a great first step for the reasons I said.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

S1969
The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office has confirmed a $133 billion reduction in the Federal deficit over 10 years, as a consequence of our passing this legislation, and a $1.2 trillion reduction in the first 20 years.

Now, Mr. President, let us have this reconciliation bill—a bill that gets rid of the special deals I spoke out against at the end of the year, a bill that makes sure our seniors can afford the prescription drugs they need, a bill that covers more people in my State of Colorado.

But the insurance companies and the special interests have not given up. The defenders of the status quo are still at it. Put simply, to amend the bill is to kill this bill. The only reason we are going through this process is because opponents of health care reform want to kill the bill. Now is not the time to play games with the lives of thousands of Coloradans and millions of Americans, and I will not do it.

There are also some who are well intentioned and want to amend this bill to include a public option. I am and have been a strong proponent of a public option and, like a lot of people, have taken a lot of heat for it. I am not sure why because everywhere I went in Colorado and the whole State of Colorado people said to me: Michael, if you are going to require us to have insurance, we want as many choices as possible for our family. Please don’t force us into this private insurance if there are other options out there.

A lot of people all we could to convince the House to include it in this bill, and we were disappointed when they did not. We are going to continue to fight for it until we get a vote. We will have our vote on a public option. But I will not risk the well-being of Coloradans to do it, and I will not play into the hands of those who want to kill the bill.

So today I stand with many of my colleagues, with the American Diabetes Association, the American Hospice Foundation, Autism Society, Doctors for America, Easter Seals, and the National Alliance on Mental Illness, along with over 150 organizations that want us to pass this bill as well. I stand with AARP which knows that changing this bill now will put seniors at risk.

But more important than all of that, I stand with the people of Colorado who expect more from their government and who want more for their children and grandchildren than politics and name calling.

I urge all of my colleagues to pass reconciliation and send this bill to the President’s desk.

I yield the floor.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield the remainder of the time to the Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. CASEY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I am grateful for this opportunity to speak about health care. I commend our chairman, Senator BAUCUS, for his great leadership in the Finance Committee and on so many other important issues we have been wrestling with regard to health care.

We have had a chance over many months and weeks as we speak today—to talk about a lot of the policy of the bill the President signed into law, our health care bill we passed here in the Senate, and, of course, the policy contained in the bill we are considering now. It is important for us to step back and talk about some—not all—but a few examples of some of the real people out there on whom this legislation will have an impact.

I have spoken a number of times about Trisha Urban from Berks County, PA—all the problems she and her family had with their health care; denied coverage because of a preexisting condition. Now the health care reform when the insurance company dropped coverage. Her husband died in the process. And the same day he died, her daughter was born. I have told that story a number of times, and I will tell it again. I also want to highlight what has happened to another family, the Ritter family from Manheim, PA, Lancaster County. The family has two young girls whom I have met. I met them in 2009. As children, these two little girls, Hannah and Madeline Ritter, hit their lifetime cap on their cancer treatment before they completed their course of treatment. When they hit this cap, they were 4 years old, these two Ritter twins. If that is not proof that comprehensive health reform is needed now, I do not know what more we can say.

We are very happy the President signed into law the bill we passed in December. Now the health care reform is the law of the land. The Ritter twins—Hannah and Madeline Ritter—will not have to worry about how to get or keep health insurance coverage throughout their lives because, in 2010, strong protections will go into effect. Not only will these protections ensure that these two little girls—Hannah and Madeline—not only will it ensure they can have access to the medical care they need to grow up healthy, but also they will be able to reap the benefits of other parts of this bill.

This bill will also help hard-working insured Americans from having to declare bankruptcy due to medical bills, as the Ritter twins, from Manheim, PA, had to do at one point. I do not have the time in this segment to be able to tell their whole story, but suffice it to say, in addition to the nightmare their daughters lived through, the family had to declare bankruptcy. But some highlights of what this bill means to real families: Health insurance reform puts American families and small business owners—not their insurance companies—in control of their own health care.

Secondly, this bill makes health insurance affordable for middle-class families and small businesses—one of the largest tax cuts in history—reducing premiums and out-of-pocket costs. Third, it holds insurance companies accountable, at long last, to keep premiums down and prevent denial of care and coverage, including for preexisting conditions.

No. 4, this legislation improves Medicare benefits with lower prescription drug costs for those in the doughnut hole, better chronic care, free prevention care, and nearly a decade more of solvency for Medicare.

Finally, No. 5—and this is not a comprehensive summary but one more point—this legislation reduces the deficit, according to the Congressional Budget Office, by $143 billion over the next 10 years. If you look at the 10 years after that, 20 years in total, it is well over $1 trillion.

So this is a bill, and this is legislation, whose time has come. At a time when our State of Pennsylvania, where we have 577,000 people out of work, almost a record number of people out of work in Pennsylvania—we have to make sure that one of the things we put in place is a more secure health care system for workers and their families.

We all have heard the list of provisions that will go into effect right away. Small businesses will have access to—have the eligibility, I should say—for tax credits. Some companies will get credits up to 35 percent of the dollars they spend on premiums. The Federal Government will be investing in community health centers even in greater amounts than the Federal Government does now. Older citizens would not be affected by the doughnut hole problem where they have to pay the whole freight for prescription drug costs for several thousands of dollars’ worth of care. They are going to get relief from that. In 3 months’ time—3 months from yesterday—people with preexisting conditions will be able to get help from a high-risk pool, a special fund to help them in that crisis.

As we know, in 6 months—in September—children will have the full legal protection in new insurance plans for denominations of coverage—or I should say against denial of coverage—for a preexisting condition.

So for all of those reasons and more, whether we are thinking about the Oregon—children that Trisha Urban and her family had before and certainly after her husband’s death, or the Ritter twins, Hannah and Madeline Ritter, we hope more families have the benefit of the protections in this bill. We know one thing. We know small businesses across the country are starting to get a sense now of what this will mean in terms of helping them with the tax credit, helping their employees with the critically important issue of health care.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I believe the Senator from Tennessee is here and ready to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I might meditate for about 60 seconds and step back up. I now notice the absence of a quorum, unless I should give it to the contrary.

Mr. GREGG. No. If the Senator is not ready to speak, I will speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee is going to offer an amendment in a second, and I will follow him with an amendment. I wish to highlight what my amendment will do as we are waiting.

One of the extraordinary shell games that is played under this bill in the “Alice in Wonderland” claim that this bill is paid for is the fact that the doctors will receive a $285 billion cut in their reimbursements if this bill goes forward in its present form. We all know that is not going to happen. So at some point there is going to have to be a doctors fix, which means $285 billion not accounted for in this bill will have to be spent over the next 10 years. Of course, they did not include this in the bill—this fact that doctors are being underreimbursed and that we are going to correct this; this is called the doctor fix, and we do it every year on an annual basis—if they had included it in the bill, as they should have because this is, after all, called health care reform, then the bill would have been in deficit even under the gamesmanship played by the Democratic Party on this bill.

Remember, the way they got a surplus in this bill in the first 10 years was they took 10 years of spending cuts, 10 years of revenues, and matched them against 6 years—6 years—of programmatic expenditures. So they were able to get a surplus, and CBO has to care, because there was no attempt to leverage the American work ethic, as we just mentioned, to leverage a new entitlement when we know that Medicare itself has a $37 trillion unfunded liability. As he mentioned, we go further by not even dealing with this doc fix which he was just discussing.

I look forward to his amendment. I look forward to supporting it, and I thank him for his leadership.

I wish to speak today about unfunded liabilities. I was the mayor of a city. I know the President of Congress served in the general assembly in the State from where he comes. I was the commissioner of finance for our State where we dealt with all of our financial issues for the State. I know Senator GREGG was a Governor.

One of the things that I think bothered all of us who used to serve at the city and State levels was unfunded mandates. It is an incredible thing if there is one piece of legislation that creates unfunded mandates, and by the way, have a major signing ceremony where everybody is patting each other on the back and celebrating that they just passed something, and the part that is left out is that our States are left with a huge unfunded mandate. We have a very good Governor in our State. His name is Phil Bredesen. He is a Democrat. He has spent a lifetime in health care. He has handled our State’s finances very well. He called me on Friday with a sense of tremendous concern in his voice talking about the fact that this bill was going to cause the State of Tennessee, which is already experiencing huge tuition increases, to have all kinds of services that we are having difficulties dealing with—and this bill is going to create a $1.1 billion unfunded liability for the State of Tennessee. I just find it hard to believe that, again, knowing the stress our States around this country are dealing with, we are passing legislation that puts in place a $1.1 billion unfunded mandate on the State of Tennessee.

But let me go a step further. This bill also violates something we thought was sacrosanct around here and that was the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act, which basically said that we acknowledge—most of us have come from other places, served in local and State governments, and we acknowledge that when we pass legislation that creates unfunded mandates. We shouldn’t be patting ourselves on the back, passing legislation that we say is good for the people back home, and then sending the tab there.

So let me use the example of the State of Tennessee, which is already experiencing huge tuition increases—this is going to cause the State of Tennessee to have an additional $1.1 billion unfunded liability. I was the commissioner of finance. The Presiding Officer served in the general assembly. Senator GREGG served as a Governor.
We know that is wrong. I don’t know why we are doing it. I plan to offer an amendment to correct it.

Mr. President, I thank you for the time, and I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 3651

Mr. GREGG. The States don’t have the elasticity the Federal Government has, which we will not have much longer, by the way, as a result of passing this bill specifically because our debt is growing so fast that it is going to be very hard for us 5 or 6 years from now to be able to sell our debt at a reasonable price, in my opinion, and we are going to be in a situation where people don’t even want to buy our debt.

There was a very significant event this week when it was determined that the debt issued by Warren Buffett was going out at a lower cost than the debt issued by the United States of America. That is the first time that anybody can remember something like that, and that is a very clear statement by the markets that they are getting very worried about how much deficit and debt this country is running up.

Now we pass this bill which adds $2.6 trillion to the spending of the U.S. Government and alleges it is paid for, but we know it is not going to be, and creates new entitlement programs which we know would not be fully funded. Even if it were paid for, it takes resources which should be used to reduce the debt, especially in the area of making Medicare more solvent, and uses them to expand new programs.

This event, as I have described it, is an astroid of debt headed at our country. The simple fact is, it is going to have an effect. The effect will be that we will have more difficulty selling our debt, the deficits and debt we pass on to our children will be extraordinary, and their ability to have a higher standard of living will be reduced as a result of that.

But the point, of course, is this bill, on top of the rest of the other egregious things it does in the area of fiscal policy—of running up debt and creating a massive government that we can’t afford, being intrusive in everybody’s health care delivery system, undermining the ability of small businesses to offer insurance and raising premiums, raising taxes on people not only earning more than $200,000 but earning less than $200,000, replete with special deals—on top of all of that, this bill, as Senator CORKER said, puts pressure on the States and local communities.

It asks them to spend money which they did not want to spend and which is not reimbursed. That is not fair. It is called unfunded mandates. It is inappropriate. We actually have a law around here that this bill basically runs over that says we will not do that. As I said earlier, another thing this bill does, which I find extraordinary, is that it does not address one of the elephants in the room relative to the cost of health care in this country, which is the fact that we are not adequately reimbursing our doctors; that our doctors are going to receive a $285 billion cut over the next 10 years, a $65 billion cut over the next 3 years unless we correct that. This is from basically a freeze level of reimbursement.

Every year we adjust that payment so doctors do get their money they deserve or at least some portion of it in that we do not keep up with inflation. But this bill, which is supposed to be a comprehensive resolution of health care, leaves the doctors out in the cold. It means every year they are going to have to come hat in hand, one more time, to see whether they should not have to ask for, which is a fair reimbursement for their services.

We will every year, hopefully, address it. But it is not right that we have a bill that does not even account for the doctors.

Why was it not put in? It was not put in because if it had been put in, this bill could not meet the budgetary rules that give it the special protection that allows it to come to the floor of the Senate, and it would have been in deficit, at least over the first 10 years, by $100 billion, even using the gamesmanship scoring the other side of the aisle has used relative to the big bill.

This is not fair to the doctors. The doctors deserve better than this. We should correct this right now as part of this process. This trailer bill has the title “fix-it bill” on it. One thing we should definitely fix is the fact the doctors are getting shortchanged. So let’s fix it. That is what my amendment does.

My amendment says: OK, this bill alleges it generates a surplus. Let’s use part of that surplus to make the doctors whole for the next 3 years. It is a paid-for amendment. I cannot imagine anybody would want to oppose this amendment. After all, after we complete this bill—immediately after we complete this bill—we are going to do, I believe it is a 1-month extension to try to get this done. How can it be inconsistent, how fundamentally hypocritical is it for us to pass a major health care reform bill, and then in the next breath—literally the next breath—within the next 24 hours, this body will take up a bill to give a 1-month extension to the doctors fix. I think it is 1 month. That is not right. Let’s do it now. Let’s do it in this bill. Let’s do the doctors fix. I have come up with a proposal that will take care of the doctors in a fair and forthright manner for the next 3 years.

That is my amendment. I am not sure if it is at the desk or whether I send it to the desk.

I send my amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senate from New Hampshire (Mr. Gregg) proposes an amendment numbered 3651.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To provide for a long-term fix to the Medicare sustainable growth rate formula in order to improve access for Medicare beneficiaries)

On page 61, between lines 3 and 4, insert the following:

Paragraph (1) of section 1588(d) of the Social Security Act, as added by section 1011(a) of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2010 (Public Law 111–118) and as amended by section 5 of the Temporary Extension Act of 2010 (Public Law 111–144), is amended to read as follows:

“(1) UPDATE FOR 2010 THROUGH 2013.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraphs (7) and (8) of section 1010(a) of the Social Security Act, as added by section 1011(a) of such Act, the conversion factor to be applied to the single conversion factor shall be 100 percent for such years.

(B) NO EFFECT ON COMPUTATION OF CONVERSION FACTOR FOR 2011 AND SUBSEQUENT YEARS.—The conversion factor for 2011 through subsequent years as determined under this subsection shall be computed under paragraph (1)(A) for 2011 and subsequent years as if subparagraph (A) had never applied.”.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, let me summarize it again. We know the doctors are being shortchanged. They deserve fair treatment. It is pretty obvious that if we are going to do a health care reform bill, the proper place to correct the doctor issue of reimbursements is in that bill, not the next day in a short-term extension.

This is a forthright and fully paid-for attempt—and if it is passed it will occur—to reimburse the doctors at a fair rate for the next 3 years and correct what is known as the SGR problem relative to doctor reimbursement.

I cannot understand why we would not want to do something such as this. I see the Senator from North Carolina. I will be happy to yield to him for any thoughts he may have on this amendment or the Senator from Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BURR. Mr. President, I wish to reiterate the thoughts he may have on this amendment or the Senator from Oklahoma. be cut. They are targeted for 21 percent. It expires March 31. There is not a more appropriate time than right now.

What a lot of us have said is: Let’s pay for it. Let’s simply pay for it. Enough is enough on spending money we don’t have. It is an excellent opportunity, where we have savings from the health care reform bill that we can now pump back in to pay for the fix to the sustainable growth rate about which the doctors have been under the gun.

We have extended it every 30 days for some time without paying for it. Here is a real opportunity in a bill that is designed specifically to fix things that were missed in the health care bill.

I thank my colleague. Senator Gregg, for understanding the importance of this issue and working up an amendment but, more importantly, saying to every physician in America: We can finally fix this, we can do it with money that is paid for and, more importantly, we can take you out of the box of this horror story of wondering what your reimbursement for services is going to be at any given point in time in the future.

Let me seize this opportunity in this bill and fix this sustainable growth rate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, what needs to be fixed in this bill is a whole lot more than that, but this is a great attempt to try to solve a problem.

Let me describe a scenario, what is getting ready to happen. Every State is cutting Medicaid reimbursement. We are going to add 16 million people to Medicaid. We cannot get them all seen now. Then we have a doctor cut that is coming to 21 percent for people who are under Medicare. What is going to happen? What do you think the average physician, rural area is going to do? I can tell you that they are going to do three things: Fewer will see Medicaid patients so there will be fewer doctors taking Medicaid at the time we increase the enrollment by 50 percent.

That is No. 1.

No. 2, fewer doctors are going to take Medicare as we have this ballooning increase of baby boomers going into Medicare.

No. 3—and this is probably more important than anything—we are going to see a large percentage of doctors, with this bill passed with no continuity as to how they are ever going to get funded under Medicare, quit. They are going to quit. They can take their training, their effort, their education and knowledge and apply it in some other field of endeavor and not have to live with the hassle of a 21-percent cut hanging over their head.

Even if we fix it for 3 years, 3 years from now the same problem is going to come back. It is going to be worse. So there is no fix in it. There is an unrecognized $300 billion to get doctors even, let alone take away the cut—no increase—with this amendment. My hope would be we would fix this situation for 3 years.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we be able to participate in a colloquy on our side of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator from Oklahoma, who is obviously well has an in-depth knowledge of this issue, I heard the other side of the aisle say: There are no cuts to the benefits of people on Medicare. If you reduce doctor payments under Medicare 21 percent, don’t you think that is going to affect what they receive? Technically, there will be no cut because they will still have the right to see a doctor. Is it not going to have to keep seeing a doctor because doctors will stop seeing them?

Mr. COBURN. I can tell you that they are going to stop seeing a doctor because they are not going to find a doctor, and that is the whole problem. Whatever we see in the urban areas, multiply it tenfold in the rural areas. We are going to increase eligibility for Medicaid to 133 percent of poverty. We are also going to add 16 million people to a system that is not handling the people who are in it today, so we are going to promise them: Here is your Medicaid.

