The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Patrick J. Conroy, offered the following prayer:

God of the universe, we give You thanks for giving us another day.

We ask Your blessing upon our Nation. Bless the work of the Members of the people's House. May they toil diligently to bring about solutions to the pressing issues of these times.

Bless all men and women across our country, especially those who work in service to others: police, firefighters, health care providers, teachers, those who work in local, State and national government, and those men and women serving in our Armed Forces.

And bless those who give the ultimate sacrifice of their lives in service, from Santa Cruz, California, to Bangor, Maine, and comfort those who mourn their loss. May we all be inspired by the heroes who serve their neighbors.

May all that is done this day be for Your greater honor and glory.

Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Texas (Mr. OLSON) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance?

Mr. OLSON led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain up to five requests for 1-minute speeches on each side of the aisle.

BEETRER TO DIE AS FREE MEN—THE ALAMO DEFENDERS

(Mr. POE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. POE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, in a beat up old Spanish mission 177 years ago today, the sun rose in the mist for the last time on a small band of soldiers.

The fiery group of 187 Texas volunteers stood defiant against Dictator Santa Anna and his invading Mexican Army of several thousand on this, the 13-day siege of the Alamo.

They came from many States and many foreign countries. There were 11 Tejanos—Texans of Spanish descent. Their names were Jim Bowie, Jim Bonham, David Crockett, and William Barret Travis. They were all killed on March 6, 1836, fighting for liberty over tyranny.

Col. Travis was correct when he said that "victory would be more costly for Santa Anna than defeat." Mexican losses were so huge that General Sam Houston had time to rally a Texas army and defeat the dictator, Santa Anna, on the plains of San Jacinto, on April 21, 1836.

Texas became a free and independent nation, a republic.

The guns and bugles are silent at the Alamo, but all freedom-loving people should thank the Good Lord that in history there are those who are willing to face overwhelming odds and die for freedom rather than to live under oppression and tyranny.

And that's just the way it is.

SEQUESTRATION

(Mr. HOYER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I am extremely disappointed that the sequester has taken effect because Republicans refused to work with Democrats on a balanced plan to prevent it.

The automatic, arbitrary, and irrational cuts it has imposed could have, and I think will have, serious, negative effects. It could erode our military readiness and weaken our national security, and it could reverse the gains we've made in our economic recovery and see reductions in critical programs that help the poor and most vulnerable in our society.

Sequestration is not a solution. Only a balanced approach can achieve the savings we need to get our fiscal house in order and end the uncertainty that is keeping our businesses from creating the jobs we need.

It is not too late to act. This Republican-controlled Congress may not have been able to avert the sequester, but it can limit its impact if both sides work together. And I still believe that if Republicans are willing to compromise, we can achieve the big, balanced solution to deficits the American people expect from us.

Today's vote is on whether you think sequester is rational. The next vote will be on keeping government open.

THE FALL OF THE ALAMO AND COLONEL TRAVIS' LAST PLEA FOR HELP

(Mr. OLSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OLSON. Mr. Speaker, 177 years ago on this day, the Alamo fell. Every Texan fighting for liberty was killed.
I would like to read parts of the letter sent by the Alamo’s commander pleading for help:

To the people of Texas and all Americans in the world, I am besieged by 1,000 or more of the Mexicans under Santa Anna. I have sustained a continual bombardment and cannonade for 24 hours and have not lost a man.
The enemy has demanded a surrender at discretion, otherwise the garrison are to be put to the sword if the fort is taken. I have answered that demand with a cannon shot.
I am determined to sustain myself as long as possible and die like a soldier who never forgets what is due to his own honor and that of his country; victory or death.
William Barret Travis, Lieutenant Colonel Commandant.

Remember the Alamo, and God bless the republic of Texas.

DUMB AND CRUEL CUTS
(Ms. NORTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, snow is keeping Federal workers at home today, and Congress will keep up to a million at home with the sequester cuts in today’s CR.

No emergency like snow or even the deficit will be responsible. The responsibility lies with the House majority, which has abdicated its responsibility to govern. The CR on the floor today embeds cuts that might be tolerated if spread intelligently and selectively over time.

But even if the deficit demanded cutting, for example, the Women, Infants, and Children program, there could be no justification for doing it in only 6 months, guaranteeing that over 600,000 low-income women and our most vulnerable children will lose basic nutrition assistance. Dumb cuts are bad; cruel cuts are much worse.

CONDEMNING ATTACKS ON MEK MEMBERS AT CAMP LIBERTY
(Mr. COTTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COTTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of Chairman Poe’s resolution condemning the February 9 rocket and mortar attacks at Camp Liberty in Iraq and urging the President to work with the Iraqi Government and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to relocate the members of the Mujahedin-e Khalq back to Camp Ashraf.

These MEK refugees can only be safe and secure at Ashraf where they have lived for over 25 years. The Iraqi Government and the High Commissioner placed these MEK members at Camp Liberty despite the great danger to them there. Now the United Nations should take the necessary steps to return them to Ashraf or settle them abroad.

I look forward to the day when these refugees can return home to Iran once the tyrannical regime there has fallen, a day that might have been hastened if President Obama had stood with brave Iranian protesters in 2009 instead of coddling the theocratic mullahs there. Let us not make that mistake again.

AUTISM AND SEQUESTRATION
(Ms. FRANKEL of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. FRANKEL. Mr. Speaker, the 2013 budget sequester will slash millions of dollars for medical research, I was honored to join Bob and Suzanne Wright and thousands of others as we walked in downtown West Palm Beach to promote autism awareness, advocacy, and research.

One in 88 American children is affected by autism, which is America’s fastest growing, serious developmental disability, and the Wrights will be the first to tell you that, even with the progress of their organization Autism Speaks and other fine organizations, it will take the investment of the United States of America in science to unlock the mystery of a disorder that cheats our children and stresses their families financially and emotionally.

Mr. Speaker, the sequester will hurt our most vulnerable loved ones and will risk our economy’s right when it is recovering. Let’s come together now and stop the sequester and reduce our deficit in a balanced way. Instead of tax breaks for oil companies, let’s give an autistic child a chance to be the best that he or she can be.

SEQUESTRATION
(Mr. TIPTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TIPTON. Mr. Speaker, the record is clear: the House of Representatives has acted responsibly. We’ve passed two pieces of legislation to be able to deal with sequestration and to be able to meet the challenge.

Right now, an American family making $50,000 a year is taking about $1,000 less home because of the expiration of the payroll tax deduction. That’s a mortgage payment, books for school, a couple of months’ worth of groceries. In fact, they’re now under the highest tax burden since the year 2008. Families are making sacrifices while government continues to increase spending. Many Federal agencies and programs will actually receive more in their budgets this year, and the government will collect more tax revenue than ever before—$2.7 trillion.

One of the major problems with the President’s sequester is not that it initiates needed reductions in Federal spending but that its unwieldy nature casts a broad shadow of uncertainty with regards to how those cuts will be implemented. We need responsibility. This House has acted. We call on the Senate and the administration to join us.

SEQUESTRATION
(Mr. VEASEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. VEASEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today about the recent sequestration cuts to important Federal programs, cuts that are harmful to our national security, education system, transportation and infrastructure, and economy.

Congressional Democrats have worked for months in this very Chamber in order to avoid the harmful cuts, but the House majority has so politicized the budget process that it has prevented any resolution or compromise. The Republican majority has three times blocked the consideration of a Democratic bill to end sequestration, has refused to bring any bill of its own to the House floor to end the sequestration and, instead, with partisan attacks, has tried to blame President Obama.

The sequester has already taken effect with an immediate $85 billion across-the-board spending cut, and while the worst of these impacts is yet to come, Americans will see more teachers laid off, indiscriminate cuts to special education, a loss of 4 million meals for seniors, and debilitating health care cuts for our military families.

In my home State of Texas, the sequester puts close to 1,000 teaching jobs at risk. Over 80,000 workers will lose access to job training, over 50,000 civilians will be furloughed, and 9,700 fewer children will get vaccines for diseases like measles and the whooping cough.

SEQUESTRATION
(Mr. HANNA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HANNA. Mr. Speaker, last Friday, sequestration went into effect. The House has passed two plans to replace sequestration with smarter, targeted spending cuts. Unfortunately, the Senate has not approved a plan. We desperately need to cut spending, but sequestration is an extremely poor way to do it.

Where I’m from in upstate New York, it means taking an ax to cybersecurity precisely when we need it the most. It means furloughing the men and women who make sure that our Armed Forces get paid. It also means slashing education programs that make our country more competitive.
We need to make tough, smart choices and reduce spending now so that we don’t hand our children the most regressive tax there is—an immoral national debt approaching $17 trillion. There is no reason and should be no reason why both sides can’t agree on cutting $85 billion. Mr. Speaker, we need to replace this sequestration with responsible cuts and reforms. Let’s do it as soon as possible.

STOP CLIMATE CHANGE

(Mr. JOHNSON of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. JOHNSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today as a member of the Safe Climate Caucus to demand that this Tea Party Congress take action to stop climate change.

Scientists agree that climate change is dangerous, and for those of you who only care about money, it’s also costly. Republican skepticism of science has delayed action for far too long, but it’s not too late to stop the worst of the effects. The victims of Superstorm Sandy know that we must act now.

I call on my Republican friends to reject the extreme right-wing and to also repudiate your pollution-sieving buddies and suitors. Listen to the facts, the science, and the demands of the American people. We must take action now, not during the last term, by the way, measures to reverse sequestration were passed—they’re not in effect now. We need to take action right now.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 933, DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE, MILITARY CONSTRUCTION AND VETERANS AFFAIRS, AND FULL-YEAR CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2013

Mr. COLE. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 99 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 99

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider in the House the bill (H.R. 933) making appropriations for the Department of Defense, the Department of Veterans Affairs, and other departments and agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2013, and for other purposes. All points of order against consideration of the bill are waived. The amendment printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution shall be considered as adopted. The bill, as amended, and an ADJOURNMENT IN CONCURRENCE were ordered reported without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HASTINGS of Washington). The gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. JOHNSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I want unan-
Yet the Republicans in Congress have yet to put forth a sequester alternative. Of course they will say that they have passed two different proposals, but that was last Congress. As many of my friends on the other side of the aisle, legislation dies at the end of each Congress. Every 2 years, Congress repopulates and every bill must start over. There is no carryover from one Congress to the next. We all learned that in the most basic political science class, Politics 101. So this claim that we did something last Congress is irrelevant to addressing the sequester that the Republicans let take effect last week.

And let’s remember the context of those two bills. House Republicans are so proud of. They were the result of, once again, the Republican leadership walking away from difficult bipartisan negotiations just at the moment when a deal seemed to be within reach. They completely passed partisan bills, and they both were dead on arrival in the Senate. So they were not genuine efforts to solve problems. They were all for show. They were simply political theater.

On the other hand, at the end of the last Congress, the House Republican leadership had a bipartisan, bicameral negotiated omnibus appropriations bill that would have taken us through fiscal year 2013, the result of hundreds of hours of careful bipartisan negotiation. But the House Republicans would not let that bill come to the floor for approval, a bill that would have passed the Senate and gone straight to the President for signature.

Instead, they chose to waste the House’s time on its two highly touted, highly partisan budget bills that went nowhere. But as I said, Mr. Speaker, that was last Congress, and we must now start all over to address the sequester and provide funding for the remainder of this fiscal year.

Frankly, I don’t know what the Republicans in the House are scared of. Speaker Boehner seems to have moved past the Hastert rule, which is a silly notion that the bill must only pass if it has the majority of the majority, and he has replaced it with selective bipartisanship. That’s right. Speaker Boehner clearly believes that the House should operate under a process of selective bipartisanship.

This means he turns to Democrats when he needs the votes to pass important bills, like he did for VAWA, the fiscal cliff, and Hurricane Sandy relief, when only 49 Republicans, only 49 Republicans out of 232 voted to help our fellow citizens on the east coast who were devastated by that storm. The Speaker should do the same thing with the sequester and give the House to debate and to vote on the Van Hollen amendment.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, this is part of a broader Republican economic plan that is, to put it mildly, extremely disappointing.

First, Republicans brought us to the brink of economic mayhem with the fiscal cliff. At the last minute, the Senate swooped in to save the day with leadership and help from the administration. Then House Republicans allowed the sequester to take effect, once again playing Russian roulette with our economy. Now we are going to consider a hybrid CR that just doesn’t pass muster, despite the best efforts of the appropriators.

No one—no one—wants a government shutdown, and we all know that some kind of bill funding the Federal Government through the remainder of the fiscal year will pass before March 27. The real fights are going to come in the next few weeks and months when the Republicans outline their budget priorities with the new Ryan budget and when the debt limit, once again, needs to be raised.

What is clear is that the Republicans are hell-bent on cutting spending just for its own sake, no matter how mindless or senseless. We know that the economy is this is not good, and we also know that these cuts in government spending—Federal, State, and local—are taking their toll on the economy. Fourth-quarter growth last year was reduced only because of reduced government spending—the cuts to cops, the cuts to firefighters, the cuts to teachers, and other workers—when that showed up in that economic report.

Now we are going to see a Republican budget that supposedly eliminates the deficit in 10 years. Call it the Ryan budget on steroids. It is going to cut Medicare, food stamps, and nearly every nondefense discretionary program funded by the Federal Government; and during the debt ceiling debate, we will see another attempt to arbitrarily cut these programs.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a responsible way to govern. The continuing resolution before us today is just one more example of how the House Republicans are leading with their heads in the sand. Instead of working to jump-start our economy, instead of engaging in true bipartisan negotiations, House Republicans continue to push on with misguided and ill-conceived budget cuts that do harm, but no good.

Like I said, this is a disappointing bill and a disappointing effort. We should be considering an omnibus appropriations bill. We should work to replace the sequester. We should be thinking long-term about economic recovery. We should be putting country ahead of political party. Instead, once again, we are playing games with our economy. This is no way to run a government.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I just want to make a few quick comments in tonight’s remarks. You referred to an interesting phrase, “selective bipartisanship.” I would suggest to my friend that we’ve probably practiced that more in 2 months than they did in 2 years when they were in the majority.

These were major pieces of legislation that we did move in a bipartisan fashion. As my good friend knows, I helped on all three of those occasions, and I’m sure the Speaker will continue to try and work across the aisle whenever he can.

My friend also referred to the nature of the cuts. Let me assure him of this: These are cuts, and they are going to occur; but we’ve repeatedly told our friends and the President and the Senate that we would be more than happy to redistribute where the cuts are going to occur. We did that twice: in May of last year and in December of last year, after the election, in good faith. In neither case did the Senate pick that up or the White House respond with a serious offer. Now my friend is asking us to do it for a third time in the hopes it will be different.

So this is the time I would go first. Perhaps the Senate should actually pass a plan or the President actually lay one out. I don’t think we’ve really seen that. But again, if we see that, we’ll be willing to work with our friends and try and redistribute the cuts.

But don’t have any illusion that we’re going to eliminate them. We’re not, any more than our friends eliminated the idea of tax cuts when the Bush tax cuts ran out. This is something we feel is a first step if getting our fiscal house in order.

And let me remind my friend, as I know he knows, this bill, in itself, is an effort to work with the President and the administration, The President has said, and I think quite correctly, that we need to avoid a government shutdown. Mr. Rogers and the Appropriations Committee are acting early and actually, I think, in a very responsible manner to put a vehicle there and begin to move it through the process.

We are more than willing for the Senate to do the same thing, would expect that they will. They may well add other departments. Frankly, speaking only for myself, I would hope that they do. I would like to recapture a lot of the appropriations work that was done for the fiscal year 2013 and lost during the CR process, and we can have, I think, a good negotiation going back and forth between the two parties.

So this is the beginning of a process. It’s the beginning of a return to regular order, and it’s an opportunity to work, I think, in a bipartisan fashion.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

And I have great respect for my colleague from Oklahoma, and I appreciate the efforts that he has made toward bipartisanship. But, a number of my friends frankly, the leadership of this House has not adhered to regular order. We haven’t seen regular in order a long time.
And when he talks about trying to find an alternative to sequestration, I would remind my colleague that Mr. VAN HOLLEN, who is about to speak, has tried on four occasions—on four occasions—to be able to come to the floor and offer his alternative to sequestration. He has not succeeded. I don't think some Republicans would support it as well—to have a debate and to have an up-or-down vote to avoid these mindless, senseless, across-the-board, indiscriminate cuts that have now gone into place. He's been denied all four times.

Now, by contrast, the Republicans have had zero alternatives. That's right, zero. They have brought nothing to the floor in this Congress to avoid sequestration. We're in March—January, February, March. We're in March, so we've had time to come up with alternatives. We've had an alternative that we have not allowed to be brought to the floor.

And sequestration took effect last week. We should have stayed in session all week and tried to figure this out. And my friends adjourned the House, recessed the House on Thursday—no urgency, no nothing. And research to education funding to funding for roads and bridges. It will impact, in a negative way, jobs. People will lose their jobs.

This is not a good deal. This is not a good deal. And, quite frankly, we should be here today trying to find an alternative.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. VAN HOLLEN), the ranking member on the Budget Committee.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. I thank my colleague, Mr. McGovern, and thank my colleague, Mr. Cole, for his efforts, but this bill falls short in a number of areas. But most of all, it falls short because it does nothing to prevent the loss of 750,000 American jobs that will result because of the sequester.

"Sequester" is just a fancy Washington name for hundreds of thousands of American jobs lost. That's going to squeeze middle class families; it's going to squeeze small businesses.

And that 750,000 jobs lost number, that's not the President's number, Mr. Speaker. That's not my number. That's the number the nonpartisan, independent Congressional Budget Office, who have told us that if the sequester stays in place till the end of this calendar year, you'll have 750,000 less Americans working at a time when we have a very fragile recovery going on.

Just last week, the Chairman of the Federal Reserve said that it would reduce economic growth this year by one-third. Why wouldn't we want to do that in a targeted way, an alternative?

And, as Mr. McGovern said, we have now tried four times to have an up-or-down vote on the floor of this House on a plan that would replace the sequester in a balanced way. So it would achieve the same amount of deficit reduction as the across-the-board sequester, but without the massive job loss that comes with the sequester because we do it in a targeted way over a period of time.

We reduce overpayments and subsidies to the agriculture area, which there's consensus on, but we also close some big tax loopholes. We say big oil companies no longer need big taxpayer subsidies, something that President Obama said about 6 years ago. And sequestrations are so consistent on protecting those special interest tax breaks and not allowing those funds to be used to reduce the deficit, that they haven't even allowed a vote up or down on the floor of this bill.

As my colleague, Mr. McGovern said, we have now tried four times. How many times have our Republican colleagues put forward a solution to replace the sequester this year? Zero. Zero. Why?

So this is a very simple question. As part of this bill, we should have an up-or-down vote in the people's House on a choice. We're not asking our colleagues to vote for it, but I think if you look at surveys from the American people, the overwhelming majority of the American people support this replacement approach, this balanced approach to avoiding the sequester, than the huge job losses that result as a result of the sequester.

And people should not be misled when they look at the numbers in different funding categories in this bill, because it's not what it seems. They will be cut dramatically. That will mean fewer researchers looking for cures and treatments to diseases, fewer nurses taking care of veterans at our hospitals.

So, Mr. Speaker, we just ask, in the interest of openness and transparency, give us a vote. Give the American people a vote on an alternative to the sequester so we don't lose hundreds of thousands of jobs.

Mr. COLE. Just for the purpose of response, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I appreciate my good friend's offer on staying in session last week. It would have been nice if we'd have dealt with this 18 months ago. We've known it's been coming. We tried to do that twice. I'm not sure the President would have let that go through last week. Frankly, he spent the last 6 weeks crisscrossing the country, campaigning and bludgeoning people, as opposed to having a dialogue. He did not bother to invite the Speaker, the Majority Leader, or the leader of the Senate or the minority leader of this House to a meeting until the very last day—the very last day. Now, that suggests to us there wasn't a great deal of interest in seri- ous negotiations.

So, again, this process is going to allow that to occur. We're going to advance our bill through this Chamber. It's going to have incorporated some of the work in the appropriations process. It's going to be a relief to the Defense Department a great deal.

We're waiting for our friends in the Senate to do the same thing. They're going to, undoubtedly, add some things. I think there will be a negotiation. I think we will end up in a good place. But we will preserve the spending reductions of the sequester in the final product of the bill.

With all due respect to my friend, revenue's off the table. You had revenue 6 weeks ago with no cuts. This time I suspect you're going to get cuts and no revenue.

With that, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from the great State of Texas (Mr. Burgess), my distinguished colleague, classmate, and a distinguished physician.
to get opportunities to fight that fight—multiple opportunities—in the few short weeks ahead. Where will they come? They will come in our budget. They will come in the appropriations bill. The appropriations bills, in the House, at least, will be run in an open fashion. There will be open rules in the appropriations bills. And in Labor-HHS there will be ample opportunity to demand of the Federal agencies involved with implementation that they share with us the data about how this thing is supposed to work. I would argue not only would we have really been very reticent to share anything.

Speaking of reticent to share anything, how about the administration, which hid the ball before election day on all these rules that have now come forward since November 6? No wonder the Governors were reluctant to accept the exchanges. No wonder the Governors have held off in some States from accepting the Medicaid expansion. We weren't told the deal would be until after the President's election was reasserted. That's pretty disingenuous of the administration to run things that way, and I believe they should be held to account.

And more importantly, in the 6 months between now and October 1, when every American who wants to buy in the exchange is supposed to be able to go to their computer and buy on the exchange, I don't believe they can actually build that system in the time required, regardless of how much money we give them.

It is important to hold those agencies accountable. Our committee work will do that. As an oversight committee on the authorization side, we will continue to do that. And I think that's important work.

So I ask conservatives to join me in that fight as we go forward. Let's fight this on the budget, let's fight it on our open rules in the appropriations process. Today, it's an important bill. Not a perfect bill, but it's an important bill. It protects our soldiers. It protects our veterans. And it locks in those savings for the long-suffering American taxpayer that they have waited for for so long. I urge support of the rule and support of the underlying bill.

Mr. McGovern. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Just so there is no confusion, I think it's important that I point out to my colleagues that we have had three rounds of cuts to one round of revenue increases. The cuts have overwhelmed the revenue increases. So the notion that somehow we've engaged in a balanced process I don't think is the case. And the notion that somehow closing these tax loopholes and corporate tax loopholes that even Mitt Romney and George Bush at one time supported in order that we don't cut medical research is research aimed at trying to find cures to Alzheimer's and Parkinson's and diabetes—if we found cures for those diseases, not only would we prevent a lot of human suffering, we'd save a lot of money.

But we're cutting medical research and we're pushing farther off the date that we're going to find breakthroughs in order to protect taxpayer subsidies to big oil companies that are making billions in profits. This is a really need a handout from the United States taxpayer? And you're cutting medical research, you're cutting Head Start, you're cutting programs that help people get an education, that protect our environment, our servicemember officials, environmental protection. We're cutting all those things mindlessly in order to protect these corporate tax loopholes.

This is crazy. I really believe that outside of this little bubble here in Washington there is a bipartisan consensus that what we're doing here is crazy. This doesn't make any sense. This does not make any sense. Mindless, senseless, across-the-board cuts. Yesterday, Wall Street celebrated its highest close in history. And today it's going higher. A few years ago, they came here, hat in hand, insisting on a bailout. They got a bailout. And it was paid for by Main Street, who didn't cause the problem but suffered the consequences, and it was paid for by the middle class, who didn't cause the problem but suffered the consequences. And now we have a budget that is doubling down, grinding down on the middle class.

What economic philosophy is at work here? America has always been at its best when it has had budgets that promote economic growth and middle class opportunity. This budget has adopted a notion that austerity is a goal in and of itself. And how will we get to fiscal balance without economic growth and an expanding middle class? Our colleagues say in this budget it will be by putting the heel of austerity on the heel of middle class opportunity. That is wrong.

Forty-four percent of the cuts are focused on 14 percent of the budget. That's kids going to college; it's TSA workers who are going to get furloughed and who pay their bills month to month. This is disgraceful, and it is also a repudiation of what has made America great—a confidence that we are all in it together. And if we have a budget where we glut our agencies, deny the opportunity, we'll be the better for it.

Wall Street has a second reason to celebrate today because this budget is absolutely doubling down on promoting the well-being of the haves at the expense of the middle class in the great American tradition of middle class opportunity. Profits in this country are the highest they've been since 1950. Wages are the lowest they've been. It's time we need to stand up for the middle class.

Mr. Cole. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Listening to my colleagues, I'm reminded of that old saying that Washington, D.C., is 10 square miles surrounded by reality. Let's talk a little bit about the definitions we use for cuts. First of all, the Government will spend more money this year than it did last year, just as last year it spent more money than it did the year before. We're not cutting anything. We're slowing down the rate of growth. In parts of the budget there are real cuts. But in terms of overall spending, it's ever and ever higher.

According to the much quoted, much loved Congressional Budget Office, this year we will have the highest level of income for the Federal Government in history. In the history of the United States, we will have more money to spend than we have ever spent before. And yet that same CBO estimates it will run a budget deficit if we keep sequester, if we allow the revenue that occurred in January of over $850 billion.

Now at some point you have to reconcile the highest level of income and an $850 billion deficit. We don't have a revenue problem here; we have a spending problem of historic and massive proportions. This is one small step in the right direction to try and get that under control.

We look forward to what our friends in the Senate do. We look forward to what the administration does. And we look forward to having a conversation over not just this bill but in the next several months we're going to have that opportunity when the Senate finally presents a budget. We'll present a budget. The administration for the fourth time in 5 years will be late but surely will at some point present a budget.

The American people can look at all of those. We're going to have an opportunity for a great debate, and I suspect we'll continue to try and adjust things as we move forward to get ourselves more in balance. But let's recognize the reality. We've had four trillion-dollar deficits in a row. We've never, with these cuts and with additional revenue, an $850 billion deficit, at the minimum, in front of us. Maybe that ought to be the focus.

I can assure my friends—we all talk a lot about polling and what the American people think. I can assure you, if we have a budget that hasworked for a lifetime. They think the Federal Government is too big; they think it spends too much; and they would like to see us take less of their money, not more. So if we get into a real debate here, I suspect the American people will say: Figure out a way to live within the highest level of income in American history as opposed to coming to us and asking us to make cuts.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McGovern. Mr. Speaker, last night, the FAA announced that 173 air traffic control towers will be closed by April 7. So I would say to my colleague, tell the communities whose towers will be closed that this is absolutely devastating to the people whose communities will be devastated by the fact that they will no longer have air service that this is not a cut. I mean, they will be losing an essential service that is vital for businesses to thrive all across this country. That is a cut.

At this point, I’d like to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Butterfield).

Mr. Butterfield. Let me thank the gentleman for yielding time this morning.

Let me associate myself with the last comments made by Mr. McGovern. He is absolutely correct; the American people are beginning to feel the impacts of sequestration.

My constituents on the other side of the aisle are always talking about: We don’t have a revenue problem; we don’t have a revenue problem; we have a spending problem in this country. Well, Mr. Speaker, we have a deficit problem in this country.

There are two ways, at least, where we can address the deficit. We can address it with more revenue, which is what I strongly recommend, and we can also address it with very important cuts. We have got to have a balanced approach to deficit reduction. So I’ve come to the floor today to strongly oppose this rule.

Mr. Speaker, I don’t like the way H.R. 939 evolved. We read about it in the weeks and days leading up to it when we returned to Washington on Monday afternoon and there it was, posted. We were told that the rule would be taken up today and we would be voting on it tomorrow. But then a snowstorm came into this Capital City, and now we are voting on the rule and the CR today and we are leaving town. That is not the way to do it.

The Republican majority has instead elected to move with a bill that provides new spending levels and flexibility to just the Department of Defense and military construction and veterans, while keeping the antiquated funding levels for the remaining 10 appropriations bills. Mr. Speaker, I believe that if we got serious about this and rolled up our sleeves, we could make it happen.

I cannot help but to remember the days when I was a trial judge back in North Carolina. From time to time, Mr. Speaker, we would have difficult cases. But we would send the jury in the room, we would lock the door, and we would make them deliberate; and more times than not, they would come out with a verdict. That’s the way we need to engage in this business.

This is too serious, Mr. Speaker, to have a political dimension to this debate. We’ve got to have common sense. We’ve got to make it happen.

So I urge my colleagues to oppose this rule, and I urge its defeat. We must get to the real work of governing in this country and stop the political theater.

Mr. Cole. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Just, again, to get back to the big picture for a moment, as my friends know, we’re going to spend about $3.5 trillion this year in the Federal budget. These sequestered cuts, in terms of the total budget, amount to 2.4 percent of all spending—2.4 percent of $3.5 trillion. I suspect the American people think: You could find a better way to distribute those cuts than closing our towers.

I agree, actually, with my friend, Mr. McGovern. One of those towers, by the way, is in my district, so I certainly understand it. I have 20,000 Federal defense employees in my district, so I’m quite aware of the problems with the distribution of the cuts. Now, I will tell you, my friends on the other side of the aisle and Mr. Woodward to argue whose idea this was and what purpose and how it was constructed, but it’s hardly as if the President of the United States or our friends in the Senate were innocent bystanders in all of this.

We tried twice last year to sit down and renegotiate. We moved something through. We’ve said repeatedly this year we’re willing to sit down and renegotiate the cuts. To me, that’s a compromise.

The President talks a lot about a balanced approach. Two months ago, he got a lot of revenue. That’s his side of the equation. This time it should be cuts. That’s an appropriate balance.

We’ll sit down and renegotiate where they should come from—we think we’ve got some great ideas on that—but they are going to occur. They’re the first and appropriate step toward getting our fiscal house back in order. So when my friends want to work with us about the distribution, I know they’ll find a willing negotiating partner in the Speaker. Until such time, we will follow the course that the President, my friend, Mr. McGovern, advocated for, and signed into law. If he wants to revisit that, we agree with him, let’s revisit it and redistribute it, but the cuts are going to occur.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McGovern. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. Jackson Lee).

Ms. Jackson Lee. I thank the distinguished gentleman for his words. I associate myself with Mr. McGovern. But I do acknowledge Mr. Cole as my good friend. You have certainly joined us on bipartisan issues, as has already been stated, and I thank you for that. But I do want to, in essence, gently correct the gentleman on whether or not the President got his, it’s now time for us to get ours.

I think what we have missed is that this is an ongoing process, an ongoing process to find the right balance of revenue and the right balance of cuts. Let it also be on the record that we’ve cut over $1 trillion already, and I can tell you that it has come out of the backs of poor people.

Now, let me give you some resounding, exciting breaking news: the Dow hit the highest amount yesterday, 14,253.77, the highest in history. Wall Street is celebrating while the backs of poor people are being broken.

This is not a rule that should pass today. We should remain snowed out. We shouldn’t even be here. Snow us out until we can get the right kind of balance.

This is the bill that we received in less than 24 hours, and they’re asking us to vote on it. And we be asked to vote on it, let me suggest to you that the long-term unemployed will be particularly impacted:

$130 a month will come out of their unemployment. It will be brutal to the Department of Health and Human Services, programs that we slash and burn, but these are the men and women that work and do the business of government.

For women who are caretakers, they will find that 50 percent of them are more likely to hold government jobs, they’re going to be impacted; $725 million is going to come out of poor people’s children’s education.

Those of us who support community health clinics, $120 million of Federal support for community health centers will just drop, and 900,000 patients will not be served. 540,000 doses of vaccine will not be there.

The point is that when it comes to the preservation of those who will be impacted, it will be those who need clean energy, education, and research and development.

I introduced H.R. 900, a simple bill to get rid of the sequester. My point would be that we need to go back to work and vote “no” on the rule. It is on the backs of poor people.

