

prestigious Criminal Appeals Unit in the Southern District of New York. She is one of those highly intelligent, analytical individuals who was probably born to be a lawyer, and once a lawyer, was almost destined to be a judge.

She has served as a prosecutor for 12 years. Her colleagues report to a person that her advice on legal arguments and matters of judgment is the most sought after in the whole office. This is the Southern District of New York. It is an amazing office.

She also came to her dedication to public service through a hard-working family. This is evident through her siblings as well, a school teacher's aide and a submarine commander.

I ask that my colleagues vote for both of them shortly.

HALLIGAN NOMINATION

I also wish to say a few words this evening about the President's longest standing nominee to any office, Caitlin Joan Halligan. The DC Circuit is currently one-third vacant; 4 of the 11 slots are without active judges. What some people call the second most important court in the country is firing only on two-thirds of its cylinders. Halligan is one of the President's nominees for two of these four slots. Her nomination has been pending for 23 months.

Since her name has been sent to the Senate, she has not had an up-or-down vote. She has never had an up-or-down vote despite the fact that her academic and professional credentials are superb: Princeton University, GW Law School, prestigious clerkships on the DC Circuit, including Patricia Wald, the first female member of the court, and then to Justice Steven Breyer.

She has never had an up-or-down vote despite the fact that she has spent most of her career in public service as a prosecutor, first with the Office of the New York Attorney General, now as assistant district attorney who serves as the general counsel for the Manhattan DA's office.

She has never had an up-or-down vote despite the fact that she would be only the sixth woman to serve on the court since its inception in 1801. Two years ago, when her nomination was filibustered, many of my colleagues cited the DC Circuit's relatively low caseload for the reason the Senate did not need to confirm another judge. But now, 2 years later, there are only seven judges hearing cases on the court. The caseload for judges has risen 21 percent since President Bush made his last nomination to the court in 2006.

My colleagues know how difficult and time-consuming these cases are. I have great respect for my friend and colleague and the person I exercise with in the gym every morning, JEFF SESSIONS. But to say this is an extraordinary circumstance based on the smidgen of evidence he has mentioned—please, please, please.

Let's hope there is not a concerted effort by the other side to keep this important DC circuit empty—unfilled. It is unfair and it is not right to this fine women and to the need to proceed with justice in these United States of America.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

THE SEQUESTER

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, one of the virtues of traveling back home is to hear what the people are saying about us. And it isn't good. The people are on anxiety overload. The purpose of my remarks is not to increase anyone's anxiety but just to tell it the way it is.

How did we get to a place where we are having mindless, across-the-board cuts in spending with absolutely no thought? It came about because the Republicans refused to increase the debt ceiling. We were about to default on our obligations, after raising the debt ceiling many times—18 times under Ronald Reagan. And Ronald Reagan warned us in those times never to play games with the debt ceiling. Well, the Republicans did. They played games with the debt ceiling, and they did it because, if you follow what the Republican leader said, his highest priority was defeating President Obama. I am sure they thought that kind of chaos would lead the way. It didn't happen, clearly. Our President was reelected, and he was reelected with the big vote.

We got into this situation with the sequester because there were games