Now where is the care? It is not going to be there. There is not the available physicians in this country to care for 16 million new Medicaid patients.

If we, in fact, do not fix the SGR, physicians are going to do one of two things. They are either going to completely quit seeing Medicaid and Medicare patients or they are going to retire. Quite frankly, physicians my age who are still practicing are not doing it for the money; they are doing it because they love the patients. But they are going to be forced to quit because they will not even be able to pay their overhead to care for these patients.

Mr. BURR. If I may add to Mr. Coburn’s comments and say, when you double the size of the Medicaid population, you are already forcing more doctors to say: I am not going to see Medicaid patients. But you are changing the payer mix. Every provider, every practice, every hospital is going to see more patients whose reimbursement is less. That is automatically going to affect Medicaid right there because people are going to have to try to bring in more private pay, private insurance.

Mr. COBURN. Will the Senator yield for a second?

Mr. BURR. Absolutely.

Mr. COBURN. What it is going to do is exactly shifting going on with Medicare and Medicaid right now, which means insurance rates for everybody else in the country are going to go up.

Mr. GREGG. I thought we were told insurance rates were not going to go up.

Mr. COBURN. All I will tell you is, the best guess of CBO—wonderful people, but they can only make decisions within the parameters they are given. There is no question private insurance, individual and family insurance, is going to go up, but everybody else’s is because we are going to increase the trend of cost shifting from government programs to the private sector.

You are going to end up with three taxes. You will pay insurance taxes, you will pay a Medicare tax, and then you will pay a tax on your insurance—actually, you will pay four—and then you are going to pay higher health insurance premiums because the government does not cover the cost.

Mr. GREGG. I assume that is not just going to be people with incomes over $200,000.

Mr. COBURN. That is everybody in this country who has private insurance, either through their employer or the individual market.

Mr. GREGG. Isn’t it equally likely that a large number of small employers are going to get frustrated with the rate increases they are getting in order to support people on Medicaid that they will simply drop that and push their membership, their employees over into this new exchange?

Mr. COBURN. Yes, they will pay the fee. They will pay the tax and say it is easier. Consequently, the young people in our country, because we do not have a big enough payment under the “individual mandate,” are going to say it is smarter for me to save my money, pay the fine, and not get insurance because when I get sick, I can get it. You are going to get what is called adverse selection, which is even going to drive the rates up further. Anybody 40 or older, watch out, your health insurance rates are getting ready to bloom.

Mr. GREGG. We have basically a multiplier effect.

Mr. COBURN. That is correct.

Mr. GREGG. In the area of costs being driven up as a result of this new policy of adding a huge number of people to an uninsured system that cannot afford it right now, Medicaid. The costs are going to multiply on people in the private sector. The effect will be higher premiums, less opportunity for your employer to give you insurance and, in the end, a higher tax rate for you, Americans who are just working Americans, not people with high incomes.

Mr. COBURN. And people who are not necessarily getting a subsidy.

Mr. GREGG. Then they do not even take care of the doctors. They cut the doctors 21 percent on top of all this.

Mr. COBURN. What happens to all this? What is the ultimate? The ultimate is failure of the insurance market.

Mr. GREGG. That is the goal, isn’t it?

Mr. COBURN. That is the goal, so the government can control it all. I yield back.

Mr. BURR. Let me add, if I may, to my good friend, Senator Gregg, even though some would choose not to have coverage and pay the fine, we have an emergency room system that is obligated to see those individuals when they have traumatic care. For those who claim we have sorted out the system where the high-cost delivery of care does not exist, no, we have again exacerbated the problem.

I think Senator Coburn hit on the key. As you try to handle the health care of individuals by limiting the reimbursement, whether that is the way we are limited in the problem you are trying to fix. Whether we do it by sickeing them into Medicaid, you have now cost shifted more money to the side causing greater inflation for the health care in this country.

Mr. Gregg. The Senator is absolutely right. Isn’t it true one of the ultimate cost shifts is to claim that the health care bill is fiscally responsible when it ignores the fact that the doctors are being cut by 21 percent and does not even attempt to address that huge problem which represents $65 billion of reform.

Mr. Burr. I have learned throughout this whole process to never try to figure out what promises have been made. But I know the promise we have made to physicians—to reimburse them fairly for the services they provide—anything less than that jeopardizes the pool of health care professionals we have and eventually will affect the quality of care simply because if the pool is not big enough to handle the patient, the patient will suffer.

Mr. Gregg. So I guess I would get on to the next question because it is pretty obvious we have to correct this problem with the physicians. In fact, as I understand it, the next bill immediately that we will consider will correct it for 30 days. Why wouldn’t we correct it right now for 3 years, get that 3-year consistency in the system so physicians can have some confidence in their reimbursement rates, fully paid-for, that is as probable a conceivable reason would there be not to vote for this type of amendment?

Mr. Burr. Because the Senator from New Hampshire remembers this body did pass a bill that partially paid for an extension of this through September of this year. The problem was, when they passed the health care bill, they used the pay-ors out of that extension bill to be included in this health care bill. Now they have gone to a point that they have eliminated 90-day renewals and claim it is an emergency. One, I don’t think that passes the threshold of emergency. I think it should be paid for. And there is a legitimate way to pay for it and extend it for 3 years, where this Congress can fully understand the implications of the current health care bill as it is implemented and put back the comfort of physicians around this country and their trust back in the system.

Mr. Gregg. Well, I think the Senator is absolutely right, but I would also suggest that maybe there is another reason they haven’t paid for it in this bill or put the correction in this bill, which is that if they did that, the bill would fail because it would be out of compliance with the budget because it is a $285 billion cost over 10 years. Therefore, aren’t they sort of trying to pull the wool over somebody’s eyes? Are they really doing as much as if this bill that we know exists for our doctors, that we are never going to pay for it? We are not going to pay; we are just going to act as if it doesn’t exist? We know as soon as this bill is over, we will have to do something about it, at least for the next 5 years. Mr. Burr. You are absolutely right, it will be the first order of business when this bill is finished if we miss the opportunity to fix it in this bill and fix it for 3 years and actually fix it in a way that it is paid for.

Mr. Gregg. I see the Senator from Arizona has arrived.

Mr. McCain. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be included in the colloquy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. McCain. I would say to the Senator from New Hampshire that there is some recent information that I find hard to believe, but apparently it may be the case. As we go through this 2,733-page piece of legislation, the IRS may need up to $10 billion to administer the new health care program this decade, and it may need to hire as many as 16,500 additional auditors, agents, investigators, and other employees to investigate and collect billions of new taxes from Americans. Is that possible, in this legislation, I would ask the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. Gregg. The Senator is absolutely correct, and that does call into question the representation that this bill is not a tax increase on Americans that we need 16,000 new IRS agents to enforce it.

Mr. McCain. At $10 billion to administer the new health care reform—and premiums will go down. The fact is, national health expenditures and premiums will increase.

Mr. Gregg. I see the Senator from Montana, and the Senator from Arizona, who has been one of the most cogent and thoughtful speakers on the issue of what this bill really does. He has hit the nail on the head very quickly that I think there are several myths here that have to be refuted by the facts.

One is that this legislation will result in a tax cut for the American people. I would say to my friend from New Hampshire, we have to rebut that in the next hour.

The next myth is that the health care bill won’t increase taxes on individuals with incomes under $250,000. The fact is, millions of Americans with incomes below $250,000 will pay higher taxes.

Another myth: The legislation will reduce the growth of health costs—President Obama’s stated goal for health reform—and premiums will go down. The fact is, national health expenditures and premiums will increase.

Another myth: The legislation is deficit neutral. The fact is, commitment to health care spending under existing obervations increases the deficit.

Myth: “If you like the plan you have, you can keep it.” Fact: Millions of Americans with coverage will lose their current coverage, including 330,000 citizens of my State who have the Medicare Advantage Program.

Finally, the myth is that the law will provide immediate coverage for children with preexisting conditions. The fact is, children are not necessarily protected against discrimination for preexisting conditions.

I hope we have a chance, I would say to my friend from New Hampshire, to address the allegations about this legislation, and perhaps the first one is that legislation will result in a tax cut for the American people when the fact is that taxes will increase for millions of Americans.

I would yield to my colleague from New Hampshire.

Mr. Gregg. I thank the Senator from Arizona, who has been one of the most cogent and thoughtful speakers on the issue of what this bill really does. He has hit the nail on the head time and time again with his points. They are all absolutely accurate.

The Senator completed his statement?

Mr. McCain. Well, I just wanted to throw in here that perhaps one of the most egregious statements, and it is worth repeating, is this so-called doc fix. They are using an assumption that we will cut physicians’ fees by 21 percent sometime this fall in order to make up—and please correct me if I am wrong—some $281 billion over 10 years, which we know is not going to happen. And the reason it is not going to happen is because new bureaucrats and bureaucracies will choose not to have insurance and your local IRS agent is going to show up at your door to tell you that you better do it or else you will have to answer to the IRS.

We know there are no new taxes in this bill. This bill has been represented to us a number of times.

Mr. Burr. If I could add, it also adds some insight into how many people will choose not to have insurance and make themselves susceptible to the fine. The anticipation is the IRS is going to assess a lot of people to recover the fine.

Mr. McCain. I would also finally add that perhaps we could get some indication—I think we should before we vote on passage of this bill—as to how many new bureaucrats and bureaucracies there are going to be with 193 new boards and commissions and other layers of bureaucracy. I think the American people are owed at least a round figure as to how many new bureaucrats there are going to be to administer this program.

I see the Senator from Montana, and I don’t want to impede on what has been the agreed-upon rule here, but I did want to continue the point here, my friends very quickly that I think there are several myths here that have to be refuted by the facts.
Amendment No. 3652

Purpose: To protect the integrity of Department of Veterans Affairs and Department of Defense health care programs for veterans, active-duty service members, their families, wounded warriors, and orphans who have sacrificed in defense of our Nation.

At the end of subtitle F of title I, insert the following:

SEC. 1564. DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS AND DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE HEALTH PROGRAMS.

Subtitle G of title I of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"(4) CLARIFICATIONS WITH RESPECT TO CERTAIN PROGRAMS AND AUTHORITIES.—Nothing in this Act or in the amendments made by this Act shall be construed as affecting any of the following:

(1) Any authority under title 38, United States Code.

(2) Any authority under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code.

(3) Any health care or health care benefit provided under the TRICARE program under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code, or by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs under the laws administered by such Secretary.

(4) CLARIFICATION WITH RESPECT TO MINIMUM ESSENTIAL COVERAGE.—For purposes of this Act and the amendments made by this Act, the term 'minimum essential coverage' includes the following:

(1) Coverage provided under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code.

(2) Eligibility for health care provided by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs under title 38, United States Code.

Mr. BURR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

This amendment proposal would be an estimated net reduction in Federal deficits of $25 billion during the 2010-2019 period over and above the savings from enacting H.R. 3590 by itself.

Further quoting CBO:
The combined effect of enacting H.R. 3590 and the reconciliation proposal would be to reduce the number of nonelderly people who are uninsured by about 32 million people. The share of legal nonelderly people with insurance coverage would rise from about 83 percent currently to about 94 percent.

CBO said of the new health care law:

Enacting H.R. 3590 would reduce Federal budget deficits over the ensuing decade—

That is the next decade, the second decade—with a total effect during that decade in a broad range between one-quarter percent and one-half percent of gross domestic product.

But what is more, CBO further said:

The combined effect of enacting H.R. 3590 and the reconciliation proposal would be to reduce Federal budget deficits in that decade, with an effect in a broad range between zero and one-quarter percent of GDP.

In other words, the new health care formula would accomplish major deficit reduction. This is the CBO talking, not Senators. Don’t take my word for it. Don’t take anyone else’s word for it. This is the Congressional Budget Office. This reconciliation bill itself would accomplish major deficit reduction, probably the greatest deficit reduction actually we are going to take over a long period of time—the preceding perhaps 8, 9, 10 years and a subsequent period of time. We don’t know that, but this is certainly major deficit reduction.

Together, these two bills would accomplish deficit reduction of historic proportions.

Let me continue to quote the letter from the Congressional Budget Office.

"The reconciliation proposal would probably continue—" than the effects of the provision that would increase it.

Let me get to that statement. It gets to the Federal involvement in health care as a result of the consequences of this bill.

In subsequent years the effect of the provisions that are in this combination together will tend to decrease the federal budgetary commitment to health care would grow faster than the effects of the provisions that would increase it.

Further quoting:

As a result, CBO expects that enacting both proposals would generate a reduction in the federal budgetary commitment to health care during the decade following the 10-year budget window.

Even less government in the second 10 years relative to current law. In other words, CBO says that after the first decade, health care reform will reduce—yes, reduce—the budgetary role of government in the health care sector.

Whom do we trust? Whom else are we going to listen to? We all have opinions. Those folks at CBO have sharp pencils. They are very good at what they do. They are not partisan. Nobody has even questioned their professionalism. They are very good. This is what CBO says.

That is it. CBO says health care reform cuts the deficit. Let me pause there a moment. Let that sink in. CBO says health care reform will cut the deficit. CBO also says it expands coverage. More people will get health insurance, from 83 percent to 94 percent. Also, this legislation reduces the Government’s budgetary role in health care. It reduces it.

That is quite a feat—more coverage, deficit reduction, and less Federal involvement in health care. I think this bill is pretty well designed to accomplish those purposes—cuts cost, increases coverage, and reforms the health insurance market, most significantly in the individual market and also in the small group market.

On another matter, I think it is relevant and important—this is a letter from AARP, dated March 24 of this year. It says:

Dear Senator,

We have made enormous progress advancing historic, urgently needed health care reform legislation, but we are not done yet. We now urge you to promptly pass the Health Care and Education Affordability Reconciliation Act of 2010—without amendments—to help make affordable, high quality health care available to all Americans.

The Reconciliation Act will:

1. Close Medicare’s dreaded “doughnut hole” drug coverage gap for all beneficiaries. This is a top priority for AARP because it helps older Americans afford drugs they need to stay healthy and avoid costly treatments.

2. Make coverage more affordable for hardworking middle-income families who now too often are uninsured because the cost of coverage is beyond their modest means. Added help is vital to meet the public’s demand for coverage that is truly affordable for all Americans.

3. Further strengthen our fight against fraud, waste, and abuse, a key component to better controlling rising costs in our health care system; and

4. Improve Medicare’s fiscal health and extend the solvency of the Medicare Trust Fund.

These provisions build on the solid foundation of the Patient’s Bill of Rights and Medicare, and you are spending them on a new entitlement.

Because AARP members have a strong interest in how their Senators vote on this important legislation, we urge you to promptly pass the Health Care and Education Affordability Reconciliation Act of 2010—without amendments—to help make affordable, high quality health care available to all Americans.

AARP—NANCY A. LARMOND, EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT, AARP SOCIAL IMPACT GROUP, MARCH 24, 2010.

Sincerely,

Adenisor Barry Rand.

Mr. GREGG. What is the time situation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FRANKEN). We have 27 minutes 51 seconds on the majority side and 35 minutes 42 seconds on the minority side.

Mr. GREGG. Let me make two quick points. The only way CBO gets to the conclusions they reach, and they had to get to those conclusions, is because of the facts put before them. One of those facts, they have to presume Medicare is going to cost $3 trillion in the first years before full implementation, $1 trillion in the second 10 years during full implementation, and $3 trillion during the first 20 years of full implementation—$3 trillion.

All that money is going to be taken out of Medicare. We moved over to start new programs, new entitlements to benefit people who are not senior citizens and who, for the most part, have never paid into Medicare. That is a serious problem.

You can score that positively if you wish, but first off I do not think it will happen. I think what will end up happening is, it will get put on our children’s backs as debt. But second, if it does happen, it is wrong because Medicare has to be fixed and you are taking the money that should be used to fix it, if you believe in these types of cuts in Medicare, and you are spending them on a new entitlement.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, may I ask my colleague a friendly question?

Mr. GREGG. On your time you may ask a question, including my answer, which may take 24 minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. I trust in the good faith of the Senator from New Hampshire not to abuse the situation.

As I understand it, basically the Senator does not question the professionalism of CBO. Clearly, CBO had all the facts. All Senators have them, all Senators, House Members, the whole world has. CBO has all the facts. You are not questioning the professionalism. You do question their conclusions.

Mr. GREGG. I certainly don’t question their professionalism. They are an extraordinarily good organization with a wonderful leader who is fair and unbiased. I don’t question their conclusions because what they have to score is a fact pattern that was given them and the fact pattern given them by this bill is, on its face, not believable relative to what is going to happen in the out-years, even though they have to score it as believable. It is a fantasy.

Mr. McCaIN. I ask the Senator from New Hampshire, where the Senator from Montana is here, maybe it is a legitimate question. Does the Senator from Montana believe that the assumption given to the Congressional Budget Office that the so-called doc fix, reimbursement for physicians who treat Medicare patients, will be cut by 21 percent? The Senator from Montana knows full well the AMA has been told in no uncertain terms it will be fixed between now and when it is supposed to take effect because the fact is, as the Senator from Montana knows, you can cut Medicare physician reimbursement. Then doctors will not treat Medicare patients. So maybe the Senator from Montana would tell us if that was a valid assumption given to the CBO, would be so severe a billion that would be accrued because physicians’ payments would be reduced by some 21 percent?

Mr. GREGG. I simply ask the time of the Senator from Arizona come off ours and the Senator from Montana for his answer come off his.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, that sounds fair.