Mr. Cole. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume for the purpose of response.

I have a very good friend, whom I have worked with on a number of things, most recently the Violence Against Women Act, where she certainly ably represented the bill in the Rules Committee and on the floor, and I appreciate that very much. I’m going to try to correct in return.

When we talk about cuts that were previously agreed to, with all due respect to my friends, most of those cuts still haven’t even taken place. If you look at them, they are far in the future in the 10-year window.

These were not cuts, by the way, that the two sides found contentious. This was the easy stuff that they all agreed to right up front. It wasn’t as if there was some concession.

The real discussion was in the next round of cuts, where the supercommittee wasn’t able to come to an agreement. Even there, there were $600 or $700 million in agreed-upon “cuts” that both sides were willing to give. There just wasn’t an agreement about revenue, and so the cuts didn’t occur.

Well, we’re here today, and just as the tax increases were written into law effectively when the Bush tax cuts sunsets next year, these cuts are also written into law.

Again, since they’re written into law, they’re going to occur. Now, we’re willing, again, to sit down with our friends and redistribute where they come from. We think that would be the prudent thing to do. We tried to do it twice last year. It didn’t work out. Nobody was interested in talking to us last year. The President wasn’t interested in putting a proposal on until, if anything, recent days, and I really couldn’t still tell you what it truly is.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLE. I will finish my point, and I will be happy to yield to my friend briefly.

I think that the reality is we ought to recognize—just as I urge my friends on my side of the aisle to recognize—as we approach the end of the Bush tax cuts, that they’re going to end. We ought to sit down and negotiate with our friends some better and more proper distribution, whether we like it or not. That’s just the case. It’s going to happen here.

Now, we would rather renegotiate, minimize the harm and spread that 2.4 percent over the entire $3.5 trillion budget. I suspect our friends would like to do that, too, over time, and hopefully we can arrive at that. So I look forward to continuing the dialogue, but the cuts are going to be secured. This legislation will move through the House, and then I’m sure something will move through the Senate and we’ll sit down and negotiate in a bipartisan, bicameral manner.

With that, I yield to my good friend from Texas.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Let me thank the gentleman’s tone, and let it be known that all of us want to engage in that kind of civil discussion. I assume, if we all got locked up in a room, we’d be able to find the compromise.

Let me just indicate that the revenue and cuts that you just spoke about are over a 10-year period, but they’re still cuts. This bill not only adds to that, but then the sequester adds to that, as well.

Our suggestion in my remarks is that this will have a heavy, heavy, heavy impact on vulnerable and innocent persons.

The cuts are going forward, and so my question is: Why can’t we continue the discussion on how we balance cuts and revenues? We must operate the government.

Mr. COLE. Reclaiming my time, if I may, I think the gentleman asked a good question, and I look forward to working with my friends on the other side today. I actually think today is the beginning of a process where that will happen. It’s one of the reasons I really commend Chairman Rogers for moving early.

We’re not in a minute crisis atmosphere here, and we’re not trying to jam our friends in the Senate. We want them to move as quickly and expeditiously as they can. We would like to move toward the discussion and talks with them, and I’m sure the administration will be involved in that.

To me, that’s a step back toward what I would like and what we all talk about around here, which is regular order. While that’s going on, we can engage in the normal appropriations process for fiscal year 2013.

So, as difficult as this is—and we’ve been through a difficult time, I think, in recent months and over the last year plus, honestly—this may be the first step back in the right direction.

Again, I think that both sides have a different point of view on this, but I’m talking what I would view as political reality to them, just as I did to my friends on my own side of the aisle a few weeks ago. This is going to occur, and let’s focus on national security and about how it is. We’re going to have a lower deficit because of that. I think that’s one of the reasons that Wall Street is doing well. But who knows? It’s always hard to predict what’s going to happen there.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. CONNOLLY).

Mr. CONNOLLY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman yielding.

It’s really a shame we’ve come to this point where the dysfunction of this Congress is going to inflict harm on families, on the military, and on communities throughout America.

I have great respect for my friend from Oklahoma. He has reached across the aisle, and he has tried to work with us to find common solutions, but he knows the truth. The truth is that discretionary domestic spending as a percent of our GDP is at the lowest it’s been since the Eisenhower administration. He knows that the Federal tax burden, the revenue side of the ledger, is the lowest since Harry Truman was in the White House. He knows that the gap between spending and revenue has grown because after we sequestered the budget under Bill Clinton, when it was much closer.

We have to get our arms around spending, but not in a mindless, meat-ax way. It is going to hurt America. And to have it into this continuing resolution, in my view, is a terrible mistake. If the Republican side of the aisle wants to embrace sequestration as its own with this fairy tale that “it’s just a haircut; it’s not much, especially when you look at the overall size of Federal spending,” that will come as news to communities, to travelers, to consumers, and to the American public who, in fact, will feel the brunt of the sequestration in this continuing resolution.

The other aspect of this continuing resolution, and why I oppose this rule, Mr. Speaker, is that, once again, we treat the Federal employee like a second-class citizen. For 1 year in a row, we freeze their salary. They have already contributed, and they were the only group singled out to contribute to the Federal debt reduction to the tune of $100 billion in lost wages and benefit cutbacks. We use the freeze on Congress as a subterfuge to get at Federal employees.

I urge my colleagues to vote against the rule and support my bill to freeze congressional salaries, H.R. 636. Seventeen of my co-sponsors have already decided to do so.

It is a shame that House Republicans cannot find a way to put aside ideology to work with us to avert the devastating cuts of sequestration. The Continuing Resolution presents us a perfect opportunity to stop this self-inflicted wound on our economy, our military, and our families.

The consequences of Republican inaction will be particularly hard felt in my community, which is home to so many people who work for the federal government.

That pain will spread across Virginia and the rest of the nation as no community will be spared from these meat-axe cuts as they ripple through the economy. Every community that receives direct federal assistance, has residents who work for the federal government or is home to an employer who does work with the federal government will be affected.

The slowdown in government spending has been a drag on local and state economies across the entire country and the unemployment rate for the past two years. GDP growth after growing at 3.1% in the 3rd Quarter based on the regional delegation, as well as industry leaders and federal employee groups, in calling on Congress to find a balanced alternative to sequestration. I agree that we must take reasonable steps to address our debt. However, I cannot accept the House Republican plan because the only way to do this is through cuts alone.

We cannot cut our way to prosperity. We must have a balanced approach that finds strategic cuts and savings while maintaining critical investments that ensure our competitiveness in the global economy.

I urge my colleagues to vote against this rule so that we can bring up a balanced approach to replace sequestration along with my other approach to balance our budget.
bill to protect federal employees from yet another pay freeze.

My bill, H.R. 636, would freeze Member salaries for the duration of the 113th Congress. If anyone’s salary should be frozen as a result of our nation’s fiscal situation it is Members of Congress.

Our dedicated Federal employees are on the front lines protecting and serving the public every day in our communities. Yet House Republicans have routinely used them as a punching bag. The men and women who have dedicated their careers to public service are still weathering a pay freeze that will have lasted more than two years, and they have made sacrifices in pay and benefits totaling more than $100 billion to help reduce our nation’s debt.

Now, because House Republicans refuse to work with us to avert sequestration, they are facing furloughs and the loss of up to 20% of their pay in some cases on top of having their pay frozen for a third consecutive year as part of this CR.

Mr. Speaker, sequestration was put in place to force Congress to act, not to become law. I remain committed to preventing these harmful cuts, and I urge my colleagues to join me in voting against this rule so we can bring up a balanced approach that will do just that.

Mr. Cole. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself and a minute to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Andrews).

Mr. Speaker, I want to agree with my good friend from Virginia on his point about discretionary spending. It’s probably an area that he and I would find a considerable amount of common ground on. I certainly do think that far too much of this is coming out of the discretionary side of the budget, particularly in defense, but I would say across the board.

I have Indian health facilities in my district that will be hit, and I have the National Severe Storms Laboratory in my district that will be hit. I understand my friend makes those points. He’s making a very important point.

Now, we’ve been willing to go where no man has gone before, the nondiscretionary side of the budget. The Ryan budget, which you may like or not like, or the Ryan plan on Medicare is a real attempt to deal with where we all in the room know the real problem is, and that’s on the nondiscretionary side of the budget.

I hope that our friends put their ideas out there. The President has put, and sometimes withdrawn, but has put a number of interesting ideas on the table at various points. We need to get quite there, whether it’s change CPI or raising age over time gradually on some of our programs.

Now, my friends on the other side, at least our distinguished minority leader, has refused to ever do that. Whether it’s Social Security, Medicare, or Medicaid, it’s been: We’re going to defend this ground; we’re not going to make any changes. At the end of the day, that’s the kind of thing that we’re going to have to deal with.

As a appropriator, as somebody who, like my friend from Virginia, sees the impacts of these discretionary reductions and this squeezing down, I think that is the solution. I think that’s at least a big part of the solution.

I have no illusions we’re going to settle all our deficit problems with this bill, but we are taking a step in the right direction for our friends, for our constituents, and our side as well, will expand the dialogue to include the nondiscretionary side of the budget in the weeks and months ahead, and we can begin to arrive at common ground. But we are looking to do better than we currently are doing.

We’ve offered to do that. We’ve actually written a budget that has done that. We’ve gone through the political fires. I can assure my friends you can do that and still survive as a majority. And we’re anxious to do that going forward. If we can find willing partners in that, both on the other side of the aisle, the other side of the rotunda, and the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, I think we’ll actually be on the road to doing something.

So, with that, I reserve the balance of my time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Andrews).

Mr. Andrews. At least, over time, 750,000 people will lose their jobs as a result of the sequester. Who are these Americans? They’re Federal employees who inspect our food or who inspect toxic waste dumps or who work in the Federal court system or for the FBI. But they’re also people in small businesses around the country and big businesses. It’s the woman who owns a software company who has a contract with NOAA, the National Weather Service, that gets canceled or cut back. It is the caterer who serves Air Force base or an army base or a Coast Guard facility. It is the small businessperson who is a utility contractor on a transportation project to be funded by Federal dollars. These are real people who, over time, will be very badly affected by this.

We have a plan that would save these jobs but continue to reduce the deficit. It’s Mr. Van Hollen’s plan. That plan says that we should save an equal amount the sequester would save by cutting back corporate welfare for huge agribusinesses that own land and get payments from the Federal taxpayers through the Ag Department, and that anyone who earns more than $2 million a year should have to pay at least 30 percent of their income under the Tax Code and not exploit loopholes and deductions.

Today would be the right day to take a vote on that plan. My friends on the other side would probably oppose the plan. That’s obviously within their right. But the House has not yet taken up any proposals to save these 750,000 jobs. That is wrong. You can disagree with our proposal, you can try to amend our proposal, you can try to do better than our proposal. But the House not to take one vote on saving these 750,000 jobs is wrong.

We will have an opportunity on the previous question vote to remedy that wrong.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. McGovern. I yield the gentleman an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. Andrews. A “no” vote on the previous question would mean that this body could take an up-or-down vote on whether or not to save these 750,000 jobs while still reducing the deficit in the ways that I just talked about.

Look, the basic job that we have to do here is to make decisions and take action. If you vote that’s fine; if you vote against us, that’s fine. That’s democracy. We should celebrate it. But to fail to take a vote is to avoid that responsibility.

Let’s accept our responsibility to try to head this sequester, save those 750,000 jobs and vote “no” on the previous question.

Mr. Cole. Mr. Speaker, just very quickly I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my friend. I can assure you that we take this very seriously, as well. I have lots of Federal employees, and the real job loss won’t be theirs. They will certainly be hard-hit, they’ll be furloughed, but the real job loss, as my friend suggests, really is in the private sector, and that’s why we should sit down and have a serious discussion about entitlement costs.

With all due respect to my friend, Mr. Van Hollen, my friends on the other side of the aisle, I don’t think that proposal would pass. I certainly wouldn’t vote for it. I want that very much in the Record.

If our friends want to do something, they do have control of the United States Senate. That’s a body that can do whatever it wants to do, and we’ll see what happens going forward.

Again, what I’m pleased with is, I think this is the beginning of a real discussion and the beginning of a real dialogue. We’re going to have good things in terms of giving flexibility to the Defense Department and our friends that deal with military construction and the VA. We’re anxious to hear ideas on the other side. But we are going to reduce spending, and we’re going to reduce it not by an extraordinary amount, but by 2.4 percent of the entire $3.5 trillion Federal budget, and we’re willing to renegotiate where those cuts come from. I think that’s a pretty reasonable position to have.

Mr. Andrews. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. Cole. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.
Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I want my friends for his graciousness and fairness in all respects.

I'm not sure anyone has control over the United States Senate. But I am sure of this: last week a proposal very similar to the one that I just talked about that would save those three-quarters of a million jobs got 51 votes on the floor of the United States Senate, a majority. Of course, under their peculiar rules, it required 60 votes to go forward.

So understand this: a majority of the United States Senate, in fact, adopted the plan that I talked about. We should be given the chance to do the same thing.

Mr. COLE. Reclaiming my time, I'd be happy if the United States Senate decided to operate collectively instead of individually, but I didn't write their rules and neither did my friends. I'm sure if we put to work together, thought we've both sent a lot of our friends over there, neither of them seem to be willing to sit down and change the rules to make them a more functional body.

But I'm glad you've moved the discussion to where we both agree away from our adversarial discussion toward the real enemy, the United States Senate, which has a hard time acting. We will lose jobs. You've heard over and over that we're told that we should expect a job loss of 750,000 people.

What do they do? They lose their job, and they go on unemployment. Where is the discussion of serving that 750,000 people that my friends are talking about when you throw people out of work?

My friends talk about tough choices. Well, we ought to assume tough choices. You're going to have health clinics that are going to be reduced in their funding. You're going to have transportation projects reduced in their funding. You're going to have cuts in WIC; you're going to have cuts in Head Start; you're going to have cuts in programs that benefit the most vulnerable people in our communities.

None of us in this Chamber has to absorb a tough choice. It's the people we represent. It's the people in this country who are getting shafted as a result of this sequestration.

The time to act has long since been. Mr. VAN HOLLEN has time and time again—not once, not twice, not three times, but four times tried to bring an alternative to the House floor. All he's asked for is that we have an up-or-down vote on his proposal, and four times he has been rejected. By contrast, this year, my friends have brought up not a single alternative to avoid sequestration.

All we're asking is that the democracy here on the floor of the House of Representatives, a chance for us to debate and have an up-or-down vote not on a procedural motion, but on the actual legislation, up or down. We've been denied that.

My friends, if they have an alternative they want to bring, fine. Bring that up there too. We'll have two votes, and we can debate our priorities so the American people know where we stand. Mr. Speaker, I'm saying to the President, Mr. McGovern, Mr. Speaker, can I inquire of the gentleman whether he has any additional requests for speakers?

Mr. COLE. I'm certainly prepared to close whenever my friend is.

Mr. McGovern. We are prepared to close as well, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume, and I would say to my friend, the gentleman from Oklahoma, that the time to act has long since passed. We are now in sequester.

Budgets across the board and in a mindless and senseless way are being slashed. Air traffic control towers are being shut down. You will result in an adverse impact on local economies. We will lose jobs. You've heard over and over that we're told that we should expect a job loss of 750,000 people.

Mr. V. ANDREWS. Reclaiming my time, I'd like to respond to my friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. Speaker, if we defeat the President's sequester, we put a Republican plan on the Senate floor. We'll leave open an avenue of negotiation with our friends in the Senate. I'm sure the President will be involved in discussion at some point too. So I take some heart from that.

With that, I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, my friend reflected on some criticism of the Senate, which I would generally agree with.

I would say this, though: the Senate did something we've not done. They put a Republican plan on the Senate floor to end the sequester and save those 750,000 jobs and a Democratic plan to the floor to have those 750,000 jobs. I think we owe it to our constituents, to our country to do the same thing. This is the opportunity to do that.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert the text of the amendment in the Record along with extraneous material immediately prior to the vote on the previous question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. McGovern. I just want to again say to my friends that it is important for them to appreciate the devastation of these cuts.

Head Start: the CR will allow sequestration to cut $400 million, resulting in a potential loss of 70,000 Head Start slots for comprehensive early learning and development services.

Job training programs: the CR will allow sequestration to cut $282 million, resulting in hundreds of thousands of unemployed adults, dislocated workers, veterans, young adults and students losing access to employment services.

Title I grants, education of the disadvantaged: the CR will allow sequestration to cut $730 million, which is the equivalent of cutting the extra instructional services for more than 2,500 schools serving more than 1 million disadvantaged children who are struggling academically.

Special education grants: the CR will allow sequestration to cut more than $580 million, which is the rough equivalent of closing nearly 300,000 students with special needs to State and local education agencies. This also may result in more than 700,000 layoffs of teachers, aides and other staff serving students with disabilities.

Childcare: the CR will allow sequestration to cut $115 million, which will cause, roughly, 25,000 children to lose access to child care, further exacerbating the fact that only one in six children eligible for Federal child care assistance receives it.

Cancer screenings: the CR will allow sequestration to cut funding for cancer screenings, resulting in 25,000 fewer breast and cervical cancer screenings for low-income women.

I can go on and on and on, but here is the choice: the choice is either this process, which my Republican colleagues have embraced, or it's that Mr. Van Hollem has outlined—one that would say we're not going to balance the budget on the backs of the most vulnerable, on the backs of the needy, on the backs of the middle class but that—do you know what?—we're going to get rid of some of these corporate loopholes that my friends on the other side used to be in favor of closing.

We're not going to continue to have taxpayer subsidies for big oil companies. We're going to have some balance in our approach. I'm going to offer an amendment to the rule to ensure that the House votes on Mr. Van Hollem's bill to replace the sequester and on Mr. Connolly's bill to freeze pay for Members of Congress for the next 2 years.
not balanced. It is wrong-headed; it is mindless; it is senseless; and it is cruel. I urge my colleagues to vote "no" and to defeat the previous question, and I urge a "no" vote on the rule.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. COLE: I yield myself the balance of my time.

I want to begin by, frankly, agreeing with my friend. The time to act has long since passed. We tried to act a long time ago. We tried to act in May, but nobody in the Senate chose to pick up our bill. They sent us back something different, which was their right, but it didn't do anything at all. We tried to act in December, but nobody did anything in the Senate then.

We offered to negotiate with the President for weeks. Instead, we saw a 6-week, an 8-week campaign all over the country. There was no time, evidently, in the President's busy schedule in city after city, at photo op after photo op, to get on the phone, call the Speaker and say—How would you like to come down and talk?—until the very last day before the sequester, when it had become evident that this type of political bullying wouldn't work.

So we believe the time has passed to act. That's why we're acting today. We are actually going to secure the cuts that are in the legislation that the President advocated for. He originated the idea, he accepted the Woodward version of that idea, and he signed it into law. He had 18 months to do something about it. We offered two opportunities in that timeframe to do something, and the Speaker has always been available to sit down with the President and do something.

We are going to take a small step in the right direction. Now, let's not overestimate what we're doing. We could probably take more pride in this than is warranted. Our friends, I think, are sorely disappointed that is not the case. This is $85 billion in a $3.5 trillion deficit—2.4 percent. We ought to be able to do that in our sleep. Quite frankly, we are willing to sit down and renegotiate with our friends from where they come. We are not willing to renegotiate the total amount of the money involved. Over time, it does add up to $1.2 trillion. That's a lot of money, but it's not anywhere near what it's going to take to get our budget in balance.

I just want the debate of today to go on. We're going to have on that in the budget discussions ahead; but let's right now, while we have that debate and while we go through that process, take the responsible step that the President urges us to take and that we all agree on, which is a step by step, sure that the government doesn't shut down while we have our discussion and sort out our differences.

I applaud Chairman Rogers and Chairman Sessions for making that possible, and for bringing this bill in a timely fashion, giving us enough time when we're not going to be jammed. I know our friends in the Senate are going to try and do the same thing. They're going to produce. I have no doubt, a different product than we have. That's fine. We'll negotiate it out, and we'll avoid a government shutdown, but we will secure these savings for the taxpayers of the United States, and we will take the next step in a longer discussion.

I believe we've had a good debate on the rule. I believe the underlying bill provides the American people with the hope that we can do the basic functions that we've always been able to accomplish in funding the government. I would urge my colleagues to support this rule and the underlying legislation.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. Speaker, at the outset I would like to commend the Chairman of the full Appropriations Committee, Mr. ROGERS, and the Chairman of the Defense Subcommittee, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, for their determination and perseverance in bringing the complete Defense and Military Construction/VA bills to the floor for our consideration. Since before the new fiscal year began, they have been committed to completing our FY '13 bills and move them onto the President's desk for his signature.

Why? Because they understood the damage that would be done to our national security if DoD was forced to operate under the previously enacted levels and restrictions placed on them by our FY '12 bill.

By passing this package today, we will be giving our military leadership additional flexibility to protect their mission and capabilities in this constrained world.

I would also add that passage of these measures today reinforces Congress' authority to set policy for the Department of Defense in important areas such as Air Force force structure, the retirement of Navy ships, increasing the pace of Navy shipbuilding, etc., and not cede it to the Executive Branch solely.

I am also pleased that the package also allows additional funding for nuclear weapons modernization, to ensure the safety, security, and reliability of the nation's nuclear stockpile.

The necessary language referred to by Mr. MCGOVERN is as follows:

AN AMENDMENT TO H. RES. 99 OFFERED BY MR. MCGOVERN OF MASSACHUSETTS

At the end of the resolution, add the following new sections:

SEC. 2. Immediately upon adoption of this resolution the Speaker shall, pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 636) to prohibit Members of Congress from receiving any automatic pay adjustments through the end of the One Hundred Thirteenth Congress. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. All points of order against consideration of the bill are waived. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided among and controlled by the chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on House Administration and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. All points of order against provisions in the bill are waived. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted.

The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to a vote to allow the Democratic minority to offer an alternative plan. It is a vote about what the House should be debating.

Mr. Clarence Cannon and the Republicans offered a rule, and a vote to allow the Democratic minority to offer an alternative plan. This vote, the vote on whether to order the previous question on a special rule, is not merely a procedural vote. A vote against ordering the previous question is a vote against the Republican rule and a vote to allow the Democratic minority to offer an alternative plan. It is a vote about what the House should be debating.

Mr. Cannon's amendment would strike clause 2(b) of rule XIX, the clause that requires the Speaker to offer a special rule following the state of the Union address. The Speaker would now be required to offer a rule that provides for a vote on whether the House should move to consider the FY'13 budget resolution.
yield to him for an amendment, is entitled to the first recognition.

The Republican majority may say “the vote on the previous question is simply a vote on whether to proceed to an immediate vote on adopting the resolution . . . [and] has no substantive legislative or policy implications whatsoever.” But that is not what they have always said. Listen to the Republican Leadership Manual on the Legislative Process in the United States House of Representatives, 6th edition, page 135. Here’s how the Republicans describe the previous question vote in their own manual: Although it is generally not possible to amend the rule because the majority Member controlling the time does not yield to those opposing the resolution of offering an amendment, the same result may be achieved by voting down the previous question on the rule . . . . When the motion for the previous question is defeated, control of the time passes to the Member who led the opposition to ordering the previous question. That Member, because he then controls the time, may offer an amendment to the rule, or yield for the purpose of amendment.

In Deschler’s Procedure in the U.S. House of Representatives, the subchapter titled “Amend Special Rules” states: “a refusal for the previous question is defeated, control of the time will not yield for the purpose of offering an amendment and further debate.” (Chapter 21, section 21.2) Section 21.3 continues: Upon rejection of the motion for the previous question on a resolution reported from the Committee on Rules, control shifts to the Member leading the opposition to the previous question, who may offer a proper amendment or motion and who controls the time for debate thereafter.

Clearly, the vote on the previous question on a rule does have substantive policy implications. It is one of the only available tools for those who oppose the Republican majority’s agenda and allows those with alternative views the opportunity to offer an alternative plan.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question vote in their own manual: Although it is generally not possible to amend the rule because the majority Member controlling the time does not yield to those opposing the resolution of offering an amendment, the same result may be achieved by voting down the previous question on the rule . . . . When the motion for the previous question is defeated, control of the time passes to the Member who led the opposition to ordering the previous question. That Member, because he then controls the time, may offer an amendment to the rule, or yield for the purpose of amendment.

Mr. MCCARTHY. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 59, had I been present, I would have voted ‘‘nay.’’

Mr. CARDENAS. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 60, had I been present, I would have voted ‘‘nay.’’

Mr. BARBER, Ms. KUSTER, and Ms. MICHELLE LUJAN GRISHAM of New Mexico changed their vote from ‘‘yea’’ to ‘‘nay.’’

The conference agree that for the purposes of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (Public Law 99–177), as amended by the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Reaffirmation Act of 1997 (Public Law 105–53), the term "program, project, and activity" for appropriations contained in this Act shall be defined as the most specific level of budget items identified in the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2013, the related classified annexes and explanatory statements, and the F–1 and R–1 budget justification documents as subsequently modified by congressional action. The following exception to the above definition shall apply: for the military personnel and operation and maintenance accounts, for which the term "program, project, and activity" is defined as the appropriations accounts contained in the Department of Defense Appropriations Act. At the time the President submits the budget for fiscal year 2014, the Department of Defense is directed to submit to the congressional defense committees budget justification documents to be known as the “M–1” and “O–1” which shall identify, at the program, project, and activity level of budget item, the amounts requested by the President to be appropriated to the Department of Defense for military personnel and operation and maintenance in any budget request, or amended budget request, for fiscal year 2014. In carrying out any Presidential sequestration, the Department of Defense and related agencies shall conform to the definition for "program, project, and activity" set forth above. Absent such sequestration, the amounts requested in the Department of Defense Appropriations Act which account or accounts will be exempt from sequestration per the notification made by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget on July 31, 2012.

CLASSIFIED ANNEX

Adjustments to classified programs are addressed in the accompanying classified annex.
The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to continue to follow the reprogramming guidance for acquisition accounts as specified in the report accompanying the Department of Defense Appropriations bill (House Report 110–279). For operation and maintenance accounts, the Department of Defense shall continue to follow the reprogramming guidelines specified in the conference report accompanying H.R. 3222, the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2008. The dollar threshold for reprogramming funds shall remain at $15,000,000 for operation and maintenance; $20,000,000 for procurement; and $15,000,000 for research, development, test and evaluation.

The conferees direct the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) to continue to provide the congressional defense committees annual DD Form 1416 reports for titles I and II and quarterly, spreadsheet-based DD Form 1416 reports for service and defense-wide accounts in titles III and IV of this Act. Reports for titles III and IV shall comply with guidance specified in the explanatory statement accompanying the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2006. The Department of Defense shall continue to follow the limitation that prior approval reprogrammings are set at either the specified dollar threshold or 20 percent of the procurement or research, development, test and evaluation line, whichever is less. These thresholds are cumulative from the base for reprogramming value as modified by any adjustments.

Therefore, if the combined value of transfers into or out of an operation and maintenance (O–1), a procurement (P–1), or a research, development, test and evaluation (R–1) line exceeds the identified threshold, the Department of Defense must submit a prior approval reprogramming request to the congressional defense committees. In addition, guidelines on the application of prior approval reprogramming procedures for congressional special interest items are established elsewhere in this statement.

REPROGRAMMING GUIDANCE

The conferees recommend denying these proposed retirements and direct the Secretary of the Navy to retain this force structure in its entirety. The conferees recommend full funding, as consistently identified by the Navy, to man, operate, sustain, upgrade, and modernize only CG–63, CG–64, CG–65, CG–66, CG–68, CG–69, CG–73, LSD–41, and LSD–46 in the “Ship Modernization, Operations and Sustainment Fund”, as specified elsewhere in this conference agreement. The conferees recommend full funding for all known reprogramming requirements only for these specific platforms for the next two fiscal years, and provide the Secretary of the Navy the authority to transfer funds from the “Ship Modernization, Operations and Sustainment Fund” to the appropriate appropriation accounts in the year of execution following 30 day prior notification to the congressional defense committees. The conferees direct funds to be transferred in accordance with the requirements previously identified to the congressional defense committees by the Navy and further direct that any deviation from those requirements shall be fully and clearly identified to the congressional defense committees prior to the initiation of any such transfer. The conferees believe that this approach provides the fiscal relief required by the Navy to maintain this force structure and allows the Navy sufficient time to plan and budget for this force structure in future budget submissions.

Additionally, the conferees direct the Comptroller General to review the Navy's methodology and analysis regarding its decommissioning proposal, to include an analysis of the extent to which readiness metrics, maintenance, and inspection data; operating and support costs; and cost metrics related to initial and proposed curtailed service lives were considered. This review shall also address the extent to which decommissioning costs and any costs for maintaining or acquiring like capabilities were considered, the extent to which combatant command requirements were taken into account when the proposal was made, and the impact of the reduced fleet size on the Navy's ability to meet operational and personnel tempo goals and maintenance requirements. The results of this review should be submitted to the congressional defense committees not later than 180 days after the enactment of this Act.

In addition, the USN Port Royal (CG–73) incurred significant damage following a grounding incident in 2009. Following the incident, the ship was repaired and has since completed a deployment. However, while the Navy claims that the ship never completely recovered from the grounding, the Navy has failed to provide adequate analysis and cost data on the structural condition of the USN Port Royal. Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of the Navy to carry out an independent structural assessment of the Port Royal that includes a comparative structural assessment to other cruisers of the same class. The independent review shall provide a detailed cost estimate to repair the ship and how that estimate differs from the cost to repair other cruisers of the same class, including what issues would be corrected during planned maintenance availabilities. The conferees further direct that this independent assessment be certified by the Government Accountability Office (GAO). Both the independent review and the GAO certification should be submitted to the congressional defense committees not later than 180 days after the enactment of this Act.

FUNDING INCREASES

The funding increases outlined in the tables for each appropriation account shall be provided only for the specific purposes indicated in the tables.

SHIP MODERNIZATION, OPERATIONS AND SUSTAINMENT FUND

As detailed in House Report 112–493 and Senate Report 112–196, the conferees remain concerned with the Navy's proposal to prematurely retire capable and relevant ships with over 100 years of remaining service life following an initial investment of no less than $11,600,000,000 in current fiscal year 2012 dollars.

Additionally, the USS Port Royal that includes a comparative structural assessment to other cruisers of the same class. The independent review shall provide a detailed cost estimate to repair the ship and how that estimate differs from the cost to repair other cruisers of the same class, including what issues would be corrected during planned maintenance availabilities. The conferees further direct that this independent assessment be certified by the Government Accountability Office (GAO). Both the independent review and the GAO certification should be submitted to the congressional defense committees not later than 180 days after the enactment of this Act.
PERMANENT CHANGE OF STATION EFFICIENCIES

The conferees recommend a total reduction of $146,793,000 in the Permanent Change of Station (PCS) budgets for program efficiencies. The conferees recognize that potential cost savings could be found in the PCS program. The conferees direct the Under Secretary of Defense (Personnel and Readiness) to conduct a review of the PCS program to identify potential efficiencies and to submit a report to the congressional defense committees not later than 180 days after the enactment of this Act on its findings. The conferees understand that each of the Services have increased time on station requirements but that the Services are not meeting these goals. As such, the report should include a review of the reasons that the Services have not met the increased time on station goals and a plan to achieve them, including the budget efficiencies that can be gained by increased tour lengths. Furthermore, the report should consider the potential impact of increased tour lengths on servicemembers’ job performance and on morale and quality of life for servicemembers and their families. It should also include how a change in policy would impact promotion and professional development opportunities, personnel readiness, and quality of life issues for servicemembers serving in hardship or overseas locations.

