

Mr. Faulk's distinguished public service career is highlighted through his work as a Senior Administrative Aide to one of our Nation's most influential and respected Members of Congress, Senator Sam Nunn of Georgia. Following Mr. Faulk's retirement from Senator Nunn's office, Mr. Faulk dedicated himself to full-time community service in his adopted hometown of Richland, Georgia. In 1998, he was elected as the city's first African American mayor, successfully serving two terms.

With an unyielding humanitarian spirit, he served on many city and state boards, councils, and committees. His many memberships and appointments included lifetime membership in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP); a member of the Stewart-Webster Rural Health Board of Directors; the Columbus, Fort Benning, and Phenix, Georgia Civilian Military Council; the A. J. McChung YMCA Board of Directors; the Muscogee County Rotary Club; the Georgia Municipal Association, and a proud lifetime member of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity.

Mr. Faulk was an active volunteer for many organizations and projects, including serving as volunteer sponsor of the Richland Annual Pig Fest, the Stewart County Historical Society, and Habitat for Humanity. In 1993, he was honored as one of the Fifty Most Influential African Americans in the Columbus, Phenix, and Fort Benning Area. In 1996, he was honored when the city of his birth, Cairo, proclaimed December 1 as "Olan Faulk Day."

A true Christian, Mr. Faulk was a faithful member of Bethel African Methodist Episcopal, AME, Church of Richland, where he served as a church steward and trustee. He later joined the Resurrection of Our Lord Catholic Church in Savannah, where he remained an active member.

Mr. Faulk is survived by his loving family: his wife, Risco Faulk; his son, Wendell Faulk of Buena Vista, Georgia; four daughters, Vickie Faulk Clemons of McDonough, Georgia; Angela Mobley Chavis, Marilyn Mobley Geiger, and Carolyn Mobley Pierce, all of Savannah; his brother, Outley Faulk of Milledgeville, Georgia; 15 grandchildren; 10 great-grandchildren; and a host of nephews, nieces, cousins, and many friends.

Mr. Speaker, Olan Faulk was a great public servant, model citizen, and a trusted friend to my wife, Vivian, and me. His years of selfless service to his community, the State of Georgia, and America are his lasting legacy.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. BRAD SHERMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 25, 2011

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is my practice to vote present on a legislative proposal when I agree with the purposes and sentiment behind the proposal, but I believe that the particular legislative proposal is not drafted in a way which will achieve its objective or in a way that is effective and practicable, or where I believe that the language will have unintended consequences. I voted present on the motion to recommit which came before the House today. I strongly believe that we should take all reasonable steps to encourage companies to provide employment in the U.S. and to discourage offshoring and outsourcing.

HONORING COLONEL DENISE K. LEW

HON. KATHY CASTOR

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 25, 2011

Ms. CASTOR of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise to herald the achievements of Colonel Denise K. Lew and to acknowledge our pride in her valuable contributions to the United States Air Force Medical Service.

Colonel Lew was born and raised in the San Francisco Bay Area. She entered active duty in 1984 through a direct commission into the Air Force Medical Service Corps (MSC). She is a board certified Health Care Executive, and a Fellow of the American College of Healthcare Executives. She has also earned designations as a Health Insurance Associate and Managed Healthcare Professional from The Center for Insurance Education and Professional Development, which is an educational program offered by America's Health Insurance Plans (AHIP).

Colonel Lew has received numerous awards and honors throughout her career. Among them are the: Defense Superior Service Medal, Meritorious Service Medal with four oak leaf clusters, Air Force Commendation Medal, and Air Force Outstanding Unit Award with three oak leaf clusters. In 1996, she received the American College of Healthcare Executives Early Career Regent's Award. Also, in 2002, she earned the Air Force Materiel Command Commitment to Service Award.

Colonel Lew will be completing an outstanding 26-year career in the United States Air Force in January 2011. She has served with dedication and honor as a Medical Service Corps officer. Furthermore, as the Director of the Medical Service Corps, she has greatly impacted the careers of hundreds of health care executives in the Corps and will influence several generations beyond the tenure of her career. Her efforts have enhanced the medical capability needed to ensure success in overseas contingency operations. It is for this reason that we would like to honor and recognize the remarkable career of Colonel Lew.

The Tampa community and MacDill Air Force Base are proud to recognize Colonel Lew for her outstanding career and her many significant contributions to the Air Force and our country. Her determination and hard work have made her an inspirational leader within our Air Force.

HONORING MR. SETH WILLIAMS, PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT ATTORNEY AND RESPECTED COMMUNITY LEADER

HON. ROBERT E. ANDREWS

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 25, 2011

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor District Attorney Seth Williams for his service and dedication to the City of Philadelphia and the surrounding community.

Raised in West Philadelphia by his loving parents Imelda and Rufus Williams, Mr. Williams graduated from Central High School in 1985. He later attended Pennsylvania State University, where he served as President of the Black Caucus and President of the Undergraduate Student Government. He continued on to graduate studies at Georgetown University where he earned his law degree.

After law school, he served ten years as the assistant district attorney of Philadelphia and as the Inspector General for the city until 2008.

Mr. Williams' dedication and drive proved vital on his path to the District Attorney's office. His perseverance pushed him through last year's Democratic primary and the general election last November. Mr. Williams' election made him the first black District Attorney in Philadelphia history.

District Attorney Williams currently lives in Philadelphia with his wife, Sonita, his mother Imelda, and his two daughters, Taylor and Hope. I am pleased that Mr. Williams will soon be honored as a community leader by the Rutgers School of Law-Camden at the Champions of Social Justice and Equality Banquet.

Mr. Speaker, Seth Williams has an impressive record and I wish him continued successes in his future endeavors.

HONORING ROGER MILLIKEN

HON. MICHAEL H. MICHAUD

OF MAINE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 25, 2011

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Roger Milliken, a dear friend and true champion of American workers and manufacturing. Roger passed away on December 30 after a long life of hard work and passionate advocacy. His passing signals the end of an era when corporate leaders valued more than profits and when American companies did not jump at the first chance to ship jobs overseas just to save a buck.

Milliken was larger than life in many ways. He had many passions and lived vibrantly. We are fortunate for this, because it means his legacy will still be here to inspire us to do more and work harder. It will also remind us to never give up on U.S. manufacturing and the idea that you can make things in America.

In fact, it was Roger's commitment to American manufacturing that sparked our friendship. About six years ago, Roger came to my office on Capitol Hill without any previous introduction. He walked into my office nearly unannounced at the respectable age of 90 to shake hands and talk about our common concerns with U.S. trade policy's impact on our manufacturing sector. He introduced himself and forged a friendship with me, a new and far-from-senior Member of Congress, simply because he wanted to thank me for my attention to manufacturing and trade and to encourage me to continue the fight to make U.S. policy on both issues better.

One funny anecdote in particular speaks to Roger's honest, friendly character. I couldn't be at an event one morning, so one of my staff went in my place. Roger was at the event, and listened to my staffer's speech, which she had to give sitting down because she didn't feel well. After her remarks, Roger