Let me say to my good friend from Arizona, first of all, clearly this body, the Senate Far from Congress, the Senate is not the SGR problem; that is, doctors are not going to be cut 21 percent, whatever the rate is the first year or more and so on. That is not going to happen. First, from the senators’ point of view, second from the doctors’ point of view, that is not going to happen. I do not want to take too much time on the subject, but the long and short of it simply is we are going to have to find a way, this Congress, to address it. If I might finish, it is not part of health care reform, and we will find a way. A question is going to be how much will be paid for. That is a judgment this body is going to have to make in the pretty near future.

Mr. McCain. I appreciate very much the acknowledgment, on the part of the manager of the bill, that the assumption that provides us with deficit neutrality is not valid. That is the point we have been trying to make. It is based on the assumption that doctors—I am very happy to hear the Senator from Montana unequivocally what was given and assumed by the CBO when they gave us our numbers is not true. So we will be voting, in a short period of time, on a piece of legislation on which is based on false assumptions. I think that is an unfortunate circumstance.

Mr. GREGG. I simply note the Senator from Montana believes it as believable. It is a fantasy.

The American people have made it clear: They do not want these bills to become law. Two new polls by CBS and CNN show that only 20 percent of Americans believe this legislation will benefit them and their families. Still, the majority party has chosen to push these unpopular proposals through.

My constituents in Georgia have reached out in record numbers to register their opposition to President Obama’s plan.

Why? For starters, because this is an unprecedented government involvement in an industry that constitutes one-sixth of the Nation’s economy. If we get it wrong, if we overreach, our fragile economy will suffer and a recovery will lag, perhaps for years.

The bill that passed the Senate and was signed by the President is filled with backroom deal-making, partisan arm-twisting and special carve-outs for some of my wavering colleagues on the other side of the aisle.

Now, instead of working together on a bill that would be more palatable to the American people, my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have decided to push forward in the face of united opposition.

The Governor of Georgia recently expressed concern regarding the unfunded mandates in this legislation. Our State faces an additional billion dollars or more of Medicaid spending per year.

These new costs that will be absorbed by the State will require further tax hikes on Georgians or cuts to public safety, education and other core State government services.

The bill that was just signed contains $518.5 billion in gross tax increases. It cuts Medicare by $65 billion—and, more importantly—does nothing to bend the health care cost curve down.

Under this new plan, new Federal taxes on Americans start immediately. Bill $2.6 trillion in taxes before any of the major benefits go into effect.

Looking at the years 2013–2024, the 10-year period after the law is fully implemented, the tax bill is estimated to be $2.6 trillion.

Some of these numbers are so large that its tough to get your head around them. But rest assured that they will detrimentally impact Americans and our economy.

There is also substantial evidence that this new law will hurt small businesses.

The bill imposes $493 billion in new taxes that will fall disproportionately on the backs of small-business owners.

A $54 billion increase in the Medicare payroll tax will hit approximately one-third of the small-business owners across the country.

A $90 billion tax on insurers means small businesses that manage to provide health insurance coverage for their employees will see this tax passed on to them, increasing premiums.

The CLASS Act portion of the new law appears to make it less costly because the CBO said that the program wouldn’t cost effect until 2014. The bill raises $60 billion in taxes before any of the major benefits go into effect.

Medicaid dollars to the State of Louisiana. And it still has the Gator Aid Florida Medicare Advantage grandfather clause to protect certain areas of Florida from Medicare Advantage cuts that all other parts of America will face. Meanwhile the 176,000 seniors in Georgia who rely on Medicare Advantage to supplement the gaps in traditional Medicare will see their benefits cut by $33 each month. The new law significantly raises taxes, cuts benefits for seniors, adds to the Federal deficit and allows the government to make decisions that should be between a patient and his doctor. The reconciliation bill—optimistically deemed a “fix-it” bill—is actually a “make-it-worse” bill.

The legislation before us today raises taxes by an additional $50 billion more than the Senate bill. That is an overall tax increase of $569.2 billion. The reconciliation bill nearly doubles the tax on health insurers beginning in 2014, and also raises taxes and fees on drugmakers and medical devices. The Congressional Budget Office has specifically stated that these taxes will be passed on to all Americans in the form of higher health costs and rising insurance premiums.

The reconciliation bill raises another $66.1 billion from Medicare Advantage, bringing total Medicare cuts in both bills to $323 billion. And it forces an additional 1 million individuals into Medicaid on top of the 15 million already added to Medicaid in the Senate bill. That means 16 million of the 32 million newly insured individuals would obtain that coverage through Medicaid—a program President Obama admitted already suffers from serious access problems.

It also increases penalties for businesses that don’t offer health insurance and have at least one employee receiving a tax-exchange from $750 per full-time employee to $2,000 per full-time employee.

And, among other things, it penalizes many Americans with higher incomes from rent, interest, royalties and individuals by forcing an almost 4 percent Medicare tax on their investment income.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, this bill is going to cost $940 billion over 10 years. We are burying our children and grandchildren—generations of America’s future—by creating a behemoth new government entitlement program.

And in the same week of its creation, we turned around and immediately added to this new program almost $1 trillion in taxes. The American people are asking a simple question: Where does the spending end?

Also, I wish to talk about a specific provision that is going to have an immediate direct impact on my taxpayers in Georgia; that is, with the increase in the threshold to qualify for Medicaid going from 100 percent to 133 percent, in my State, according to our Governor—and he has run the numbers—that is going to cost the taxpayers of Georgia, in addition to their share of this $569.2 billion in additional taxes, an additional $1 billion per year that Georgia taxpayers are going to have to pay. We are in difficult times in my State, as all 50 States are right now. That is a new provision, a new tax.

I ask unanimous consent that a statement from the Governor of Georgia, the Honorable Sonny Perdue, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

From the Office of the Governor, Mar. 22.

STATEMENT OF GOVERNOR SONNY PERDUE REGARDING THE HEALTHCARE LEGISLATION PASSED BY THE UNITED STATES CONGRESS

ATLANTA.—Governor Sonny Perdue issued the following statement today regarding the healthcare legislation passed by the United States Congress:

“Unfortunately, the United States House of Representatives passed a 2,700 page monstrosity, over the will of the American people. The enormous upheaval of our healthcare system was pushed through the House against the wishes of the majority of American families and businesses.

Here in Georgia, this vote will force an additional billion dollars or more of Medicaid spending per year, requiring either a tax hike or offsetting cuts to public safety, education and other core services of state government. While this colossal unfunded mandate creates great concern even for those of us concerned about the debilitating impact it will have on Georgia’s small businesses. The extension of the Medicare tax on all non-wage income means that small business owners will see their top rate increased by 20 percent and investment income taxes increasing 60 percent.

What is most unfortunate is that the American people had no voice at the table in Washington during the course of this debate. The only glimpse citizens saw of the process was pushed through the House against the wishes of the majority of American families and businesses.

As a Governor, I urge my colleagues at the appropriate time during the vote on the amendments this afternoon and tonight to repeal this bill and let us replace it with a true, meaningful health care reform bill that we can all agree on.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, at this point I ask unanimous consent to set aside any pending amendment and call up amendment No. 3553.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The bill clerk read as follows:

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senate from Louisiana [Mr. Vitter] proposes an amendment numbered 3553.

Mr. VITTER. I am asking unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows: (Purpose: To repeal the government takeover of health care)

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Patient Choice Restoration Act".

SEC. 2. REPEAL.

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, and the amendments made by that Act, are repealed.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, this amendment is very simple, and it goes to the heart of all of these arguments. This amendment would repeal this new ObamaCare plan.

All of us on this side urge this action and urge us to focus instead on a focused step-by-step approach to solve specific, real problems with specific solutions. This gargantuan plan which this amendment would repeal does not do that. This gargantuan plan has fundamental problems at its core that my colleagues have been talking about: truly offensive, fundamental problems such as a trillion cut to Medicare. The American people do not want to pay for anything through that. Over $1 trillion of increased taxes and costs. The American people do not want an approach that does that, increasing health care costs from the American people know our big challenge is to do the opposite.

Nonpartisan sources such as the Congressional Budget Office confirm that the ObamaCare plan does not decrease health ObamaCare costs, it increases health ObamaCare costs from their rising rate already. It pushes that cost curve up and growing the bureaucracy, including thousands of new IRS workers, and putting them and the Federal Government between you and your doctor.

These are not minor parts of the ObamaCare plan. This is the core of that plan. That is why we absolutely need to repeal it and take a fundamentally different approach, an approach that is focused like a laser beam on real problems and that deals with those real problems with real and targeted and step-by-step solutions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. VITTER. I urge support of amendment No. 3553.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, we are coming to a close, or a beginning, I am not sure which, when we start the vote on amendments. If my calculation is correct, the time for debate on this reconciliation bill will expire around 5:10, about that time, approximately.

At that time, approximately, we will start voting on amendments. By my count we have 21 amendments pending, and if we vote on amendments in the time in which it usually takes to vote on amendments in a series, my experience is it roughly takes around an hour for three amendments. Maybe we can speed that up. With 21 amendments, that is 7 hours. That is the good news. There probably will be some intervening disruptions.

But the core news is, that means the earliest we might be finished is around midnight. But, of course, that is not the case, because there will be other amendments offered.

For the information of my colleagues, we will probably start voting on amendments at approximately 5:10, thereafter. We have 21 amendments pending at the present time. It takes about 1 hour to vote on three amendments, I believe we can squeeze that time down. It is my hope that we can. But that is my experience around here, it takes about that long.

Because there are a lot more amendments most likely to be offered, I inform my colleagues that we will be in very late tonight, certainly way past midnight, because of the number of amendments that are currently pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. What is the time situation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority has 23 minutes 47 seconds left.

Mr. GREGG. And the majority?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority has 24 minutes 52 seconds.

Mr. GREGG. I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, could you let me know when 8 minutes has been consumed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will advise the Senator.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, this has been a debate filled with passion and good intentions and a lot of hard work. It is parties have come to vastly different conclusions. The President and the majority have said, this is an historic occasion. I agree.

But I believe, as do most of us, that it is an historic mistake, and it is important to say why we think that. This is the fundamental mistake, that with the law that was passed yesterday and what the majority has proposed to do in this second bill, to expand a health ObamaCare delivery system that we all know is more expensive than we can afford, instead of stepping back and instead seeking to reduce the cost of that health ObamaCare delivery system so that more Americans can afford to buy health insurance. That is the mistake.

I wish to try to say in 3 or 4 minutes what this bill means to Tennesseans. I was listening to the Senator from Montana and the Republican Senators talk about debt. We believe, I believe, that this bill, these two bills, will increase each Tennessean’s share of the national debt.

The Senator from Montana says: Well, but the Congressional Budget Office says it does not. Well, that would be like going to the Congressional Budget Office and saying: I have got a horse farm here. Tell me how much it costs to operate over the next 10 years. The CBO would say: Would you like me to tell you how to do it with the horses or without the horses? If you tell me how to do it with the horses, it is not going to cost as much. Or, if I have a gas station, would you like me to tell you how to operate that with the gas in it or without the gasoline?

That is what we are saying here. They have gone to the Congressional Budget Office and said: Tell us how much this health bill costs. They have said to them: With the doctors or without the doctors?

They say: Oh, no, keep the doctors out. Because, according to the President’s own budget, that is $371 billion over 10 years. If you put that in, then the whole bill adds to the deficit, so they leave it out. So that is why we say, and I would say, that the first thing this bill does is add to the debt, each Tennessean’s share of the debt.

The second thing is, it adds $8.470 in new spending for every Tennessean. There are 240,000 Tennesseans enrolled in Medicare Advantage, which is about one out of four persons in Medicare who will have their benefits reduced by half, according to the Congressional Budget Director in testimony before Congress, whose words have been being extolled on all sides.

The next thing it does is about 1.4 million Tennesseans making less than $200,000 will pay higher taxes, based on estimates by the Joint Committee on Taxation. Some 200,000 Tennesseans in the individual health insurance market will see premium rate increases of 30 to 45 percent based upon a Blue Cross/Blue Shield study of Tennessee and other analysis.

Tennessee’s small businesses employing 50 or more people and construction companies employing 5 or more people—that is 5,000 construction companies in Tennessee—will pay higher health ObamaCare costs because of new government mandates.

Then here is the other one. This is the one that was just added over the weekend: 200,000 Tennessee students including—I checked—11,000 at the University of Tennessee-Knoxville where I went to school, will be able to borrow by $1,700 to $1,800 over the next 10 years on their student loans in order to help pay for the health ObamaCare bill and other programs.

Let me say that again. Over the weekend, without any debate in the Senate, they have stuck in this bill—they are going to overcharge 19 million students in America, 200,000 in Tennessee, $1,700 or $1,800 more than it costs the government to borrow the money, because the government is taking over the student loan program.

They borrow the money at 2.8 percent, they loan it out at 6.8 percent, they take the difference, they spend it, $8.7 billion of it to help pay for the health ObamaCare program. So that is 200,000 Tennessee students. These are not Wall Street financiers. This is a mom with a child and a job going to school to get a better job. That is 200,000 Tennessee students. And $1.1 billion in costs will be forced on the Tennessee government. This is according to our State Democratic Governor, who said that is the cost of the Medicaid expansion and what happens to the State after the physicians reimbursement expires in 2 years for Medicaid. This will force the State to hire more bureaucrats, and many other States, to raise taxes, cut services, or increase college tuition.

According to an Oliver Wyman study, 30 percent of young people will pay up to 35 percent more in premiums as premiums go up in the individual market.

Then finally, of course, the bill does add in Tennessee about 200,000 people to our TennCare or Medicare rolls. But that is not health ObamaCare reform because nationally only about half of doctors will see new Medicaid patients.

So we are saying to people, we are giving you health ObamaCare, but it is like saying, we are giving you a bus ticket to a bus line where the bus only runs at 15 a.m. When you put these low-income Americans into this program in such large numbers, what that additionally does is create more opportunities for physicians, for hospitals, and for drugstores to say, we cannot serve Medicaid patients any more.

The reason why, I feel this is the wrong course and an historic mistake. What we would do instead is replace this bill with a different bill that focuses on costs. We have said it over and over again. We said it at the health ObamaCare summit. We would start with allowing people to buy health care across State lines; with allowing small businesses to combine their resources to offer insurance to more people at lower costs; with reducing the number of lawsuits against doctors for malpractice.

We would step up efforts against waste, fraud, and abuse, expand health savings accounts. All of these were proposals made before the Senate, basically ignored. But the fundamental mistake on the reason we have such a difference of opinion between that side of the aisle and this side of the aisle is that that side of the aisle, which has the majority, is expanding a health ObamaCare delivery system that we all know is too expensive, and we think in stead what we should be doing is focusing on reducing health ObamaCare costs so that more Americans can afford to purchase health ObamaCare insurance.

I yield back my time to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. I would yield for 30 seconds to the Senator from Kansas to put in order a couple of amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

AMENDMENT NO. 3577

Mr. ROBERTS. I ask unanimous consent to temporarily set aside the pending motions and amendments so that I may offer an amendment, No. 3577, which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

SEC. 1. PROTECTING MEDICARE BENEFICIARY ACCESS TO HOSPITAL CARE IN RURAL AREAS FROM RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INDEPENDENT PAYMENT ADVISORY BOARD.

(a) In General.—Section 1893(a)(2)(A) of the Social Security Act, as added by section 3403 of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and amended by section 10320 of such Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

At the end of subtitle B of title I, insert the following:

(b) Expansion of Affordability Exception to Individual Mandate.—Section 5000A(e)(1)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by section 1501(b) of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, is amended by striking "8 percent" and inserting "5 percent".

MOTION TO COMMIT

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent now to temporarily set aside the pending motions so that I may offer a motion to commit, which is as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas (Mr. ROBERTS) moves that the bill be referred to the Committee on Finance with instructions to report the same back to the Senate within 3 days with changes to repeal the Patient-Centered Outcomes Research Institute, the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Innovation, any new functions of the United States Preventive Services Task Force, and the Independent Payment Advisory Board and add an offset.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, how much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 21 minutes 40 seconds.

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield half that time to the distinguished chairman of the Banking Committee, former chairman of this committee, and one of the most valuable and productive Members of this body, the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I thank my colleague and commend him for his leadership on this issue, along with, of course, our distinguished majority leader so many others, including the wonderful staff we don't often mention—the remarkable work being done by the individual staff of Members and the committee staff of the Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee. I see my good friend, Tom HARKIN, who now chairs that committee, along with MAX BAUCUS, and so many others of the leadership staff who have brought us to this moment.

I rise to discuss the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act. Although none of us are ignorant of the historic nature of the health care portion of our work this past week, I wish to take a few moments to talk about the significance of the education portion that I listened intently to my friend from Tennessee talk about this part of the bill as well. I have great admiration for him, having served as the Secretary of Education and as Governor of Tennessee. He has a wealth of knowledge on the subject matter. I commend him for it. However, we disagree with this particular portion.

I rise to express a different point of view about why I believe what we have included in this bill has great value. Obviously, the major attention has been focused on the health aspects of what we are doing. That in itself is a major achievement. The reconciliation portion of this bill before us now strengthens a good bill and makes it even better.

Last evening I discussed portions of the bill that I think add tremendous value to our efforts to provide health care once and for all for all Americans. But the education portion of this bill also has great significance.

Since the Pell grant was established in the 1970s, as all of us know, it has allowed a college possibility for millions and millions of young Americans. I had the great pleasure of serving with Claiborne Pell as a Member of this body. He served in the 1960s up until only a few years ago. We lost him a number of months ago; he passed away. But it is important to think about the influence that individual, that one Senator made in the lives of millions of our fellow citizens. In years to come, some may not know who Claiborne Pell was, but I would like the record to reflect he was a remarkable Senator. He authored legislation creating the Northeast Corridor, wrote the legislation that banned the testing of nuclear weapons on the ocean floor. He was the author, along with Jacob Javits, of the National Endowments for the Arts and Humanities, and he was the author of Pell grants. Unique and remarkable contributions, each and every one of them, but he should long be remembered for making education an opportunity that would not be denied because one lacked the resources to afford it.