COMPOSITE PAY RATES

For a number of years, the Government Accountability Office (GAO) has used the Department of Defense’s composite pay rates in its military personnel end strength analysis to estimate the financial impact of work year variances on the Services’ military personnel budget requests. Although this information has been important to the congressional defense committees in their budget analyses, the conferees believe that GAO’s estimates would be more useful if the analysis was made available earlier in the budget process. Therefore, to improve the timeliness of the GAO analysis, the conferees direct that the Services’ composite budget pay rates should be reviewed, approved, and published not later than 30 days after the President’s budget request is submitted to the Congress.

REPROGRAMMING GUIDANCE FOR OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE ACCOUNTS

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to continue to follow the reprogramming guidelines specified in the conference report accompanying H.R. 3222, the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2008. Specifically, the dollar threshold for reprogramming funds shall remain at $15,000,000 for operation and maintenance accounts.

Also, the conferees direct the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) to continue to provide the congressional defense committees annual DD Form 1414 reports for service and defense-wide accounts in titles I and II of this Act. Further, the conferees direct the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) to submit the Base for Reprogramming (DD Form 1414) for each of the fiscal year 2013 appropriations accounts not later than 60 days after the enactment of this Act. The Secretary of Defense is prohibited from executing any reprogramming or transfer of funds for any purpose other than originally appropriated until the aforementioned report is submitted to the House and Senate Appropriations Committees.

The Secretary of Defense is directed to use the normal prior approval reprogramming procedures to transfer funds in the Services’ operation and maintenance accounts between O–1 budget activities in excess of $15,000,000. In addition, the Secretary of Defense should follow prior approval reprogramming procedures for transfers in excess of $15,000,000 out of the following budget sub-activities:

Army:
- Maneuver units
- Modular support brigades
- Land forces operations support
- Force readiness operations support
- Land forces depot maintenance
- Base operations support
- Facilities Sustainment, Restoration, and Modernization
- Aircraft depot maintenance
- Ship depot maintenance

  - Air Force: Primary combat forces
  - Combat enhancement forces
  - Combat communications
  - Facilities Sustainment, Restoration, and Modernization
  - Air Force Reserve depot maintenance
  - Air National Guard depot maintenance
  - National Guard depot maintenance

Finally, the Secretary of Defense should follow prior approval reprogramming procedures for transfers in excess of $15,000,000 into the following budget sub-activity:

MILITARY INFORMATION SUPPORT OPERATIONS

The conference agreement includes $187,200,000 for Department of Defense military information support operations, instead of $170,100,000 as proposed by the House and $226,600,000 as proposed by the Senate. Of the total amount, the conference agreement includes $32,400,000 in title II and $154,800,000 in title IX of this division. The allocation of funding by combatant command and funding levels for certain programs is specifically delineated in the classified annex accompanying this Act. Those items shall be considered congressional special interest items and be subject to normal reprogramming procedures. The conferees reiterate the direction in House Report 112–493 regarding congressional budget justifications and reporting requirements for military information support operations.

SPECIAL OPERATIONS COMMAND NATIONAL CAPITAL REGION

The conferees are aware of a proposal to establish a Special Operations Command National Capital Region (SOCOM–NCR) entity. While no funds were requested for this activity in either the fiscal year 2012 or fiscal year 2013 budget submissions, the conferees understand that SOCOM began this initiative using fiscal year 2012 Overseas Contingency Operations funds. Unfortunately, few details have been provided regarding the basis for this proposal and the expected efficiencies. Therefore, the conferees direct that no funds made available in this Act shall be used for the SOCOM–NCR until 30 days after the congressional defense committees have received a copy of the Secretary of Defense’s waiver of Section 8018 of this Act and a report which describes the purpose of, and activities to be performed by the SOCOM–NCR, an explanation of the impact of this proposal on existing activities at SOCOM headquarters, and a detailed, by fiscal year, breakout of the staffing and costs associated with its establishment over the future years defense program.

SPECIAL INTEREST ITEMS

Items for which additional funds have been provided are listed in the project level tables or in paragraphs using the phrase ‘‘only for’’ or ‘‘only to’’ are congressional special interest items for the purpose of the Base for Re-programming (DD Form 1414). Each of these items must be carried on the DD Form 1414 programming (DD Form 1414). Each of these items for the purpose of the Base for Re-programming is designated in the explanatory statement.

REPROGRAMMING GUIDANCE FOR ACQUISITION ACCOUNTS

The conference directs the Secretary of Defense to continue to follow the reprogramming guidance as specified in the report accompanying the House version of the fiscal year 2008 Department of Defense Appropriations bill (House Report 110–279). Specifically, the dollar threshold for reprogramming funds will remain at $20,000,000 for procurement and $10,000,000 for research, development, test and evaluation.

Also, the conferees direct the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) to continue to provide the congressional defense committees with quarterly, spreadsheet-based DD Form 1416 reports for service and defense-wide accounts in titles III and IV of this Act. Reports for titles III and IV shall comply with the guidance specified in the explanatory statement accompanying the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2006. The Department shall continue to follow the limitation that prior approval reprogrammings are set at either the specified dollar threshold or 20 percent of the procurement or research, development, test and evaluation line, whichever is less. These thresholds are cumulative from the base for reprogramming value as modified by any adjustments. Therefore, if the combined value of transfers into or out of a procurement (P-1) or research, development, test and evaluation (R-1) line exceeds the identified threshold, the Department of Defense must submit a prior approval reprogramming to the congressional defense committees. In addition, guidelines on the application of prior approval reprogramming procedures for congressional special interest items are established elsewhere in this statement.

DIMINISHING MANUFACTURING SOURCES COSTS IN MISSILE PROGRAMS

The conferees are concerned by the level of diminishing manufacturing sources (DMS) costs in Department of Defense tactical missile programs, particularly the Advanced Medium Range Air-to-Air Missile (AMRAAM). The conferees direct the Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics), in coordination with the Service secretaries, to provide two reports to the congressional defense committees.

The first report shall provide information on the management of DMS costs within the AMRAAM program, including an explanation of the cost drivers of AMRAAM DMS; an explanation of the AMRAAM program’s approach to DMS management and its conformity with departmental guidance and best practices; an economic analysis demonstrating the costs and benefits, including the break-even point, of the AMRAAM DMS program; and an analysis of the impact of foreign military sales on AMRAAM DMS costs and management. This report shall be submitted not later than 120 days after the enactment of this Act.

The second report shall provide information on the broader issue of DMS costs and management across all tactical missile procurement programs. This report shall provide an overview of current strategies for addressing DMS, including current and planned joint activities that address common DMS issues; an explanation of the key tactical missile DMS cost drivers; a comparison of DMS costs across all tactical missile programs; and an analysis of the impact of foreign military sales costs on AMRAAM DMS costs and management. This report shall be submitted not later than 180 days after the enactment of this Act.

In addition, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to report to the congressional defense committees on the policies and procedures in place governing the disposition of UAV collections that may inadvertently capture matters of concern to law enforcement agencies. These policies and procedures are designed to ensure constitutional protections and proper separation between the military and law enforcement. However, it is unclear if other Services and Defense agencies have similar policies and procedures in place, or if these policies and procedures need to be revised or standardized. Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to report to the congressional defense committees on the policies and procedures in place, or if these policies and procedures need to be revised or standardized. Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to report to the congressional defense committees on the policies and procedures in place, or if these policies and procedures need to be revised or standardized.

JOINT STRIKE FIGHTER ADVANCE PROCUREMENT AND CONTRACT DELAYS

The conferees are concerned with the Joint Strike Fighter (JSF) contract award timelines and the negative impacts on the JSF subcontractor workforce. The combination of inconsistencies in JSF advance procurement for each variant and the contract award delays have a potential to put the industrial base at risk or jeopardize the aircraft delivery schedule. Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to provide a report which examines the authorities and use of JSF advance procurement, including the rationale for the cost differences in advance procurement among the aircraft variants and their associated impacts to the subcontractor workforce. Additionally, the report should examine the causes of procurement contract award delays and the planned corrective action to ensure that final award of the production contracts occurs within the year of appropriation. This report shall be submitted to the congressional defense committees not later than 120 days after the enactment of this Act.

USE OF UNMANNED AERIAL VEHICLES IN DOMESTIC AIRSPACE

The conferees are aware of concerns that have been raised regarding the use of unmanned aerial vehicles (UAV) and their sensors in domestic airspace. The conferees understand that the Air Force has policies and procedures in place governing the disposition of UAV collections that may inadvertently capture matters of concern to law enforcement agencies. These policies and procedures are designed to ensure constitutional protections and proper separation between the military and law enforcement. However, it is unclear if other Services and Defense agencies have similar policies and procedures in place, or if these policies and procedures need to be revised or standardized. Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to report to the congressional defense committees on the policies and procedures in place, or if these policies and procedures need to be revised or standardized.

TITLE IV—RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION

The conference agreement provides $69,928,477,000 in Title IV, Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, instead of $69,984,145,000 as proposed by the House and $69,091,078,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement on items addressed by either the House or the Senate is as follows:
SPECIAL INTEREST ITEMS

Items for which additional funds have been provided as shown in the project level tables or in paragraphs using the phrase “only for” or “only to” are congressional special interest items for the purpose of the Base for Reprogramming (DD Form 1414). Each of these items must be carried on the DD Form 1414 at the stated amount, as specifically addressed in the explanatory statement.

REPROGRAMMING GUIDANCE FOR ACQUISITION ACCOUNTS

The conferees direct the Department of Defense to continue to follow the reprogramming guidance specified in the report accompanying the House version of the fiscal year 2008 Department of Defense Appropriations bill (House Report 110–279). Specifically, the dollar threshold for reprogramming funds will remain at $20,000,000 for procurement and $10,000,000 for research, development, test and evaluation.

Also, the conferees direct the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) to continue to provide the congressional defense committees with spreadsheet-based DD Form 1416 reports for service and defense-wide accounts in titles III and IV of this Act. Reports for titles III and IV shall comply with guidance specified in the explanatory statement accompanying the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2006. The Department shall continue to follow the limitation that prior approval reprogrammings are set at either the specified dollar threshold or 20 percent of the procurement or research, development, test and evaluation line, whichever is less. These thresholds are cumulative from the base for reprogramming value as modified by any adjustments. Therefore, if the combined value of transfers into or out of a procurement (P–1) or research, development, test and evaluation (R–1) line exceeds the identified threshold, the Department of Defense must submit a prior approval reprogramming to the congressional defense committees. In addition, guidelines on the application of prior approval reprogramming procedures for congressional special interest items are established elsewhere in this statement.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE AND SERVICE CYBER ACTIVITIES

The conferees understand that the Department is revising the budget justification materials to be provided with the fiscal year 2014 budget submission that are in support of cyber activities. The conferees support the Department’s efforts to provide increased detail on this important national security issue and will continue to work with the Department to ensure there is adequate oversight on cyber activities.

ACTIVE DENIAL TECHNOLOGY

The fiscal year 2013 budget request included $35,218,000 in Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Army, program element 0602624A, “Weapons and Munitions Technology”. The conferees are aware that multiple programs and projects are funded in this program element, including non-lethal technologies. The conferees recognize the benefits to units in the field of developing non-lethal technologies, including counter-personnel and directed energy technologies. The conference agreement provides an additional $15,000,000, as proposed by the House, to support Army research and development efforts in both lethal and non-lethal technologies.

SPACE MODERNIZATION INITIATIVES

The conference agreement provides an additional $18,000,000 for the Space Based Infra-Red System (SBIRS) and $25,000,000 for the Advanced Extremely High Frequency (AEHF) Satellite Modernization Initiative (SMI) efforts and reiterates the direction as detailed in Senate Report 112–196 for the Secretary of the Air Force to provide the congressional defense committees a report detailing how the additional SMI funds will be used not less than 30 days prior to the obligation of such funds.

The conferees support the evolution of current space systems but are concerned that the Department of Defense and the Air Force have yet to define the architectural and system specific goals being pursued with these funds. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force, in coordination with the Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics), to provide to the congressional defense committees, not later than 90 days after the enactment of this Act, a report describing the overall SMI strategy and goals, a specific accounting of the studies and technologies to be pursued, the current and follow-on costs for those efforts, schedules for delivery of such efforts, and a roadmap of how these efforts correlate or support the future acquisition plans for SBIRS, AEHF, and Global Positioning System satellite and ground segments.

PROMOTING ENERGY SECURITY

The conferees do not include a provision as proposed by the House regarding the Energy Independence and Security Act. However, the conferees provide $20,000,000 in Research, Development, Test, and Evaluation, Air Force only for research that will improve emissions of coal to liquid fuel to enable this technology to be a competitive alternative energy resource to meet the goals established in the Department of Defense’s Operational Energy Strategy and its Implementation Plan. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force, in consultation with the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Operational Energy Plans and Programs, to inform the congressional defense committees 30 days prior to any obligation or expenditure of these funds.

REPROGRAMMING GUIDANCE FOR THE DEFENSE HEALTH PROGRAM

The conferees remain concerned regarding the transfer of funds from Direct (or In-house) Care to pay for contractor-provided medical care. To limit such transfers and improve oversight within the Defense Health Program operation and maintenance account, the conferees include a provision which caps the funds available for Private Sector Care under the TRICARE program subject to prior approval reprogramming procedures. The provision and accompanying explanatory statement language included by the conferees should not be interpreted by the Department as limiting the amount of funds that may be transferred to the Direct Care System from other budget activities within the Defense Health Program. In addition, the conferees continue to designate the funding for the Direct Care System as a special interest item. Any transfer of funds from the Direct (or In-house) Care budget activity into the Private Sector Care budget activity or any other budget activity will require the Department of Defense to follow prior approval reprogramming procedures.

The Department shall also provide written notification to the congressional defense committees of cumulative transfers in excess of $15,000,000 out of the Private Sector Care budget activity. The conferees further direct the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health Affairs) to provide quarterly reports to the congressional defense committees on budget execution data for all of the Defense Health Program accounts and to adequately reflect changes to the budget activities requested by the Services in future budget submissions.

CARRYOVER

For fiscal year 2013, the conferees recommend one percent carryover authority for the operations and maintenance account of the Defense Health Program. The conferees direct the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health Affairs) to provide quarterly reports to the congressional defense committees on budget execution data for all of the Defense Health Program accounts and to adequately reflect changes to the carryover funds requested by the Services in future budget submissions.

PEER-REVIEWED CANCER RESEARCH PROGRAM

The conference agreement provides $1,301,786,000 for the DoD-Cancer Research Program. The conferees direct the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health Affairs) to submit a detailed spending plan for any fiscal year 2012 designated carryover funds to the congressional defense committees not less than 30 days prior to executing the carryover funds.

PEER-REVIEWED MEDICAL RESEARCH PROGRAM

The conference agreement provides $50,000,000 for a Peer-Reviewed Medical Research Program. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense, in conjunction with the Service Surgeons General, to select medical research projects of clear scientific merit and direct relevance to military health. Research areas considered under this funding are restricted to the following areas: chronic kidney disease, chronic migraine and post-traumatic headaches, composite tissue transplantation, dengue, DNA vaccine technology for postexposure prophylaxis, dystonia, epilepsy, food allergies, Fragile X syndrome, hantavirus, hereditary angioedema, inflammatory bowel disease, interstitial cystitis, leishmaniasis, lupus, malaria, nanomedicine for drug delivery science, pancreatitis, polycystic kidney disease, post-traumatic osteoarthritis, pulmonary hypertension, rheumatoid arthritis, scleroderma, and tinnitus. The conferees emphasize that the additional funding provided under the Peer-Reviewed Medical Research Program shall be devoted only to the purposes listed above.

INTEGRATED ELECTRONIC HEALTH RECORD

The conference agreement includes a provision restricting the amount of funding that may be obligated to develop the integrated Department of Defense-Department of Veterans Affairs (DoD-VA) Integrated Electronic Health Record (IEHR) to 25 percent of the funding provided until the DoD-VA Interagency Program Office (IPO) provides the House and Senate Appropriations Committees with a firm total cost of the integrated system. The conferees are concerned that after four years of working to collaborate and develop an integrated Electronic Health Record, the two Departments still seem to be operating as single entities. The conferees support the creation of the IPO and recognize this office as the single point of accountability for the development and implementation of the integrated Electronic Health Record for both Departments. Unfortunately, since the creation of the IPO and the naming of a director, the conferees have seen little benefit from establishing this office since both Departments appear to operate as separate entities. Despite repeated inquiries, neither the Departments nor the IPO has been able to provide Congress with a firm total cost of the integrated system. The conferees are concerned that the IPO is unable to maintain focus on its defined goals, provide effective governance, manage and maintain accountability on behalf of both Departments, and provide Congress with detailed expenditure plans as well as information regarding the progress and future plans for this project.

As a result, the conferees direct the IPO to deliver to the congressional defense committees, the Senate and House Subcommittees on Appropriations for Military Construction, Veterans Affairs, and Related Agencies, and the Government Accountability Office (GAO) a quarterly report that includes a detailed explanation of the cost and schedule of the IEHR development, to include milestones, knowledge points, and acquisition timelines as they impact both Departments, as well as quarterly obligation reports. The conferees also direct the IPO to deliver to the House and Senate Appropriations Committees on a quarterly basis, coinciding with the report submission. The conferees further direct the GAO to review these quarterly reports and provide an annual report to the congressional defense committees and the Senate and House Subcommittees on Appropriations for Military Construction, Veterans Affairs, and Related Agencies on the cost and schedule of the IEHR.

CHEMICAL AGENTS AND MUNITIONS DESTRUCTION, DEFENSE

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to continue to report incremental contingency operations costs for Operation New Dawn and Operation Enduring Freedom on a monthly basis in the Cost of War Execution report as required by the Department of Defense Financial Management Regulation, Chapter 23, Volume 12. The conferees further direct the Department to continue providing Cost of War reports to the congressional defense committees that include the following information by appropriation account: funding appropriated, funding allocated, monthly obligations, monthly disbursements, cumulative fiscal year obligations, and cumulative fiscal year disbursements.

The conferees expect that in order to meet unanticipated requirements, the Department of Defense may need to transfer funds within these appropriations accounts for purposes other than those specified in this report. The conferees direct the Department of Defense to follow normal prior approval reprogramming procedures should it be necessary to transfer funding between different appropriation accounts in this title.

The conferees are aware that certain governments and organizations have policies and practices counter to the best interests of the United States. The conferees reiterate that extremist governments and organizations should not be funded by this Act and that the conferees will closely monitor the expenditure of funds by the Department of Defense regarding such matters.

The conference agreement provides $14,116,821,000 for Military Personnel, instead of $13,934,683,000 as proposed by the House and $14,410,421,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement on items addressed by either the House or the Senate is as follows:

The conference agreement provides $8,979,438,000 for Procurement, instead of $7,906,039,000 as proposed by the House and $10,126,300,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement on items addressed by either the House or the Senate is as follows:
NATIONAL GUARD AND RESERVE EQUIPMENT

The conference agreement provides $1,500,000,000 for National Guard and Reserve Equipment. Of that amount, $460,000,000 is for the Army National Guard, $460,000,000 for the Air National Guard, $240,000,000 for the Army Reserve, $90,000,000 for the Navy Reserve, $120,000,000 for the Marine Corps Reserve, and $130,000,000 for the Air Force Reserve to meet urgent equipment needs that may arise this fiscal year.

This funding will allow the Guard and reserve components to procure high priority equipment that may be used by these components for both their combat missions and their missions in support of state governors. The conferees direct that the National Guard and Reserve Equipment account shall be executed by the Chiefs of the National Guard and reserve components with priority consideration given to the following items: A–10 Situation Awareness Upgrade; ARC 210 Radios for ANG F–16s; Arctic Search and Rescue Packages; Armory-Based Individual and Unstabilized Gunnery Trainers; Batteries and Battery Support Equipment; Bradley Modifications; C–130 Crash-Resistant Loadmaster Seats; C–130 Secure Line-of-Sight (SLOS) Beyond Line-of-Sight (BLOS) Capability; C–130/KC–135 Real Time Information in Cockpit (RTIC) Data Link; CH–47 Door Gun Mounts; Combat Mobility Equipment; Combined Arms Virtual Trainers; F–15 AESA Radars; Field Engineering, Logistics, Maintenance, and Security Equipment; Force Protection Equipment; Generation 4 Advanced Targeting Pods; Green Laser Interdiction Systems; handheld laser trackers; HC–130 Forward Area Refueling Point; Helicopter Firefighting Equipment; Helmet-Mounted Cuing System; HMMWV Recapitalization; In-Flight Propeller Balancing System; Internal and External Auxiliary Fuel Tanks for Apaches and Chinooks; Joint Threat Emitter; Large Aircraft Infrared Countermeasures (LAIRCM); Light Utility Helicopters; Modular Airborne Firefighting System II; Modular Small Arms Training Systems; MRAP Vehicle Virtual Trainers; Naval Construction Force Tactical Vehicles and Support Equipment; Reactive Skin Decontamination Lotion; SATCOM Ground Stations; Support Wide Area Network (SWAN) D V3/MRT Packages; Targeting Pod Upgrades; Thermal Imaging Systems; Ultra-Light Tactical Vehicles; Unit Maintenance Aerial Recovery Kits; Virtual Convoy Operations Trainers; and Virtual Door Gunner Trainers.

RESERVE COMPONENT SIMULATION TRAINING SYSTEMS

The use of simulation training systems has yielded a military that is better trained, more capable, and more confident as compared to units that do not have access to modern simulation training devices. Simulation training is a cost-effective means by which reserve units can improve tactical decision-making skills and ultimately save lives. It is anticipated that a portion of the funding in the National Guard and Reserve Equipment account will be used to procure a variety of simulation training systems. To ensure the most efficient and effective training programs, these systems should be a combination of both government owned and operated simulators, as well as simulation support from a dedicated commercial activity capable of providing frequent hardware and software updates.

NATIONAL GUARD AND RESERVE EQUIPMENT RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

The conferees are concerned that the active Services are not providing the necessary research, development, test and evaluation funding for federal and domestic operations requirements as they relate to equipping the reserve components, especially equipment unique to the reserve component or legacy systems with limited active component investment. The conferees understand that the funding required is minimal, and therefore direct the Services, particularly the Air Force, to provide the necessary research, development, test and evaluation funds to ensure that modernizing equipment or legacy systems unique to the reserve component be given the required design, integration, test, and software efforts needed prior to procurement.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION

The conference agreement provides $247,716,000 for Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, instead of $235,516,000 as proposed by the House and $260,413,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement on items addressed by either the House or the Senate is as follows:
REVOLVING AND MANAGEMENT FUNDS

The conference agreement provides $243,600,000 for the Defense Working Capital Funds, instead of $239,600,000 as proposed by the House and $1,487,864,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement on items addressed by either the House or the Senate is as follows:

DIVISION B—MILITARY CONSTRUCTION AND VETERANS AFFAIRS, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2013

Matters Addressed by Only One Committee—

The language and allocations set forth in House Report 112–491 and Senate Report 112–168 should be compiled with unless specifically addressed to the contrary in the conference report. This explanatory statement. Report language included by the House, which is not changed by the report of the Senate or this explanatory statement, and Senate report language, which is not changed by this explanatory statement, is approved by the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress. This explanatory statement replaces the report language for emphasis, does not intend to negate the language referred to above unless expressly provided herein. In cases where the House or the Senate has directed the submission of a report, such report is to be submitted to both Houses of Congress. House or Senate reporting requirements with deadlines prior to, or within 15 days after, enactment of the conference agreement shall be submitted no later than 80 days after enactment of this Act. All other deadlines not changed by this explanatory statement are to be met.

Department of Defense and Veterans Affairs Affairs Joint and Medical Facilities—

Having the Department of Defense (DOD) and Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) medical facility construction accounts in the same bill allows the Committees to view coordinated efforts and efficiencies within the two systems. An overarching concern of the conferees has been to facilitate the seamless transition from active duty service member to veteran, including the transition from DOD to VA medical facilities. The conferees are aware of multiple instances in which DOD and the VA have failed to coordinate medical facility construction efforts, in particular, where the VA is currently collocated with an existing DOD medical facility, but hospital replacement facilities are planned and budgeted in the military construction budget without coordination or consultation with the VA. Better coordination between Departments on construction activities, where appropriate, has the potential to save money by reducing duplicative construction costs, and provides a unique opportunity for creating more efficient use of medical equipment once the hospitals or outpatient clinics become operational. The conferees therefore direct the TRICARE Management Activity and the Veterans Health Administration to report to the congressional defense committees no later than 180 days after enactment of this Act on potential coordination construction coordination between the two agencies. The report should include a summary by fiscal year of the TRICARE Management Activity and the Veterans Health Administration’s multi-year construction plans for new facilities that currently are collocated as well as any potential new collocation sites.

Hiring Veterans—The conferees continue to be concerned about unemployment rates among the Nation’s veterans, particularly for those who have recently left active duty. With employment restrictions, this problem is likely to worsen. The conferees urge the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA), as well as the Department of Defense and the Department of Labor, as included in title III of this division, to reevaluate their efforts to hire returning veterans and to exceed where possible statutory requirements for veterans hiring. Recognizing the advantages and specialty certifications veterans have received through their military training, these agencies will gain a superior workforce and at the same time demonstrate the Government’s appreciation for our veterans’ service.

TITLE I

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE

ITEMS OF GENERAL INTEREST

Incrementally Funded Projects—The conferees note that the Administration requested several large military construction projects that can be incrementally funded, but were instead submitted as small single-year requests, in accordance with a directive from the Office of Management and Budget to the Department of Defense to severely restrict the use of funding for military construction. The conferees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress have previously notified the Administration that it is contrary to the principles and spirit of the Office of Management and Budget’s guidance to provide incremental funding where appropriate, in accordance with authorizing legislation. In general, the conferees support full funding of large projects. In some cases, however, incremental funding makes fiscal and programmatic sense. The conference agreement therefore incrementally funds the following projects: Ambulatory Care Center Phase 3, Joint Base San Antonio, Texas; STRATCOM Replacement Facility, Increment 2, Offutt AFB, Nebraska; U.S. Military Academy, West Point, New York; and Aegis Ashore Missile Defense Complex, Deveselu, Romania.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, ARMY

The conference agreement appropriates $1,984,325,000 for Military Construction, Army. Within this amount, the agreement provides $80,173,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services, and host nation support. Additionally, the conference agreement appropriates $15,951,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services for the Military Construction, Army Reserve. Within this amount, the agreement provides $8,000,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, NAVY AND MARINE CORPS

The conference agreement appropriates $4,641,000,000 for Military Construction, Navy and Marine Corps. Within this amount, the agreement provides $63,799,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services. The conference agreement appropriates $10,979,000,000 for Military Construction, Air Force Reserve. Within this amount, the agreement provides $2,879,000,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, AIR NATIONAL GUARD

The conference agreement appropriates $9,817,000,000 for Military Construction, Air National Guard. Within this amount, the agreement provides $1,190,000,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, NAVY RESERVE

The conference agreement appropriates $305,846,000 for Military Construction, Navy Reserve. Within this amount, the agreement provides $15,961,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, AIR FORCE RESERVE

The conference agreement appropriates $10,979,000,000 for Military Construction, Air Force Reserve. Within this amount, the agreement provides $2,879,000,000 for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services.

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION SECURITY INVESTMENT PROGRAM

The conference agreement appropriates $254,163,000 for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Security Investment Program.

FAMILY HOUSING CONSTRUCTION, ARMY

The conference agreement appropriates $4,841,000,000 for Family Housing Construction, Army.

FAMILY HOUSING OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, ARMY

The conference agreement appropriates $530,051,000 for Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Army.

FAMILY HOUSING CONSTRUCTION, NAVY AND MARINE CORPS

The conference agreement appropriates $102,182,000,000 for Family Housing Construction, Navy and Marine Corps.

FAMILY HOUSING OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, NAVY AND MARINE CORPS

The conference agreement appropriates $378,230,000,000 for Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Navy and Marine Corps.

FAMILY HOUSING CONSTRUCTION, AIR FORCE RESERVE

The conference agreement appropriates $83,824,000,000 for Family Housing Construction, Air Force.
FAMILY HOUSING OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, AIR FORCE

The conference agreement appropriates $497,829,000 for Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Air Force.

FAMILY HOUSING OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, DEFENSE-WIDE

The conference agreement appropriates $52,238,000 for Family Housing Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE FAMILY HOUSING IMPROVEMENT FUND

The conference agreement appropriates $1,786,000 for the Department of Defense Family Housing Improvement Fund.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE HOMEOWNERS ASSISTANCE FUND

The conference agreement provides no appropriation for the Department of Defense Homeowners Assistance Fund in fiscal year 2013, the same as the budget request.

CHEMICAL DEMILITARIZATION CONSTRUCTION, DEFENSE-WIDE

The conference agreement appropriates $151,000,000 for Chemical Demilitarization Construction, Defense-Wide.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE BASE CLOSURE ACCOUNT 1990

The conference agreement appropriates $409,396,000 for the Department of Defense Base Closure Account 1990. This amount is $65,000,000 above the budget request to accelerate the pace of environmental cleanup at closed or realigned military installations. Based on requirements identified by the services, the conferees direct that, of the additional funding provided, $30,000,000 be made available for the Army and $30,000,000 for the Navy. These funds are to be allocated at the discretion of the services to meet the most pressing unfunded environmental cleanup requirements at closed or realigned bases.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE BASE CLOSURE ACCOUNT 2005

The conference agreement appropriates $126,607,000 for the Department of Defense Base Closure Account 2005. The conferees note that significant bid savings have been realized in the BRAC 2005 construction program, primarily as a result of the favorable bid climate over the past several years, and believe that these savings should be used to offset current BRAC 2005 requirements. The conferees therefore are rescinding $132,513,000 from previous BRAC 2005 appropriations (Sec. 131 of Administrative Provisions) to offset the fiscal 2013 request.

BRAC 133.—In an effort to mitigate traffic congestion surrounding the Mark Center site, the conference agreement includes a limitation on the number of parking spaces the Department may utilize at the Mark Center to no more than 2,500, with the exception of disabled parking spaces. The limitation may be waived in part, but not in whole, if the Secretary of Defense certifies that none of the intersections surrounding the Mark Center reach failing levels of service “e” or “f,” as defined by the Transportation Research Board Highway Capacity Manual, during a consecutive 90 day period.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS (INCLUDING TRANSFERS AND RESCISSIONS OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement includes section 101 limiting the use of funds under a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee contract.

The conference agreement includes section 102 allowing the use of construction funds in this title for hire of passenger motor vehicles.

The conference agreement includes section 103 allowing the use of construction funds in this title for advances to the Federal Highway Administration for the construction of access roads.

The conference agreement includes section 104 prohibiting construction of new bases in the United States without a specific appropriation.

The conference agreement includes section 105 limiting the use of funds for the purchase of land or land easements that exceed 100 percent of the value.

The conference agreement includes section 106 prohibiting the use of funds, except funds appropriated in this title for that purpose, for family housing.

The conference agreement includes section 107 limiting the use of minor construction funds to transfer or relocate activities.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

TITLE II

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Budget justification requirements.—The conferees believe that the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) must strengthen its presentation of budget justification materials in several areas. The conferees concur in the direction of the Senate regarding the budget detail for components of the Veterans Health Administration such as the VA central office, Veterans Integrated Service Network (VISN) staff offices and centralized field support offices. The conferees request VA to provide more detailed information about the Board of Veterans Appeals staffing and claims workloads, and require the data requested in the House report pertaining to full-time equivalent (FTE) funding with administrative line items. The conferees also require a breakout of all reimbursable or cost sharing arrangements exceeding $5,000,000 in value that are in place for cross-cutting efforts across the Department.