Those millions of young Americans are now leaders in our Nation. They are innovators, some of our most productive and successful citizens. This bill is not unlike the GI bill at the end of World War II, when we recall men who came back from the theaters of the Pacific and Europe who were able to receive an education under the GI bill, who would tell us what a remarkable investment it was.

It has been repaid millions of times over by those who today make contributions to our country because they got an education because there was a creative Congress, because there was an administration that understood the value of an education in the midpart of the 20th century. Here we are now into the second decade of the 21st century facing a similar issue.

There should be no doubt in anyone's mind about the value not only of making us a healthier country by the adoption of the health care provision of this bill, but a better educated country—
Mr. MCCAIN. Such time as he may use.

Mr. MCCAIN. I yield the floor.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I read a lot about what has been going on in the

In my home State of Connecticut, this would enable more than 4,300 additional students to go to college. In addition, this legislation makes important investments in Historically Black Colleges, community colleges, and the College Access Challenge Grant Program. SRM higher education ends up instead helping those who do graduate, they will no longer be able to attend college without Pell grants.

Since then the importance of a college education has only grown, not only for individual students but for our country. Countless individuals who want to achieve their full potential, but our Nation as well. America's ability to compete in the global economy depends on having a well-educated workforce in the 21st century. Today, that means a college education. Unfortunately, while the urgency of opening the door to college has grown, the support provided to our most important college aid program has slipped. In fact, it has gone further to help them compete. It ends these unnecessary payments and force banks to compete for the job of servicing student loans. When institutions have to pay off these debts, seeking jobs and opportunities that may not be what they need for their future growth and potential.

To help, before the age of 3, there is a critical period when the cost of saving for a generation of Americans, making college impossible for many and leaving those who do find a way to further their education with a debilitating burden of overwhelming debt.

We all know that in 7 years the cost of education will have continued to skyrocket. I would be the first to admit that while we are putting tremendous resources into this program, we could not let the FFEL Program get their loan guarantee and not pay the interest subsidy entitlements regarding what amounts to billions of dollars in wasteful spending within the Federal student loan program.

The bill invests $13.5 billion to fill the gap and save the Pell Grant Program and to unlock the opportunity of higher education for millions of Americans.

I would be the first to admit that while we are putting tremendous resources into this program, we could not let the FFEL Program get their loan guarantee and not pay the interest subsidy entitlements regarding what amounts to billions of dollars in wasteful spending within the Federal student loan program.

What is more, banks in the FFEL Program get their loan guarantee and interest subsidy entitlements regardless of how they treat the student borrowers. While they bank the profits when the loans are repaid, taxpayers end up shouldering the risk of defaults. So our legislation converts all future Federal student loans into direct loans, protects taxpayers from the losses caused by bad behavior of those lenders, and ensures that such a shortfall doesn't develop again, as the cost of college continues to increase in the years ahead. For instance, if we fail to act, the maximum Pell grant award could be a paltry $2,100 for the year 2010. Never before has the effectiveness of this program been at such risk. The legislation before us protects the maximum award at a level of $5,500 and increases to almost $6,000 by 2017, 7 years from now.

In short, what we have here is a win-win, a fully paid for and much needed investment in equal opportunity and American competitiveness. I would be remiss if I did not note that we could and should be doing more. It comes as a serious disappointment to me and to education advocates across the country that funding for a new early childhood learning initiative was not included in this package. I desperately wish it could have been there, as did my friend Tom Harkin from Iowa who has worked with me, along with others, for years on early education. As important as it is to enable a high school student to graduate and attend college, it is just as critical that we prepare every child to be a viable candidate for their next step in the education process. The achievement gap that robs too many American children of their opportunity into our future of 3, according to everything we know about child development. You know the statistics, as most of us do. Investments in early childhood education pay off tenfold when we consider the decreases in crime, the reduced need for special education and welfare services, and improved health of these children who have access to early education.

Just as the increasingly competitive global economy calls us to unlock the door to higher education, we must also do everything we can to help every American child to that threshold of maximizing his or her potential. That important work requires a serious commitment to early education. This legislation would have been a perfect opportunity to follow through on that commitment. So the fight will continue, unfortunately, without the strength this bill would have provided. But for now we have the chance to do some real good for young people and for our Nation.

I urge my fellow Senators, both Democrats and Republicans, to support this commonsense measure, save the Pell Grant Program, and make a real difference in the lives of countless young Americans for years to come. I remind my colleagues this is just part of what is at stake in this debate. The amendments being offered, on too many occasions by our friends on the other side of the aisle, are doing nothing more than trying to stop this legislation from going forward. I hope that will stop. Let's pass this bill. We have a chance to not only change the quality of health in America but also to open the doors of opportunity for American students.

For those reasons, I urge adoption of this package.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. I yield to Senator MCCAIN such time as he may use.
I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I just want to thank the Senator from Arizona for his excellent summation of where this issue lies and its impact on the American people. I hope that statement will be read across this country because it was a reflection of the concerns which are legitimate and which are being expressed by vast amounts of Americans. It is not unusual it should be expressed by the Senator from Arizona because he is so much a personality of this Nation and a force within our political process.

I want to assure them—I want to assure them—this fight is not over. We will register voters. We will move on. Well, they are not going to move on because they are sick and tired of the spending and the generational theft we have committed on future generations of Americans. This is only one of the issues that we are facing. It is a big part, but it is only one part.

So I know I speak for my colleagues when I say this fight is far from over. This struggle to regain control of this body and this institution in Washington, DC, and give it back to the people of this country will go on.

I have great faith in this country and its future. That is why I am confident that over time, sooner or later, we will be back and we will repeal and we will pass legislation to move on. Well, they are not going to move on because they are sick and tired of the spending and the generational theft we have committed on future generations of Americans. This is only one of the issues that we are facing. It is a big part, but it is only one part.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished chairman of the HELP Committee, who has been so involved in health legislation, education legislation. Might I ask, how much time do we have left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There remains 11 minutes 48 seconds.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield as much time to the Senator as he wishes to take, including 11 minutes 48 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Montana, the chairman of the Finance Committee. I thank him for all of his great leadership, and also Senator DODD, who just spoke.

If I might just add a little historical footnote. Senator BAUCUS, chairman of the Finance Committee; Senator DODD, who led the effort through the HELP Committee; myself, as now chairman of the HELP Committee; Chairman MILLER on the House side, chairman of the Education and Labor Committee; and Chairman WAXMAN, the chairman of the House Commerce Committee—all of whom had big parts of the whole health care bill to develop—a historical footnote to all sworn in on the same day in January of 1975. It was a great class, and our classmate, as history would have it, survived to be able to put together this great health care bill.

I again want to thank my longtime friend and colleague from Montana, Senator BAUCUS, for his extreme patience and his endurance in getting us to this point.

Mr. President, we are in the midst of a historic week in this Nation's Capital. Health care reform is no longer a question of whether it is possible. We believe it is possible. Each of these three bills marked a giant step forward for the American people.

As was pointed out by Senator DODD—I just listened to his speech—outlined in great detail what these reforms are and what they will mean for our families and for our students.

This bill in front of us now eliminates $61 billion in wasteful subsidies to banks and redirects most of that money to low-income college students in the form of increased Pell grants.

The status quo in student lending is a bizarre Rube Goldberg process that makes no sense. The Federal Government pays private banks to make entirely risk-free loans. The banks then sell the loans back to the Federal Government and pocket hundreds of millions of dollars in fees. This is a brazen case of corporate welfare—a huge government giveaway to bankers. This bill at long last will put a stop to it.

Mr. President, I want to state forthrightly I am not antibanker. I am not antibank. I have family members in the banking business and they do a great job. But who does not like free money? If you give the banks free money, they love it. But if we have money we want to give away, I say do not give it to the banks. Give it to low-income students so they can go to college. Banks have lots of ways in which they can make money. A low-income student has no way to go to college but that we provide him and her access to meaningful Pell grants. I am disappointed our Republican colleagues are doing everything in their power to delay and obstruct and to kill this bill. Reportedly, they now plan to offer dozens and dozens of largely meaningless amendments to try to stretch the process out and delay a final vote. One might call this the Republican version of March madness. They know it is going to end; they just want to drag it out.

Let's be clear what is at stake. A vote against this bill is a vote against ending discrimination based on race, color, and national origin. We have outlawed discrimination based on gender and religion. We have outlawed discrimination based on age and disability. But until now, it has been perfectly legal to discriminate against our fellow Americans because of illness. Because of illness, because of exclusion of millions of our citizens from decent health care simply because they could not afford insurance or afford health care—blatant discrimination.

When President Obama signed health care reform into law on Tuesday, he set in motion a series of changes that will tear down these last barriers of discrimination and exclusion. That truly is a great moral victory. It is, indeed, a victory for America's soul.

But our work is not done. The reconciliation bill now before us includes a number of modifications to strengthen the new health care reform law. It also includes reforms in the student lending program that in their own way are also discriminatory. We regret these landmark education reforms have not gotten the attention they deserve.

Senator DODD—I just listened to his speech and outlined in great detail what these reforms are and what they will mean for our families and for our students.

I might add, a vote against this bill is a vote against a very important provision. I know an amendment has been offered to do away with what is called the CLASS Act. The CLASS Act is now the law of the land. Here is what it is. It is a voluntary program. No one has to take health coverage as part of a $7,500 government giveaway to bankers. This bill is a vote against ending discrimination based on age and exclusion in our country.

Let's stand united. Let's stand strong. We were all sworn in on the same day. Those of us who are in a position to do so know that our votes are going to continue their die-hard defense of the health insurance companies and the banks or are they going to stand with ordinary Americans who want access to quality, affordable, reliable health care and with needy young people who need Pell grants in order to go to college? It is time to choose.

We are going to have a whole series of amendments. Oh, some of them will sound nice. Some of them I would probably like to vote for myself if they weren't to this bill. But we can't be lured into this by the siren song of amendments that sound good but only have one purpose; that is, to kill this bill, to delay it, to kill it, to make sure it is not enacted into law. That is the only purpose of these amendments, make no mistake about it. So when an amendment comes up that I like and I might want to support, I will vote for his signature. So I say to all of my friends on this side of the aisle: Don't be lured. Don't be lured by the siren song of amendments that may sound good. Don't be afraid that somehow they are going to use it against you in a campaign. Yes, they can use anything against you in a campaign. We all know that by now. Let's stand united. Let's stand strong. Let's say no to these amendments designed only to kill this bill.
I urge my colleagues to support passage of the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act of 2010, to defeat all of the amendments. Let’s get this bill to the President, let’s help our students get to college, and let’s help the people of this country have better health care.

Mr. President, one of the arguments raised by my Republican colleagues regarding the landmark new health reform law just signed into law by President Obama is that it is unconstitutional and hugely burdensome. One example of the strong constitutional basis of the new law is outlined by the American Constitution Society in a paper released at the end of last year. I commend this paper to my colleagues and ask unanimous consent its conclusions be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MANDATORY HEALTH INSURANCE: IS IT CONSTITUTIONAL?

(By Simon Lazarus)

VI. CONCLUSION: MANDATORY INSURANCE IS NEITHER BURdensome NOR UNPREDICTED

A major reason why all opponents’ legal arguments fall short is that they share a common factual foundation, which itself is a fallacy. Their root assumption, or assertion, is that requiring Americans to carry health insurance is both extraordinarily novel—‘‘unprecedented’’—and extraordinarily burdensome. But this endlessly repeated assertion is specious, for several reasons.

To begin with, experience demonstrates that mandating health insurance is neither unprecedented nor burdensome. Hundreds of millions of millions of individuals live under a variety of mandatory health insurance regimes, with very high rates of compliance and no record of discontent with the requirement, in other advanced economies and, indeed, by Massachusetts.

As noted above, the overwhelming majority of Americans already carry health insurance that satisfies the terms of the mandate, so they will be required by the mandate at all. Of the approximately 46 million Americans who currently lack health insurance, the majority are in this state only because it is unaffordable, and so the vast majority of course, will welcome the opportunity presented by the legislation to gain coverage.

For those currently uninsured Americans who would prefer to forego the cost of coverage, even with whatever level of subsidy they will be in a position to claim, the mandate is no more a burden than the requirement they voluntarily pay in exchange for a ‘‘privilege,’’ permission to drive on public roads. But for most people, driving is an economic necessity with a profound social impact on people. Mandatory auto insurance is a common-sense indicator of whether the public health care system will find novel or inherently burdensome a mandate to purchase health insurance from the private insurance industry.

If, as opponents claim, the burden of mandating health insurance is both extraordinary—in principle—oppressive and unfair, Medicare, and for that matter Social Security taxes would raise constitutional questions no less than if these landmark statutory programs were cast as regulations of interstate commerce.

In fact, of course, since 1937, such questions have never been raised either in the courts or by the political branches, for that matter Social Security taxes would raise constitutional questions.

Mr. President, one of the arguments raised by my Republican colleagues regarding the landmark new health reform law just signed into law by President Obama is that it is unconstitutionally underregulated. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support passing this legislation and continue to express my confidence in our ability to help students and families.

The reason is simple: most health care professionals agree that the individual mandate is necessary to control the nation’s health care costs, reduce the crushing 50 million uninsured and make health care reform truly transformative.

The legislation will establish more than half a million not-for-profit servicers. Under the bill, not-for-profit servicers will be allocated a minimum of 100,000 borrower loan accounts as a starting
The Secretary of Education has been given the authority to increase or decrease that volume based on factors that include capacity and customer service. With sufficient loan volume and competitive servicing rates, eligible not-for-profit servicers can individually or collectively generate sufficient revenue to continue the valuable services they provide to borrowers. Because of the significant increase in loan volume as all Federal loans are moved to the Direct Loan Program, additional servicing capacity will be needed and is provided for through the contracts provision. I encourage the Secretary to implement these provisions in a timely manner so that many local not-for-profit servicers will continue to play a role in the student loan program.

The Department of Education should use the not-for-profit servicers to increase competition and quality in the student loan programs. To ensure that this occurs, the Department must hold not-for-profit lenders to the same high standards of quality, performance and integrity used for other Department of Education loan servicers. This bill would ensure that eligible not-for-profit servicers meet the same standards for servicing Federal assets as apply to all other servicing contracts under section 456. These standards relate to: information technology security; recordkeeping; compliance with Federalredit processing by the Department of the Treasury; internal control management; and, Federal accounting practices and debt management. The standards are derived from a variety of statutory and other sources of guidance, including the Federal Information Security Management Act of 2002 (44 U.S.C. 3541 et seq.); the Privacy Act (5 U.S.C. 552a); the Federal Financial Management Improvement Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-208); the Debt Collection Improvement Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-148); the Federal Managers Financial Integrity Act (31 U.S.C. 3512); the Chief Financial Officers Act of 1990 (31 U.S.C. 901 et seq.); the “Government Management Reform Act of 1994” (P.L. 103-356); OMB Circulars A–123 (Management’s Responsibility for Internal Control), A–127 (Financial Management Systems), and A–129 (Policies for Federal Credit Programs and Non-Tax Receivables); and the Treasury Financial Manual.

Contracts will be made in America’s community colleges through one additional important program that is funded in the Finance Committee’s title of this bill. Community colleges serve an instrumental role in both our educational and workforce systems. They may provide needed postsecondary education and job training, particularly to individuals and families hardest hit by difficult economic times. This includes workers eligible for training under the Trade Adjustment Assistance for Workers programs who may become eligible for unemployment compensation, and other individuals who have been impacted by the economic and employment crisis. To ensure that these institutions have access to the resources they need to develop and improve educational and career training programs designed to meet the needs of the workers in the affected areas, the legislation directs the Secretary of Labor to award community college career training grants especially to struggling 2-year public community colleges, (as defined in section 101 of the Higher Education Act of 1965) that attest that all States benefit from these resources with the inclusion of a State minimum. I also encourage the Secretary to strive to ensure a diverse geographical representation of community colleges in both urban and rural areas and to provide grants to both large and small community colleges. Finally, in order to ensure that these grants reach the institutions and students they are intended to serve, I encourage the Secretary to consult with the Secretary of Education in implementing grants provided under this program. I also remind the Secretary of Labor in implementing this program that community colleges are pubic degree-granting institutions of higher education that offer associate’s degrees; or public 4-year institutions of higher education that offer associate’s degrees, are not located reasonably close to the community college, and have an open enrollment policy for certificate or associate’s degree programs; or tribal colleges or universities. This should be the universe of institutions awarded grants under the community college and career training grants program.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a document entitled “Constitutional Findings regarding the Individual Responsibility Requirement.” Furthermore, in support of this document, I commend to my colleagues a list of the following studies and papers:

Constitutional Findings regarding the Individual Responsibility Requirement

The individual responsibility requirement provided for in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, and amended by Section 1002 of the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act, is commercial and economic in nature, and substantially affects interstate commerce in ways that may become eligible for unemployment compensation, and other individuals who have been impacted by the economic and employment crisis.
(7) A large share of the uninsured are offered insurance at low or zero premiums, but choose to forego coverage. New America Foundation, December 6, 2007. According to one estimate of the share of a requirement of the uninsured from health reform would leave 50 percent of the uninsured without coverage. Linda J. Blumberg and John Holahan, Do Individual Mandates Work? The Urban Institute, January 2008. While generous subsidies alone would not achieve universal coverage, the requirement further expands coverage. Congressional Budget Office, December 2008. The requirement improves budgetary efficiency by significantly lowering the federal cost per newly insured. Jonathan Gruber, Covering the Uninsured in the U.S., National Bureau of Economic Research, January 2008. In Massachusetts, where a similar requirement has been in effect since 2007, the share of uninsured declined to 2.7 percent in 2009. Massachusetts Division of Healthcare Finance and Policy.

(8) By regulating the decision to self-insure, and expanding coverage, the requirement addresses the problem of free riders who rely on more costly uncompensated care. By requiring the purchase of medical insurance, by employers, taxpayers, and the privately insured. It will also reduce the cost to the national economy of the lower productivity of the uninsured. Congressional Budget Office, December 2008. The requirement is necessary to achieve near-universal coverage while maintaining the current private-public system. It builds upon and remains in private employer-based health insurance, which covers 176,000,000 Americans nationwide. In Massachusetts, a similar requirement has strengthened employer-based coverage: despite the economic downturn, the number of workers offered employer-based coverage has actually increased. Sharon K. Long and Karen Stockley, Massachusetts reform: Employer Coverage from Employees’ Perspective, Health Affairs, October 1, 2009.

(9) The requirement is necessary to achieve near-universal coverage while maintaining the current private-public system. It builds upon and remains in private employer-based health insurance, which covers 176,000,000 Americans nationwide. In Massachusetts, a similar requirement has strengthened employer-based coverage: despite the economic downturn, the number of workers offered employer-based coverage has actually increased. Sharon K. Long and Karen Stockley, Massachusetts reform: Employer Coverage from Employees’ Perspective, Health Affairs, October 1, 2009.

(10) Under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, if there were no requirement, many individuals would wait to purchase health insurance until they needed care. Higher-risk individuals would be more likely to enroll in coverage, increasing premiums and costs to the government. The Urban Institute, January 2008. The requirement will broaden the private health insurance market by making health insurance available to all individuals, which will spread risk, stabilize the market, and lower premiums. Congressional Budget Office, An Analysis of Health Insurance Reforms in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, November 30, 2009. It is necessary to create effective private health insurance markets throughout the country in which improved health insurance products that are guaranteed issue and do not exclude coverage of pre-existing conditions can be sold.

(11) Administrative costs for private health insurance, which were $90,000,000,000 in 2006, are 25 to 30 percent of premiums in the current private insurance market. According to a report by the Congressional Budget Office, December 2008. The requirement is necessary to create effective private health insurance markets throughout the country in which administrative costs can be reduced. By significantly increasing health insurance coverage and the size of purchasing pools, which will increase economies of scale, the requirement, together with the other provisions of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, will significantly lower administrative costs and lower health insurance premiums.

(12) Health insurance and health care services are a substantial part of the national economy and spending is projected to increase from $2,500,000,000,000, or 17.6 percent of the economy, in 2009 to $4,700,000,000,000 in 2019. Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Office of the Actuary, National Health Expenditure Projections, 2008-2018. Private health insurance spending is projected to be $4,000,000,000 in 2009, and pays for medical supplies, drugs, and equipment that are shipped in interstate commerce. Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services. The largest share of health insurance is sold by national or regional health insurance companies, health insurance is sold in interstate commerce and claims payments flow through interstate commerce.

(13) The requirement, together with the other provisions of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, will add more than 30,000,000 consumers to the health insurance market. Congressional Budget Office, Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. Incorporating the Manager’s Amendment, December 19, 2009. In doing so, it will increase the demand for, and the supply of, health care services. According to one estimate, widespread enactment of the requirement would undercut Federal regulation of the health insurance market.

(14) Payments collected from individuals who fail to maintain minimum essential coverage will contribute revenue that will help the Federal government finance a reformed health insurance system and improve the availability of health insurance to all Americans.

The preceding 15 points cite numerous studies and proposals that illustrate the extensive evidence that the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, as amended by Section 1002 of the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act, substantially affects the interstate commerce. These citations are included as hyperlinks or in their written entirety for the record.

Mrs. HAGAN. Mr. President, today I rise in support of a bill that builds upon the health care reform legislation that was signed into law yesterday.

The new—and historic—law combined with the bill the Senate is now considering, will work with our health care system to reduce costs and improve patient care for North Carolina families and families across America.

In 1996, the average family premium was $584. Today it is $2,710. Without health care reform, premiums would skyrocket to $24,000 by 2016—or half of the average North Carolina family income.

Without reform, health care costs were projected to reach 20 percent of GDP, or $4.3 trillion, by 2017. This trajectory was simply unsustainable.

After decades of working to fix a broken health care system, President Obama yesterday signed into law a reform bill that takes big, bold steps to stop the soaring costs, increases access to health care and reduces our long-term deficit by as much as $1.2 trillion within 20 years.

By passing this bill, we will reduce the deficit by a total savings of $134 billion by 2019.

In addition to containing costs, health care reform will improve access and quality of health care for millions of Americans. 1.7 million North Carolinians without insurance will now have access to a family doctor.

It will provide immediate benefits to small businesses, middle class families, and seniors in North Carolina.

While some estimates make up 98 percent of North Carolina’s private sector employers, in 2008, only 38 percent offered health insurance.

Small business owners I talk to want to provide coverage to their employees but costs are prohibitive. This month, I received an e-mail from a small chiropractic practice in eastern North Carolina that had to drop its health insurance plan for employees because rates were doubled over 2 years. Most of the practice’s employees are young women under 30.

But starting today, 112,000 North Carolina small businesses will be eligible for tax credits to provide health care to employees. With the next 6 months, hard-working, middle-class families will be able to add their children up to age 26 onto their health plans. This will benefit about 877,000 young adults in North Carolina.

This year, insurance companies will no longer be able to deny coverage to a child for a preexisting condition, like asthma or diabetes.

Health care reform means people can access preventive care without being saddled with copays or deductibles. This includes well-child visits and seasonal flu immunizations.

I recently heard a story about a North Carolinian who, as a junior in college, had terrible stomachaches. But he could not afford a colonoscopy. He learned of his colon cancer too late for the doctors to save him. Health care reform means this young man would have had a chance.

Health care reform means people with chronic illness longer have to fear losing their insurance because of an arbitrary, insurance company-set lifetime cap.

And it means insurance companies will no longer be able to drop your coverage because you get sick or file too many claims.

Seniors also will see immediate benefits. In North Carolina, 1.4 million seniors will receive preventive services with no additional costs, and 247,000 seniors will have some of their drug costs in the “donut hole” immediately reduced and eventually eliminated.

I am proud of these immediate benefits and our efforts to reform the health care system for the long term.

This reform effort contains provisions that I have championed since coming to the Senate. In the United States, 23 million adults and children suffer from diabetes, and in North Carolina, diabetes costs us State $5.3 billion per year in medical interventions, lost productivity, and premature mortality.

Given these dire numbers, I added to the health care reform bill the second piece of legislation I introduced as a U.S. Senator—The Catalyst to Better Diabetes Care Act. The Senator from Texas, Mr. CORNYN, cosponsored the bill last July. It creates a national and State-by-State level diabetes report card to track progress at beating the disease. It requires the Department of Health and Human Services to complete birth and death certificates, and requires that recommendations be made on appropriate levels of physician education on properly completing birth and death certificates, and requires that recommendations be made on appropriate levels of diabetes medical education that should be covered and paid by medical licensing and board certification.

I also worked with the Senior Senator from Colorado, Mr. UDALL, to add a section to health care reform to improve access to health care in rural areas. The section we added will help medical schools establish programs designed to increase the number of graduates who practice in rural areas. It will give schools resources to recruit students from rural areas who have an interest in providing medicine in their communities, and it provides for additional training in pediatrics, emergency medicine, obstetrics and behavioral health.

I also want to take this opportunity to discuss how the bill the Senate is currently considering will help make college affordable for our families.

One of the most significant provisions for our students in this legislation is the over $2.5 billion investment over the next 10 years in historically Black colleges and universities.

There are 10 outstanding HBCUs in North Carolina. HBCUs graduate 40 percent of African Americans with degrees in science, technology, engineering and mathematics; 50 percent of African-American teachers; and 40 percent of African-American health professionals.

North Carolina A&T, an HBCU in my hometown of Greensboro, graduates more African Americans with PhDs in engineering than any other school in the country.

This is a milestone week for the State of North Carolina. I am working with my colleagues to send this bill to the President’s desk to further reduce costs for North Carolina’s families and small businesses.

This health care reform will not have been possible without the work of some tenacious Capitol Hill staff. My personal choice are my two incredible health care staffers, Michelle Adams and Tracy Zvenych, who worked countless hours for reform in our country.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I rise today in full support of the Health Care and Education Affordability Reconciliation Act of 2010. I assert that the investment we make in education with this bill is an investment in America’s economic future.

For too long, we have allowed America to lag behind other nations in education, specifically in the number of college graduates we produce. No more. Now is the time to train our workforce to compete in the global economy. Now is the time to provide affordable, accessible, quality educational opportunities so that America will shine as a beacon of ingenuity and prosperity once again. This bill answers the call by making college more affordable and accessible.

Perhaps most significantly, the bill invests in and protects the Pell grant scholarship. It provides $36 billion over 10 years for this program which allows so many to attend college who would not otherwise have the opportunity.

This includes funding to cover a shortfall due to demand. The failing economy has spurred a dramatic increase in the number of those students who are eligible for Pell grants. In 2007, there were 5 million Pell grant recipients. In 2009–2010, there were 8.3 million. The bill also provides an increase in the maximum annual award which will ultimately be indexed to the Consumer Price Index and thus linked to increases in the cost of living.

In Maryland, over 85,000 students depend on Pell grants to help them attend college. With the additional funding, that number is expected to rise to 100,000. That is 15,000 additional students who are given the opportunity to share in the American dream! Students like Morris Johnson from Baltimore. Morris is a double major in sociology and communications at Goucher College with a 3.5 grade point average. He is the first in his family to attend college. Morris credits those who believed in him and his academic promise for keeping his dream of attending college alive. But without financial aid, including a Pell grant, that dream would have been out of reach.

For those who find it necessary to borrow to finance their education, the bill solidifies a mechanism for obtaining high-quality student loans. The direct loan program is a reliable lender and cost-effective mechanism for taxpayers. Beginning in 2011, all new student loans will be originated through the direct loan program. This will bring an end to the costly federally-guaranteed student loan program that generated billions of dollars in subsidies for banks—at the expense of additional financial aid for more deserving students. Instead, direct loans will be serviced by contracted private lenders. Further, direct loans can only be serviced in the United States, thereby preserving American jobs.

The bill also makes it easier for new borrowers after 2014 to repay Federal loans by lowering the existing cap on monthly Federal student loan payments from 15 percent to 10 percent of discretionary income. The legislation provides $36 billion of this income-based repayment program.

Just paying for college, however, isn’t enough. We need to make sure our students succeed in college and graduate. To that end, the bill supports additional key investments:

- The bill dramatically increases funding for the College Access Challenge Grant program. This program funds innovative financial literacy and retention projects. This will increase the number of low-income students who are adequately prepared for the financial challenges of paying for college and related expenses.

- The bill underscores the role of minority serving institutions in educating the Nation’s low-income and minority students by providing $2.5 billion to support these institutions. This funding represents a significant investment in Maryland where we have four outstanding Historically Black Colleges and Universities. The bill also recognizes the role of community colleges and provides $2 billion for a competitive grant program to develop and improve career training programs.

I said the time for making college more accessible and affordable has come and I believe that. But we also have to be fiscally responsible. This bill is both. It makes historic investments in Federal financial aid and yet comes at no cost to the taxpayers. This is possible by switching all Federal loans to the direct loan program. Doing so saves taxpayers a huge amount in subsidies that were going to the banks. According to the Congressional Budget Office, this savings will amount to $61 billion over 10 years. Even with the improvements, these education provisions in the legislation will reduce the deficit by $10 billion over 10 years, at least.

The education provisions in this legislation make college more affordable and accessible. It’s necessary for America’s students and for America’s future.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I am proud today to support the student loan reform provisions in the Health Care and Education Affordability Reconciliation Act of 2010. I’ve said this often, we in this country enjoy many freedoms for the freedom of the press, the freedom of religion. But there is an implicit freedom our Constitution doesn’t lay out in writing, and its promise has excited the passions, hopes, and dreams of people in this country and this world. The freedom to take whatever talents God has given you, to fulfill whatever passion is in your heart, to learn so you can earn and make a contribution—the freedom to achieve.

When I was a young girl at a Catholic all-girls school, my mom and dad made it clear they wanted me to go to college. But, right around graduation, my family was going through a rough time because my dad’s grocery store had suffered a terrible fire. I offered to put off college and work at the grocery store until the business got back on its feet. My dad said, “Barb, you have to go. Your mother and I will find a way because no matter what happens to you, no one can ever take that degree away from you.” The best way I can protect it is to make sure we’re living all of your life.” My father gave me the freedom to achieve. And the provisions in this bill will give millions of Americans that same freedom without adding a dime to the deficit. For too long, banks have gotten a free ride from the U.S. Department of Education by offering federally guaranteed student loans. The provisions in this bill will stop the unwise and unnecessary subsidies to lenders and put that money where it is needed most—in students’ pockets. By reforming the Federal student loan program, we will save over $60 billion in the next 10 years. Many of these savings will go to increase the Pell grant, which has maintained college a reality for students of modest means for nearly half a century. But we also make critical investments in institutions that help our most underserved students: community colleges and minority serving institutions, particularly Historically Black Colleges and Universities, HBCUs.

I have fought alongside my colleagues for years to increase funding for these programs and there was a point where it looked like we would not get any teeth-and-nail just to keep Pell funding from being cut. Now we are in a position where we can guarantee increases in the Pell grant, which helps more than 90,000 students in my home State of Maryland. My colleagues have spoken eloquently about the importance of the much-needed investments in this bill, but I would like to take a moment to highlight the investments in HBCUs. I am the only senior Democrat on the HELP committee and as an appropriator through my chairmanship of the Commerce, Justice, and Science Appropriations Subcommittee.

I am proud that Maryland has four public HBCUs which provide an incredible benefit to African-American students and the communities they serve. Few other HBCUs in the nation have nearly a quarter of our Nation’s African-American public school teachers. They also produce almost 40 percent of African-American graduates in physics, math, biology, and environmental sciences.

Some of my colleagues might argue that HBCUs shouldn’t be getting Federal funding based primarily on the racial makeup of their student bodies and, further, that there is no longer any justification for this significant support. I disagree. For too long, Congress has been providing direct Federal support for HBCUs for more than 50 years mainly for two reasons. First, Congress recognizes the historical and cultural importance of HBCUs and their benefit to students who are often the first in their families to go to college. Second, the emergence of these institutions was a direct result of Federal action permitting the segregation of students in public education based on race.

During those dark days, HBCUs were often the only pathways to college for African Americans; they were able to open the doors of opportunity that were so often shut. But these institutions are historically under-resourced, and their students are by and large underserved. For that reason they have had to fight for representation, respect, and recognition since they were established. That means lawmakers act “now” on behalf of their students when so many have told them to “wait.” So I am here to make sure that the more than 20,000 students at Maryland’s HBCUs get the resources they need to launch a $1.5 billion investment in HBCUs over 10 years enabled through this reconciliation bill. Maryland is slated to get $65 million, and I am confident that the presidents of Morgan State University, Coppin State University, the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, and Bowie State University will be good stewards of this landmark Federal investment.

Our work isn’t done when it comes to equity in access for higher education, but this bill in particular will extend immediate benefits to millions of American families and small businesses, HBCUs, and Minority Serving Institutions, particularly.

In implementing this comprehensive legislation, the Department of Health and Human Services will be called upon, as will other Federal agencies, and the States, to make assessments in a variety of contexts as to whether the marketplace is functioning properly, or whether abuses are occurring. In making these assessments, and in deciding on appropriate steps to address any abuses or dysfunction, the Federal and State agencies are more likely to benefit greatly from the competitive analysis provided by the Department of Justice’s Antitrust Division and the Federal Trade Commission.

One example where this advice would be particularly beneficial is in implementing the mandate to establish State and/or regional health exchanges. At present, many State health insurance markets are characterized by their extreme concentration, which makes it hard for minority-owned insurers and the like, to enter. Obvious market abuses, such as predatory practices, advertising-focused on price, and ignoring the needs of the uninsured, must be stopped. But success also requires that the regulators get the more delicate issues right: does a preferred rate agreement constitute a de facto boycott? Will a regulation or exchange adversely impact the ability of a new participant to gain public trust? How does a proposed rule impact the ability of young insurance companies to develop a comprehensive network of health care providers?

These are difficult questions and we should not expect State regulators to develop an expertise in them overnight. But our Federal antitrust agencies, have, through years of experience, developed just this expertise. I urge the exchange regulators, as well as the Department of Health and Human Services and other responsible agencies, to make full use of their assistance.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I rise today in support of two amendments, S.A. 3574 and S.A. 3575, which I am the junior senator from Florida. I am concerned the student loan reforms in the bill will lead to a substantial loss of jobs in my State. That is why I recently led a group of six Senators in asking Majority Leader Reid to consider alternative ways to reduce the cost of student loans. Unfortunately, that has not happened. The provisions in this bill could prove detrimental to thousands of employees who serve in the student loan industry throughout this country, about 700 who are located in Part. Therefore, Mr. President, I urge the Senate to pass this amendment.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise in support of the education provisions in the reconciliation legislation that reforms Federal student loan programs and will help our Nation’s neediest students afford college by providing $35.5 billion for the critical Pell grant program.

Nearly 700,000 students in California right now receive Pell grants of up to $5,550 out of over 8 million students nationwide. The majority of these students come from families where the average income is less than $40,000. The Pell grant funds in the bill will help prevent cuts to students’ grants of up to 60 percent and prevent nearly 600,000 students from losing their grant entirely.