Veterans Benefits Administration Compensation and Pensions (Including Transfer of Funds)

The conference agreement appropriates $88,599,856,000 for Compensation and Pensions. This reflects new estimates provided in the Administration’s mid-session review. Of the amount provided, not more than $9,204,000,000 is to be transferred to General Operations of Veterans Benefits Administration and Information Technology Systems, for reimbursement of necessary expenses in implementing provisions of title 38, United States Code. Additionally, the conferees request that the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) estimates it will obligate $1,089,000 for administrative expenses of the Veterans Benefits Administration. The conference agreement also provides $19,000 for the cost of direct loans from the Veterans Housing Benefit Program Fund.

Veterans Insurance and Indemnities

The conference agreement appropriates $104,600,000 for Veterans Insurance and Indemnities.

Veterans Housing Benefit Program Fund

The conference agreement appropriates $12,023,456,000 for Readjustment Benefits. The agreement reflects new estimates provided in the Administration’s mid-session review. The amount fulfills all veterans’ and their families’ obligations under the VA’s Readjustment Benefits program. The agreement limits obligations for direct loans to not more than $500,000 and provides that $157,814,000 shall be available for administrative expenses.

Vocational Rehabilitation Loans Program Account

The conference agreement appropriates $258,284,000 for the National Cemetery Administration. Of the amount provided, $25,828,000 is available until September 30, 2013 for the National Cemetery Administration.

Veterans Health Administration

Areas of Interest

Advance appropriation budgeting.—The conferees believe that the Department of Veterans Health Administration must provide more detailed explanations within its budget justification so the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate (“Committees”) will have an accurate and complete view of how its advance funding requests were determined. The conferees encourage the Committees to request more advance funding described in the Senate report.

Reprogramming for medical care initiatives.—The conference agreement includes an administrative provision requiring the Department to submit a reprogramming request whenever funding allocated in the fiscal year 2013 determination of National care Initiative differs by more than $150,000,000 from the allocation shown in the 2013 congressional budget justification. Due to the nature of the Department of Veterans Affairs’ requirement to submit its budget request almost seven full fiscal quarters before the fiscal year becomes available for obligation, the conferees understand that medical care funding is dynamic in nature and that this length of time between budget submission and obligation creates a situation in which funding priorities and needs may change. However, the conferees believe this has limited the Committees’ ability to provide proper budget oversight of initiatives which are funded by the Overall Medical Care Reallocation model. Therefore, the conferees expect the submission of reprogramming requests throughout the year identifying current year estimates whenever the Department determines that a significant amount of funding in certain initiatives. The term “medical care initiative” in the bill language refers only to the initiatives, not legislative proposals, in the “Initiatives/Proposals” section of the VA Medical Care Obligations by Program Fund Display page for Fiscal Year 2013. If a fiscal year 2013 budget justification. The bill language does not refer to special purpose funds allocated outside the Veterans Equitable Resource Allocation model. The Committees require that new programs be identified only by their aggregate and national specific project or location.

The conferees concur in the Senate direction regarding life cycle costs as it relates to the acquisition of batteries and directs that the reporting requirement contained in the Senate report be submitted no later than 180 days after enactment of this Act.

Medical Services

The conference agreement appropriates $315,573,000 in advance for fiscal year 2014 for Medical Services and Administration. The conference agreement appropriates $157,814,000 in advance for fiscal year 2013 for Medical Services. These appropriations include funding for the Veterans Health Administration. The conference agreement provides $157,814,000 in advance for fiscal year 2013 for the VA domiciliary care for homeless veterans, and includes the providers grant and per diem, which VA estimates it will obligate for those affected by drinking water contamination at Camp Lejeune, NC. Additional language citing new authority for services to veterans in rural areas. While the strategy to serve rural veterans outlined in the fiscal year 2013 budget request is a partial step, it fails to offer a long-term strategy for addressing the underserved veteran populations. The conferees believe that the VA is making substantial efforts to improve access and quality of care for rural areas, but are concerned that significant improvements are needed. To address the ongoing challenges in recruiting and retaining highly qualified healthcare professionals in rural areas, the conferees urge the VA to consider innovative ways to rotate practitioners through rural areas, including the approaches suggested in the Senate report. Secondly, the conferees urge the VA to expedite reprogramming of the grant program that will allow veterans service organizations to provide better transportation options for rural veterans seeking care at VA facilities. Finally, the conference agreement provides for a direct loan limitation for direct and guaranteed loans for such sums as may be necessary for costs as-areas whereas the NCA’s effort toward rural areas appears to be a lower priority. As a re-result, the conference agreement includes bill language requiring the Secretary to provide a report to the Committees within 180 days of enactment of this Act outlining a strategy to address the shortcomings identified in House Report 112-491, with proposed policies and recommendations. In addition, the conference agreement requires the Government Accountability Office to conduct a review of this strategy and submit it to the Committees and the Inspector General later than 120 days after the Committees receive the strategy.

The conference agreement includes bill language directing the Secretary to issue guidelines on committal services at VA national cemeteries to ensure that veterans’ family may hold committal services with any religious or secular content they desire and not have the participation of a chaplain, guard and veterans service organizations, subject to VA security, safety, and law enforcement regulations. The agreement also requires VA from enacting or controlling the content of speeches at events at national cemeteries, subject to VA authorities provided in section 2413 of title 38, United States Code.

regarding the VA budget office being the primary communication source within the VA to the Committees and their Members.

GENERAL OPERATING EXPENSES,
VETERANS BENEFITS ADMINISTRATION

The conference agreement appropriates
$2,164,074,000 for General Operating Expenses, Veterans Benefits Administration. The conference agreement makes available not to exceed $13,000,000 for this funding until the end of calendar year 2014.

The lengthy wait time and persistent backlog of claims at the Veterans Benefits Administration has placed an unacceptable burden on disabled veterans. The conference understands that the Department has set 2015 as the date by which it will reduce the backlog of claims and increase the accuracy rate at all regional offices to 98 percent. The conference directs the Department to submit quarterly reports including the number and location of the regional offices that have adopted the paperless claims processing system and the rollout of the individual improved business processes.

Recent findings by the Department of Veterans Affairs Office of Inspector General that the Oakland, Los Angeles and San Diego, California VA Regional Offices have high crime rates and backlogs of claims compared to other regional offices across the Nation is unacceptable. For example, the Inspector General found that 80 percent of claims in the Los Angeles office were unnecessarily delayed and that in one case a claim in Oakland had been pending for 8 years. The conference concur with the direction in the Senate report and direct the Department to submit a report to the Committees no later than 90 days after enactment of this Act detailing how the Inspector General’s recommendations are being implemented at these Regional Offices. The report shall also include an explanation about why the Los Angeles office is currently operating at 65 percent efficiency, which the committee believes means that staff is not held accountable to VA standards.

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY SYSTEMS (INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

The conference agreement appropriates
$3,257,445,000 for Information Technology (IT) Systems. The agreement identifies separate funding levels for the availability of pay ($1,021,000,000); operations and maintenance ($1,412,045,000); and systems development, modernization, and enhancement ($494,399,000).

The conference agreement makes $30,630,000 of pay funding available until the end of fiscal year 2014 and all IT systems development, modernization and enhancement funding available until the end of calendar year 2014.

As part of the VA’s modernization effort, the conference plans to replace its current automated appointment scheduling system with a modern system that easily integrates with other systems. The conference agrees to support this effort, however, remain concerned that VA has not developed a clear strategy aimed at replacing this system. Therefore the conferees direct the Department to submit a report to the Committees detailing the timeline, cost estimate, and implementation strategy for replacing the scheduling system.

The conferees include bill language making funds available for IT development, modernization, and enhancement for the projects and in the amounts specified in the following table:

The conference agreement directs the Department to submit an expenditure plan to the Committees within 30 days of enactment of this Act. This plan should be in the same format as the table below.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

The conference agreement appropriates $115,000,000 for the Office of Inspector General. Of the amount provided, $6,000,000 is available for obligation until September 30, 2014. The conferees intend the increase above the budget request to be used for review of VA spending on conferences, the NCA rural cemetery strategy, and VHA audit and field review activities.

CONSTRUCTION, MAJOR PROJECTS

The conference agreement appropriates $332,470,000 for Construction, Major Projects. The agreement makes this funding available for five years, except that $30,000,000 is made available until expended.

The conferees are pleased that the Department has already begun to transition major construction to a five-year funding cycle. During this implementation period, the conference agreement provides availability to cover a small amount of the funding while the VA reaches the requirement that project design reaches the requirement that project design is 35 percent complete prior to requesting construction funding. The extended availability will protect VA investment if unanticipated circumstances mandate expenditures beyond the five-year project window. The conference agreement funds the following items as requested in the budget submission:

The conferees direct the VA to submit a master plan at the time of the budget submission describing each major construction project included in the budget. The plan should include the projected timeline for completion of each component of each of the projects and the annual and total cost of each project. The format of the DOD Form 1901 is a good model for the VA to use to describe clearly and completely the expected obligations for each project.

I want to take a minute here to thank Bill Young and his subcommittee, who did such a tremendous job of balancing the interests of the country but with the overriding concern for the security of the country as they drafted—and passed on a bipartisan basis—the Defense appropriations bill.

Last week, I had the opportunity to ask the Joint Chiefs of our military if they supported this CR package, and the answer was an absolute, wholehearted "yes." Each one of them was asked if it was critical, and each one of the Joint Chiefs said this was critical to the defense of the country.

This legislation addresses severe funding constraints that would put our national security in dire straits. Military hospitals would not be built, veterans would not be cared for adequately, and our readiness would be seriously jeopardized. With sequestration now in effect, the Pentagon some leeway to do its best with what it has.

The bill provides $518 billion, the same top line level as last year. Within this top line, accounts have to be re-prioritized to maintain investment in critical programs, such as operation and maintenance, while finding savings in lower priority areas.

The legislation right-sizes spending that would otherwise have been wasted. For instance, we eliminate funding for unneeded spare parts and save funding from outdated programs and projects related to operations in Iraq no longer needed.

In addition, the bill provides $71.9 billion in discretionary funding for military construction and veterans affairs to ensure that our veterans get the care they have earned and that the quality of life in our military is continued. This includes an increase of about $2 billion in veterans funding, offset by savings in military construction.

The remainder of the bill, Mr. Speaker, funds the rest of the Federal Government until the end of the fiscal year on September 30. Nearly all funding will remain consistent with current levels, except for the very few exceptions that are needed to prevent catastrophic changes to government programs or to ensure good government. These include provisions allowing critical law enforcement entities to maintain current staffing levels, additional funding for embassy security and critical weather satellite launches, and an extension of the current pay freeze for Federal employees—including Members of Congress.

We’ve also required every single Federal agency to provide spending plans to Congress to ensure transparency and strong oversight of taxpayer dollars.

Nearly all of the funding in this bill is subject to the President’s sequestration, bringing the grand total for discretionary spending to around $884 billion. The bill is designed to help with the damage caused by continually putting off the regular annual appropriations bills, but it does not solve the many serious problems caused by these automatic spending cuts in sequestration.

A full-year continuing resolution is not the way this Congress should be approaching tax time. Each year, we should assess the needs and excesses of our government and make decisions accordingly in the regular appropriations process. We must return to regular order, pass individual spending bills on time, and fulfill our constitutional duty to fund government programs wisely and effectively. To do all of this, we have to have a partner in the Senate, and we’ve not had that now for these several years. Our hope springs eternal that the Senate will help us get back to regular order.

In light of the circumstances we face, we must make a good-faith effort to provide limited but fair and adequate funding for vital government programs and services through the end of the fiscal year. It is up to Congress to make these decisions to set the course for our financial future.

We must act now to make the most of this difficult situation, and that starts with avoiding a government shutdown on March 27 and providing for our national defense and veterans. This CR package is the right thing to do, the right time to do it, and it is the fair thing.

And so I urge, Mr. Speaker, my colleagues to show our Nation that we can get our work done by supporting this bill.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Before us is a defense bill and a Military Construction-Veterans Affairs bill adjusting the FY 2012 funding levels to meet FY 2013 needs.

It is unacceptable that Federal agencies and departments covered by the 10 remaining bills would be forced to operate under full-year continuing resolutions based on planned spending levels enacted 15 to 18 months ago. Congress’ failure to do our jobs and pass responsible annual spending bills limits our ability to respond to changing circumstances, implement other laws enacted by Congress, and eliminate funding that is no longer necessary.

Specifically, this bill will delay implementation of the Affordable Care Act scheduled to begin enrolling participants in October. Without IT infrastructure to process enrollments and payments, verify eligibility, and establish call centers, health insurance for millions of Americans would be further delayed. Last year’s levels will hamper enforcement of Dodd-Frank protections against improper practices in the financial sector.

The bill underfunds Head Start, child care, essential for many working parents who would otherwise have to quit their jobs.
The bill fails to strike outdated language allowing HUD to use public housing agency reserves to fund operations or provide a requested increase to make up for the shortfall resulting in the lowest per-unit operating subsidy since 2007, despite rising housing costs.

The bill we consider today even denies increases for health care fraud and abuse control and Social Security disability reviews and SSI eligibility determinations, both of which return more money to the Treasury than they cost.

And the continuing resolution excludes loan guarantees for Jordan, necessary to help an important ally stabilize its economy.

The effects, my colleagues, of these outdated plans and spending levels in the continuing resolution are compounded by Congress’ failure to replace sequestration with a balanced, responsible, long-term debt reduction plan. The Congressional Budget Office estimates that sequestration would cut economic growth in 2013 by a third.

That’s jobs. That’s people’s lives.

Last year, our fragile economy struggled to create a total of 2.2 million jobs. The sequestration plan is expected to cut out, get rid of, 750,000 jobs, more than a third of all the jobs created last year.

Now, I want to make it very clear, my colleagues, this bill reaffirms sequestration. The terrible impact of those indiscriminate cuts will begin to take effect. This summer, we can expect significant flight delays and long lines at airports due to furloughs of air traffic controllers and a hiring freeze and reduced hours for transportation security officers.

Yesterday, the Labor-HHS Subcommittee, heard testimony from the directors of the National Institutes of Health and CDC on the detrimental effects these irresponsible cuts will have, including halting medical research, fewer child vaccinations, and reduced protections against epidemics. Just try and explain to your friends and neighbors who have children with autism, seniors who are dealing with Alzheimer’s, friends who have heart cardiology issues. Just try and explain what the National Institute cuts in research will do. In addition to the impact in the research on these illnesses, these are real people who are going to be laid off and impede our future research.

All of that on top of the already scarce resources or provide a requested increase in the lowest per-unit operating subsidy since 2007, despite rising housing costs.

Now, I am pleased that two bills, the defense spending. Most of the civilian workforce will face significant furloughs, readiness will still face cuts, and defense health care will need to make some very tough choices with scarce resources.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot support this bill because it fails to take responsible steps to support the middle class in really tough economic times or responsibly address the long-term fiscal health of our Nation.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the very distinguished and hardworking chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, the gentleman from California (Mr. MCKEON).

Mr. MCKEON. I thank the chairman of the Appropriations Committee for yielding, and thank him for the great work that he has done on getting this bill to the floor; likewise, the chairman of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee. They have done yeoman’s work to help provide for our national defense.

Mr. Speaker, I agree with much of what my good friend, the gentlelady from New York, said: Sequestration is bad, it’s irrational. It would cost the CR, which will feel worse than the effects of the sequestration. We will shut down the whole government. Nobody wants to see that, and so I commend her for what she said.

This is not perfect, but it keeps a lot of people working. I think it is very, very important that we get it done.

As chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, I am happy to see us voting to include a full-year defense appropriations bill as well as a full-year Military Construction-Veterans Affairs bill. This is very important. At least we have one committee that can do regular order still, and I think that is very important.

Enacting a full-year DOD appropriations bill is the first step toward restoring funding for our military, which has been whipsawed by the dual combination of the sequester and the CR that we are operating under. None of our currently serving service Chiefs—the Chief of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marines, including the Chief of all of the services—in their time have ever operated under a real budget. Most of the Members of Congress haven’t served under regular order in seeing how we have really done. So this is a step forward to get us back to regular order.

A full year appropriation will allow the service chiefs to cancel programs that we’ve already canceled in the Defense Authorization Act. It allows them to mitigate the effects of the sequester and the CR stovepipes in certain accounts.

The bill we consider today even denies increases for health care fraud and abuse control and Social Security disability reviews and SSI eligibility determinations, both of which return more money to the Treasury than they cost.

General Odierno, Chief of Staff of the Army, is looking at having to curtail 37,000 hours of flying for helicopter pilots at Fort Rucker in Alabama, where all of our helicopter pilots go to be trained. That’s about 500 to 750 pilots who will not be trained. Units preparing now to deploy to Afghanistan are not receiving the same training as those who are there now fighting. That is shameful. We need to restore those accounts. This puts those who are preparing to go at greater risk once they arrive in theater. Under a full year DOD appropriation, which we’ll be voting on today, General Odierno will have the authority to restore a lot of those flying hours and critical training for those who are preparing to deploy.

I have just another little example. Admiral Greenert, Chief of Naval Operations, has said that if he had the funding and the flexibility to move money between accounts, and the Navy would be able to keep a carrier strike group and an amphibious ready group in the Middle East and the Pacific through next year. That is crucial to our national security.

I would encourage all of our colleagues to support this bill. It’s not perfect, but it takes us a long step toward helping to secure our national security.

I thank the chairman and the chairman of the subcommittee for their great work.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. MCKEON, I just want to emphasize again that General Odierno in the recent appropriations hearing on the Defense bill testified that sequester would be a disaster for the military. And it’s unfortunate that we are not ridding ourselves of the prospect of the disaster that the sequester bill will result in.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will remind the Members that remarks in debate must be addressed to the Chair and not to other Members in the Chamber. Please consult page 2 of the daily line.

Mrs. LOWEY. At this time, I’m delighted to yield 2 minutes to my distinguished leader from Maryland (Mr. HOYER).

Mr. HOYER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. HOYER. I agree with the gentlelady who has just spoken, but I want to say to my friend, Mr. MCKEON, this is neither regular order nor rational policy. It ought to be rejected.

This CR does nothing to address the irrational cuts to defense and non-defense that the sequester will require.
It could be very harmful to our economy and to our national security, and it could place the most vulnerable in America at great risk.

We should not allow, my colleagues, our government to shut down, but we cannot do business this way, lumping one manufactured crisis to the next.

When we make agreements, we ought to stick to them. And the agreement was, the sequester has tried to put forward—and I want to congratulate him for that—that we would spend on the discretionary side of the budget at about $1.43 trillion. That is not what this bill does. It breaks the deal.

Nötely expected sequester to take place, and we ought to obviate it because it will hurt defense, our national security and our domestic security.

Mr. Speaker, we made an agreement. We ought to keep it. That’s not what we have in this CR.

While the Defense funding in this package is something I would like to vote for and the procedures incorpor- porated in it, I do not want this government to shut down, but we cannot do business this way, lumping one manufactured crisis to the next.

I urge my colleagues to defeat this CR so we can send a message to those who control this Chamber that we have a responsibility to our country and to our people to adopt a balanced fiscal plan to reduce our debt and deficit and invest in the growth of the economy.

That is not what this bill does. I urge its defeat.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I now yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. CULBER- SON), the chairman of the Military Con- struction and Veterans Affairs Sub- committee on appropriations.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. Speaker, why are House conservatives so determined to cut the budget and move towards a balanced budget?

Every 5 years, the Joint Chiefs of Staff get together and they do a stra- tegic review of the threats facing this Nation. In the last review, they deter- mined that the greatest threat facing our Nation was the national debt, that it would eventually consume us and cause its collapse.

Just a few days ago, we celebrated Texas Independence Day. But for the debt the Republic of Texas accumu- lated, we would have continued as an independent nation.

The debt caused a collapse of the Republic of Texas, and House conservatives are deeply con- cerned that these debts and deficits will ultimately crush the United States of America just as it did the Republic of Texas.

How do we even begin to get our mind around it and understand it? Think in these terms: in your personal lives, you always pay your mortgage and taxes first.

I deduct my mortgage and taxes out of my paycheck. We all do. You have to pay your mortgage and taxes first. America’s mortgage and taxes are Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, in- terest on the national debt and veter- ans’ benefits. Those are things we must pay first. That’s our mortgage and taxes.

When we pay our mortgage and taxes first as a Nation, it consumes all of our income. All that’s left is about $185 billion. When we pay Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, interest on the na- tional debt, veterans’ benefits, that’s it. All you’re left with is $185 billion. America, to run the government for the entire year. That will only run the Federal Government for about 10 days. And you’re living on a credit card that will be paid for by our chil- dren and grandchildren, which is a dev- astating heritage to leave to our kids.

This is why House conservatives are so determined to balance the budget. But we recognize how essential national security is. We recognize how vital it is that our men and women in uniform focus on their mission, focus on defend- ing America around the world. We don’t want them to worry about whether or not they’ve got enough equipment, enough gas, enough ammo, that they’ve got the best facilities in the world, the best health care in the world.

That’s why Chairman ROGERS and Chairman YOUNG put together this bill. I’m proud to be a part of it for my piece, the Military Construction and Veterans Affairs portion, to make sure that our men and women in uniform can focus on their mission and not look over their shoulder and worry for one moment that they have the full sup- port of the Congress, the full support of the American people to do what they have to do to put their lives on the line to defend this great Nation.

This bill is essential because it funds the military at a level for fiscal year ‘13, which is a sufficient increase that will allow them to absorb these automatic budget cuts—the sequester. That terminology is confusing to folks, but it is essentially an automatic spending cut across the board.

All of us conservatives want to see those cuts go into place, and we’d like to shift them away from the military and move them into other areas; but we’ve got a situation in which conserva- tives only control, basically, one half of one-third of the Federal Government. We are outnumbered. We feel a little bit like the Spartans at Thermopylae. We’re doing our best to move towards a balanced budget in a way that is prudent, that won’t raise taxes, that protects our military and the veterans and the essential needs of this Nation.

Chairman BILL YOUNG has done a super job in putting together a Defense bill at this level of funding for the De- fense Department. In fact, we deter- mined yesterday from the Chief of Staff of the Army, General Odierno, that by passing this bill today, we will solve at least a third of the problems that the Army would face as a result of the automatic spending cuts. By fund- ing at fiscal year ‘13, when the cuts kick in, it’s a far softer blow to the military than it would be if we were stuck at ’12 levels. As well, the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Greene, said that the difference was night and day. By passing this bill today, it will cush- ion the blow on the Navy dramatically. And forward to my colleagues from all over the country to continue to work to soften the blow on the military; but this bill is essential in order to make sure our men and women in uniform have everything they need to do their jobs to protect this country.

Mrs. LOWEY. I would just like to quickly remind my colleagues on both sides of the aisle that the Defense bill will be subject to the $48 billion as a re- sult of sequestration, which General Odierno said will hollow out the force.

Mr. Speaker, I am very honored to yield 2 minutes to my colleague, the gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. DAVID PRICE, a distinguished ranking member of the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, there is a blizzard of evidence against sequestration’s continued use; yet the Republican fiscal policy keeps skiing ahead like an out-of-control snowplow.

Instead of avoiding sequestration with a balanced deficit reduction package, the CR will lock in these devastating cuts—impairing vital government functions, reducing the paychecks of thousands of American workers, and undermining our economic recovery. The CBO says it will cost three-quarters of a million jobs.

Earlier this week, Mr. Speaker, I heard a panel of economists speculate about what future historians some 20 or 30 years from now, will say about what we’re going through. They’re likely to be baffled: How could a great Nation do such damage to itself? How could political brinksmanship and rigid ideology go so far? In fact, that’s exactly what my constituents are already asking as they begin to pay the price for this House’s failure to do what we were elected to do.

Just yesterday, members of the Military Construction and Veterans’ Affairs Subcommittee heard testimony from senior officers of each service about the impact of sequestration on their operations. Their message was: Don’t be fooled. We may be giving them marginally greater flexibility by including the full-year 2013 bills for defense and veterans in this continuing resolution, but we are not sparing them from the sledgehammer of sequestration.

This approach also begs the question: Why not pass full-year bills for all departments? The Homeland Security Subcommittee produced a compromise full-year bill that could easily have been included in this measure. Stopgap funding measures only perpetuate economic uncertainty and only prevent us from getting to the heart of our fiscal challenges.

Mr. Speaker, we owe this body a better appropriations process, and we owe our people a budget that accelerates the recovery and protects our economic future instead of simply serving a rigid political ideology.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I yield now 3 minutes to the vice chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. THORNBERRY).

Mr. THORNBERRY. I appreciate the chairman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I’ve got to observe that I wish that all of the Members on both sides of the aisle who decry sequestration today had voted with those of us who passed bills twice last year to target cuts rather than having this across-the-board approach. This bill, like sequestration, is not what any of us would like. If it were up to me, for example, I would replace the money that it takes out of Defense and probably rearrange a lot of the domestic spending as well. Imperfect as this measure is, I believe it is absolutely essential that we pass it today. I want to focus for just a second on Defense.

Even if you spend the same amount of money in the continuing resolution or on an appropriation bill, it makes an enormous amount of difference which of those vehicles one uses because, in a regular appropriation bill, you can have the flexibility to meet the current needs as they are locked into the last year’s levels, and that breeds inefficiencies and waste. So just to get the same amount of equipment, for example, it takes more money under a CR than it does under a regular appropriation bill.

You just had the question posed: Why do this just for Defense? Why treat Defense differently and have a full appropriation bill for Defense and MILCON and Veterans and not the rest of it? Let me offer some answers.

Number one is because we can. Both the House and Senate appropriators have negotiated a Defense appropriation bill. It is there for us to take and include in this measure, so Chairman Rogers and I picked it up and included it in this CR.

A second reason is that the House and Senate have passed and the President has signed into law a Defense authorization bill that is consistent with this appropriation bill. There is no other area of government that has done that. So if you look at what already is the law, passing an appropriation bill to implement it makes sense.

A third reason is that Defense took a disproportionate share of the cuts under sequestration. Defense is 18 percent of the Federal budget. It had to absorb 50 percent of the cuts. It took a disproportionate share, and therefore some relief from the constraints will be needed by the Defense appropriation bill. There is no other area of government that has done that. If you look at what already is the law, passing an appropriation bill to implement it makes sense.

I’ll tell you a fourth reason to treat Defense differently is that defense is the first job of the Federal Government. We send our soldiers and intelligence community personnel to all parts of the world to risk their lives to defend us, and it seems to me that the least we could do is give them the flexibility and support they need to do their jobs.

Therefore, I think it is absolutely essential for the country’s defense that we pass this appropriation bill, and I urge all Members on both sides of the aisle to support it.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, may I ask how much time remains?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York (Mr. SERRANO). Mr. SERRANO. I thank the ranking member.

As the ranking member of the Financial Services and General Government Appropriations Subcommittee, I wanted to outline several areas of concern in this section of the bill. Several agencies under the jurisdiction of the subcommittee requested vital changes to their fiscal year 2013 budget to help them address pressing needs and to blunt the impact of the sequester. Unfortunately, all of these changes were rejected by the other side.

For instance, no additional money is provided to the Securities and Exchange Commission to continue the implementation of the Dodd-Frank legislation. We need a strong cop on the beat to prevent financial misbehavior, and this bill does not help in this regard.

Under this bill, no additional money is provided to the IRS to help them catch tax cheaters or to help Americans with questions on their tax forms. Moreover, no additional money is provided to help the IRS administer new tax credits under the Affordable Care Act, which is something that will only lead to more confusion; and once again, Republicans are attempting to extend the Federal employee pay freeze for the rest of the year.

Had we had a full omnibus bill—and I think, with a little bit of work, we could have had such a bill—we could have helped address many of these concerns.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHuster), who chairs the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, for the purpose of a colloquy.

Mr. SHUSTER. Thank you, Chairman ROGERS, and I do want to engage in a quick colloquy on the Medium Extended Air Defense System, known as MEADS.

As you are aware, the fiscal year 2013 National Defense Authorization Act included a provision of law that prohibits funds from being obligated or expended on the MEADS program. There has been some confusion over the wording on the program in the Defense Appropriations report before us. I would like to verify that it is your intent that the prohibition created in the NDAA is law and not changed or overridden by anything in this bill.

I yield to the chairman.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. I thank the gentleman for yielding and would confirm that the gentleman is correct. The prohibition in the NDAA is law, and this bill does not change or override that fact. The language in our report was conferred last year when the outcome of MEADS in the NDAA was not known. Chairman Young works closely with the Armed Services Committee, and it is not our intention to change or override any provision of that bill. The prohibition in the bill is the law.

Mr. SHUSTECK. I thank the gentleman for making that clear.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I’m very pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR), the distinguished ranking member of the Energy and Water Subcommittee.

Ms. KAPTUR. I thank the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR), the distinguished ranking member of the Energy and Water Subcommittee.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my appreciation that we are considering this continuing resolution today and not on the precipice of another government shutdown. Chairman ROGERS and Ranking Member LOWEY have been tireless in their efforts to bring a semblance of regular order to the appropriations process and, in turn, this House.

However, I must express my disappointment that we are not advancing a government-wide, fully inclusive bill with adjustments that address the pressing needs of the American people across all Federal departments and agencies. Despite my appreciation for consideration of this bill, by being unable and unwilling to pass all our individually negotiated appropriation bills, the Congress is doing a great disservice to the American people and not providing accountability necessary for Federal programs to operate effectively.

As ranking member of the Energy and Water Subcommittee, I would like to express my disappointment further that necessary adjustments to two-thirds of our jurisdiction are not included. For example, important areas of cybersecurity, as well as reducing the local cost share for the Army Corps projects related to the revitalization after Hurricane Sandy, are missing.

Further, adjustments to the Weatherization Assistance Program are not included. This vital program is facing significant funding challenges given many States are either out of Federal funds entirely or will be out of all Federal funds. In order for the program to continue to deliver services as blizzards blanket this country, and for low-income Americans to continue to receive the energy savings from this program for their homes, an increase in program support is necessary and would be a real job creator across this country.

Further, the bill does not include the administration’s request to increase funding for the Advanced Manufacturing program for our Nation to meet the fierce global competition for manufacturing jobs. The United States must regain its position in global manufacturing. We cannot prosper as a Nation of service providers only.

I would like to highlight the National Nuclear Security Administration as an example of where a CR does not provide the necessary oversight for good government.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Mrs. LOWEY. I yield an additional 15 seconds to the gentlewoman.

Ms. KAPTUR. I thank the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR), the distinguished ranking member of the Energy and Water Subcommittee.

In closing, while I am disappointed in the bill’s shortcomings, I am hopeful that collectively Congress can improve upon this bill as it moves to the other body.

Again, I commend our chairman, Mr. ROGERS, and Ranking Member NITA LOWEY of New York, such a phenomenal leader.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute, and I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. ISSA) for the purpose of a colloquy.

Mr. ISSA. Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding that the Office of Management and Budget submitted a list of proposed anomalies for the pending continuing resolution. Is that correct, and can you tell me the date that the Office of Management and Budget transmitted that list?

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. The gentleman is correct. OMB did submit a list of proposed anomalies on February 18.

Mr. ISSA. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Can you also tell me if that proposed list of anomalies included any changes to the provisions in current law regarding what is commonly called 6-day delivery and requires a level of service by the Postal Service at the 1983 level?

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. OMB did not propose any change to the provisions in current law regarding 6-day delivery.

Ms. KAPTUR. I thank the gentleman.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I’m delighted to yield 2 minutes to my friend, the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DeLAUNO), the distinguished ranking member of the Labor, Health, Human Services, Education Subcommittee.