It will also help 63,000 more students in California receive a Pell grant so they can afford to go to college during this tough economic time. Specifically, the legislation will allow the current Federal Direct Loan....
The fee-for-service cost calculation is important because it will soon be the basis for Medicare Advantage rates throughout the country and Puerto Rico. I strongly believe CMS should take a look at the under count. If there is validation that the FFS expenditures are undercounted, I believe the HHS Secretary and CMS should use current authority and adjust the calculations appropriately.

I am asking HHS and CMS to look at the under count because there is a very real chance we could do harm to Medicare Advantage in Puerto Rico if we don’t get the FFS costs accurate. I hope the chairman agrees with me.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Senator for bringing attention to this issue. He is a true champion for Puerto Rico and a constructive member of the Finance Committee.

I share his concern about the possible under count of fee-for-service costs in areas like Puerto Rico. That is why we included a provision in the Medicare Improvements for Patients and Providers Act of 2008 to have MedPAC study the accuracy of the calculation and report to Congress. As he points out, MedPAC recommends that CMS should adjust the undercount so that the Medicare Advantage programs in such undercounts do not exist, particularly in areas like Puerto Rico where Medicare Advantage provides benefits to over 80 percent of its seniors.

I strongly agree with him that CMS should promptly use its authority to correct any and all undercounts that might exist in areas like Puerto Rico. The island has unique circumstances that could affect Medicare expenditures and spill over to Medicare Advantage. Moving forward I will continue to work with the Senator closely to monitor and correct this issue as expeditiously as possible.

Mr. MENENDEZ. I thank the Chairman for his leadership and commitment on this issue.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Finance and its ranking member a question on the application of the legislation to Professional Employer Organizations or PEOs.

As you know, there are millions of individuals throughout our country who are enrolled through Professional Employer Organizations which are in PEO arrangements. The clear objective of this legislation is to create incentives for health care coverage and not to provide disincentives. I would like the chairman to clarify that, for purposes of the application of section 2716 of the Public Health Service Act (Prohibition on Discrimination in Favor of Highly Compensated Individuals) and for purposes of Internal Revenue Code sections 4980B, 4980H (Shared Responsibility for Employers), to any health plans sponsored by a Professional Employer Organization, PEO, or a PEO client organization, the rules would be applied to each client organization separately and eligibility for the small business tax credits and employer shared responsibilities would also apply to each client organization separately, and not at the PEO level.

Mr. BAUCUS. If the individual providing services to the PEO client organization pursuant to the PEO arrangement continues to be an employee of the PEO client organization, the Senator from Florida is correct.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I agree with the chairman.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I want to talk a moment about one of the only retroactive tax provisions in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, Section 9016. This one deals with the special deductions given to the many nonprofit Blue Cross Blue Shield organizations which are no longer exempt from Federal income tax.

As Section 833 under section 9016 of the Internal Revenue Code, these organizations receive a 25 percent deduction for claims and expenses and an exception from the—otherwise applicable—20 percent reduction in the deduction for unearned premium reserves. Effective January 1 of this year, the Blue Cross Blue Shield organizations must now meet a medical loss ratio of 85 percent or higher in order to take advantage of the tax benefits of section 833. This provision was included to ensure that recipients of this benefit actually spend out most of their premium income on the people they insure and not on administrative fees or executive compensation.

But I want to clarify two issues here. First, it was our intention that, in calculating the medical loss ratios, these entities could include both the cost of reimbursement for clinical services provided to the individuals they insure and the cost of activities that improve health care quality. Determining the medical loss ratio under this provision using those two types of costs is consistent with the calculation of medical loss ratios elsewhere in the legislation. This determination would be made on an annual basis and would only affect the application of the special deductions for that year.

Second, it was our intention that the only consequence for not meeting the medical loss ratio threshold would be that the 25 percent deduction for claims and expenses and the reduction from the 20 percent reduction in the deduction for unearned premium reserves would not be allowed. The entity would still be treated as a stock property and casualty insurance company.

It is my understanding that the Joint Committee on Taxation scored this provision consistent with the policy I just outlined. We intend to clarify these two issues in a technical corrections bill as soon as possible.
The Treasury will provide guidance on the calculation of the fees is the same. The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, Section 9008, and that is proposed to be modified in the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act. This deals with the annual fee on pharmaceutical manufacturers which, as passed, is to go into effect this year. It is our hope that Congress will delay the implementation of this fee to January 1, 2011, by passing the reconciliation bill which we are discussing today on the floor. This will give the government reporting agencies more time to establish systems to report the drug sales to the Secretary if the Treasury as required by health care reform.

As a reminder of how the fee works: our legislation sets an aggregate, annual fee that is to be apportioned among the relevant companies based on their market share of branded U.S. prescription drug sales made to or funded by specified government programs. The U.S. Treasury will allocate this annual fee to each company based on its relative market share for the prior year.

Now, we understand that there have been questions about the nature of this fee that are affecting how the fee should be treated for accounting purposes. It was our intent that the fee is assessed in the year that it is due. A fee is assessed on an entity in any given calendar year only if the entity is engaged in the business of manufacturing or importing branded prescription drug sales to the specified government programs in that calendar year. The reference in the legislation to sales for the preceding calendar year is for the sole purpose of providing the method of calculating market share. It would be difficult to calculate market share and impose and collect the fee in the same year, so we decided to look back to a completed year as a proxy of market share. But it is not intended that a manufacturer or importer would be assessed an annual fee in a calendar year in which the entity did not have any relevant sales in the preceding year.

For example, suppose a pharmaceutical company made sales in 2011 in November 2011 shut down its operations or bankrupted or other reasonable cause. The tax year is for the sole purpose of calculating market share and imposing and collecting the fee for the preceding calendar year for the years 2012 and 2013.

We are also aware of provisions in the legislation that dealing with the annual fee on pharmaceutical manufacturers which, as passed, is to go into effect this year. It is our hope that Congress will delay the implementation of this fee to January 1, 2011, by passing the reconciliation bill which we are discussing today on the floor. This will give the government reporting agencies more time to establish systems to report the drug sales to the Secretary if the Treasury as required by health care reform.

thing of the past for the foreseeable future. While there may have been the chance to work together on important topics, I believe Republicans must now pursue a strategy of repeal and replace. Repeal this damaging legislation and replace it with programs that promote fair tax treatment of health care, encourage innovation, reward wellness, and help those in need.

I will be voting against this reconciliation bill because I believe that combined with the recently passed health care bill, it will do more harm than good for health care and higher education in America.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. How much time do we have on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 4 minutes remaining.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, a lot has been talked about here. A lot has been discussed. I don’t want to get into an expansive discussion of the issue of the underlying bill. It has been fully aired. But this concept to vote down every amendment, that you have to do that in order to save this bill, seems to reflect the concept of a constitutional process.

Think about this for a moment. The whole series of amendments here are being offered to fulfill the statements made by the President of the United States. The President has offered an amendment to take out the sweetheart deals. The President said the sweetheart deals would be taken out. Senator BARRASSO has offered an amendment to take out the other side of the aisle. The Senate took it over to the House, and the Speaker worked out the deals in the back rooms of her offices behind hidden doors without any public input, without C-SPAN there, as was represented it would be. And what happened? It passed the House without any amendments being allowed.

Now, for the first time, we have a chance to offer amendments, and the position on the other side of the aisle is no amendments allowed even if they are good amendments.

So, I guess, obviously, they consider their promises to be an inconvenience. Obviously, they presume the Republican Party is an inconvenience. The Democratic process is an inconvenience. It also appears, considering the opposition to this out in America, that the American people are an inconvenience and that amendments which make sense aren’t going to be allowed to be passed because they don’t want to send it back to the House of Representatives. It makes no sense to me, and I don’t think it is going to make much sense to the American people.

This bill is fundamentally flawed. It needs to be repealed and replaced. We have suggested a whole series of amendments which will significantly improve this bill, and I hope some will be supported by the other side of the aisle since they are the policies of the majority of the American people.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, make no mistake——

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, point of order. Is there time remaining on the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 53 seconds remaining for the majority.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, make no mistake, the intent of every single one of our colleagues on the other side of the aisle is to kill health care reform. That is the sole purpose of each of those amendments. That was the sole purpose of the amendments in the Finance Committee last year—to kill health care reform. It was the sole purpose in the HELP Committee, except for a few benign amendments—to kill health care reform. It was the sole purpose on the floor of the Senate when we took it up. Every amendment was to kill health care reform.

A Senator from the other side of the aisle stood up and said that this is hopefully the President’s Waterloo. They want to kill health care reform. It is clear they want to kill health care reform.

The other side has said repeatedly in campaign statements in the other body that they want to repeal health care reform. They have orchestrated legislatures to repeal health care reform. Each amendment offered here is intended to kill health care reform, and that is why each amendment should fall.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. REID. I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I direct this comment through the Chair to my distinguished colleague, the Republican leader. All time has expired. Under the rules in the Senate, we start our vote-a-thon now, as the Republican leader and I would ask at the desire of the minority that there be time before each amendment and a response to that?

Mr. MCCONNELL. Yes, I would say to my friend the majority leader, since the voting will all be called voice votes, if we could have a minute or so before each amendment simply to describe what it is, that would be helpful.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I say again through the Chair to my colleague and those Members of this body, we do not have to agree to 1 minute, but we want everyone to understand we have tried to be as fair as we can through this whole process. There are some who said: Why should we waste—there are 46 minutes. I think there are 23 amendments pending, so that would be 46 minutes. But we want to be fair. In recent years, we have agreed by unanimous consent to have 1 minute to explain the amendment and 1 minute to disagree with the amendment. I think that is the appropriate thing to do. We want to make sure everyone is treated fairly.

But I alert everyone: The Chair is going to enforce—we are not waiting for the White House—the Chair is going to enforce that to the letter of the law. Every time the Presiding Officer is here, there will be 1 minute—if this consent agreement is agreed to there will be 1 minute to explain the amendment and 1 minute to disagree with the amendment. I think that is the appropriate thing to do. We want to make sure everyone is treated fairly.

Every time the Presiding Officer is here, there will be 1 minute—if this consent agreement is agreed to there will be 1 minute to explain the amendment and 1 minute to disagree with the amendment.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Would my friend yield for an observation?

Mr. REID. Yes.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Even though allowing that as the majority leader suggested is certainly optional, it has been the custom of both sides, when we have been in these vote-arama situations in the past, to allow the time on
Mr. REID. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent that after the first amendment on which we will do our normal 15 minutes with 5 minutes of time after that, all votes thereafter be 10 minutes. I ask unanimous consent that prior to each vote there be 2 minutes of debate equally divided and controlled with the probable form that a quorum or yielding back of that time, the Senate proceed to vote in relation to the amendments and the motions in the order they have been offered—I think that is the fair way to go so we are not trying to say over and over other amendments people may have offered at an earlier time—with no intervening amendments or motions in order prior to a vote; further, that after the first vote in this sequence, the succeeding votes be limited to 10 minutes each.

The reason I suggest 10 minutes is I have been told by Senator MCCONNELL and others they want an opportunity to offer amendments, and this will maybe allow them to offer a few more.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I also note that with just the amendments that have been proposed, if we are fortunate, we will take 9 or 10 or so, maybe more than that, to get rid of those. There will be continuous votes without any breaks. We are not going to have any breaks unless something untoward happens. Senators should be advised that they have to remain close to the floor during this process. If people are not here at the end of the time, we are going to close it up. We need to move on.

We have other things we have to do prior to the recess. I have to work with the Republican leaders. It has taken an enormous amount of time to do this. Everybody stay here. It works a lot better if my colleagues stay close to their seats and, hopefully, we will have an orderly process as much as possible during the vote-arama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I am going to take a few minutes of my leader time to explain that up there or yielding back of that time, the Senate proceed to vote in relation to the amendments and the motions in the order they have been offered—I think that is the fair way to go so we are not trying to say over and over other amendments people may have offered at an earlier time—with no intervening amendments or motions in order prior to a vote; further, that after the first vote in this sequence, the succeeding votes be limited to 10 minutes each.

The number of days in the Finance Committee the bill was available before the markup even took place; 6; the total number of amendments posted online before the markup, 564. They were public. Everyone in America could read them. The number of amendments posted during the markup, 133; the number of days the committee spent marking up the bill, 8; the number of days the final bill was available before the vote, 11.

There is more, but you get the picture.

Chairman DODD conducted the longest markup in the history of the HELP Committee. On what subject? Health care. Public meetings, many of them on C-SPAN.

There is no bill anymore. It was signed into law yesterday. The work that we did here on Christmas Eve, through the storms of 2010, is now the law of this country. We are going to start in just a few minutes making that law even better.

In my State of Nevada, 600,000 people will be able to have insurance who have never had it before; 24,000 small businesses will be eligible for a subsidy for people they employ to have health insurance; and did not have health insurance because they were cheap or mean; they could not afford it. If they would get a palsy, they would cancel when somebody got sick or hurt.

Now someone who is 26 years old can go to college or do whatever they want to do and not worry about losing their insurance until they establish themselves.

This legislation extends Medicare for 9 years as a healthy entity. Medicare is not a perfect program, but it is a good program.

My first elective job was a county wide job in Las Vegas, the metropolitan areas Clark County. When I went on that hospital board, the largest district in Nevada, 40 percent of seniors who came into that hospital had no health insurance. Their sons, their daughters, their mothers, their brothers, their cousins, their neighbors signed for them that they would be responsible for that bill. We had a large collection agency in that hospital. We went after those people.

Not anymore. Now everybody who is a senior citizen who comes into that hospital is taken care of because of Medicaid and the life of that program for about 9 years.

I had a letter written to me by a man from Nevada. He wrote to me and he said: Senator, I have a son who has diabetes, but he has become more complicated. Now he has Addison’s disease. I lost my job. We have no health insurance. When I go to bed at night and say my prayers, I don’t know whether to die or stay alive to help my son. That is how desperate he is.

People such as this man from Nevada are not out of it to have to be desperate. No longer are we going to have 750,000 people file for bankruptcy, 70 percent of them because of health care costs and 80 percent of the 70 percent have health insurance.

The bill that is now the law of this country dealing with health care is a wonderful bill, and we are going to improve it tonight.

The AMENDMENT NO. 3570, AS MODIFIED

The President: The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will be 2 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote on the Gregg amendment, as modified. Who yields first?

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, this amendment fulfills the obligation to our senior citizens. This bill reduces on its face $520 billion in Medicare by cutting Medicare beneficiaries through reducing providers and by eliminating or significantly reducing the Medicare Advantage Program. That number actually, when fully implemented, is $1 trillion over the first 10 years. That is $1 trillion of reductions in Medicare.

That money is then taken and used to create new entitlements for people who are not seniors and who have, for the most part, not paid into the Medicare trust fund. That is wrong. Medicare is in serious trouble. We should use the Medicare savings in this bill for the purposes of making Medicare more solvent.

That is exactly what this amendment does. It keeps Medicare savings in the Medicare trust fund and uses them to make Medicare more solvent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, without being dramatic, this is a killer amendment, pure and simple. Why? Because it is basically designed to prevent spending. That means it will take away tax credits to middle Americans to help them buy insurance. This amendment would take it away. It would kill the assistance to seniors for prescription drugs. It would take that away. It would take away assistance to States. That is why it is a killer amendment.

Mr. President, I move to table the amendment.

The President: The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 56, nays 42, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we are going to cut the votes off after 10 minutes. We are going to move these as quickly as we can. We want to get through this series of votes as rapidly as we can, and it is going to take hours to do that. People should stay close here. We are not going to take time for full floor games. We have got to move through this process. It makes it so much easier if you are here to vote; otherwise, some people are going to miss the votes.

AMENDMENT NO. 3570

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided, prior to a vote in relation to amendment No. 3570, offered by the Senator from Arizona, Mr. MCCAIN.

The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, the amendment removes the following items from the legislation: additional Medicaid funding for Hawaii hospitals; additional Medicaid funding for Tennessee hospitals; provides special Medicaid funding for Louisiana; special Medicaid funding primarily for reclamation of the mines in Arizona and Michigan, including $100 million for a Connecticut hospital; federal funding provision provided in new Medicare money for Montana, South Dakota, North Dakota, and Wyoming; a provision allowing for certain residents in Libby, MT.

I do not argue whether these are worthwhile or needed projects. I do argue the method in which they were inserted in this legislation—the one for Tennessee being as recently as yesterday or the day before—is the wrong process.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I think it is important to recognize this amendment for what it is. It is basically a political stunt at the expense of a lot of victimized people. One is victims of Hurricane Katrina, another is victims of asbestos in Libby, MT; it is at the expense of rural Americans; it is an attempt to derail the bill and force the House to have to vote again, therefore, probably, the Senate to go through another vote-aroma, go back and forth. It makes no sense whatsoever.

Let’s not forget the underlying legislation passed recently and signed by the President yesterday reduces insurance costs for working and middle-class Americans. This amendment would have the effect of taking that away if passed. If passed, it would take away Medicare prescription drug coverage for more than 3 million seniors. If passed, it would have the effect of taking away immediate tax credits for small businesses, and I could go on and on.

I urge Members to support my motion to table. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a second?

There appears to be.

The question is agreeing to the motion to table.

The clerk will call the roll.

The motion to lay upon the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate, equally divided, prior to a vote in relation to the motion to reconsider offered by the Senator from Idaho, Mr. CRAPO.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, the two health care bills, the one the President has already signed into law plus this one we are considering will spend another $2.6 trillion over the next 10 years.