Ms. DeLAUNO. I rise in strong opposition to this continuing resolution. It makes permanent, deep, indiscriminate, and harmful across-the-board cuts—that will cost our country hundreds of thousands of jobs, and will hamstring our economic recovery. It will cost 750,000 jobs, according to the Congressional Budget Office and Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke.

If you vote ‘yes’:
- You vote to cut $400 million in cuts to Head Start—70,000 children will lose access;
- You vote to slash $282 million from job training programs;
- You vote to cut $731 million from Title I grants—that means 2,500 schools will be forced to stop providing this crucial aid to 1 million children;
- You are voting to cut over $580 million from special education grants—that shifts the cost of 300,000 students with special needs to State and local education agencies;
- You vote to cut $115 million from child care at a time when only one in six of the children eligible for child care assistance are receiving it—30,000 more kids will lose this aid;
- You vote to starve implementation of the Affordable Care Act at a time when the health reforms we passed are being implemented;
- You vote to cut funding for vaccinations and cancer screenings.

These cuts only add to the deep cuts that have already been made: $12 billion since 2002 have been made to labor, education, and health programs, in addition to which the Budget Control Act added another $9 billion, and this resolution will add $7 billion more in cuts to what are critical priorities for this Nation.

We cannot shortchange all of these fundamental priorities. It is time for this institution to exercise its moral responsibility. Use our budget as a vehicle for job creation and economic growth. I urge my colleagues to oppose this dangerous resolution.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Ms. Issa), the chairman of the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee.

Ms. ISSA. Mr. Speaker, on February 6, the Postal Service announced a plan to move to a modified 6-day delivery schedule beginning in August. Under this plan, the Postal Service will continue high-quality delivery 6 days a week using its express and priority mail system. This will include packages and mail under that system, and will include vital medicine for our seniors. This change will enable the Postal Service to save $2 billion a year or more.

As the chairman of the authorizing committee, I want to clarify that the authorizing language is consistent with a 6-day delivery provision in the CR under this system announced by the Postmaster on February 6.

Specifically, this provision would not prohibit the Postal Service from implementing this plan of modified 6-day delivery service.

I want to confirm further that the President, himself, had previously called for 5-day delivery. The Postmaster is maintaining 6-day delivery, but using priority and express mail to do so. This is fiscally responsible and consistent with the administration not putting an anomaly into the CR.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. Farr), the distinguished ranking member of the Agriculture Subcommittee of Appropriations.
Mr. FARR. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

I've been in Congress 20 years, and on the Appropriations Committee not quite that long. And never in my life have I seen us in such disarray.

This institution has failed to lead the Nation. It's failed to get its own act together. We can't do this in a transparent, normal process by adopting bills. We're operating on these emergency issues like continuing resolutions, sequestration. We're in mass confusion, and our States and local governments are dependent on us getting our act together. I'm not surprised that we are failing to address the needs of this Nation.

Yes, we have a huge debt. Everybody in this Congress has a huge debt in their own life. It's called a mortgage. And we figure out a 30-year plan or a 15-year plan to pay it off.

Doing this by CR is totally irresponsible. I ask for a "no" vote.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BISHOP), the distinguished ranking member of the MILCON Subcommittee of Appropriations.

Mr. BISHOP of Georgia. I thank the gentlelady for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, today this body is voting on two updated bills that reflect the needs of FY 2013 and 10 outdated plans with outdated spending levels that were enacted over a year ago.

Mr. Speaker, we need to complete the process on all the bills, not just two. Governing by continuing resolution is not governing.

Furthermore, the legislation before us today does nothing to address sequestration. The failure to address sequestration will be devastating on military construction. For example, the Army's Barracks Modernization effort will be delayed. For the Navy, sequestration will affect 10,000 Navy-owned and 3,000 leased homes by delaying housing construction and improvements.

The Air Force has made it a goal to eliminate inadequate housing for unaccompanied airmen by 2017. And sequestration will delay that goal and cause airmen to continue to live in substandard housing.

The most troubling aspect of sequestration to me is the impact it will have on the Department of Defense's school recapitalization efforts. A comprehensive assessment of DOD dependent schools and construction requirements indicated that 149 out of 189 schools had an overall condition rating of poor or failing, and required significant recapitalization. Sequestration will only exacerbate this problem.

These reductions to military construction will only result in substantial operation and maintenance savings and job losses and job losses in the construction industry and slowed economic growth.

I remain hopeful that a balanced solution will win over rigid, ideological discussions in the coming weeks so that we can restore the irresponsible cuts.

Sequestration is bad. This CR does not address it, not even to mention the nondefense related cuts. This is bad for Head Start, job training, title I, special ed, child care, cancer screening, the loss of WIC, and I could go on and on.

This CR is not the way to govern. However, we need to come together across partisan lines, and we need to find middle ground so that we can do what is needed for the American people.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire of the time?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN), the distinguished vice chairman of the Defense Subcommittee on Appropriations, Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I rise in support of the resolution and urge its adoption.

I would like to commend the chairman of the full Appropriations Committee, Mr. ROGERS, and the chairman of the Defense Subcommittee, Mr. YOUNG, for their determination and perseverance in bringing the completed Defense and Military Construction/VA bills to the floor for consideration this afternoon and this morning.

Since before the end of last fiscal year, they have been committed to completing the fiscal year 2013 bills in committee and to bringing them to the floor and on to the President's desk for his signature.

Why? Because they understand the damage that would be done to our national security if the Department of Defense was forced to operate under the funding levels and restrictions placed on them by the fiscal year 2012 bill.

By passing this package today, we will be giving our military leadership additional flexibility to protect their mission and capabilities in this constrained fiscal environment.

I would also add that the passage of these measures today reinforces Congress' authority to set policy for the Department of Defense in important areas such as the Air Force recapitalization, Navy ships, Navy submarines, etc. And also it makes sure that we don't cede these sorts of decisions only to the executive branch.

I'm pleased that the package also allows additional funds for nuclear weapons modernization, to ensure the safety, security, and reliability of our Nation's nuclear stockpile. This is an important aspect of our energy and water infrastructure.

Finally, I'd remind our colleagues that this legislative package does nothing to alter the sequestration that took effect last Friday. Simply put, that is a problem, a major problem.

Five members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff presented their chilling testimony before our subcommittee last week, as the chairman referred to earlier, describing how national security would be put at risk if they were forced to make deep reductions in spending for personnel and equipment modernization programs.

Maintenance will suffer. Training for non-deploying soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen, and Guardsmen will virtually stop. Hardworking civilians will face unnecessary furloughs.

The Army Chief of Staff testified before our full committee. General Ray Odierno told us of his worry, and I quote: "If we do not have the resources to train and equip the force, our young men and women will pay the price, potentially with their lives."

Marine Commandant General Jim Amos reminded us that America's allies and enemies are watching to determine whether our country remains able to meet its commitments overseas. He said, and I quote: "This institution has failed to lead the Nation. It's failed to get its own act together - America is confused to send us something to relieve us of sequestration, while we're waiting for the President to send us a bill relieving us of sequestration, which we're waiting for the President to send us something to relieve us of sequestration, which we have no choice but to pass a continuing resolution to keep the government operating."
Sequestration I hope we can deal with in the future, but now we’re dealing with whether or not to shut the government down. Is that not correct?

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. That is correct, Mr. Chairman. Let’s keep the government open for business.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. I thank the gentleman.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Before I yield to my next speaker, I would like to thank Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN for addressing sequestration and the devastating testimony of all those representing our distinguished Armed Forces. But I would also like to clarify again that this continuing resolution reaffirms sequestration. It does nothing in language or deed to make any efforts to cancel sequestration. We on this side of the aisle would be very pleased to continue to work with you in regular order to go through every bill, casting away waste, fraud and abuse, but to do away with sequestration. And I know my distinguished chair and I could work it out so that we could sequester.

This bill, section 3002, reaffirms sequestration.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Will the gentlelady yield?

Mrs. LOWEY. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Would the gentlelady be so kind as to talk to the majority leader in the Senate about sending us over a bill to relieve us of sequestration? And, two, would the gentlelady talk to her President to see if he would do that? We’re ready to act.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Chairman, I would be delighted to work with you, but I have read this continuing resolution very carefully and section 3002 reaffirms sequestration. Let’s work together. We can produce the leaders. Let’s send over a bill that does away with sequestration, which my good friend, Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, says—and I was at that defense hearing, too—would hollow out our forces. Let’s do that. Let’s do that today. Why don’t you submit an amendment? Let’s get rid of sequestration.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. If the gentlelady will yield, last year ended at the end of the last session. That’s in addition to over $300 billion already cut last year. That is in addition to the President and Members of Congress who say we are prepared to make further cuts in waste, fraud, and abuse. And some things are not wasteful. Maybe they’re just not a priority anymore or we found a better way to do it. Maybe they’re duplicative or obsolete. But, nonetheless, we can’t afford them anymore.

So let’s subject every dollar to harsh scrutiny; but we also have to subject all the spending on these tax breaks, because that is spending. When you give a subsidy to Big Oil of $38 billion as an incentive to drill, you are spending the taxpayers’ dollars. Let’s cut that spending, too.

Now, what’s interesting about this is that, in what the Republicans are supporting, they are totally out of sync with the American people. Republicans across our country are opposed to the corporate jet loophole. They want to close the corporate jet loophole. And Republicans, by majority, support them. They want to eliminate oil and gas tax breaks. Republicans, by majority, support eliminating that. Republicans across the country say we should limit deductions for millionaires and billionaires. Republicans, of course, say we should end tax breaks for corporations to send jobs overseas. The list goes on.

Republicans, by majority, support the Buffett rule. Even some Republicans in the Senate say we must look at closing some of these loopholes—not just to lower rates for special interests, some of which I just named, and advances the Buffett rule, ensuring that millionaires pay their fair share.

We had an opportunity to today in our previous question to bring to the floor the proposal advanced by Mr. CHRIS VAN HOLLEN, our ranking member on the Budget Committee. Mr. VAN HOLLEN’s proposal is responsible and fair and it is balanced. It cuts spending responsibly. It ends unfair tax breaks for special interests, some of which I just named, and advances the Buffett rule, ensuring that millionaires pay their fair share.

I mention it because it’s yet, again, another time where the Republicans on at least four occasions shut down the opportunity to debate an alternative to what the Republicans are proposing. And this is on top of all that we’ve already agreed to.

Many of us in a bipartisan way voted for the Budget Control Act, which cut $1.2 trillion in spending. That was in addition to over $300 billion already cut last year. That is in addition to the President and Members of Congress who say we are prepared to make further cuts in waste, fraud, and abuse. And some things are not wasteful. Maybe they’re just not a priority anymore or we found a better way to do it. Maybe they’re duplicative or obsolete. But, nonetheless, we can’t afford them anymore.

But I have enormous, enormous repect for the chairman of the Appropri-Pactions Committee. We sat on that committee together for a number of years. I appreciate that he wanted to bring a bill to the floor that honors the Budget Control Act.

I disagree with the tactic of putting a reinforcement of a sequester into law. It exists. We have to do the sequester unless we can head it off, unless the safety of our troops and their training, our national security, the education of our children, the safety of our neighbors, unless that takes precedence over protecting tax breaks for corporate jets, businesses that send jobs overseas—the list goes on, and I have mentioned it now more than one time.

So I urge my colleagues to think carefully about this vote. This isn’t a vote to support or not support the government or not. That vote will come at another time.

The Senate isn’t going to accept this bill. The Senate is not going to accept this bill. When they don’t, they will send back another bill. And we’ll just see how many votes are on the Republican side to keep government open, because we have absolutely no intention of having the government shut down.
We will just see how many Republican times are there for that, for a bill that will be a better bill than this.

Although, with the threat of sequester and what that will do to our economy—and our job creation and our reducing of the deficit—that’s one thing; but think of what it does in the lives of those 4 million meals not delivered to seniors. Think of those seniors who are not getting those meals, those children who are not getting Head Start—or even beyond Head Start, the education of our children. Some of them are being educated by teachers who are teaching children of military families who will now have to lose their jobs or be furloughed. This has an impact right to the kitchen table of the American peoples. So we have to think very seriously about what we are doing here. But what a difference it does make when you are on the level, Mr. Speaker. Let’s have it be on the level.

This is a bill that reinforces the sequester; if it didn’t, it wouldn’t be in the bill. So this bill, I think, has no merit, and it will not have my support.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr.
Speaker, might I inquire how many speakers remain on the gentileady’s side. I have one remaining speaker.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, we have three remaining speakers.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. I reserve
the balance of my time.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 2 minutes to the gen-tlewoman from Florida (Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ), the distinguished ranking member of the Leg Branch Subcommittee of Appropriations.

Ms. WASSERMAN SChULTZ. Mr.
Speaker, I rise with grave concerns over the continuing resolution that we are considering today.

While we all support any effort to prevent a government shutdown, we await a bill from the Senate that hopefully treats domestic and defense bills with equal care.

There is no question that our men and women serving in Afghanistan deserve our support, but so do our children here in America. Yet the CR underfunds Head Start by $70 million, even though both House and Senate fis-ca1 year 2013 bills provide significant increases for the program through our regular budget process.

In addition to underfunding many do-meric programs, like the Affordable Care Act and the National Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children, the CR does nothing to stop the across-the-board budget cuts in the sequester for any agency, including Defense.

I still hope we can walk together to replace these indiscriminate, meat-ax cuts with a balanced approach so we can avoid compromising our future tough lack of investments in education, infrastructure, defense and public safety. Slowly turning up the heat to boil a pot of water.

Thankfully, the House is bringing this bill to the floor in time for the Senate to act and pass a bill for the March 27 deadline for the continuing resolution that will take a responsible, balanced approach to deficit reduction with targeted spending cuts and closing tax loopholes for the wealthy so we can use the revenue and the spending cuts to pay down our debt.

Mr. Speaker, taking an indiscrimiinate, meat-ax approach to the sequester, to reducing our deficit in a balanced way is irresponsible. We must work together. I implore our friends on the other side of the aisle to come to together and work together with us to wards compromise so that we can avoid greatly harming our domestic prior-ties, including women, children, famiilies, and the middle class. It is still possible and there is still time.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. I reserve
the balance of my time.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished ranking member of the Defense Appropriations Committee, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. VISCLOSKY).

Mr. VISCLOSKY. I appreciate the time and, first of all, want to thank Chairman YOUNG of the Defense Subcommittee for his very good work. I want to thank the members of all of the subcommittees for their efforts throughout the years but, again, paricularly those on the Defense Subcommittee, as well as our staff.

I do intend to support the measure, but do ask a question: Where are the other 10 bills for the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Transportation, and others, with less than 6 months left in the fiscal year?

One of my colleagues who would vote for no appropriation ever in their life, I ask: What is there to fight over with the National Institute of Standards, or the Copyright Royalty Tribunal, or the Mine Safety and Health Administration? I am grievously concerned, Mr.
Chairman, that we no longer legislate in this body, but we lurch, we lurch from crisis to crisis. I find it inexplicable that some of my colleagues would vote in a heartbeat for a continuing resolution to run the government looking backwards last year at exactly the same amount of money for a similar appropriation bill with all 12 bills so that we could make decisions and exercise our constitutional responsibilities.

Continuing resolutions look back and run the most powerful Nation on Earth like we did last year. We are absent any legislative decision. This is an abdication of our constitutional reponsibility. I would push it further and say we have a mandate. In article
I, section 9, there is one sentence, it says:

No money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law.

It is time that Congress begins to appropriate measures and runs this government and country and stops lurching.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr.
Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute and would ask Mr. VISCLOSKY if he might rejoin us at the microphone.

On the point the gentleman just broached and, that is, the passage of bills, one of the most frustrating things of my life is that we cannot get the Senate to pass any appropriations bills.

As the gentleman knows—because he helped pass the Defense bill for this year and all years—we passed, through the House committee, all 12 bills. We sent them to the Senate, and all we got back was a resounding non. They didn’t do anything. When the Senate doesn’t appropriate, in spite of the fact that we’ve passed all of our bills over here, we have to pass a continuing resolution. That is where we are. I lament the fact that does the gentleman. And I know that he joins me in wanting us to pass the Senate to pass any appropriations bills.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. VISCLOSKY. I would concur with the gentleman’s remarks and would note that in my remarks I mentioned the Congress fails to appropratie, which includes the United States Senate.
Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to a hard-working Member, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LATHAM), who chairs the Transportation, Housing and Urban Development Subcommittee on Appropriations.

Mr. LATHAM. I thank the chairman of the full committee for the opportunity to address this.

I've been sitting here listening and heard the minority leader come to the floor and talk about children, about old people, about teachers—all these things—that she voted to cut the spending for to fund.

How can you support a bill, support the sequester insisted on by the President of the United States? It was his idea that he brought forth to try and resolve the differences at that time and something that he supports and he insisted on. The minority leader voted for these cuts that she now bemoans. It's fascinating when you look at the reality of the situation. There are some of us who actually did not support this because of the way the sequester would take place.

Now, you can say, well, it was never going to happen and all these things, but the fact of the matter is it is here today and it is law because people like the minority leader insisted on it. So to come to the floor and talk about those cuts today, something that she supported, is really quite fascinating to anyone listening or watching this debate today.

Mr. Speaker, I will tell you, it is very frustrating. As someone who went through the entire process last year with my ranking member, Mr. Olver from Massachusetts, who is now retired, we went through subcommittee and full committee. We had 3 days on the floor of the House, an open rule with amendments. We passed our bill, the Transportation and HUD appropriation bill, with the largest bipartisan majority of any bill passed last year, yet the Senate does nothing. That's why we're here today.

The House of Representatives, under the chairman's leadership, has moved bills, has done our work. The frustration we have is that we don't have a counterpart on the other side of this great building to actually do their job so that we can try to get resolution of these very difficult spending problems.

Mr. Speaker, it is very important today that we move this bill. This is the best alternative. It will give us certainty for the rest of the year so that we can address the bigger issues that are before us and this Nation about spending—$1.65 trillion of national debt and about $1 trillion of annual deficit has got to be addressed. By doing this, it will give us the opportunity to maybe forge a large compromise, to forge a big deal that actually set a course for this country.

I think the reason most all of us are here is because we have children. I have five grandchildren. The reason I do this is because I believe that we've got to change direction, and this is a necessary step to do that.

With that, I ask everyone to support this bill.

The Speaker pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky has 1 minute remaining.

Mrs. LOWEY. I am delighted to yield the balance of my time to a distinguished Member of the Appropriations Committee, the gentlewoman from California, Ms. BARBARA LEE.

Ms. LEE of California. Let me thank our ranking member for yielding and for her tremendous leadership.

First of all, let us make this point. This bill—actually, this CR—reaffirms sequestration, and it really could have been canceled. I have to tell you, also, that at that time when the Pentagon has enjoyed a decade of unchecked spending, this bill gives the Pentagon new flexibility to cushion the effects of sequestration. Again, it reaffirms sequestration.

At the same time, the bill ignores the impacts of these devastating cuts on the American middle class. Sequestration cuts would not only hurt low-income families first and hurt them the most, but also communities of color and the millions of Americans who still are struggling to find a job.

The sequester will impact my congressional district, my home State of California, and every single household in America. It also underfunds the vital programs that protect public health and safety, promote and develop our workforce, and educate the next generation.

While all of us believe that it's important to keep the government functioning, governing by a continuing resolution is really no way to run the Federal Government. It is not in the best interest of the American public. These sequestration cuts are damaging, but the fact of the matter is it is here. Not only is this resolution a fiscal disaster, it is morally wrong.

[From the New York Times, March 5, 2013]

CALIFORNIA, ON BRINK OF RECOVERY, BRACES FOR SETBACK ON FEDERAL AID

BY NORIMITSU ONISHI
SAN FRANCISCO (Byline)

Ballooning budget deficits, California finally seemed on firmer footing. Unemployment remained high, but revenues and housing prices were up. Taxpayers even voted themselves a tax surcharge on the first time in a decade. The plan was to use the rare windfall to rein in Federal spending and spend our security dollars wisely on programs that meet today's national security needs, but we also must begin some nation building here at home. The American people deserve better than that.

Not only is this resolution a fiscal disaster, it is morally wrong.
Gregory Bloom, a member of the trade group's executive board and the president of Seal Science, a 120-employee aerospace company in Irvine, Calif., said his business had already been hit by the cut.

"In my entire career, I've never been in a situation where I can't at least put some probability on what's going to happen," Mr. Bloom said, adding that he had delayed expanding capacity at a plant as a result.

"There's absolutely no way to plan," Mr. Bloom said.

The state of California's schools and colleges, whose budgets have been slashed in recent years. The University of California system is expected to face at least a 5 percent cut in the $35 billion it receives annually in federal research money. Cuts in federal student aid programs will affect the next academic year.

"As a family starts to plan for what's going to happen next year—how much money do I need to send my son or daughter to school?—we want to know right now until we get more information from the federal government," said Gary Falle, the University of California's associate vice president for federal relations.

According to the White House, California will also lose $88 million in federal money for primary and secondary education this year. Though accounts for less than 1 percent of the state's budget for schools, that share has taken on increasing weight in recent years because of state cuts, said Erika Webb-Hughes, an official at the California Department of Education's government affairs division.

The cuts are likely to affect disadvantaged students the most, including those with disabilities, Ms. Webb-Hughes said. The uncertainty of the magnitude of the cuts will also make it difficult for school districts to plan for next year because, by state law, they must notify staff members of their future employment status by March 15.

"People will be sending out pink slips," Ms. Webb-Hughes said.

"Even if at the end of the year there is a miraculous agreement in the Congress that averts a majority of this issue, the damage is already done."

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, this is all about whether or not we shut down the government. This is a bill to keep the government operating while we debate, then, how we deal with sequestration.

This is not a sequestration bill. This is a bill to continue funding the government for the balance of the fiscal year and to help the military cope with the restrictions so that our Nation is adequately defended by our men and women in uniform.

I urge the adoption of the continuing resolution. Let's keep the government going.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 933, which includes as Division A the fiscal year 2013 Defense Appropriations Bill.

The Defense bill is a good bi-partisan bill which was negotiated with both sides last year. It is critical that we pass this bill and get the Department of Defense out of a year-long continuing resolution, which would have devastating consequences—consequences that rival those of sequestration as several of the Service Chiefs have claimed.

The Defense bill provides the Department with funding in the proper accounts to match how the fiscal year 2013 funds were requested and will be executed, as opposed to the mismatch the Department was carrying forward with the fiscal year 2012 enacted levels in a CR. Without correctly establishing this baseline for execution, the Operation and Maintenance accounts would have been almost $11 billion short—a shortfall almost equivalent to the sequestration reductions.

Passing a Defense bill also removes the prohibition on new starts and rate increases which exists under a continuing resolution. With over five hundred programs impacted by this prohibition, the Department would experience hundreds of significant schedule delays and cost increases. Also, over a billion in savings would be lost because the Department could not enter into multi-year procurement contracts.

It has now been 5 months since the fiscal year began. But because the Senate did not pass a Defense appropriation one year ago, we find ourselves still trying to wrap up fiscal year 2013. I want to thank Chairman ROGERS for including the Defense bill in this package. This bill is long overdue, and I urge its quick passage.

Chairman ROGERS is the initiator of this plan to pass Defense appropriation and military construction as the major parts of this legislation and he deserves appreciation for his determination to make this important plan work.

Mr. HIMES. Mr. Speaker, while I supported today's continuing resolution in an effort to ensure that essential governmental operations are funded beyond March 27, there remain many questions about the application of the sequester.

One area that few Members of Congress or the administration are discussing is whether sequestration should apply to certain entities that Congress clearly intended to be legally independent of the federal government. Congress recognized the crucial importance of maintaining the objectivity of these entities, insulated them from the federal appropriations process in order to maintain their independence.

For example, the Financial Accounting Standards Board ("FASB"), the entity that establishes generally accepted accounting principles as a private entity that is explicitly not part of the federal government or federal appropriations process under the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. Indeed, that Act specifically states that FASB revenues are not to be considered "public monies."

Unfortunately, the Office of Management and Budget's sequestration order would require the private fee income on which FASB relies for its operations to be subject to the sequester. This is despite Congress' explicit intent in the Sarbanes-Oxley Act to keep FASB independent.

More fundamentally, sequestration of these monies makes no sense. FASB's funding does not come from the federal government and is instead collected from accounting support fees allocated among public issuers. As a result, sequestration of FASB funding has no effect on reducing the federal deficit. It does, however, undermine FASB's independence and the integrity of the market in setting accounting standards for U.S. public issuers.

Other entities similar to FASB are also being sequestered despite Congress' clear intent to keep them separate from the federal budget process. The Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, the Securities Investor Protection Corporation, and the North American Electric Reliability Corporation are all entities subject to the sequester notwithstanding the fact that they collect fee income independent of the federal budget process.

Subtracting these entities to sequestration would seriously undermine the intent of Congress to keep them apart from the federal budget process as independent organizations. As we consider the effect of sequestration in the coming days and weeks, I urge my colleagues to support a legislative remedy that would ensure that entities like FASB are not subject to sequestration.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this bill.

While this bill does exempt the Department of Veterans Affairs from sequestration, that is the only good news in this bill. H.R. 933 does provide the Department of Defense with a better balance between its operations and maintenance accounts and its longer-term investment accounts. However, it will do nothing to stop the $46 billion sequester for the Department of Defense, which will result in civilian furloughs, deployment and training cutbacks, and facility maintenance cuts.

The bill shortchanges our homeland security needs by denying a requested increase for FEMA State and Local Grants, locking the program into its lowest funding level in history and shortchanging disaster preparedness and anti-terrorism funds to states, urban areas, ports, transit, and first responders. Communities impacted by Hurricane Sandy are also shortchanged by this bill. H.R. 933 does not include funding requests important for disaster recovery, cyber-security, water infrastructure, advanced manufacturing, and weatherization, including a request to lower the local cost-share from 65/35 to 90/10 for Army Corps of Engineers projects in communities affected by Sandy, hindering ability of local communities to recover and rebuild.

The bill also violates the intent of the Affordable Care Act by failing to include a requested $949 billion to implement health insurance exchanges under the Affordable Care Act, scheduled to begin enrolling participants in October. Funding is needed for IT infrastructure to process enrollments and payments, eligibility verification, call centers, and other assistance to help individuals and small businesses select and enroll in health plans.

I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing this badly flawed bill.

Mr. O’ROURKE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to explain my vote for the Continuing Resolution, H.R. 3548. The Continuing Resolution allows the Defense Department to mitigate the worst effects of the sequester by fully funding our most pressing needs—jobs and the economy 750,000 lost jobs across the country. In El Paso, 20,000 federal workers, including those that protect our borders and care for our wounded warriors, are facing furloughs and continued pay freezes because Congress has not acted. Federal Reserve Chairman Bernanke recently testified that the sequester cuts will actually make it more difficult to address our long-term deficits because it will reduce the provision of key services. The DOD will also mean fewer teachers in our classrooms, less Head Start spots for low-income children, and cuts to job-training programs that help localized workers find employment.

The bill before us today recognizes that the sequester is irresponsible and it provides relief from the negative impacts of the sequester for two agencies—the Veterans Administration and the Defense Department. Our vote today on actual appropriations bills for these two agencies will help alleviate some of the worst sequester impacts. For example, this legislation allows the Defense Department to shift funds to the Operations and Maintenance account so that our military installations, including Fort Bliss, can operate effectively and ensure that our troops continue to receive world-class training. It provides advanced appropriations to our veteran care. By providing a full year appropriations for Military Construction, this legislation will provide greater certainty for the Beaumont East hospital project on Fort Bliss. The bill also provides targeted relief to the Customs and Border Protection to maintain staffing levels and hopefully avoid the full 14 days of furloughs scheduled to start next month. This will help prevent gridlock at our ports of entry and help the economy of El Paso, not to mention the greater security afforded to family budgets for those CBP employees. For these reasons I am supporting the Continuing Resolution today.

However, this legislation is far from perfect and is certainly not the bill I would have authored. But I cannot go home and tell El Pasoans that I voted against protecting working families and tens of thousands of jobs at Fort Bliss and within the CBP because I was holding out for a better deal. My only choice was to vote yea or nay. I choose to help move the bill forward, avoid a government shutdown, and alleviate some of the worst impacts of the sequester.

There is still time to make needed improvements to this legislation and provide our federal agencies with the flexibility and funding they need to function properly. The Defense Department and the Veterans Administration are vitally important agencies; however, there is no reason that Congress should carry out its responsibilities of passing a budget for only them, while forcing the rest of the government to function under the mindless cuts imposed by the sequester. The sequester was enacted 18 months ago. I will continue to work toward a responsible solution to stop the sequester, fund our government, protect the jobs of El Pasoans, and ensure that programs that many in my community rely on are protected.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Mr. Speaker, today presents our last chance this month to deal with the harmful effects of sequestration, and yet the bill on the floor does nothing to address this critical issue. This week, for the fourth time, House Republicans blocked my amendment to replace sequestration, even as the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office warns that these arbitrary cuts will cost the economy 750,000 jobs and lower economic growth by nearly one-third. By failing to address sequestration, this bill underfunds education, scientific research, and consumer protections.

Moreover, while I appreciate that today’s bill makes necessary adjustments to defense and veterans programs, I regret that it fails to provide a comprehensive solution to all of the federal agency. By failing to adjust agency budgets outside of defense, this bill continues spending on old policies while failing to fund important priorities like implementation of the Affordable Care Act and enforcement of Dodd-Frank protections against abuse in the financial sector. We can and must do better for the workers guarding our borders, conduct research in national labs, care for our veterans, and inspect our Nation’s food supply will only jeopardize our ability to recruit and retain the best and the brightest.

We stand ready to work with our Republican colleagues to end Partisan gridlock and responsibly fund our national priorities. Instead, the Republican Leadership, driven by their most extreme members, continues to move from manufactured crisis to manufactured crisis, ignoring our most pressing needs—jobs and the economy. We can and must do better for the American people. It is my hope that we can work with our colleagues in the Senate to craft balanced, responsible legislation that avoids a government shutdown, ends sequestration, and properly funds our Nation’s priorities.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I oppose this legislation. In Congress, we continue to talk past ourselves on how to get to fundamental financial sustainability. If flexibility is necessary for some agencies, then why not provide all of them with the necessary flexibility to deal with the draconian impacts of the sequester?

I opposed the sequester from the beginning and still believe it’s a terrible idea. Congress should have dealt with it comprehensively at the end of last year; we should have had a bigger solution then. Now that we are stuck with it, we have to deal with the consequences.

Providing flexibility to some of the agencies but not others makes no sense—it merely allows the Defense Department to mitigate the worst effects on its budget, while continuing to hamstring vital domestic priorities. For instance, the $1.6 billion cut in the NIH budget will cut research into illnesses affecting millions of Americans, senior meal programs like Meals on Wheels will be cut by up to 4 million meals for senior citizens, and in my State, head start and early head start programs are being cancelled.

In my home State of Oregon, we will lose approximately $10.2 million in funding for primary and secondary education, putting about 140 teachers and aide jobs at risk. Our Head Start and Early Head Start services will be eliminated for approximately 600 children, reducing access to critical early education. Oregon could lose up to $81,000 in funds that... provide services to victims of domestic violence, resulting in up to 300 fewer victims being served.

Overall, this reckless policy will cost our country roughly 750,000 jobs, according to the CBO. They also estimate that allowing sequard to take place will lower economic growth from 2.0 percent to 1.4 percent, cutting anticipated economic recovery by a third.

Instead of throwing our hands up, we should make smart, targeted budget decisions that, taken over 10 years, are an alternative to the arbitrary sequester cuts and can put the country on a more sustainable fiscal path.

to the bill. It will not delay or kill the bill or send it back to committee. If adopted, the bill will proceed imme-

And in San Diego, where almost one in four jobs is defense-related and nearly 25 percent of defense contractors are small businesses, 10 shipbuilding and maintenance contracts have been canceled. Nationwide, manufacturing companies that rely on defense funding could lose 223,000 jobs.
And as we have heard in Armed Servces, neglecting ship repairs and other maintenance and not making these investments not only leads to job losses, but threatens our very readiness as a na-

I know protecting these areas of investment and ensuring economic recovery and growth are ideas that both Democrats and Republicans can agree on. Now is the time to ignore party gridlock and do what is right for the American people. I urge my colleagues to vote "yes" to remove this language from the bill because we need to find solutions other than the sequester.

Let's turn the indiscriminate cuts of the sequester into targeted cuts that are part of a larger deficit reduction strategy, a strategy that cuts wasteful spending but doesn't cut critical infrastructure investments, stifle scientific innovation, or compromise our national defense.

With that, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. Rogers of Kentucky. Mr.
Speaker, I rise in opposition.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. Rogers of Kentucky. Mr.
Speaker, the budgetary problems we face are unprecedented, and the American public demands that we address them. This continuing resolution is the first step in that process.

The measure before us does four important things: one, it takes threat of a government shutdown off the table; two, it fulfills the agreements made in the Budget Control Act; three, it proects our troops in harm's way; and,
four, it binds up our veterans' wounds.
This is not the time, Mr. Speaker, to argue about sequestration. Today is the day to keep the government run-ing and show the people back home we've not lost the ability to govern.

The House has passed two separate responsible sequestration replacement bills only to have both of them languish in the other body without action.
We're still waiting, Mr. Speaker.

The President must come to the table with a real proposal to solve the sequestration crisis instead of sending us the same old talking points and doing campaign trips around the country.

The public is tired of government putting politics ahead of people. Now is the time to take a shutdown off the table. Now is the time to give our troops and our veterans the resources they need, deserve, and have earned.
Now is the time, Mr. Speaker, to govern.

I urge my colleagues to vote "yes" to keep the government operating.

With that, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

PERMISSION FOR MEMBER TO BE CONSIDERED AS FIRST SPONSOR OF H.R. 313

Mr. FARENTHOLD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to be considered as the first sponsor of H.R. 313, a bill originally introduced by Mrs. Emerson of Missouri, for the purposes of adding cosponsors and requesting printings pursuant to clause 7 of rule XII.

HONORING THE LIVES OF SERGEANT LORAN "BUTCH" BAKER AND DETECTIVE ELIZABETH BUTLER

(Mr. FARR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, every day, police officers place themselves in harm’s way to protect our communities. It’s that unselfish act that separates them from ordinary citizens. Through their willingness to serve, our brave policemen and -women represent the best of our country.

Sadly, last week, in my district, two fine officers, Sergeant Loran “Butch” Baker and Detective Elizabeth Butler, were killed in the line of duty in the small town of Santa Cruz, California. Sergeant Baker and Detective Butler are the first officers to be killed in the line of duty in the city’s 137-year history.

Our prayers and sympathies are with the families and loved ones of these officers. And I’d like the House to take a brief moment of silence in their memory.

Sergeant Baker leaves behind a wife, two daughters and a son, who is a Community Service Officer with the Santa Cruz Police Department. Detective Butler leaves behind her partner and two young sons.

This is a horrible tragedy, and I join with the residents of the Central Coast to mourn this loss and to pay our respects to these two fallen heroes.

HONORING THE 225TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE TOWNS OF STILLWATER, SARATOGA, HALFMOON, AND BALLSTON, NEW YORK

(Mr. TONKO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TONKO. I rise today to recognize four towns in the 20th District of New York that will celebrate their 225th anniversary tomorrow. They’re the towns of Stillwater, Saratoga, Halfmoon and Ballston.

The place of the Still Waters had French settlers as early as the 1600s, and they were known to have a mill. Originally part of Albany County, the districts of Saratoga, and Halfmoon were divided on March 21 of 1772. In 1775, BallsTown was taken from Saraghtoga, making three districts within Albany County. Eventually, in February of 1791, the New York State Legislature created the county of Saratoga. Early Ballston residents were deeply involved in the Revolutionary War. And in Halfmoon, some of the first town meetings in April of 1788 still exist.

SPREAD THE WORD TO END THE WORD

(Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, March 6 is the day we “Spread the Word to End the Word,” an ongoing effort by Special Olympics, Best Buddies, and many others to raise the consciousness of society about the hurtful effects of the word “retard” and to encourage people to pledge to stop using the “R” word. Respectful and inclusive language is essential to the dignity and humanity of people with intellectual disabilities. Much of society does not realize the hurtful, dehumanizing, and exclusive effects of this word. This campaign is intended to engage schools, organizations, and communities to rally and pledge their support to promote the inclusion and acceptance of people with intellectual disabilities.

Today, I pledge my support to help end the derogatory use of the “R” word from everyday speech and promote the acceptance and inclusion of people with intellectual disabilities.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to “Spread the Word to End the Word.”
Mr. Speaker, these towns are replete with history and rich in heritage. We do well to remember the foundation on which we are built and to continue to add to the mosaic that is the Capital Region, the State of New York, and indeed our Nation.

Congratulations on the celebration of the four towns’ 225 years. May our future and theirs be even brighter than our rich past.

PASS THE SKILLS ACT
(Ms. FOXX asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

MS. FOXX. Today, Federal Government spends $18 billion a year to operate more than 50, often duplicative, workforce education programs. Even with that significant investment, roughly 20 million Americans remain un- or underemployed. Businesses, too, are struggling, struggling to find workers with the right technical skill sets to fill vacant jobs on payroll.

Why the mismatch? Why aren’t workforce education programs efficiently preparing capable job seekers for these careers? Job seekers and employers can be better served by a more responsive, individualized, and modern workforce development strategy. With my colleagues on the Education and Workforce Committee, I have introduced H.R. 803, the SKILLS Act, which will eliminate arbitrary roadblocks within existing workforce education programs, prioritize well-paying, in-demand industries, expand opportunities at community colleges, and most importantly, treat all job seekers as individuals.

Let’s pass the SKILLS Act.

TAKE A BUDGET CUE FROM HARDWORKING AMERICANS
(Mr. ROTHFUS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. ROTHFUS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge the President to get serious about our getting our fiscal house in order. While imperfect, the continuing resolution passed today is an important step in the right direction. Today’s legislation provides the Defense Department and VA some relief from what President Obama’s sequester by granting flexibility to prioritize spending, helping ensure the needs of our Armed Forces are met. It is time for the Senate to follow the House’s lead and pass this legislation.

Instead of campaigning, President Obama should be devoting time and resources to finish his budget submission to Congress, which is already 4 weeks overdue. When mothers, fathers, and small business owners face budget problems, they sit down around the kitchen or office table with notepads, pencils, calculators, and get to work. They prioritize spending and make tough but necessary decisions.

It is time for the President and our friends across the aisle to adopt the same commonsense practices of budgeting and prioritization that hardworking women and men in the private sector use every single day.

LET’S GET THIS DONE RIGHT
(Mr. LaMALFA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. LAMALFA. We passed the CR today. We’ve seen the sequester go through this week, unfortunately. So here we are.

We ask the President to not scare the country and put everybody on notice that he’s going to make it as painless as possible, to do the positive things that are going to make this thing work. We have to rein in spending in the United States. It’s going to be for our children and our future. So instead of threatening things such as guided tours that don’t cost anything becoming part of Capitol Hill, we can move forward with things that we can agree on and that are going to be helpful for balancing our budget and taking the small step towards a future. Yes, it’s going to be painful. But it doesn’t have to be as painful as when we hear directives to Federal agencies to make it as painful as possible. It’s a very disingenuous process.

So let’s stay here and get this thing done right and find real things that we can make in reductions to help our country and not threaten it.

ADJOURNMENT
MS. FOXX. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accorded Mr. ROTHFUS permission to address the House for 1 minute and 17 minutes p.m., under its previous order, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, March 7, 2013, at noon.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Eternal Spirit, today, as the snow gently caresses the Earth, we are reminded of Your sovereignty over the seasons of our sojourn. You are our provider and protector. You are king of our lives. Lord, we are grateful that each day when we pray to You, You listen to our prayers. A thousand years means nothing to You. They are merely a day gone by or a few hours in the night.

Inspire our Senators this day to use wisely the fragile time they have. As You help them to do Your will, may they celebrate the movements of Your powerful providence. Show them Your mighty power in these challenging times.

We pray in Your strong Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable William M. Cowan led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. Leahy).

The assistant legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, March 6, 2013.

To the Senate of the United States:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable William M. Cowan, a Senator from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to perform the duties of the Chair.

Patrick J. Leahy,
President pro tempore.

Mr. Cowan thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. Reid. Mr. President, following leader remarks the Senate will resume consideration of the nomination of Caitlin Halligan to be U.S. circuit judge for the DC Circuit. At 10:30 there will be a vote on that nomination. We all know the weather is inclement. It is getting worse, as I saw coming in.

I have talked to Senator McConnell today. We are going to vote on the nomination at 10:30. We have the Brennan nomination that we are going to finish this week. I have explained to the Republican leader that if they are going to filibuster that—and I understand that is what they are going to do—we could set up a 60-vote threshold filibuster, and then we can go ahead and have a vote on that today, allowing people to make proper travel arrangements. It is strictly up to the minority. We are ready to make that arrangement, if they so agree, because of the weather.

SYRIA

Mr. Reid. Mr. President, each day the world watches in horror at what is going on in Syria. Seventy thousand people have been killed as President Bashar al-Assad carries out a campaign of wanton violence against his own people. These atrocities have gone on for far too long—seventy thousand dead Syrians. It is time for this awful dictator-tyrant to step down and allow his people to pursue a peaceful transition to the democracy which they crave. Assad grows increasingly desperate as rebels continue to gain ground despite the full force of Assad’s military arsenal of planes, bombs, and rockets. President Assad should understand the world is watching his every action and will not tolerate his unforgivable slaughter of innocent citizens, including the potential future use of chemical weapons. President Obama has made clear—and I support him 100 percent—the use of such chemical weapons would constitute a red line for the United States and for the national community. Rather than continue to kill his own people, Assad should end the bloodshed and relinquish power to Syria’s citizens.

BRENNAN NOMINATION

Mr. Reid. Mr. President, as America closely observes the unfolding of events in Syria and deals with varying threats around the world, it is crucial that President Obama has a seasoned national security team in place. It is often said there is no substitute for experience, so it is natural that a 25-year CIA veteran, John Brennan, was reported out of the Senate Intelligence Committee by a wide margin on a bipartisan vote. Mr. Brennan is a highly qualified nominee and should be confirmed immediately. As Deputy National Security Adviser since 2009, John Brennan has been President Obama’s chief homeland security and counterterrorism adviser. He has been at the forefront of every major national security decision made during the Obama administration. He is responsible for the White House response to pandemics, cyber threats, natural disasters, and terrorism attacks. He has played an instrumental role in finding Osama bin Laden, killing bin Laden, and, in effect, decimating al-Qaeda.
His distinguished intelligence career began more than 30 years ago when he joined the CIA as a career trainee straight out of graduate school. Mr. Brennan worked his way up through the agency to serve in senior management roles. He served as Deputy Executive Director under George Tenet. Years spent working on covert and analytical missions and as chief of station in Saudi Arabia gave him a comprehensive understanding of the CIA’s capabilities and inner workings. In the Middle East that will be essential as we continue to work to defeat al-Qaida and other terrorist threats.

Mr. Brennan has distinguished himself outside of government as well. He spent 4 years in the private sector as president and CEO of the Analysis Corporation. His extensive intelligence background and executive experience uniquely qualify him to lead the Central Intelligence Agency.

Just as CIA faces the challenges abroad, so does the Senate in considering nominations for the Agency’s relationship with our military, the Agency’s response to the conclusion of a recent Senate Intelligence Committee report on interrogations techniques and practices, and, finally, the Agency’s response to demands for transparency. These considerations must not be made lightly. John Brennan will give them the attention they deserve in his role as Director.

The Senate must also approach its duty to advise and consent with the solemnity it deserves. Unfortunately, the confirmation process has focused too much this year and the last two Congresses on partisan political considerations and not enough on the quality of the nominees.

I am very disappointed that I am forced to file cloture on John Brennan’s nomination. What does that accomplish? If someone doesn’t like him, come here and give a big speech, wave your arms, scream and shout, and vote against him. But why hold up the entire Senate over a meaningless vote?

My Republican colleagues have already obstructed several critical nominations this year. I hope that pattern of obstructionist behavior will not persist. I do hope for the sake of the country the obstruction of the last two Congresses will vanish. I feel very certain that in Mr. Brennan’s case concerns for national security will outweigh the desire to grandstand for the weakened tea party.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, the issue before us is Caitlin Halligan’s nomination for the DC Circuit Court. I spoke yesterday about my concerns for that nomination. It is unfortunate she is going to be forced to face a filibuster; in other words, that the Republicans are going to insist on a 60-vote margin for her approval. That is unfortunate because we have tried in the beginning of this Senate to avoid this kind of filibuster confrontation.

In the last several years, we have had over 400 filibusters, a recordbreaking number of filibusters in the Senate. What that means is the ordinary business of the Senate has been stopped 400 times, when those who were trying to bring up a nomination or bill or amendment faced a filibuster which required literally stretching the vote out over days and sometimes even over 1 week. That is unnecessary. It is frustrating as well.

There are a lot of things we need to do and a lot of issues we need to face. I am not afraid of taking on controversial votes on the floor. I think that was part of my remit coming here. I quoted many times my late friend, my colleague in the House, Mike Synar of Oklahoma, who used to say: If you don’t want to fight fires, don’t be a firefighter. If you don’t want to vote on controversial issues, don’t run for Congress. That is what this job is about.

I agree with that. As painful as some of these votes have been for me and others, we should never use that an excuse for not tackling the important issues of our time. But this has become routine now—routine filibusters, trying to stop the Senate time and time again. What is particularly insidious about this strategy on this nominee is she is an extraordinarily well-qualified person. “Unanimously well qualified,” that is the rating she received from the American Bar Association. When we look at her resume and the things she has done, she stands out as not only an excellent candidate for DC Circuit but one of the best we have had for any judicial position. She is being stopped by the Republicans.

What is their argument? She was the solicitor general for the State of New York. She was the solicitor general for the State of New York. The solicitor general is the hired attorney for a client known as the State of New York. So many times she was sent into court to argue a position that had been adopted by the State or by the Governor, and she did her job as their counsel, to argue their position as convincingly as possible. That is what lawyers do every day in courtrooms all across America.

Back in the day when I practiced law, I didn’t measure every client who came through the door to ask: Do I agree with every position my client has taken? Of course not. The belief is in our system of justice both sides deserve a voice in the courtroom and both sides, doing their best, give justice an opportunity. That is what Caitlin Halligan did as the solicitor general for the State of New York.

Listen to this. One of the arguments being made against her was that while she was solicitor general she served on a bar committee that issued a report that favored using article III courts for the prosecution of terrorists. Article III courts are the ordinary criminal courts of the land under our Constitution. The report argued that position. Many Republicans take an opposite position, that anyone accused of terrorism should be tried in a military tribunal, not an ordinary criminal court. They have held that position. They argue that position. They get red in the face saying that is the only way to take care of terrorists and they ignore reality.

The reality is, since 9/11, President Bush, as well as President Obama, had a choice between prosecuting terrorists in article III courts, the criminal courts or in military tribunals. In over 400 cases, they successfully chose to prosecute accused terrorists in the article III courts—successfully. In only five cases—I believe it is five—have they used military tribunals. The overwhelming evidence is that the article III courts have worked well. Prosecutions have been successful. This argument: Oh, if you have to read Miranda rights to an accused terrorist, we will never be able to prosecute them, they will lawyer up in a hurry. It doesn’t quite work that way. In fact, we found the opposite to be true. When many of these folks with connections through terrorism are taken through the ordinary criminal process, they end up being more cooperative than through a military tribunal. Prosecutors and the Attorney General have to make that decision. So here is Caitlin Halligan, solicitor general for the State of New York, whose name is on a bar committee report favoring the use of article III courts, which overwhelmingly President Bush and President Obama decided to do, and now the Republicans say that disqualifies her, that disqualifies her from serving on the DC Circuit Court.

Also is ridiculous position to argue that because an attorney argues a point of view in a case, that is her own point of view. I refer my colleagues to the testimony of Justice Roberts when he was up before the Senate Judiciary Committee, when he didn’t blink, point blank: You have represented some pretty unsavory clients, some people we might disagree with, does this reflect your point of view? He reminded us what jurisprudence and justice are about in this country, that you will always argue from your client’s point of view, doing their best for their client, whether they happen to agree with that client’s philosophy or not.
Every attorney is bound to stand by the truth when it comes to testimony. You can never ever allow a client to misstate the truth knowingly in a courtroom. That is hard and fast. But when it comes to a point of view, for good attorneys, you would argue the best case they can for the people they represent, as Caitlin Halligan did. As Justice Roberts reminded us, it is central to the issue of American justice. One of our most famous Presidents, John Adams, you would think ruined his political career because when the Boston Massacre occurred, John Adams, the attorney in Boston, stood and said I will defend the British soldiers. He was defending the British soldiers who had killed American soldiers. He did it. That was his responsibility as an attorney. He went on to be elected President.

This argument against Caitlin Halligan, from this point of view, is as empty as any argument I have heard on the floor of the Senate and the House of Representatives insist on filibustering again her nomination over such a week reed of an argument. It is embarrassing. It is troubling. It calls into question whether the agreement earlier this year on rules changes in the Senate, a bipartisan effort to try to get this Chamber back on track to solving problems on a bipartisan basis, did the job.

We had the first filibuster in history of a Secretary of Defense—the first. Chuck Hagel was held up for 10 days because of a Republican filibuster, the first time that has ever occurred. Now we follow it with this filibuster of this DC Circuit nominee? I don’t think we have achieved much in our rules reform. I don’t think our spirit of bipartisanism has shown much in terms of results.

I hate to suggest this, but if this is an indication of where we are headed, we need to go back to the rules and the need to go back to them again. I am sorry to say it because I was hopeful a bipartisan effort was going to get us to where we need to be. It is the best thing for this Chamber—for the people serving and for the history of this institution. But if this Caitlin Halligan nomination is an indication of things to come, we have to revisit the rules. If we are now going to filibuster based on such weak arguments, then I think we need to revisit the rules.

They said in politics when I was growing up—one of the great politicians I worked for, a man named Cecil Partee, used to say for every political position you take there is a good reason—and a real reason. So the good reason, at least in their eyes, on the Republican side, is that Caitlin Halligan argued in court for positions they do not agree with. As I said earlier, I think that is an empty accusation. What is the real reason? There is a real reason they are opposed to Caitlin Halligan time and again. It is because the DC Circuit Court is one of the most important courts in America, some argue as important as the U.S. Supreme Court, because the DC Circuit Court, time and again, considers the rules and regulations and laws which are promulgated in Washington. It is the first court of review and if that bench on the DC Circuit is tipped one way or the other, too conservative or too liberal, it shows.

Right now it has been tipped toward the conservative side. Republicans engineered a deal when we were, years ago, embroiled in controversy over this issue of judicial nominees. They engineered and brokered a deal to make several appointments to the DC Circuit that tipped the balance toward the conservative side.

Now, out of the 11 positions in the DC Circuit, only 7 are filled. We are trying to fill the 8th, and they are worried that if Caitlin Halligan comes in—and she is not as conservative as they wish—it may be closer to balance. Isn’t that what we want, a more balanced court? I think that is the real reason the Republicans oppose her nomination.

I am sorry for her that she has to be a victim of this political strategy. It doesn’t have much to do with her personal views. Some Republicans who are necessary will step up and give us a chance to vote on her nomination; otherwise, we are back into the doldrums again in terms of the Senate embroiled in controversy, stuck on filibusters.

Since no one else is seeking the floor at this moment, I ask unanimous consent that the time consumed during quorum calls be charged equally to both sides.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, today the Senate will vote on cloture on the nomination of Caitlin Halligan to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the DC Circuit. I will again oppose invoking cloture on the nomination, and I will explain why.

In short, Ms. Halligan’s record of advocacy and her activist view of the judiciary lead me to conclude she would bring that activism right to the court. As I have said many times before, the role of a judge in our system is to determine the law, not what they or anybody else wants it to be. That is not Ms. Halligan’s view of the courts. She views them as a means to “enable enviable social progress and mobility”—to “enable enviable social progress and mobility”—with the judges, not the American people, using their office to determine what “progress” is “enviable.” That is the view of Ms. Halligan.

When she was in a position of authority, she put that activist view into practice time and time again. On the subject of second amendment rights, Ms. Halligan, as solicitor general of New York, advanced the dubious legal theory that those who make firearms should be liable for the criminal acts of third parties who misuse them.

Imposing potentially massive tort liability against the makers of a lawful product because of the criminal acts of others did not seem much like “enviable social progress” to Randall Casseday, who is with Kahr Arms, which sells firearms to the New York City Police Department. Here is what he said:

I can’t see how Kahr Arms can be responsible for misuse of its product. I don’t see how you can do that. One lawsuit would put us out of business.

Fortunately, the State court in New York followed the law and protected Ms. Halligan’s entreaty that it make up new law in order to achieve the so-called social progress she envisioned. The court observed that it had never recognized the novel claim pursued by Ms. Halligan for a reason, not for that matter. Moreover, the State court called what she wanted it to do to manufacturers of a legal product “legally inappropriate” and said the power she wanted the courts to assert was the responsibility of “the legislative and the Executive branches.”

So out of bounds were the types of frivolous lawsuits pursued by Ms. Halligan that Congress did something rare: It actually passed tort reform to stop them, and it passed by a wide bipartisan majority. In her zeal for these frivolous lawsuits, Ms. Halligan then chose to criticize the Congress for having the temerity to exercise its policy responsibilities. Ms. Halligan used the filibuster to block States from passing anything at all related to gun crime. Her mischaracterization of the legislation underscores her zeal for the frivolous lawsuits she was pursuing.

True to the adage “frequently wrong but never in doubt,” Ms. Halligan was undeterred. Having had both her State court and the Congress repudiate her novel legal theories, Ms. Halligan then filed an amicus brief in the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in another frivolous case against firearms manufacturers. This time she claimed the new law Congress passed was unconstitutional. Not surprisingly, she or anybody else did not much like it either.

Ms. Halligan’s stubborn pursuit of frivolous claims against gun manufacturers is a textbook example of judicial activism—using the courts to achieve a political agenda no matter what the law says.

Her pursuit of losing legal theories in the service of her own personal views doesn't stop there. On enemy combatants, Ms. Halligan signed a report as a bar association member that asserted that the authorization for use of military force did not authorize long-term detention of enemy combatants. In 2005 the U.S. Court ruled in Hamdi v. Rumsfeld that the President did, in fact, have this authority. Yet despite this precedent, Ms. Halligan chose to file an amicus brief years later arguing that the President did not possess this legal authority that the Supreme Court has held.

On immigration, Ms. Halligan filed an amicus brief in the Supreme Court arguing that the National Labor Relations Board should have the legal authority to grant back pay to illegal aliens. However, Federal law prohibits illegal aliens from working in the United States in the first place. Fortunately, the Court sided with the law and disagreed with Ms. Halligan on that novel legal theory as well.

The point here is that even in cases where the law is clear or the courts have already spoken—including the Supreme Court—Ms. Halligan chose to get involved anyway by using arguments that had already been rejected either by the courts, the legislature, or, in the case of frivolous claims against the gun manufacturers, by both.

In other words, Ms. Halligan has time and again sought to push her views over and above those of the courts or those of the people as reflected in the law. Ms. Halligan's record strongly suggests she would not view a seat on the U.S. appeals court as an opportunity to interpret the law so that everyone who are committed to an evenhanded application of the law but instead as an opportunity to represent the views of someone else. The same was true with what John Roberts did, and the same was true for what Sam Alito did. When those issues were brought up, our colleagues on the other side justified and disagreed with Ms. Halligan's views on the law, and he stated them in speeches, in articles, and in other ways. That is not so with Ms. Halligan. In fact, I challenge the other side to give me one instance where they disagree with something Ms. Halligan stated as her own views as opposed to representing someone as a lawyer should.

What is really going on here? What is going on is that our colleagues want to keep the second most important court in the land, the DC Circuit, vacant because right now there are four vacancies and the majority of those on the court have been appointees of Republican Presidents and, in fact, are very conservative. That is what is going on. Let's put it in the simplest terms. This has nothing to do with Ms. Halligan. This has to do with keeping a court they care about from having someone who doesn't have those same very conservative views. Ms. Halligan is a moderate, and she is one of the very few people on the other side. It bothers the hard right who use the DC Circuit in their court cases to try to construe government.

I say this to my good colleagues: We have come to an agreement on district court judges and on other nominees. We have come to an agreement that there ought to be more comity. The Republican leader, my friend from Tennessee, and so many others have said we should do that. The filibustering of Caitlin Halligan is not. I will admit, against the letter of our agreement because it simply applies to district court judges, but it sure is against the spirit.

I urge my colleagues who said we should change the rules because issues such as the filibuster of Ms. Halligan would occur are being vindicated even though my colleagues on the other side of the aisle would not want that type of option to be on the table. I urge this to my colleagues because I believe and I think most of us believe that this is nothing about Ms. Halligan, but it is about keeping the DC Circuit vacant and not allowing our President to rightfully fill those vacancies. We are going to bring nominee after nominee up to fill that DC Circuit. Are they going to continue to filibuster every nominee and find some trivial excuse to filibuster him or her? Because that is what is going to happen.

The obstructionist views that some on the other side have held and implemented—which served them quite poorly in the election of 2012, in the polls, and in what the American people want, what we do for us to come together—will be exposed.

I would urge my colleagues to forego this charade. Don't vote for Halligan if you don't like her, but don't filibuster her, because we are going to come back time after time after time with nominees to this circuit who are qualified, who are moderate, and who have fine personal ethics. Are they going to object to ObamaCare each one of them? Because that is the challenge they will face.

I urge and plead with my colleagues, based on the new comity we are desperately seeking in this Chamber, to avoid this filibuster, allow Caitlin Halligan to have an up-or-down vote. She is extremely worthy of the position for which she was nominated. It is our duty today, only this important court should not be filled with nominees whom our Democratic President nominates that is motivating, in my judgment, this action.

I think my time has expired, and I note the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I realize we have not gone in the regular order with the manager of the nomination speaking first. I am going right now with the Attorney General. So I ask unanimous consent, when the distinguished Senator finishes his speech, whatever length it is, and all time will have then been used up so there would not be any time reserved for the manager of this nomination, to speak for 2 minutes at the conclusion of Senator GRASSLEY’s remarks.

Mr. PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask to speak for 15 minutes on this nomination that is before the Senate.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the nomination of Caitlin Halligan, the President’s nominee for the United States Circuit Court for the District of Columbia. I wish to take a few minutes to explain to my colleagues why we should not change our prior position regarding this nomination. It was previously rejected and should be rejected again.

Before I talk about Ms. Halligan’s record, I want to comment on the process. While I recognize the majority leader’s right to bring up this nomination, I question why we are spending time on a politically charged and divisive nomination. I wish the Senate instead would focus on the critical fiscal, national security, and domestic issues we face.

The Senate determined more than a year ago that this nomination should not be confirmed. Rather than accepting the Senate’s decision, the President has renominated Ms. Halligan. It is time for the President and Senate Democrats to accept the fact that this nomination is not going to be confirmed by the Senate. We need to move on.

It is well understood and accepted that nominations to the DC Circuit deserve special scrutiny. The Court of Appeals for the DC Circuit hears cases affecting all Americans. It is frequently the last stop for cases involving the federal regulations and they intersect. Many view this court as second in importance only to the Supreme Court. And as we all know, judges who sit on the DC Circuit are frequently considered for the Supreme Court. So there is a lot at stake with nominations to this court. This is a court where we can least afford to confirm an activist judge.

I have a number of concerns regarding Ms. Halligan’s views that indicate she will be an activist judge. There are concerns regarding her judicial philosophy and her approach to interpreting the Constitution. Her stated view is that judges should interpret the Constitution, indicating a judicial philosophy that embraces the notion of a living Constitution. In adopting the “living Constitution” view, judges routinely substitute their own personal views in place of what the Constitution demands.

I wish to share with my colleagues why I have concluded that Ms. Halligan would approach judging with an activist bent. Let me give just a couple examples, beginning with her record on the second amendment.

In 2003, she was debating the Protection of Lawful Commerce in Arms Act or, as most of us called it, the Gun Liability bill. At the time, gun manufacturers were facing lawsuits based on meritless legal theories. This frivolous litigation was specifically designed to drive gun manufacturers out of business.

As it turns out, while many of us—both Republicans and Democrats—were fighting here in Congress to stop these lawsuits, Ms. Halligan was pursuing this precise type of litigation in the State of New York.

In New York v. Sturm & Ruger, Ms. Halligan advanced the novel legal theory that gun manufacturers, wholesaler, and retailers contributed to a public harm known as “illegal handguns in the State.” Therefore, she argued, gun manufacturers should be liable for the criminal conduct of third parties.

Some of my colleagues have argued that we should not consider this aspect of Ms. Halligan’s record at the time she was working as the solicitor general of New York. But no one forced Ms. Halligan to approve and sign this brief. No one compelled her to advance a completely frivolous legal theory.

I believe a close examination of Ms. Halligan’s record indicates she was more than just an advocate. She was using the full weight of her office to advance and promote a political agenda masked by a legal doctrine that is well outside of the legal mainstream.

In the case I just mentioned, which was the first of two cases Ms. Halligan was involved in regarding gun manufacturers, the New York State appellate court found her argument to be completely unfounded and explicitly rejected her theory.

The court went so far as to say that it had “never recognized [the] common-law public nuisance cause of action” that Ms. Halligan advanced, and that it would be “legally inappropriate” to permit the lawsuit to proceed. Moreover, far from accepting Ms. Halligan’s invitation to legislate from the bench, the court properly concluded that “the Legislative and Executive branches are better suited to address the societal problems concerning the already heavily regulated commercial activity at issue.”

I will remind my colleagues that Ms. Halligan was pursuing this legal theory at the same time we were debating the gun liability bill here in Congress. There is no question that the dubious legal theories she was advancing in court reflected her own personal views, not just a position she was advocating on behalf of a client.

In a separate opinion, Ms. Halligan delivered on the subject in May of 2003, she said she opposed the legislation being considered by Congress because, “[i]f enacted, this legislation would nullify lawsuits brought by nearly 30 cities and counties—including one filed by my office—as well as scores of lawsuits brought by individual victims or groups harmed by gun violence. . . . Such an action would likely cut off at the pass any attempts by States and their own legislatures—that might reduce gun crime or promote greater responsibility among gun dealers.”

Later in that same speech, Ms. Halligan expressed her view of the law and legal system. She said, “Courts are the special friend of liberty. Time and time again we have seen how the dynamics of our rule of law enables enviable social progress and mobility.”

I find this statement troubling, especially as it relates to the nuisance lawsuits against gun manufacturers. Those lawsuits are a prime example of how activists on the far left try to use the courts to affect social policy changes that they are unable to achieve through the ballot box. That is why I believe those lawsuits represented not only bad policy but, more broadly, an activist approach to the law.

Now, as I said, the State appellate court rejected her legal theory, and Congress subsequently passed legislation—a by a bipartisan margin—to stop those lawsuits. But Ms. Halligan still forged ahead. In 2006, notwithstanding the fact the Congress had passed tort reform in the State, she attempted once again to revive the ability of States to pursue gun manufacturers. Only this time, she advanced her claims in Federal court, arguing the legislation Congress passed was unconstitutional. Fortunately, the Federal appellate court rejected her legal theory as well.