In order to pay for it, one of the things that these bills include is over $900 billion in new taxes. The President has pledged there would be no taxes on the middle class, and he defined that to be anybody who makes less than $200,000 as an individual or $250,000 as a couple or a family.

All this motion to commit does is say: Let’s take those taxes out of these bills. There are 73 million Americans who fall squarely in the middle class who make less than $200,000 a year as an individual or $250,000 as a couple who will pay the burden of these taxes if we do not make this change.

It is time for this Congress——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. CRAPO. To help the President keep his pledge.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I don’t want to be dramatic about this, but it is a fact that this amendment is a killer amendment. That is why we cannot adopt it. I remind colleagues that the underlying bill the President signed yesterday is a very large tax cut. It has tax credits in the neighborhood of about $400-some billion. That is a big tax cut for Americans who today are having a hard time paying insurance, a tax credit that enables middle and lower income Americans to buy insurance. I think we should keep that in mind. A vote for this amendment would, in fact, prevent all the benefits this bill provides for forming a health insurance market, stopping preexisting conditions. It would prevent about $17 billion in tax credits that otherwise would go to small business.

I strongly urge colleagues to support my motion to table this motion.

I move to table the motion to commit and ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BAUCUS. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. LEVIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote in relation to the motion to reconsider offered by the Senator from Wyoming, Mr. ENZI.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, this is not a killer amendment. This just kills a bad part of the bill.

The reconciliation bill makes a bad employment situation even worse. It imposes $52 billion in new taxes on employers who cannot afford to provide health insurance to their workers. The new employer tax will result in lower wages and lost jobs.

According to CBO:

Requiring employers to offer health insurance—or pay a fee if they do not—is likely to reduce employment.

Low-income workers are particularly hard hit by the employer mandate in the reconciliation bill. CBO says an employer mandate “could reduce the hiring of low-wage workers” and would “increase incentives for firms to replace full-time workers with more part-time or temporary workers.”

The Nation’s unemployment rate is 9.7 percent, and in many States the unemployment rate is well into the teens. We should be doing everything possible to create new jobs, but the employer mandate in the reconciliation bill does the opposite.

The job-killing taxes in the bill will slash wages and cut jobs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. ENZI. I urge my colleagues to protect Americans’ jobs by supporting my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BINGGELI). The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, sending the bill to committee sounds like killing the bill to me. I have never heard of a motion to commit that is not, in effect, a motion to kill the bill.

We are all in this together in America in enacting health care reform—all groups: business groups, consumers, labor, and so forth. We have consulted with business groups. They are an integral part of this. Business groups want to work with us and have worked with us to get health care reform passed.

I might also remind my colleagues there are tax credits in here for small business to the tune of—I think it is $17 billion. Firms with fewer than 50 employees are totally exempt from any penalty.

This clearly is a motion to kill the bill. Therefore, it would result in taking away all these provisions enacted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I move to table the motion to commit and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion to table the motion to commit.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. KYL. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON).

The motion was agreed to.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, my amendment protects families and projects small businesses from dramatic increases in insurance premiums. My amendment directs the Department of Health and Human Services to certify that insurance premiums will not rise faster under the new health care law than they would have if the law had not been passed. If they find that premiums are higher, then the new law would sunset.

This month in Pennsylvania, the President said the Senate bill would reduce most people’s premiums. I say to my friends on the other side of the aisle, if you believe the President and you believe that this bill lowers premiums, prove it. Vote for this amendment.

This is a reasonable, straightforward amendment. It holds the President and it holds the Members of Congress accountable to the American people for promises made.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, all things being equal, I choose to believe the President. Second, I choose to believe the Congressional Budget Office. The Congressional Budget Office has concluded that premiums under this legislation will, all things equal, be reduced for big business as much as 3 percent. Small businesses will see a decrease of 11 percent if you factor in the small business tax credits for coverage. Individuals who receive tax credits in the exchange will find a 57 percent reduction in premiums; again, all things being equal.

Will someone find an increase in premium? Somebody might buy a very expensive health insurance policy. Maybe that person’s premium might go up.

Obviously, this is designed to kill the bill, and I strongly urge my colleagues not to support it. It prevents passage of the bill. It undermines the bill. It repeals the bill, in effect, that has already been signed by the President.

So I move that this amendment be tabled, and I ask for the yeas and nays. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I move to waive section 313 of the Budget Act for the consideration of the pending amendment.

Mr. BAUCUS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The clerk will call the roll.

The point of order is sustained, and the roll is closed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. ALEXANDER. A "no" means savings to students.

Mr. HARKIN. The last time we took up higher education, in 2007, we lowered interest rates on student loans and crafted the interest-based repayment program. In this bill, we lower that down even more—from 15 percent to 10 percent—and we make a historic investment in Pell grants.

I would agree, I am all for lowering interest rates. I would just note that my friend from Tennessee didn't take to the floor to complain when Sallie Mae was charging over 20 percent interest on its loans to students. I didn't see that.

This amendment is not about lowering interest rates. What it is about is continuing a $61 billion subsidy to the big banks in this country. We take that money and give it to students in Pell grants.

Mr. President, I move to table the motion to commit, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

ALEXANDER MOTION TO COMMIT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, we will have 2 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote on the motion to commit offered by the Senator from Tennessee, Mr. ALEXANDER.

The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, this is an effort to stop the Federal Government from overcharging 19 million college students to help pay for the health care bill. It would reduce from 6.8 percent to 5.3 percent the interest on their loans. It would save $1,700 to $1,800 on the average of a $25,000 loan over 10 years.

Why are we talking student loans during a health care bill? Because we can't trust the other side with the Yellow Pages. If they find it in there, they think the government is going to be doing it. They have taken over the Federal student loan program, and they are running up the debt $1 trillion to do it. They are firing 31,000 people by July 1. They are going to borrow money at 2.8 percent and loan it to students at 6.8 percent and use the rest to help pay for health care and for the government. CBO has said this is $8.7 billion of overcharging students to pay for health care. So a "yes" means don't overcharge.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. ALEXANDER. A "no" means savings to students.

Mr. HARKIN. The last time we took up higher education, in 2007, we lowered interest rates on student loans and crafted the interest-based repayment program. In this bill, we lower that down even more—from 15 percent to 10 percent—and we make a historic investment in Pell grants.

[Rollcall Vote No. 70 Leg.]
The Senate from Florida is recognized.

Mr. LE MIEUX. Mr. President, I have heard my friends on the other side of the aisle talk about 30 million new people in America having health care. What they are not talking about is 16 million of those folks are going into Medicaid. Medicaid is a program that doesn’t work. Forty percent of physicians according to MedPac no longer will see Medicaid patients. Pharmacies will not fill prescriptions. You cannot get a specialist.

I have also heard our friends on the other side of the aisle come to the Senate floor and say the people of America should have the same great health care that we have in this body. The corollary should be true as well. We should have the same health care that we are willing to put 16 million new Americans in and 50 million Americans in total. We should all be on Medicaid.

My amendment says 335 Members of Congress, as well as the Vice President of the United States, will go into Medicaid. If it is good enough for them, it should be good enough for us. We talk the talk around here a lot, now let’s see if we will walk the walk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I don’t think this is really a serious amendment that requires all Members of Congress to withdraw from their Federal health insurance plan, and it requires all Members of Congress to be in Medicaid. Medicaid is a safety net for vulnerable Americans. It should not be the subject for political gamesmanship like this amendment. It is a slap in the face of vulnerable, poor Americans.

Ironically, this killer amendment will have the effect of reducing payments to States which are in the underlying bill. It would take that away. I don’t think that is the intent of the author of the amendment.

Mr. President, I make a point of order the pending amendment violates section 313(b)(1)(C) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. LE MIEUX. Pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and section 4(G)(3) of the statutory pay-as-you-go act of 2010, I move to waive all applicable sections of those acts for purposes of my amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, as a motion to commit this clearly is designed to kill the bill. All motions to commit have that intent and effect. Let’s remind ourselves, the underlying bill protects all Medicare beneficiaries. All statutory benefits are guaranteed in the underlying legislation. Second, the underlying bill reforms Medicare Advantage which rewards high performance Medicare Advantage programs, those providing value, whereas under current law that is not the case. In addition, if this amendment passes, fee-for-service Medicare beneficiaries would have to pay a $90-a-year penalty to pay for the excess subsidy of Medicare Advantage plans. For lots of reasons, this motion should not prevail.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support my motion to commit. Simply put, this motion protects the 11 million Medicare beneficiaries, both seniors and the disabled, currently participating in the Medicare Advantage program.

If the IHS actuary certifies that the Medicare Advantage cuts included in the health reform law would result in 1 million Medicare beneficiaries losing current health benefits, those Medicare Advantage cuts would not go into effect.

Medicare Advantage makes a tremendous difference in the lives of beneficiaries. They have told me over and over again how important it is for them to have lower deductibles, premiums, and copayments.

And what a difference it makes to have dental and vision benefits.

The Medicare Advantage cuts in the health reform law would take away those benefits. For that reason, I strongly oppose these cuts and urge my colleagues to support my motion to commit and do the right thing for Medicare beneficiaries, seniors and disabled individuals, across America.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support my motion to commit. Simply put, this motion protects the 11 million Medicare beneficiaries, both seniors and the disabled, currently participating in the Medicare Advantage program.

If the IHS actuary certifies that the Medicare Advantage cuts included in the health reform law would result in 1 million Medicare Advantage beneficiaries losing current health benefits, those Medicare Advantage cuts would not go into effect.

Medicare Advantage makes a tremendous difference in the lives of beneficiaries. They have told me over and over again how important it is for them to have lower deductibles, premiums, and copayments.

And what a difference it makes to have dental and vision benefits.

The Medicare Advantage cuts in the health reform law would take away those benefits. For that reason, I strongly oppose these cuts and urge my colleagues to support my motion to commit and do the right thing for Medicare beneficiaries, seniors and disabled individuals, across America.
The vast majority of Americans do not want their taxpayer dollars paying for this kind of drug for those kind of people.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I move to table the amendment, and ask for the yeas and nays.

Amendment No. 3638

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will now be 2 minutes of debate prior to a vote in relation to amendment No. 3638, offered by the Senator from Maine, Ms. COLLINS.

The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, just last week we passed the HIRE Act, which included a tax credit offered by Senator SCHUMER and Senator HATCH to encourage companies to hire unemployed workers. It makes no sense for any of us to have voted for that bill and then not to support the amendment that I have offered.

The amendment I am offering would waive the onerous fines that are in this bill for small businesses that hire unemployed workers. If you voted for the HIRE Act giving a tax credit, why in the world would you support a policy of imposing penalties on businesses that hire unemployed workers?

Mr. President, I urge support of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, this amendment basically has the intent of creating a group of second-class employees. It is similar to the issue of subminimum wage. It makes all the sense in the world to distinguish the two, between the HIRE Act and this amendment.

The HIRE Act gave incentives for firms to hire new employees. This amendment creates a group of second-class employees. It says you can hire employees so long as they do not have health insurance. I think that is wrong.

I do not think we should have a second class of employees, which is the effect of the amendment. I urge it be defeated.

I move to table the amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote in relation to the motion to commit offered by the Senator from Texas, Mr. CORNYN.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, mine is a motion to commit the reconciliation bill back to the Finance Committee to report the bill back without the brandnew, whopping 3.8 percent tax on investment income and savings. This is a $123 billion mistake. It will discourage savings and investment and decrease the standard of living for millions of Americans. Simply put, increasing taxes on investment income and savings income is a job killer. It is just one of many job-killing provisions of this bill. $100 billion of new taxes and fees on health care consumers, an employer mandate that will kill jobs.

My motion will also make sure the bill does not break another one of the President’s promises when he pledged that everyone in America will pay lower taxes than they would under the rates Bill Clinton had in the 1990s.

I ask my colleagues for their support. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, this is an honest, straightforward amendment which is concerned about people making more than $200,000. The effect of some amendments prior to this moment have been trying to protect people making less than $200,000. This amendment is the exact opposite; it is only concerned about people making more than $200,000. This amendment would strike the CLASS Act from the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, have Kansas and Kansas State done lately?

This is a very simple amendment. This health care bill is premised on the assumption that these groups should participate in finding the correct health care solution for our health care system. That includes hospitals, pharmaceuticals, and it also includes device manufacturers. This amendment would exclude one section: device manufacturers.

How is it paid for? It is paid for by reducing the number of people who would otherwise get tax credits to help pay for their health insurance. I do not think that is what we want to do. We do not want to reduce the number of people who have health insurance. This amendment would reduce coverage for people who need help buying insurance. So I move to table this amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. ROBERTS. Will the chairman yield?

Mr. BAUCUS. Well, I don’t have much time, but I will do my very best.

Mr. ROBERTS. I am just so sorry that Montana lost in the first round.

Mr. BAUCUS. I would say to my good friend, he isn’t nearly as sorry as I am.

Basically, this is like the last amendment—two flaws. It offsets a certain group from the shared responsibility in helping to finance health care reform. The second flaw is that it reduces coverage by changing the income threshold. This is not a way to do business.

I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote in relation to amendment No. 3651, offered by the Senator from New Hampshire, Mr. GINGRICH.

The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. President, this amendment addresses what is a core problem we have with our health care system, which is the fact that every year we cut our doctors’ pay—those doctors who deliver Medicare services. This year, it will be cut 21 percent. This amendment restores that pay so that those cuts don’t occur for a period of 3 years. This is known as the doctors fix.

It should have been in the bill to begin with. The reason it wasn’t in the bill was because the other side wanted to not put it in the bill because of its cost, because it scores at $280 billion over 10 years. The other side didn’t want to absorb that score because it would have thrown the entire bill out of whack relative to the budget.

We have come up with a way to address this doctor problem that pays for it for 3 years. Let’s do it. Let’s take care of these doctors who are delivering these services so we can continue to deliver services to Medicare recipients.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, the Senator from New Hampshire and I kid each other about this. The fact is, this is another killer amendment, and it is apparent it is designed to kill this bill. Why do I say that? Because on October 21 of last year, the sponsor of this amendment, and every other Senator on the other side of the aisle, voted against invoking cloture on a bill to accomplish the very same thing they profess to desire at this point.

Also, we have been advised by the Congressional Budget Office that it is not paid for. According to CBO—they recently sent us a note—the Gregg amendment would increase the deficit by $65 billion over the next 5 years.
We will solve the SGR problem at the appropriate time. This body will then decide at that time the degree to which we want to pay for the SGR. This is not the time or the place. This is a killer amendment.

According to CBO, it increases the deficit by $55 billion over the next 5 years; therefore, I raise a point of order that the Gregg amendment violates section 310(d)(2) of the Congressional Budget Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry: This amendment pays for the doctors fix for 3 years, does it not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is unaware.

Mr. GREGG. I withdraw the inquiry. Pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and section 4(g)(3) of the Statutory Pay-As-You-Go Act of 2010, I move to waive all applicable sections of those acts and applicable budget resolutions for purposes of my amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

NOT VOTING—2

Isakson

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 42; the nays are 56. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The point of order is sustained, and the amendment falls.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

AMENDMENT NO. 3652

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will now be 2 minutes, equally divided, prior to a vote in relation to the amendment No. 3652, offered by the Senator from North Carolina, Mr. BURR.

Who yields time?

Mr. BURR. Mr. President, my amendment is quite simple. In the rush to finish this bill, there were some errors. One of the errors was clarifying the status of some veterans programs, specifically the TRICARE program, the VA spina bifida program—that is the children of Agent Orange exposure from Vietnam—and the last one is the CHAMPVA program.

What this amendment simply does is set the minimum essential coverage as met on these programs, so the veterans' families, the children of veterans, are not at risk of determining that their insurance does not meet the minimum essential coverage, therefore, exposing them to fines. Some might suggest it does not need to be fixed. The House went back very quickly and fixed TRICARE but not CHAMPVA or spina bifida. It is my belief we should act on that the appropriate mechanism, which is this fix-it bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WEBB. Mr. President, I would suggest to my colleague from North Carolina and my colleagues on the other side of the aisle that if we want to fix this problem, we can fix it right now and we should fix it right now.

We should not allow things to be tied up in the separate melodrama of the moment. I introduced a bill on Monday which passed the House unanimously on Saturday to fix the TRICARE part of this. The chairman of the Veteran's Committee introduced a bill today to fix the spina bifida problem.

I ask unanimous consent that the Finance Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 3146, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code to provide for the treatment of Department of Defense health care as minimal essential coverage, sponsored by myself; further, that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration en bloc, along with the bill introduced today by Senator AKAKA, S. 3162, a bill to clarify the health care provided by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs that constitutes minimum essential coverage; that all Democratic Senators be added as cosponsors to this measure; that the bills be read a third time and passed en bloc, and the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table en bloc, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. We got this 1½ minutes ago to see the language. You have an amendment on the floor that actually accomplishes everything you want to do. Why are we doing this? Because you do not want to mess up a package that is clean. It has every application, the Burr amendment, to this.

With that, and the fact that this is exactly the kind of shenanigans the American people do not want, I object.

Mr. WEBB. Let the American people understand, the Republicans objected to a matter that could have been fixed by law tomorrow.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote in relation to amendment No. 3553 offered by the Senator from Louisiana, Mr. VITTER.

The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, this amendment is very straightforward. It would repeal the ObamaCare bill. That bill is fatally flawed in terms of its core, and we do need to repeal and replace it with a very different, more targeted, focused, step-by-step approach. What is that core? It is more than $3 trillion in Medicare cuts on our seniors, which is wrong; over $3 trillion of tax increases, including on middle-class families, which is wrong; increasing health care costs rather than doing the opposite, decreasing them. That is what the CBO says, nonpartisan. That result will in increased individual health care premiums, 10 to 13 percent, will result in increased individual access hospitals throughout our rural areas—perhaps a drafting error; I do not know—but I can think of no other critical access hospitals were let out of this exemption—perhaps a drafting error; I do not know why critical access hospitals should be treated the same way as other hospitals. And when we get to that point, I say to my good friend from Kansas, I will work with him, and I know he will work with me, so we can exempt critical access hospitals from this commission.