Ms. Halligan’s record of taking far left and legally untenable positions is not limited to her legal briefs in gun cases. Another example of how she crossed the line from advocate to activist is Scheidler v. National Organization for Women. In that case she argued for an expansive definition of extortion under the Hobbs Act. Her support of NOW’s claim that pro-life groups had engaged in extortion was rejected by eight Justices of the Supreme Court, including Justice Ginsburg—one of the most liberal justices on the Court.

I believe a close examination of her record of other aspects of her record that I find problematic. For instance, Ms. Halligan’s views on the war on terror and the detention of enemy combatants are especially troublesome because Ms. Halligan is a nominee for the DC Circuit, where most of these issues are pending.

In 2004, Ms. Halligan was a member of a New York City bar association that published a report entitled: “The Indefinite Detention of ‘Enemy Combatants’ and National Security in the Context of the War on Terror.”

That report argued there were constitutional concerns with the detention of terrorists in military custody. It also argued vigorously against trying enemy combatants in military tribunals. Instead, it argued in favor of trying terrorists in civilian, article III courts.

Ms. Halligan is listed as one of the authors of that report. But when it came time for Mr. Keisler to testify at her hearings, Ms. Halligan tried to distance herself from the report. She testified that she did not become aware of the report until 2010. In a followup letter after her hearing, Ms. Halligan did concede that “it is true that [a draft of the report] was sent to me,” but that she could not recall writing the report.

I recognize that memories fade over time, But, as I assess her testimony, I think it is noteworthy that at least four other members of that bar association committee abstained from the final report. Ms. Halligan did not.

I would also point out that several years later she co-authored an amicus brief before the Supreme Court in the 2009 case Circuit City v. Strickler. Halligan’s brief in that case took a position similar to the 2004 report with respect to military detention of terrorists. In that case, she argued that the Authorization for Use of Military Force Act empowers the secretary of defense and indefinite military detention of a lawful permanent resident alien who conspired with al-Qaeda to execute terror attacks on the United States.

The fact that Ms. Halligan coauthored this brief prompts me to consider the conclusions reached by the 2004 report. And again, this issue is particularly troublesome for a nominee to the DC Circuit, where many of these questions are heard.

There are additional aspects of Ms. Halligan’s record that concern me. As New York’s Solicitor General, Ms. Halligan was responsible for recommending to Attorney General Spitzer that the State intervene in several high-profile Supreme Court cases. She filed amicus briefs that consistently took activist positions on controversial issues such as abortion, affirmative action, immigration, and federalism.

These are just some of my concerns regarding the nominee’s judicial philosophy and her approach to interpreting the Constitution. These are neither trivial nor consequential grounds on which to oppose her nomination.

Based on her record, I simply do not believe she will be able to put aside her long record of liberal advocacy and be a fair and impartial jurist.

Supporters argue that out of a sense of “fairness” we should confirm Ms. Halligan. They note that her nomination was pending for over 2 years. Let me remind my colleagues that while this seat has been vacant for over 7 years, it has not been without a nominee for all of that time.

Following the elevation of then-Circuit Judge John Roberts in 2005, President George W. Bush nominated an eminently qualified individual for this seat, Peter Keisler. Mr. Keisler was widely lauded as a consensus, bipartisan nominee. His distinguished record of public service included service as Acting Attorney General. Despite his broad bipartisan support and qualifications, Mr. Keisler waited 918 days for a committee vote that never came. As a result, he withdrew his name. As Ms. Halligan herself wrote, “It is a sobering reminder of the other side that we needed to fill the vacancy. There was no demand that Mr. Keisler be afforded an up-or-down vote. So it seems to me that too often, with my Democratic colleagues, “fairness” is a one-way street.

When the Democrats refused to consider Mr. Keisler’s nomination—or even to give him a committee vote—the other side justified their actions based on the DC Circuit caseload. So I would like to make a few comments about how the current caseload of the DC Circuit stacks up against the caseload that existed when Mr. Keisler’s nomination was subjected to a pocket filibuster.

Before doing so, I would again emphasize that given Ms. Halligan’s record on a host of controversial issues, the case for rejecting her nomination would remain, regardless of the number of vacancies or the court’s workload. However, since 2004 when the Democratic colleagues are declaring a “judicial emergency” on the DC Circuit Court, I let me set the record straight. Contrary to assertions we have recently heard regarding the court’s workload, the DC Circuit actually continued to decline. The total number of appeals filed is down over 13 percent. The total number of appeals pending is down over 10 percent; filings per panel are down almost 6 percent.

Compared to other courts of appeals, the DC Circuit caseload measured by number of appeals pending per panel is 54 percent less than the national average. Filings per judge are also significantly lower than for the rest of the courts of appeals. The average number of filings per active judge is 361, the DC Circuit is less than half, at 170 filings per active judge. And if you take into consideration the fact that the DC Circuit now has six senior judges, all of whom continue to hear cases and write opinions, there is a 26-percent decrease in case filings per judge on the court since 2005. So by any meaningful measure, the DC Circuit’s workload pales in comparison to the other circuit courts.

Given what I know about Ms. Halligan’s record on the second amendment, the war on terror, and other issues, my concerns regarding her activist judicial philosophy, and the court’s low workload, I oppose this nomination. I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Finally, I would note a number of organizations have expressed their opposition to this nomination. They are the American Conservative Union, 9/11 Families for a New & Strong America, the National Rifle Association gun owners of America, Citizens Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms, Committee for Justice, Concerned Women for America, the American Center for Law and Justice, Heritage Action, Liberty Counsel Action Family Research Council, Eagle Forum, Center for Judicial Accountability, Republican National Lawyers Association, Judicial Action Group, Americans United for Freedom, the Faith and Freedom Coalition.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the nomination of Caitlin Halligan to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit.

Ms. Halligan is an outstanding nominee with sterling credentials and broad support among the legal community. By the accounts of everyone who has worked with her or observed her work, she is a first-rate legal mind and a tireless worker, with great personal integrity and a thoughtful temperament that is perfectly suited to the Federal bench.

Her nomination deserves prompt confirmation.

Ms. Halligan has spent much of her career as a dedicated and distinguished public servant. She has a strong record in law enforcement, including in her current role as general counsel at the Manhattan district attorney’s office, an office that investigates and prosecutes 100,000 criminal cases annually.

She is highly esteemed by the New York and national law enforcement communities. Her nomination has been endorsed by the Manhattan district attorney, former Manhattan district attorney Robert Morgenthau, the National District Attorneys Association, several Republican district attorneys from New York, the New York Association of Chiefs of Police, and the New York State Sheriff’s Association, among many others.

Ms. Halligan is also widely recognized as one of the finest appellate litigators in the country. As solicitor general for the State of New York, she supervised 45 appellate lawyers and represented the State of New York, then-Governor George Pataki, a Republican, and other State officials in both State and Federal courts. She has been counsel of record on nearly 50 cases before the Supreme Court and has argued before that court five times. Twenty-one of the top lawyers from across the political spectrum who have worked with Ms. Halligan, including conservatives Miguel Estrada and Carter Phillips, have endorsed her nomination. She was rated unanimously “well qualified” by the American Bar Association.

President Obama first nominated Ms. Halligan in 2010. Despite Ms. Halligan’s outstanding qualifications and broad support, our Republican colleagues have refused to grant her an up-or-down vote for over 2 years.

Some have argued, because of positions that she took in litigation at the behest of a client, that she does not have adequate respect for the second amendment. Yet both at her hearing and in response to written questions, she stated unequivocally that she would faithfully follow and apply the Supreme Court's decision in District of Columbia v. Heller, which held that the second amendment protects an individual right to keep and bear arms for self-defense. When asked whether the right is conferred uniquely to the second amendment as a fundamental, Ms. Halligan answered, "That is clearly what the Supreme Court held and I would follow that precedent." It doesn't get much clearer than that.

In 2011 Republicans filibustering her nomination claimed that the second seat of the DC Circuit did not warrant filling that seat because the other judges serving on the court had too few cases. At that time, Ms. Halligan was nominated to fill the ninth seat out of 11 on the DC Circuit.

Even at the time, that argument was questionable. Senate Republicans confirmed President Bush's nominees for the 9th, 10th, and 11th seats on the DC Circuit without concerns about case load, caseloads have only gone up in since then. Also, the DC Circuit's caseload is uniquely challenging, as the former chief judge of the DC Circuit, Patricia Wald, has explained:

The D.C. Circuit hears the most complex, time-consuming disputes over regulations with the greatest impact on ordinary Americans' lives: clean air and water regulations, nuclear plant safety, healthcare regulations, insider trading and more. These cases can require thousands of hours of preparation by the judges, often consuming days of argument, involving hundreds of lawyers, interested parties, interveners, and necessitating dozens of briefs and thousands of pages of record—all of which culminates in lengthy, technically intricate legal opinions.

Even if we accept the argument that the DC Circuit did not need another judge when Ms. Halligan was nominated for the ninth seat, the circumstances have changed. Because an additional vacancy has opened, Ms. Halligan is currently nominated for the eighth seat and among them are now four vacant seats on the court. To put it another way, the court is now understaffed by over one-third. At the same time, the Administrative Office of U.S. Courts reports that the caseload per active judge has increased by 50 percent since 2005, when the Senate confirmed President Bush's nominee to fill the 11th seat on the DC Circuit.

Thus, there is no basis for debate now about whether an additional judge is needed on the D.C. Circuit. With an extra vacancy and a growing caseload, the court considered by many to be second only to the Supreme Court in its importance in our Federal judiciary desperately needs help.

Luckily, we have the opportunity to send the court an outstanding legal talent in Caitlin Halligan. I urge my colleagues to support her confirmation.

More broadly, I hope that we can come together and return the Senate to its best traditions of holding up-or-down votes on judicial nominations. We have an opportunity this Congress to move past this obstruction and get back to the proper manner of handling judicial nominations. Doing so will bring much needed assistance to the Federal judiciary, which has been forced to contend with unmanageable judicial vacancy rates. It also will do credit to this institution, which is failing in its duty to confirm Federal judges. We do not deserve the moniker of the "world's greatest deliberative body" if we cannot do something as simple as confirming judicial nominations.

There have been some encouraging signs that we are making real progress in this regard. For instance, the rules reforms that we voted on in a bipartisan manner earlier this year included a provision to shorten the cloture debate window on district court nominees from 30 hours to a more reasonable 2. This change could dramatically streamline the nominations process without limiting the minority's ability to filibuster. As he explained, the cloture "will expire at the end of this Congress, however, I hope that we can come together in bipartisan agreement to extend it permanently and perhaps even expand it, if the courts continue to need judges." Ms. Halligan would be a help on the D.C. Circuit. With an extra vacancy and a growing caseload, Senate Republicans confirmed President Bush's nominee to fill the ninth seat, the circuit considered by many to be second only to the Supreme Court in its importance in our Federal judiciary.

Attorneys General awarded her the Halligan argue before the court. Ms. Halligan has explained that she is the former chief judge of the DC Circuit's caseload is uniquely challenging, as the former chief judge of the DC Circuit, Patricia Wald, has explained:

The D.C. Circuit hears the most complex, time-consuming disputes over regulations with the greatest impact on ordinary Americans' lives: clean air and water regulations, nuclear plant safety, healthcare regulations, insider trading and more. She returned to public service in 2010 as the General Counsel of the New York County District Attorney’s Office, where she has served for the past 3 years. This office is one of the most distinguished prosecutorial offices in the nation, and it handles more than 100,000 criminal prosecutions each year.

Because of her strong background in law enforcement in the State of New York, her nomination enjoys the support of major law enforcement groups, including:

- The National District Attorney’s Association;
- The National Center for Women and Policing;
- The New York Association of Chiefs of Police;
- The New York State Sheriffs’ Association; and
- New York Women in Law Enforcement.

She also enjoys the support of many law enforcement officials from New York, including New York City Police Commissioner Kelly, New York County District Attorney Cyrus Vance, and numerous other County District Attorneys across the State.

Over the course of her distinguished career, she has served as counsel for a party or amicus in the Supreme Court more than 45 times. She has argued in the Supreme Court herself in five cases, most recently in March 2011. She also has argued or participated in dozens of other appeals in State and Federal courts.

In short, Ms. Halligan is an accomplished woman whose sterling qualifications are unassailable. She clearly deserves the “well qualified” rating from the American Bar Association she has received—the ABA’s highest rating.

Unfortunately, Ms. Halligan’s nomination has been pending for a very long time. She was first nominated to the D.C. Circuit in September 2010, 29 months ago. The seat to which she has been nominated has been vacant since 2001, when Chief Justice Roberts was elevated.

Last Congress, my Republican colleagues filibustered her nomination, something that I found to be without cause or rationale. I am very hopeful that, in this Congress, reasonable minds will prevail, and we will invoke cloture and confirm Ms. Halligan.

I understand that the National Rifle Association is opposed to Ms. Halligan’s confirmation. Behind the NRA’s opposition is the fact that—while Halligan was New York’s Solicitor General, acting at the direction of her superiors—the State pursued public nuisance litigation against gun manufacturers.

Think about that: if this standard prevailed, any time a person represents her superiors—the State pursued public nuisance litigation against gun manufacturers.

Federal Government, and represents that government on a controversial issue at the direction of its duly-elected leaders, that may jeopardize a later confirmation vote.

That is not fair. A government lawyer’s job is to pursue the government’s interest vigorously and to do justice, and that is what Caitlin Halligan has done. She was appointed by the Attorney General to represent the State of New York, while the State had a Republican Governor, George Pataki. Her job was the State’s interest, and she did so with vigor at the direction of her superiors. She should not be penalized for it.

Senator Sessions made this point when the Senate was considering the nomination of now-Judge Brett Kavanaugh to the D.C. Circuit. Senator Sessions said that “[suggesting] that service in an elective branch of Government somehow tarnishes a lawyer’s reputation would be a terrible message for this body to send to the legal community and to all citizens.”

My colleagues will recall that Judge Kavanaugh had quite an activist record from our side’s perspective: he had worked on the Starr Report, which recommended grounds of impeachment of President Clinton; he had worked for George W. Bush during the Florida recount; he then worked in the White House Counsel’s office under President George W. Bush.

In short, while Kavanaugh may have been a fine lawyer, he had an undoubted Republican political pedigree. Yet I carefully considered his background, and I voted to invoke cloture on his nomination, as did many of my Democratic colleagues. Now it is time for our Republican colleagues to do the same on this nomination.

Last Congress, some of my Republican colleagues argued that the D.C. Circuit’s caseload does not justify confirmation of another judge to the Court.

The D.C. Circuit has 11 judgeships. Four of them are vacant now—more than a third of the court—and three other judges are currently eligible to go senior, so the D.C. Circuit could soon have only four of its 11 seats filled.

When my colleagues raised caseload-based objections to Halligan’s nomination last Congress, I reminded them that, during the George W. Bush Administration, an outstanding nominee to fill the 10th seat on the D.C. Circuit twice and the 11th seat once. If confirmed, Halligan would only fill the eighth seat.

In addition, the D.C. Circuit’s caseload per judge has grown substantially just in the last two years. The total number of cases terminated per active judge has grown to 280 up from 184 in 2010. That’s more than a 50 percent increase. Similarly, the number of appeals at the Court pending per active judge has also spiked. It was 157 in 2008. Today, it is 203 so it is up by a third.

This hurts ordinary Americans. Most of the time, the cases heard by the D.C. Circuit are not partisan or ideological. But they are critical to making sure that Federal regulation in almost every area operates predictably and rationally.

As Former Judge Patricia Wald recently wrote in the Washington Post:

“The D.C. Circuit hears the most complex, time-consuming, labyrinthine disputes over regulations with the greatest impact on ordinary Americans’ lives: clean air and water regulations, nuclear plant safety, health-care reform issues, insider trading and more. These cases can require thousands of hours of preparation by the judges, often consuming days of argument, involving hundreds of parties and interveners, and necessitating dozens of briefs and thousands of pages of record—all of which culminates in lengthy, technically intricate legal opinions.

Moreover, President Obama has been the only President in nearly four decades not to have a confirmed appointee on the D.C. Circuit. President Ford was the last such President, but there were no vacancies during his Administration, and every other President since Warren Harding, over 90 years ago, had an appointment to this prestigious Court, as are treating President Obama differently from other Presidents in this regard.

I will conclude by simply saying that Ms. Halligan is a woman with sterling credentials, an exemplary record, and a wealth of experience. She has been nominated to a vital court that badly needs her service. I believe she should be confirmed, and I urge my colleagues to vote for cloture and for confirmation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Ms. Heitkamp). The Senator’s time has expired.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent for 2 minutes of debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, I understand the Senator from New York will speak following my comments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, today the Senate has an opportunity to act in a bipartisan manner to end a filibuster credentials, an exemplary record, and a wealth of experience. She has been nominated to a vital court that badly needs her service. I believe she should be confirmed, and I urge my colleagues to vote for cloture and for confirmation.

City Bar report that some are using to inflame the debate:

I was, frankly, taken aback by [this Report], for a couple of reasons. First of all, the Supreme Court has clearly said that indefinite detention is authorized by the AUMF statute. And so the notion that the President lacks that authority, I think, is clearly incorrect. I was also a little bit taken aback by the tone that I think that the issues of indefinite detention and any issues in the national security realm are very serious ones, and I think that approaching those issues in a way that is not productive way to proceed. But the bottom line is that the report does not represent my work. It does not reflect my views.

I hope Senators who intend to make this a basis for filibustering this outstanding nominee are listening and understand. Again, she testified: ‘‘[T]he bottom line is that the report does not represent my work. It does not reflect my views. This is no basis for opposing the nominee, let alone filibustering her confirmation.’’ The report does not represent her views; she flat out rejected them as a statement of law.

During her hearing she testified that she only became aware of the 2004 New York City’s Police Commissioner Ray Kelly is not endorsing someone soft on terrorism. Mrs. GILLIBRAND Madam President, so many good things about Caitlin Halligan have already been said. She is a woman of great intellect, has a history of laudable achievements, a record of outstanding public service, and she deserves the full support of the Senate today.

Caitlin has had an exceptional career as an attorney, and I am confident she will make an excellent judge. She is currently the general counsel at the New York City Office, an office that investigates and prosecutes 100,000 criminal cases annually in Manhattan.

She served as our Solicitor General. She was awarded ‘‘Best United States Supreme Court Brief’’ while she served there.

She has overwhelming support from law enforcement, from the New York Association of Chiefs of Police, the New York State Sheriffs Association, the National District Attorneys Association, the New York Women in Law Enforcement, along with the support of community leaders, such as the Women’s Bar Association of the District of Columbia, the National Conference of Women’s Bar Associations, and the U.S. Women’s Chamber of Commerce.

The bottom line is, she is a well-qualified judge who would do great service for the United States. Even New York City police commissioner Ray Kelly said Caitlin has the ‘‘three qualities important for a judicial nominee: intelligence, a judicial temperament, and personal integrity.” She has a strong record.

As to the debate we have heard on national security, Caitlin lives in the heart of New York City, She saw the Twin Towers fall. In the years that followed, she worked as pro bono counsel to the board of directors of the Lower Manhattan Development Corporation that oversees the rebuilding of Lower Manhattan—helping our city to grow stronger every single day.

Lastly, today, women make up roughly 30 percent of the Federal bench. For the first time in history, that holds true in trial courts, courts of appeals, and the highest court in the land, the Supreme Court.

It is true we have come a long way, but we still have a long way to go on this journey for full equality. I think she is a superbly qualified nominee, and I urge my colleagues to vote in support of her.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote the ayes are 51 and the nays are 41. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The majority leader.

Mr. REID. I enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which cloture was not invoked on the Halligan nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is entered.

VOTE EXPLANATION

Mr. VITTER. Madam President, I could not participate in the vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the nomination of Calendar No. 13, Caitlin Joan Halligan, of New York, to be U.S. circuit judge for the District of Columbia Circuit. Had I voted, I would have voted nay.

Ms. Halligan has consistently espoused extremist positions on well-settled areas of the law including second amendment rights, abortion, and terrorist detention. I believe that Ms. Halligan’s demonstrated propensity for judicial activism disqualifies her for the Federal bench where a judge must impartially apply the law.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Madam President, we are now moving to the Brennan matter. The Republican leader and I are trying to work something out. I have had numerous contacts from everybody about the problems with the weather. We are going to try to reach an agreement to move forward on Brennan and finish it today. I don’t know if we can do that, but this is what we are trying to do.

I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BROWN. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. BROWN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for up to 10 minutes, and Senator INHOFE, the senior Senator from Oklahoma, be given 20 minutes after I speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DOOLITTLE “TOKYO RAiders”

Mr. BROWN. Madam President, I rise to recognize the lasting contributions of 80 courageous Americans who participated in the Doolittle raid, our Nation’s first offensive action on Japan’s soil during the Second World War. I am pleased to have Senator BOOZMAN as the lead Republican of an effort to ensure these men have the recognition they deserve. Together, we introduced S. 381, which will award the surviving airmen, known as the Doolittle Raider Crew, with the Congressional Gold Medal.

Senator BOOZMAN’s collaboration reiterates that bipartisan support for our veterans endures in this body. Joining us as original cosponsors are Senators MURRAY, Tester, Baucus, Nelson, CANTWELL, and SCHATZ.

As chairman of the Senate Veterans’ Affairs Committee during the last session, Senator MURRAY also cosponsored last year’s resolution. We are grateful for her leadership. Our colleague Senator LAUTENBERG, the sole World War II veteran serving in the Senate, is also a cosponsor.

Some 16 million Americans served this country during World War II. Today their average age is 92. These survivors have earned the respect of a grateful Nation. Now is the time for us to act to honor them.

On April 18, 1942, 80 American airmen volunteered for an unknown assignment. These sons, fathers, and brothers accepted what they only knew to be “an extremely hazardous mission.” They were led by Lt. Col. James “Jimmy” Doolittle, a one-time flight instructor at Wright Field in Dayton, OH, in my home State. He also studied at Kelly Field and McCook Field in Ohio.

The Doolittle Raid was the first time the Army Air Corps and the Navy collaborated on a tactical mission. These pilots flew 16 U.S. Army Air Corps B-25 Mitchell bombers from the deck of the USS Hornet into combat, a feat that has been immortalized in song.

On the morning of the raid, the USS Hornet was discovered by Japanese picket ships. Fearing the mission might be compromised, the Raiders launched 170 miles earlier than planned. The earlier launch meant these men now had to travel over 650 miles to their intended targets, leaving them with the possibility of running out of enough fuel to land beyond the Japanese-occupied China.

Accepting this choice meant the Raiders would almost certainly have to crash land or bail out either above Japanese-occupied China or over the home islands of Japan. Any survivor would certainly be subjected to imprisonment, torture or death.

After reaching their targets, 15 of the bombers continued to China, while the 16th—whose plane was dangerously low on fuel—headed to Russia. The total distance traveled by the Raiders was about 2,250 nautical miles over a period of 13 hours, making it the longest combat mission ever flown in a B-25 during the war.

Of the 80 Raiders who launched that day, 8 were captured—3 of them were executed, 1 died of disease, and 4 of these prisoners survived and returned home after the war. Of the original 80, 4 are still with us today. They are residents of Montana, Texas, Tennessee, and Washington State.

There was a fifth, MAJ Tom Griffin of Cincinnati, OH. On the evening of February 26, just 1 week ago—the date I introduced this legislation—Major Griffin of Cincinnati passed away surrounded by family and friends. His family lost a loved one, our Nation lost a hero.

The remaining four Raiders will be commemorating the 71st anniversary of this raid this coming April in Fort Walton Beach, FL. Now is the time to award these survivors the Congressional Medal. Their valor, their skill, their courage proved invaluable to the morale of our country on that day more than 70 years ago and the eventual defeat of Japan in the Second World War. I humbly ask my colleagues to join us in this bill in honoring the Doolittle Raiders.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

OIL AND GAS INDUSTRY

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, since being elected, President Obama has been talking about the virtues of our Nation's potential to achieve domestic energy independence. In his State of the Union Message just a short time ago he said: "After years of talking about it, we are finally poised to control our own energy future:"

This is something I have been saying now for years, that we already have control over our energy future. The problem is we have an administration that has not allowed us to exploit our own capabilities in terms of developing the natural resources we have. In fact, we are the only country in the world that doesn't develop its own resources.

In fact, in each of the President's budgets he has proposed to kill certain tax provisions specific to the oil and gas industry. Even though he says these are subsidies for the oil and gas industry, that is not the case. I would like to mention these because no one ever talks about the fact that he has specific provisions in his own budget. I will mention just three of them.

Intangible drilling costs—called IDCs. This is a provision that simply allows producers to deduct from their revenue the cost of drilling. You pay taxes on net revenue. So this is net of the expenses it takes to develop the revenue. Every business is allowed to deduct ordinary and necessary business expenses, and IDCs are exactly that for the oil and gas industry.

In other words, the cost of drilling should be deducted because a lot of times they drill and don’t produce anything. So this is something everyone else has and we should be having also in the oil industry. If the President gets rid of these, the tax increase alone would be $1 billion in the 10-year period we have been talking about. This is interesting because that is not a tax that would be paid by them. It would go into the increased cost of energy. But we stopped that. We stopped that plane being a reality. Even though it was in the President's budget.

The second is called percentage depletion. Percentage depletion is simply a way the Tax Code has allowed oil and gas producers to account for the reduction in the value of their reserves. Let’s say they are fortunate and they produced oil that is going to be income that will go to them. As that is depleted, the value of that has been depleted also.

Percentage depletion has been on the books as long as we have had the industry. If the President were successful in doing away with the percentage depletion, that would mean about an $11.5 billion tax increase on the energy we use in this country.

The last one I will mention—and there are actually two more—is called section 199. Section 199 is the manufacturer’s tax deduction. It allows all manufacturers, including farmers, filmmakers, and the rest of them to take a small deduction in their taxes because they create products here in America. The President has always proposed canceling this out but only for the oil and gas industry and not for anybody else. Everybody else would have that same advantage.

Again, if the President were successful in doing this, it would increase the cost of energy by $11.6 billion over that 10-year period. Recognize the President's proposal to increase those taxes would prevent the industry from reaching its true potential, despite the fact of what we have out there and what we could do and how we could get it done today really quickly.

A recent CRS—Congressional Research Service—report stated that the United States has the largest combined resources in oil, natural gas, and coal on any country in the world. We have more than Saudi Arabia, China, and Canada combined. Yet we are the only Nation, as I said, in the world that doesn’t allow ourselves to exploit our own resources.

Fortunately, oil and gas activities have increased over the past years. As much as the President may want to claim credit for this, he has no standing to do so because, as I mentioned, the tax provisions he has proposed in his budget have been very negative toward oil and gas. Last year we hit a 15-year high in oil production, producing an average of 6.4 million barrels a day, which was 800,000 barrels per day more than in 2011.

This increase is staggering and it is the result of the amazing advancements in oil and gas production technologies—things such as horizontal drilling and hydraulic fracturing. These are things that have helped us get the oil and gas out of tight formations.

Nearly all of this increase has occurred on State and private lands. CRS confirmed 1 year ago that “about 96 percent of the increase in oil and gas production” since 2007 took place on Federal lands. That is critical, because as I have said twice already, we are the only country that doesn’t develop its own resources. This means that is beyond the reach of the President’s hands. In other words, he can’t stop the private land production but he can the public land.

Adding to that—and this was just released yesterday, which is why I wanted to make this point today—the oil production on all Federal lands, including more and offshore, has increased last year for the second year in a row, falling from 632 million barrels in 2011 to right at 600 million barrels in 2012. So the 800,000 barrels-per-day increase we saw last year took place solely on private lands, none of it on public lands.

During this boom time we are having right now, on that which the President has control over—the Federal lands—we have actually had a reduction. This makes sense, given what we know about oil and gas permitting on Federal lands. It still take 300 days to get a permit to drill.

This is something you can’t talk about too much because they would always say: In a certain case, you need to do it faster. In my State of Oklahoma, you can get it done in hours. In North Dakota, you can get it done in an average of about 10 days. But no, it is 300 days on Federal lands.

I have a friend named Harold Hamm. He is arguably the most successful independent producer in America today. He is from Enid, OK. He does most of his production in North Dakota right now. I saw just a moment ago the Senator from North Dakota, and he can be very proud of the fact that in North Dakota Harold Hamm has one huge problem: He can’t find people to work. They have full employment up there. This is what the potential looks like here.

This chart shows all the potential, and I call to the Chair’s attention this Northeastern part of the United States—Pennsylvania and New York. It didn’t use to be the case that they had all that potential, but they do now, and it is spread evenly throughout the country with all the great new discoveries that are out there.

Anyway, one of the arguments the President has had when I have said over and over again for the last 4 years that we need to open our public lands for drilling, and if we were able to do that, good things would happen in terms of the market, the price of gas at the pump, is that if we do that—if we allow the drilling for gas and oil on public lands to be done, it would be 10 years before we would feel that at the pump—10 years.

So I called Harold Hamm. He is a guy who I think everyone would agree could be considered the most knowledgeable person I think everyone would agree could be considered the most knowledgeable person in this area, and 6 months ago I called him and said to him: I am going to be on a national TV show—I should tell you what it is, but I will not—and the President has been saying it will take 10 years before that oil will reach the pumps and so I would like to ask you a question. I said: When you answer, I am going to use your name live on national TV tonight, so you answer, I am going to use your name, and he proceeded to tell me what would happen each day for the first barrel of oil to actually reach the pumps and have an effect.

Anyway, no one has argued with that yet because it is pretty well documented. So by the time you have one Federal drilling permit completed, Harold Hamm could have four separate wells up and running, providing more jobs and cheaper gasoline for all Americans.

Fortunately, the President does not control the permitting process on State and private lands, and because of this the industry has had the opportunity to unlock tremendous natural gas resources. Not 5 years ago, many believed the United States faced a significant shortage of natural gas. Wellhead prices at that time were trading as high as $11 per thousand cubic feet—$11 per thousand cubic feet—and investors were racing to build liquefied natural gas import facilities. We were going to import liquefied natural gas. As you know, natural gas has to be liquefied to have some bulk before you are able to trade it internationally. Anyway, they were racing to try to get this done so we would be able to import from foreign countries to meet U.S. demand with foreign supplies.

The shale gas revolution changed all this. Our expected natural gas reserves increased well over 2 quadrillion cubic feet, which is enough natural gas to supply our domestic needs in the United States for 90 years. That is right here in this country. Many industry observers believe this estimate is discounted to the Nation’s true potential. This dramatic shift in natural gas markets has pushed prices down to below $4 per thousand cubic feet, putting the United States in a unique position to bolster both wealth creation and our foreign policy might by beginning natural gas exports. So we would be going from importing liquefied natural gas to exporting natural gas.

Right now there are currently 15 permits to export LNG pending before Secretary Chu at the Department of Energy. The Natural Gas Act requires the Department to “issue such [a permit] upon application, unless . . . it will not be consistent with the public interest.”

What could be inconsistent with this for the public interest? This would be cheaper gas for us, creating jobs, and it would be beneficial to the entire country. Many industry observers believe that as soon as more demand comes online producers are able to tap reserves and meet the market’s needs.

The consulting firm Deloitte agrees. In its report, it stated “producers can develop more reserves in anticipation of demand growth.” They added that future LNG exports will have limited disruptions to natural gas markets because they “will likely be backed by long-term supply contracts, as well as long-term contracts.” There will be ample notice and time in advance of the exports to make supplies available.” This should be of great encouragement to domestic energy consumers. In fact, the NERA Consulting Report concluded that across the board, industries would not be hurt by LNG exports, stating that “no sector analyzed . . . would experience reductions in employment more rapid than normal turnover.”