However, the Parliamentarian tells us it is not permissible to amend programs subject to fast-track rules such as this commission in a reconciliation bill. Critical access hospitals are not in it. It is a technical error, oversight—there are all kinds of reasons why it should be in, but they are not, and I cannot, at this point, agree with my friend to take them out now. I will at a later date, but we cannot now.

Mr. ROBERTS. Surely, you are not going to raise a point of order?

Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. President, surely I have to do the right thing. The right thing is to raise a point of order. I raise a point of order that the Roberts amendment violates sections 313(b)(1)(D) of the Congressional Budget Act.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I take it the chairman has raised the point of order, so we are at regular order. Mr. BAUCUS. We are, and the Senator can make his motion.

Mr. ROBERTS. I thank the Senator. Mr. President, pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and section 4(g)(3) of the statutory Pay-As-You-Go Act of 2010, I move to waive all applicable sections of those acts and applicable budget resolutions for purposes of my amendment in saving rural hospitals, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

Doctors and hospitals—especially doctors—want to practice evidence-based medicine, even more than they do now. They want the evidence. They want the information. They want to know which procedures and medicine, et cetera, work better than others. These commissions will help them get that information. Then, they make the decisions alone, independently, with their patients. Then, they make the decisions without having evidence so they can make more evidence-based decisions.

Second, I am not going to sugarcoat it. This independent advisory board is very important to help improve quality of care and to control costs. It does have some teeth in it. But I say to my colleagues, if we really want to do something about health care costs in this country, this is a start. CBO says this does score positively. I, therefore, move to table the motion, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

ROBERTS MOTION TO COMMIT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is now 2 minutes equally divided before the vote with respect to the Roberts motion to commit.

The junior Senator from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. Thank you, Mr. President.

This motion commits the bill back to the Finance Committee with instructions to repeal “the four rationers” of health care reform. These four horsemen of the rationing apocalypse are the Patient Center Outcomes Research Institute, already conducting research that will be used to deny coverage and ration care; the CMS Innovation Center, which will grant new powers to CMS—that should be a pleasant thought by any beleaguered hospital administrator—the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force, which is given new powers—that is the outfit that said women should not have mammograms until age 50—wonderful—and the Independent Payment Advisory Board, vested with extraordinary power to set Medicare payment rates and make policy decisions.

These rationers comprise the infrastructure of the “Brave New World” of big government intrusion into health care decisions of all Americans, and they must be repealed.

Start over. Put patient care first. Get them back in the corral. Support the amendment.

The amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate’s time has expired.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, saying it doesn’t make it so. It is not at all as it has been described.

We very much in this country have to work to control health care costs.
continue to discuss it. I will be happy to continue those discussions with the majority leader. In the meantime, it strikes me we can either continue voting tonight or we could set a reasonable time in the morning after everybody has had a chance to get some sleep, come back at 9:30 in the morning and discussing and see if we can’t wrap up both this measure and the next one in the not too distant future.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, my focus is on this legislation, and I know there are other things we have to deal with before we leave, but I am not concerned about those at this stage. I want to finish this legislation, and I want to do that as quickly as we can. So I would ask that we just proceed. I hope there aren’t that many more amendments, but we are here for the duration.

I would note—and I am certainly in no way trying to denigrate those amendments that have been offered, but we have to understand that not a single one has been adopted. I don’t know what we are trying to accomplish. We have listened intently. Most of the questions from our side have been from the chairman of the Finance Committee because most of these issues deal with the jurisdiction he has. But it is very clear there is no attempt to improve the bill. There is an attempt to destroy this bill.

We already have a law in place. It is the bill that we passed on Christmas Eve 2009. That is the law of this land. This is a matter to improve that, and I have to suggest that we are going to continue down this road. I am not sure it is a good picture for the American people, to have all these amendments and not a single one of them having enough votes to pass, but that judgment is not mine. We are here to try to move this along.

The House of Representatives is waiting for us to act, as we speak. I think they have proven they are willing to work hard, as indicated this past weekend and over the last several weeks. So let’s continue forward in the same spirit it we have gotten this far. But I would hope that my friends understand I think it would be to the benefit of most everyone if we could get out of here at a decent hour today. If it is not, if we are going to keep going, that is the way it is. I am an old marathoner, and getting older every day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I would just add that there are some obvious disadvantages to the minority to be in a reconciliation contest, but one of the advantages is that we have had more amendment votes today than we had in the entire month of December on the previous health care bill. So the majority side, we could improve this bill significantly. But rather than subject all of our Members to listening to the majority leader and myself go back and forth, I would simply suggest it might be a better use of his and my time for us to continue the constructive discussions we have been having off the floor, continue to offer the amendments, and see if we can reach an accommodation that satisfies both sides. Maybe the best way to do that would be for Senator Reid and Majority Leader Harry Reid to meet and discuss the bill while we will keep voting, if that is what the majority would like.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The junior Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 3861

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I would like to call up Bunning amendment No. 3861.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky (Mr. BUNNING) proposes an amendment numbered 3861.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To allow individuals to elect to opt out of the Medicare part A benefits)

At the end of subtitle B of title I, add the following:

SEC. 1. ALLOWING INDIVIDUALS TO ELECT TO OPT OUT OF THE MEDICARE PART A BENEFIT.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in the case of an individual who elects to opt out of benefits under part A of title XVIII of the Social Security Act, such individual shall not be required to——

(1) opt out of benefits under title II of such Act as a condition for making such election; and

(2) repay any amount paid under such part A for items and services furnished prior to making such election.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 1 minute.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I rise to offer a very important amendment to many of our seniors. My amendment would allow individuals to voluntarily opt out of Medicare Part A benefits. Right now, if you don’t want to have Medicare Part A, you have to forego Social Security checks and you also have to repay any Medicare benefits that have been paid on your behalf. I don’t think that is fair.

If a senior doesn’t want Part A, they shouldn’t be forced to take it. My amendment says that anyone who opts out of Part A will not have to give up their Social Security benefits and would not have to repay Medicare payments that have already been made on their behalf. This amendment does not allow anyone to opt out of paying their Medicare taxes. Instead, it just allows them to take their Medicare benefits without being penalized. I think this is a fairness issue, and I hope Members can support it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time has expired. The senior Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, since 1965, Medicare has provided security and health to millions of seniors. Along with Social Security, it is one of the two most successful and best social programs this country has adopted. Now, after 45 years of success, what does this amendment seek to do? It seeks to undermine the foundation of our social insurance program.

It is a two-tiered system. The wealthy can take care of themselves. Then, when they leave Medicare, it leaves a second-class seniors health care system remaining in Medicare. It is unthinkable, frankly, that we would have a two-tiered system for our seniors under Medicare. I therefore move to table the Bunning amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas 36, the nays are 59. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected. The point of order is sustained, and the amendment falls.

The senior Senator from New Hampshire is recognized.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, just so people know on our side the order we are going to vote on is that the next amendment will be by the Senator from Idaho, followed by the Senator from Texas, followed by the Senator from Louisiana, then the Senator from South Carolina, and then the Senator from Oklahoma. That is the next group of five amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The junior Senator from Idaho is recognized.

Mr. RISCH. Oh, thank you so much, Mr. President.

AMENDMENT NO. 3645

I call up amendment No. 3645 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. Risch], for himself, and Mr. CHAO, proposes an amendment numbered 3645.

Mr. RISCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To repeal the limitation on itemized medical deductions)

At the end of subtitle E of title I, insert the following:

SECTION 1—REPEAL OF LIMITATION ON ITEMIZED DEDUCTIONS FOR MEDICAL EXPENSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 9033 of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act hereby repealed effective as of the date of the enactment of such Act and any provisions of law amended by such section are amended to read as such provisions would read if such section had never been enacted.

(b) EXPANSION OF AFFORDABILITY EXCEPTION TO INDIVIDUAL MANDATE.—Section 5000A(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by section 1501(b) of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and amended by section 10106 of such Act, is amended by striking “8 percent” and inserting “5 percent”.

(c) APPLICATION OF PROVISION.—The amendment made by subsection (b) shall apply as if included in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. RISCH. Thank you, Mr. President.

Fellow Senators, I cannot imagine anyone wanting to vote against this amendment. Let me tell you what we have here. It is very simple. Apparently, you made an error when you drafted the original bill because what you did was you levied a tax on people who make less than $200,000 a year. Very simply, what this amendment does is it corrects that.

Right now, under the bill the President signed on Monday, it raised the threshold to 10 percent from 7.5 percent at which you can deduct medical expenses. That tax falls on the most vulnerable people in America—mostly the elderly, mostly very low income. And it raises taxes on 14.7 million people who make less than $200,000 a year. The President of the United States said—he told us, he committed—he would not raise taxes on people who make less than $200,000 a year. I am sure he was just confirmed when he signed the bill on Monday.

Let’s adopt this amendment and get the bill corrected.

Thank you, Mr. President. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, the goal of health care reform is to increase coverage so more people have health insurance. That is the goal of health care reform. What does this amendment do? It goes in the opposite direction. Compared with the bill that was just signed by the President, this amendment will cause many more people to lose health insurance. Why? Because it lowers the income threshold from 8 percent down to 5 percent. That is going to mean fewer Americans get tax credits to pay for health insurance. That means fewer Americans are going to have health insurance compared with current law. That is the main reason we should vote against this amendment, because it expands the number of people who are uninsured rather than expand the number of people who would be insured.

The provision the Senator talks about, frankly, was changed under current law because with health insurance people have less need for that deduction and less need for catastrophic coverage because health insurance will not pay for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I move to table the Risch amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I would remind my colleagues that the Hutchison amendment uses as its offset rolling back the Recovery Act; that is, rolling back stimulus funds. That is taking stimulus funds to permanently pay for the marriage penalty relief as well as sales tax relief.

With unemployment as high as it is, hovering around 10 percent, it makes no sense to cut back stimulus dollars. Stimulus dollars are a proven job creator. All mainstream economists and the.cbo tell us that.

I think we should continue to create jobs by using the stimulus dollars. I, therefore, urge my colleagues to not support the Hutchison amendment.

In addition to that, there are funds not within the jurisdiction of reconciled committees. For that reason, I raise a point of order that the Hutchison amendment violates section 313(B)(1)(C) of the Congressional Budget Act.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, a short time ago the distinguished majority leader urged there to be amendments to improve the bill, not to do any harm to the broader ObamaCare bill. This is exactly such an amendment.

This amendment would pass my Mobile Mammography Act, S. 251. This amendment would allow mobile mammography units to purchase fuel without the Federal excise tax. This is exactly similar to an existing exemption for blood centers. These units are very important to access to women for breast cancer screening. And this only costs $1 million, so there is no significant budget impact. This does improve the bill. This does nothing to the underlying ObamaCare bill.

This reconciliation bill is already going back to the House, so I urge a bipartisan vote in support of this good idea.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record two letters relating to my amendment. There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

LSU Health Sciences Center,

Re Mobile Mammography Promotion Act.

Hon. David Vitter: I am writing in support of the Mobile Mammography Act which will eliminate the Federal Excise tax on fuel for mobile mammography vehicles. At the LSU Health Sciences Center in Shreveport, Feist-Weiller Cancer Center, this year we have put our mobile mammography vehicle into service. We perform free mammograms for the uninsured and underserved in North Louisiana. As you know this is an expensive operation and fuel costs can be significant. Any savings in fuel cost will allow us to reach more patients in our service area.

Mobile Mammography is especially important in Louisiana, which according to 2005 SEER statistics has the highest breast cancer mortality rates in the states. The rural areas in Louisiana are particularly underserved as 40% of the parishes in North Louisiana have no mammography facilities; and those parishes with mammography are often unaffordable to our lower income patients.

On behalf of the women in Louisiana, I applaud your efforts and support for a vital resource: mobile mammography.

Sincerely,

Jerey W. McLarty, Ph.D.,
Professor of Medicine, Director,
Cancer Prevention & Control.

Mobile Health Clinics Network,
October 29, 2009.

Hon. David Vitter,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

Dear Senator Vitter: We are writing to support for your proposed amendment to the IRS Code of 1986 to allow refunds of Federal motor fuel excise taxes on fuels used in Mobile Mammography vehicles.

Most of the nation’s 200 Mobile Mammography programs throughout the U.S. are non-profits or organizations; many provide screenings for medically underserved women. In the past, these programs have been suffering due to the economic downturn, resulting in a decrease in donor dollars. Because of the downturn, there are also more and more Americans that need to access the services we provide, and it is very difficult to predict when the benevolence of Americans who can afford to give will be restored to previous levels. Thus, every cost savings that we can realize makes a difference in our ability to continue the vital health services that we offer. The change that you propose to the tax code may be the difference between continued operations and closing services for some programs, and with Mobile Mammography, our continued existence and opportunity to further improve the impact lives, and in some cases, saving lives of Americans across the nation. We encourage passage of your amendment, cited as the “Mobile Mammography Promotion Act of 2009”.

It is our sincere hope that the impact from this change will be great enough to encourage you and your colleagues in the Senate and the House to consider expanding the application of the amendment to include all Mobile Health Clinics across the nation. There are approximately 2,000 Mobile Health programs operating in the U.S., serving millions of women, men, and children--many of whom have no other access to affordable preventive and primary care, mammography screenings, and oral healthcare. It is widely recognized that Mobile Health programs yield improved health outcomes for the underserved and save the healthcare system billions of dollars.

Mobile Health Clinics Network (MHCN) is a nationwide, membership-based association of Mobile Health programs primarily operated by non-profit entities such as community health clinics, hospitals, and university schools of medicine, nursing and dentistry. MHCN completed its Fifth Annual Mobile Health Clinics Forum this past April, and we are pleased to send you a separate mail copy of the official Program Binder. It will certainly offer you a view toward the breadth and scope of Mobile Health care programs that now operate in the U.S. and internationally.

On behalf of Mobile Mammography and Mobile Health Clinics Network, we appreciate your efforts toward introducing the IRS amendment and for your continued attention to making positive impacts that will support continued operation of these unique healthcare delivery systems. Early detection is the most effective method to preventing and treating disease, and for Americans who may not have access to healthcare services for these critical interventions, this tax change could ensure more years of access to a healthcare system that provides potentially life-saving services.

Sincerely,

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it goes without saying we all appreciate everyone’s cooperation having the Senate work so well, yesterday and today. Therefore, after having had long discussions with my friend, the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, I ask unanimous consent that we are going to adjourn in a few minutes; that we will convene at 9:45 a.m. this morning, and the third reading will proceed to a period of morningbusiness, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO ROSE GORDON

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise today to honor Ms. Rose Gordon of Reno, NV. Ms. Gordon is a dedicated social worker and public servant who has devoted much of her life to serving the people of Nevada, especially those who are traditionally underrepresented. Her commitment toassisting Nevadans is shown both by her work as a Washoe County social worker and by her involvement in numerous community organizations.

As a social worker, Ms. Gordon has been known for her endless motivation and the encouragement she gives to members of her community. For 15 years Ms. Gordon has partnered with local school districts to identify potential high school drop-outs and has worked with them and their families to encourage the student to complete high school and receive their diploma.

For her efforts to assist children and families, Rose has been honored by the mayor of Reno.

Ms. Gordon has also worked diligently in the pursuit of civil rights for all individuals. Rose has previously held the positions of president of her local NAACP chapter and vice president of the NAACP Tri-State Conference of Idaho, Nevada, and Utah, and continues to serve as an adviser to the NAACP youth council.

She is a member of the People of Color Caucus which focuses on the unequal distribution of wealth and knowledge to underserved populations. Through her participation and leadership in these organizations, Rose has been able to assist many members of her community and help ensure equal opportunities for Nevadans.

Ms. Gordon’s selfless dedication to assisting individuals who are often forgotten shows that she is truly great. She is a leader in the Reno community and an example of how one person with a sense of duty can positively affect many around them.

I am honored today to recognize Ms. Rose Gordon and thank her for her commitment and for the work she has done to serve the people of Reno, NV.

PATIENT PROTECTION AND AFFORDABLE CARE ACT

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am pleased that the President signed into law today the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. This bill included a provision that would extend Medicare wage index reclassifications for hospitals across more than half of the United States, including several in my home State.

The Medicare Modernization Act of 2003 included section 508 which reclassified many hospitals’ Medicare wage index to appropriately reflect the wage index of their area. This provision ensures that hospitals that compete fairly in that area’s labor market.

Since the MMA was enacted, section 508 has been extended numerous times. Many hospitals, including some in Michigan, were left out of these subsequent extensions. Consequently, those hospitals, originally included in section 508, required technical corrections so they could continue to be reclassified along with the other original hospitals included in section 508. This is something that has been a problem for many years and is nothing new. These technical fixes just ensure that the original intent of section 508 is maintained.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, earlier this week, we saw what I have called the dawn of a new day of hope for tens of millions of Americans who have fallen through the cracks—or who worry with good reason that they may fall through the cracks of our broken health insurance system. The signing into law of comprehensive health insurance reform by President Barack Obama ranks with the creation of Social Security and Medicare as a defining moment and legislative achievement.

Congress and Presidents from both parties tried to reform the health insurance system for decades. Through an arduous process over the last year, America rose to meet one of its foremost challenges. This effort prevailed through the grueling gauntlet of obstructionism erected by defenders of