The petrochemical industry is one that has been vocal in opposition to LNG exports, but the leftwing think tank, the Brookings Institute, stated in its LNG report that “exports can be seen as providing a benefit to the petrochemical industry” because it is primarily a user of natural gas liquids and not the dry liquids used to make LNG.

I can appreciate the fact that many people are worried about the cost of energy. I get that. But those who are concerned that exports will be the cause of this have misinterpreted concerns. Rather, they should be focusing their attention on the cumulative effect of adverse government policies negatively affecting energy production. Regulated closures, largely those coming out of the EPA, are perhaps the greatest threat to this Nation achieving domestic energy independence. We have gone from 1,600 rigs out there that were operating down to 229.

Further, when considering the potential benefits of LNG exports, we can’t dismiss the impact trade has had on new natural gas production projects. In 2008, when natural gas was trading at nearly $11 per thousand cubic feet, there were over 1,600 active drilling rigs. Today, that figure is down to 229. That is a 73-percent reduction. The rigs are still out there. They are not going to up. They are not going to up. Over time, you can have them operating again.

The industry is not moving forward with projects because it does not have the demand and certainty it needs to do so. Without demand certainty, it is impossible to accurately forecast whether the massive investments required to develop a project can be recouped. This stalls both job and wealth creation, keeping our unemployment rates and deficits higher than they should be.

Today the natural gas market is in a demand-limited scenario, and it will remain there for the foreseeable future. Supply is truly so abundant and readjustable that as soon as more demand comes online producers are able to tap reserves and meet the market’s needs.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

other sectors of our economy. Agriculture is a prime example. The Federal Government works diligently to open and maintain international market access for U.S. agricultural producers. This was highlighted very recently by an announcement that Japan would ease its restrictions on U.S. beef imports. Certainly, this is meaningful to my State and the States of others who are in this Chamber right now. This has been a major goal of the current and previous administrations for years. Japan’s decision was hailed by the administration and many Members of Congress on both sides of the aisle. Everyone knows it is a great deal because when you sell products abroad, you both generate wealth at home and expand the size of the market, thereby increasing opportunities for expansion.

The Federal Government should adopt the same perspective with LNG exports. LNG exports will create jobs across the country, bring more wealth to our Nation from abroad, and grow our economy—all at the same time. Meanwhile, we will be providing needed fuel for our allies—Japan, Korea, NATO, and Thailand—who will consequently be able to reduce their reliance on the Middle East.

So it is something that is good for everybody. It is good for our country; it is good for our economy. And all you have to do is, if you want to see that, look up the North Dakota. As I mentioned, a great independent producer, Harold Hamm from Oklahoma, is up there right now, and his biggest problem is they are fully employed.

We have a similar situation in my State of Oklahoma. We have expanded our production to the point where we are not feeling some of the grief you hear in the discussions from the other people on this floor. So I would encourage us to look at this export to keep this market, to get those other 1,600 wells working. This is something that can certainly happen.

THE STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS

I notice my time is expiring, but I want to mention something that came out in the State of the Union Message. I hope I will have a chance to do this later on today.

When the President was talking about greenhouse gas, as he has been talking about for a long time, he made several comments. I think this was talked about more in the State of the Union Message than anything else he talked about. Yes, it’s true that no single event makes a trend. But the fact is that the 12 hottest years on record have all come in the last 15.

That is just flat wrong. Even NASA’s James Hansen, who officially has been the leader on the other side of this issue, admits that global temperature standstill is real, and mean global temperatures have been flat for the last decade. Later on I am going to go over one by one the statements he has made. I would only suggest that this is something we need to keep in mind.

In 1895, we went into this hysteria at that time because there was a cold snap: We are all going to freeze to death. Another ice age is coming. We are all going to die.

In 1920, it was the same thing except it was a heat spell. This, obviously, wasn’t true at that time, but everyone was getting hysterical. These 20-year cycles keep coming and going. You can set your watch by them. Except in 1945, it was another cold spell that lasted until 1975. The interesting thing about this is that 1945 was the year that had the largest release of CO2 of any time in the history of this country, and that precipitated not a warming trend but another cold trend. The warming trend, of course, came in 1975.

Anyways, these are cycles. God is still up there. We are going to have these cycles take place. Later on today, hopefully I want to take an statement that the President has made and show that those statements weren’t right.

One thing that is true—one thing that no one disagrees with—is that the President probably remembers the Halcyon days of 2009 and 2010 when he party controlled the White House, the Senate, and the House. That got us ObamaCare, a $1 trillion stimulus, and a whole lot more debt, and the Dodd-Frank law—which was targeted at Wall Street but which hit Main Street, including a lot of our community bankers.

I realize the President and Democrats want to take the House of Representatives back in 2014. The President probably remembers the Halcyon days of 2009 and 2010 when he party controlled the White House, the Senate, and the House. That got us ObamaCare, a $1 trillion stimulus, and a whole lot more debt, and the Dodd-Frank law—which was targeted at Wall Street but which hit Main Street, involving a lot of our community bankers.

There is a time for campaigning and there is a time for governing. But the 2012 election occurred 17 weeks ago and the 2014 election will not occur for another 20 months. Now is the time for governing, not for delivering more partisan stump speeches. In order to govern, the Senate needs to pass a budget, cut the spending, and deficit reduction and long-term economic growth.

One of the great tragedies in America today is the fact that our economy is growing so slowly that unemployment rates remain unacceptably high—roughly around 8 percent. That is only after many people have simply given up looking for work. Now more than 20 million people are either out of work or they are working part time when they would prefer to work full time. But that is not going to happen until we get the economy growing again—and that is not going to happen until we get our hands around our long-term debt and economic growth.

I want to mention something that came out in the State of the Union Message than anything else he talked about. This was highlighted very recently by the announcement that the White House had no details. While the President has been out there playing Chicken Little, Members of Congress have been waiting for the White House to send over its budget.

The law requires the President to transmit a budget by February 15, and we have been now advised his budget will not be forthcoming until March 25. Ironically, that will actually be after the House and the Senate have taken up our own budget, and we will have no input from the President on his proposal.

A few weeks ago I said a second term offers the President a second chance. I still remain hopeful that President Obama will eventually be persuaded to adopt a serious approach for long-term deficit reduction and long-term economic growth.

Since the official end of the recession in June of 2009, the median household income in America has fallen by more than $2,400. Meanwhile, since the President took office the cost of family health insurance has increased by $2,300. So not only has household income come down, but their American standard of living—what they used to buy with their household income, that is—dropped by $2,400, they are seeing an additional burden of $2,300 because of ObamaCare.

The bottom line is the American people are tired of the “Chicken Little” stories and they are tired of the fear mongering. They look at what is happening in Washington—I know my constituents in Texas do—and they almost want to turn their eyes in another direction to avert their gaze because they understand that Washington is not serving their interests. If President Obama wants real change, it is time for him to get behind real tax reform and real reform of Social Security and Medicare, something his own bipartisan Simpson-Bowles—recommended.

After all, the American people did not send us here to kick and scream over a 2.4-percent budget cut. They sent us here to make some hard decisions that will ensure long-term economic health and economic prosperity and it is time for the President as the leader of our country and the leader of the free world to take that message to heart.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. BALDWIN). The Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

BRENNAN NOMINATION

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, I rise today to begin to filibuster John Brennan’s nomination for the CIA. I will speak until I can no longer speak. I will speak as long as it takes until the alarm is sounded from coast to coast that our Constitution is important, that your rights to trial by jury are precious, that no American should be killed by a drone on American soil without first being charged with a crime, without first being found to be guilty by a court. That Americans could be killed in a cafe in San Francisco or in a restaurant in Houston or at their home in Bowling Green, KY, is an abomination. It is something that should not and cannot be tolerated in our country.

I do not rise to oppose John Brennan’s nomination simply for the person. I rise today for the principle. The principle is one that, as Americans, we have fought too long and hard for to get up on, to give up on the Bill of Rights, to give up on the fifth amendment protection that says no person shall be held without due process, that no person shall be held for a capital offense without being indicted. This is a precious American tradition and something we should not give up on easily.

They say Lewis Carroll is fiction: Alice never fell down a rabbit hole, and the White Queen’s caustic judgments are not really a threat to your security. Or has America the beautiful become Alice’s Wonderland?

“No, no!” said the Queen. “Sentence first—verdict afterwards.” “Stuff and nonsense!” Alice said loudly.

“The idea of having the sentence first.” “Hold your tongue!” said the Queen, turning purple.

“I won’t!” said Alice.

“(Release the drones),” I said the Queen, as she shouted at Alice.

Lewis Carroll is fiction, right? When I asked the President: Can you kill an American on American soil, it should have been an easy answer. It is an easy question. It should have been a resounding and unequivocal no. The President’s response: He hasn’t killed anyone yet.

We are supposed to be comforted by that. The President says: I haven’t killed anyone yet. . . . He goes on to would be here saying exactly the same thing: No one person, no one politician should be allowed to judge the guilt—to charge an individual, to judge the guilt of an individual, and to execute an individual. It goes against everything we believe in our country. This is not even new to our country. There is 800 years of English law that we founded our tradition on. We founded it upon the Magna Carta from 1215. We founded it upon the Greeks and Romans who had juries. It is not enough to charge someone to say that they are guilty.

Some might come to this floor and they might say we are being attacked on 9/11. What if there are planes flying at the Twin Towers? Obviously we repel them. We repel any attack on our country. If there is a gentleman or a woman with a grenade launcher who attacks our buildings or our Capitol, we use lethal force. You don’t get due process if you are involved with actively attacking us, our soldiers, or our government. You don’t get due process if you are overseas in a battle, shooting at our soldiers. But that is not what we are talking about.

The Wall Street Journal reported and said that the bulk of the drone attacks is signature attacks. They do not even know the name of the person. A line or a carpet of bombs is going from a place where we think there are bad people to a place where we think they might commit harm and we kill the carpet, not a person. Is that the standard we will use? Will the use of drones be a standard for killing Americans to be that we thought you were bad, we thought you were coming from a meeting with bad people and you were in a line of traffic and so therefore you were fired for the killing?

That is the standard we are using overseas. Is that the standard we are going to use here? I will speak today until the President responds and says: No, we won’t kill Americans in cafes. No, we won’t kill you at home in your bed at night. No, we won’t drop bombs on restaurants.

Is that so hard? It is amazing that the President will not respond. I have been asking this question for a month. I keep pulling the President to respond to anything and I get no answer. The President says he hasn’t done it yet and I am to be comforted. You are to be comforted in your home. You are to be comforted in your restaurant. You are to be comforted in your e-mail that the President has not killed an American yet in the homeland. He says he has not done it yet. He says he has no intention to do so.

Hayek said that nothing more distinguishes arbitrary government from a government that is run by the whims of the people than the rule of law. The law is an amazingly important thing, an amazingly important protection. For us to give up on it so easily doesn’t speak well of what our founding Fathers fought for, what generation after generation of American soldiers has fought for, what soldiers are fighting for today when they go overseas to fight for us. It speaks well of what we are doing here to protect the freedom at home when our soldiers are abroad fighting for us that we say our freedom is not precious enough for one person to come down and say: Enough is enough, Mr. President, come clean, come forward and say you will not kill Americans on American soil.

The oath of office of the President says that he will, to the best of his ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution. He raises his right hand, he puts his left hand on the Bible, and he says “will.” The President doesn’t say, I intend to if it is convenient; I intend to unless circumstances dictate otherwise. The President says, “I will defend the Constitution. I will protect the Constitution.”

There is not room for equivocation here. This is something that is so important, so fundamental to our country that he needs to come forward.

When Brennan’s nomination is signature attacks, is there any geographic limitation to your drone strike program? Brennan responded and said: No, there is no limitation.

So the obvious question would be, if there is no limitation on whom you can kill and where you can kill and there is no due process upon whom you will kill, does that mean you will do it in America? The Senator from Oregon asked him that question directly, in committee. And this so-called champion of transparency, this so-called advocate of some kind of process, responded to the Senator from Oregon by saying: I plan to optimize secrecy and optimize transparency.

Gobbledygook. You were asked: Will you kill Americans on American soil? Answer the question.

Our laws forbid the CIA from doing that. It should have been an easy question. The 1947 National Security Act says the CIA doesn't operate in our country. We have the FBI, we have rules, we have separated powers to protect our people. That is what the government was organized to do. That is what the Constitution was put in place to do, to protect your rights. So when I asked, he says: No answer. He says: I will evade your answer, and by letting him come forward we let him get away with it.

I have hounded and hounded and finally yesterday I get a response from Mr. Brennan, who wishes to be the CIA chief, and he finally says: I will obey the law.

Well, hooray. Good for him. It took a month to get him to admit that he will obey the law. But it is not so simple. You see, the drone strike program is under the Department of Defense, so when the CIA says they are not going to kill you in America, they are not saying the Defense Department won't.

So Eric Holder sent a response, the Attorney General. His response says: I haven't killed anyone yet. I don't intend to—But I might.

He pulls out examples that are not under consideration. There is the use of local force that can always be repelled—if our country is attacked, the President has the right to protect and defend the country. Nobody questions that. Nobody questions if planes are flying toward the Twin Towers whether they can be repelled by the military. Nobody questions whether a terrorist with a rocket launcher or grenade launcher is attacking us, whether they can be repelled. They do not get their day in court.

But if you are sitting in a cafeteria in Dearborn, if you happen to be an Arab American who has a relative in the Middle East and you communicate with them by e-mail and someone says your relative is someone we suspect of being associated with terrorism, is that enough to kill you? For goodness sake, wouldn't we try to make an arrest and come to the truth by having a jury and a presentation of the facts on both sides of the issue?

See, the real problem here is one of the things we did a long time ago is we separated the police power from the judicial power. This was an incredibly important first step. We also prevented the military from acting in our country because we did not want to have a police state. One of the things we greatly objected to of the British is they were passing writs or warrants of assistance. These were warrants that allowed them to go into a house but allowed them to go into anyone's house. What we did when we wrote our Constitution is we made the Constitution the fourth amendment specific to the person and the place and the things to be looked for. We did not like the soldiers going willy-nilly into any house and looking for anything. So we made our Constitution much more specific.

I think this is something we should not give up on so easily. I think the idea that we could deprive someone of their life without any kind of hearing, essentially allowing a politician—I am not saying the President. I am not saying he is a bad person at all. But he is not a judge. He is a politician. He was elected by a majority, but the majority doesn't get to decide whom we execute. We have courts for deciding this. To allow one man to accuse a person in secret and to never get notified that they have been accused—their notification is the buzz of the propellers on the drone as it flies overhead in the second before they are killed. Is that what we want from our government? Are we so afraid of terrorism and so afraid of terrorists that we are willing to just throw out our rights and our freedoms and what we have fought for and have gotten over the centuries? We have at least 800—if not 1,000—years worth of protections.

Originally, the protections were against a monarch. We feared a monarch. We feared a monarch. When we came to this country and set up our Presidency, there was a great deal of alarm. There was a great deal of fear over having a king, and so we limited the executive branch. Madison wrote in the Federalist Papers that the Constitution supposes what history demonstrates, which is that the executive branch is the branch most prone to a war, most likely to go to war, and, therefore, we took that power to declare war and vested it in the legislature. We broke up the powers.

Montesquieu wrote about the checks and balances and the separation of powers. He was somebody whom Jefferson looked toward. They separated the powers because there is a chance for abusive power when power resides in one person. Montesquieu said there can be no liberty when the executive and the legislative branches are combined.

I say something similar; that is, there can be no liberty when the executive and legislative branches are combined, and that is what we are doing here. We are allowing the President to be the accused in secret, we are allowing him to be the judge, and we are allowing him to be the jury. No man should have that power. We should fear that power not because we have to say: Oh, we fear the current President. It has nothing to do with who the President is or what the President is going to do with respect to whether someone is a Republican or Democrat. It has to do with whether we fear the consolidation of power, whether we fear power being given to one person, be it a Republican or a Democrat. This is not necessarily a right-left issue.

Kevin Gosztola, who writes at firedoglake.com, writes that the mere fact that the President’s answer to the question of whether you can kill an American on American soil was yes is outrageous. However, it fits the framework for fighting a permanent global war on terrorism without any geographic limitations, which President Obama’s administration has maintained it has the authority to wage. When will this war end? It is a war that has an infinite timeline. If we are going to suspend our rights, if there is going to be no geographic limits to killing—which means we are not at war in Afghanistan, we are at war everywhere. Everybody who pops up is al-Qaida. Whether they have heard of al-Qaida or whether they have had any communication with some network of al-Qaida, it is al-Qaida. There is a new administration, and they are going to grab it and take what they get.

This is not new. The Bush administration did some of this too. When the Bush administration tried to grab power, the left—and some of us on the right—were critical when they tried to wiretap phones without a warrant. Many on the right and many on the left raised a raucous. There was a loud outcry against President Bush for usurping, going across due process, not allowing due process, and not obeying the restraints of warrants. Where is that outcry now?

Glen Greenwald writes:

There is a theoretical framework being built that posits that the U.S. Government has unlimited power, when it comes to any kind of threats it perceives, to take whatever action against them that it wants without any constraints or limitations of any kind.

As Greenwald suggests—and this goes back to Gosztola’s words—answering... yes to the question that you can kill Americans on American soil illustrates the real radicalism the government has embraced in terms of how it uses its own power.

We were opposed to them listening to our phones, but no one is going to stand and say anything about killing a person without a warrant, a judge's review or a jury? No one is going to object to that? Where is the cacophony who stood and said: How can you tap my phone without a judge first? I ask: How can you kill someone without going to a judge or a jury? Are we going to give up our rights to any politician of any stripe? Are we going to give up the right to decide who lives and who dies?

Gosztola goes on to say the reason the administration didn't want to answer yes or no to this question—can you kill Americans on American soil—is because he says a "no" answer would jeopardize the critical, theoretical foundation on which they have very carefully constructed that says there are no cognizable constraints on how U.S. Government power can be asserted.

Civil libertarians once expected more from the President. In fact, it was one of the things about the President. I am a Republican. I didn't vote for or support the President either time, but I admired him. I particularly admired him when he ran in 2007. I admired his ability to stand and say: We will not torture people. That is not what America does.

How does the President's mind work? The President—who seemed so honorable, so concerned with our rights, so concerned with the right not to have our phone tapped—now says he is not concerned with whether a person can be killed without a trial. The leap of logic is so fantastic as to boggle the mind. Where is the Barack Obama of 2007? Has the Presidency so transformed that he has forgotten his moorings and what he stood for?

Civil libertarians once expected more from the President. Ask any civil libertarian whether the President should have the right to arbitrarily kill Americans on American soil, and the answer is easy. Of course no President should have the right or that power under the Constitution.

Brennan has responded in committee that now the CIA does not have the right to interrogate Americans on American soil. The problem is that this program is under the Department of Defense, so it is, once again, an evasive answer. They are not answering the true question: Will the Government of America kill Americans on American soil?

Gosztola, from firedoglake.com, writes that there may never be a targeted killing of a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil—and the question of whether a U.S. citizen could be targeted and killed on U.S. soil may remain a hypothetical question for some time—but the fact that the Obama administration has told a U.S. Senator there is a circumstance where the government could target and kill an American citizen on American soil without charge and without trial is a stark example of an imperial Presidency.

This is what our Founding Fathers wanted to fight against. They wanted to limit the role and the power of the President. They wanted to check the President's power with the power of the Senate, the power of the House, and the power of the judiciary. We have three coequal branches. Not one of them should be able to run roughshod on the others.

The problem is we have allowed this to happen—not me personally, but Congress in general has allowed the President to usurp this power. If there were an ounce of courage in this body, I would be joined by many other Senators in saying we will not tolerate this, that we will come together, in a bipartisan fashion, and tell any President that no President will ever have the authority to kill Americans without a judge or a jury. If he does intend to do so, we have to think that through.

One year ago, the President signed a law that says a person can be detained indefinitely and that they can be sent from America to Guantanamo Bay without a trial. He wants us to be comforted by that. He wants us to remember and think well of him because he says: I don't intend to do so. It is not enough. I mean, would we be able to tolerate a President who said: I like the second amendment, but I might. Would we tolerate that he doesn't intend to do so as a standard?

Would conservatives tolerate someone who said: I like the second amendment, I am for gun ownership and I don't intend to violate the second amendment, but I might. Would we tolerate that he doesn't intend to do so as a standard?

We want to think about the standards being used overseas. Google interviewed him not too long ago and asked him if he could kill Americans at home. He was evasive. He said there are rules. He said the rules outside would be different than inside. I certainly hope so. Outside the United States the rules for killing are that someone can be killed through a signature strike. We don't have to know what that person's name is, who they are or whom they are with. If a person is in a car or on a plane we think they are going from talking to bad people to talking to other bad people, we can kill that person.

Is that going to be the standard in America? When they are asked if they have killed civilians in their drone strikes, they say no. However, a person is not counted as a civilian if they are male or if they are between the ages of 16 and 50. They are considered a potential and probable combatant if they are in the immediate area.

My question is: If you are not a civilian, if you are in proximity to bad people, is that the standard we are going to use in the United States? If we are going to kill Americans on American soil and the standard is going to be signature strikes of a person who is close to bad people or in the same proximity of bad people, is that enough? Are we happy with that standard? Are we happy we have no jury, no trial, no charges, and nothing done publicly?

Eric Holder, the Attorney General's response to me is that they maintain they are not going to do this. We should just trust them. It is not about them, though. It is about the law. The law restrains everyone equally, regardless of their party or whether they are Republican or Democrat. The law is out there for the for the day some inadvertent elects a truly bad person.

When World War I ended, the currency was being destroyed in Germany. In 1923, paper money became so worthless that people wheeled it in wheelbarrows. That currency became virtually worthless overnight. At the beginning of September 1923, I think it was like 10 or 15 marks for a loaf of bread. On September 14, it was 1,000 marks. On September 30, it was 10 million marks. By October 1, it was a couple of million marks for a loaf of bread. It was a chaotic situation. Of that chaos, Hitler was elected democratically. They elected him out of this chaos.

My point is not that anybody in our country is Hitler. I am not accusing anybody of being that evil. I think it is an overplayed and misused analogy. What I am saying is that in a democracy we could see someone who is very evil, and that is why we don't give the power to the government. It is not an accusation of this President or anybody in this body; it is a point to be made historically that occasionally even the most virtuous get it wrong. So when a democracy gets it wrong, we want the law to be there in place. We want this rule of law.

As I mentioned, Hayek said that this is what distinguished us. Nothing distinguishes us more than our arbitrary government and a government of whims than a rule of law, and a stable and consistent government is the rule of law.

Heritage has an author who has written something about the oath of office. His name is Kesavan. He writes that the location and the phrasing of the oath of office for the President—this is something I mentioned earlier, that the President says he will protect and defend and preserve the Constitution—words are important. The oath doesn't say, I intend to preserve, protect, and defend; it says, I will.

Kesavan writes, though, that the location and the phrasing of the oath of office strongly suggests that it is not empowering but limiting. So the President doesn't take an oath of office that says: I intend to preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution, but I also feel I have inherent authority. Kesavan never mentioned by anybody that I will be the sole arbiter of interpreting what those powers are.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

That sounds more like a king. That is not what we wanted. We did not want an imperial Presidency. What Kesavan suggests is that the oath of office is not empowering but that it is limiting, that the clause limits the President and how the President can execute the law. The Executive power can be exercised.

One unanswered word in that Constitution includes the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. What does the President say? The President says that no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless on presentment or indictment of a grand jury. It is pretty explicit. The Fifth Amendment protects us. It protects us from a King placing a person in the tower, but it also should protect us from a President who might kill us with a drone.

We were granted due process. It is not always easy to sort out the details of who is a threat to the country and who is not a threat to the country. If it were people with grenade launchers on their shoulders, that is easy. In fact, I agree completely. A person does not get due process if they are actively attacking us. But we have to realize there have been reports that over half of the drone strikes overseas are not even directed toward an individual, they are directed toward a caravan of unnamed individuals.

Overseas, I have no problems. If people are shooting at American soldiers overseas, by all means, they get no due process. But we also have to realize that many—we don’t know because they won’t tell us the number, but many of the drone strikes overseas are done when a person is walking, whether to church, a restaurant, or along the road; they are done when a person is in a car driving; they are done when a person is in a house eating or in a restaurant; they are done when a person is in a house sleeping. I am not even saying all those people didn’t deserve what they got, but I am saying they were not actively involved in something that is an imminent threat, and if they were in America, they would be arrested.

If we think a person is a terrorist in America, we should arrest them. But here is the question: Who is a terrorist? That is why I have been so concerned with the fusion center. But we have to realize that the Fifth Amendment protects us from a King who might target someone else. I don’t know that. I don’t have inside information on that, but I suspect that.

Here is the real problem. When the President’s spokesmen was asked about al-Awlaki’s son, do my colleagues know what his response was? This I find particularly callous and particularly troubling. The President’s response to the killing of al-Awlaki’s son—he said he should have chosen a more responsible father. It is kind of hard to choose who your parents are. That is sort of like saying to someone whose father is a thief or a murderer or a rapist—obviously a bad thing, but does that mean it is OK to kill their children? Think of the standard we would have if our standard for killing people overseas is that you should have chosen a more responsible parent. It just boggles the mind and really affects me to think that would be our standard.

There is absolutely no excuse for the President not to come forward on this. I have been asking for a month for an answer. It is like pulling teeth to get any answer from the President. Why is it that he hasn’t answered the question the way he should as President?

So I have come here today to speak for as long as I can. I won’t be able to speak forever, but I am going to speak for as long as I can to draw attention to something that I find really to be very disturbing.

People have asked about this nomination process because I have actually voted for a couple of the President’s nominees, some of whom I have objected to, some of whom I have had personal differences with as well as political differences with. This is not about partisanship.

I voted for Secretary of State John Kerry. I have almost nothing in common with him politically. I have disagreed with him repeatedly on the Senate floor. But I gave him the benefit of the President’s prerogative of choosing his Secretary of State because I think the President won the election and he deserves to get to make some choices on who is in his Cabinet. I voted for the very controversial Secretary of Defense, Chuck Hagel. There were things I liked about him and things I disliked about him. I filibustered before I allowed him to go forward, and people have given me a hard time. Conservatives from my party have blasted me for doing that, but I gave the President that prerogative.

So I am not standing here as a Republican who will never vote for a Democrat. I voted for the first three nominees by the President. This is not about partisanship. I have allowed the President to pick his political appointees, but I will not sit quietly and let him shirk the Constitution. I cannot sit at my desk quietly and let the President say he will kill Americans on American soil who are not actively attacking a country. The answer should be so easy. I can’t imagine that he will not want to go forward, and I don’t. No, I will not kill Americans on American soil.

The Fifth Amendment says that no person shall be held for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless on the presentment or indictment of a grand jury. It goes on to say that no person will be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process. Now, some hear “due process,” and if a person is not a lawyer—I am not a lawyer—when we first hear it, we think, what does that mean? What does it mean to have due process? What it means is we are protected. We get protections. Is our justice system perfect? No. Sometimes a person goes all the way through due process in our country, and we have actually convicted people who are innocent. Fortunately, it is very rare, but we have actually convicted people who are innocent. What are the chances that our President going through a PowerPoint slide show and fastclicks, might make a mistake on innocence or guilt? I would say there is a chance. Even our judicial system, which goes through all of these processes, including a judge reviewing the indictment, a jury reviewing it, and then a sentencing phase and all of that going forward—we sometimes make mistakes. What are the chances that one man, one politician, no matter what party they are from, could make a mistake on this? I think there is a chance that exists. That is why we put these rules in place.

Patrick Henry wrote that the Constitution wasn’t given or written or put down to restrain you; the Constitution was to restrain us. There has always been, since the beginning of the time we first had government, this desire to restrain the government, to try to keep the government from growing too strong or to try to keep the government from taking your rights.

It is interesting that when we look at the Constitution, the Constitution gave what are called enumerated powers to government. Madison said these enumerated powers were few and defined. The liberties we were given, though, are numerous and unlimited. So there are about 17 powers given to government which we have now transformed into about a gazillion or at least 50, so you don’t pay much attention to the enumerated powers or to the Constitution anymore. But the Constitution left our rights as unenumerated; they aren’t limited. Your rights are limitless. So when we first had government, this desire to restrain us. There has always been, since the beginning of the time, to restrain the government, to try to keep the government from growing too strong or to try to keep the government from taking your rights.

There is an author who writes for The Atlantic who has written a lot about the drone program by the name of Conor Friedersdorf. He recounts the tale of al-Awlaki’s son who was killed. He said when the President’s spokesman was asked about the strike that killed him, the President’s spokesman replied: Well, he probably killed him fine if he “had a more responsible father.” If that is our standard, we have sunk to a real low.

Cornered by reporters after this, White House Press Secretary Robert Gibbs attempted to defend the kill list, which is secret, of course. We have to remember, if we are going to kill noncombatants in America or people we think someday be combatants, the list will be secret. So one will not come forward to protest: Hey, I am not that bad. I might have said that at one time, but I am not that bad. All right. I have objected to big government, not all government. I am not fomenting revolution. I was critical at that meeting. I was at a tea party meeting, and I was critical of the President, but I am not a revolutionary. Please, don’t kill me.

Should we live in a country where we have to worry about what we say? Should we live in a country where we have to be worried about what we say? What kind of country would that be? Why is there not more moral outrage? Why is there not every Senator coming down to say: You are exactly right. Let’s go ahead and hold this nomination and why don’t we hold it until we get more clarification from the President.

Conor Friedersdorf of The Atlantic writes: . . . it’s vital for the uninitiated to understand Team Obama misleads when it talks about its drone program. Asked how their kill list can be justified, Gibbs repl

The President’s spokesman—repplies that “when there are people who are trying to harm us, and have pledged to bring terror to these shores, we’ve taken that fight to them.” Since the kill list itself is secret, there’s no way to offer a specific counter-example.

Is one thing to say: Yes, these people are going to probably come and attack us, which, to tell you the truth, is probably not always true. There are people fighting a civil war in Yemen who probably have no conception of ever coming to America.

Friedersdorf goes on to say: . . . But we do know that U.S. drones are targeting people who’ve never pledged to carry out attacks in the United States.

So we are talking about noncombatants who have never pledged to carry out attacks being attacked overseas. What about the standard at home: people who have never truly been involved with combat against us.
Friedersdorf continues:

Take Pakistan, where the CIA kills some people without even knowing their identities. "As Obama nears the end of his term, officials said the kill list in Pakistan has slipped to fewer than 10 Al-Qaeda targets, down from as many as two dozen."

Yet we are killing hundreds of people in Pakistan.

There is a quote that I think sort of brings this all together and makes this very poignant. There is a quote from an ex-CIA agent—I think it is Bruce Riedel—who says: The drone strike program is sort of like a lawnmower. You can keep mowing them down, but as soon as the lawnmower stops, the grass grows again.

Some people have gone one step further and said: For every 1 you kill or for maybe every 1 you accidentally kill whom you did not intend to kill, 10 more pop up.

Think about it. If it were your family member and they have been killed and they were innocent or you believe them to be innocent, is it going to make you more likely to become involved with attacking the United States?

I have written a couple letters to John Brennan, who has been put up for the CIA nomination. I think it looks like the first letter was sent January 25. So here we are into March, and I only got a response when he was threatened. So here is a guy whom the President promotes as being transparent and wanting to give a lot of information to the American people. He will not even respond to us.

They treat the Senate with disdain, basically—will not even respond to us, much less the American people, when I asked him these questions. He finally responded only when his nomination was threatened.

So when it came to the committee and it appeared as if I had bipartisan support for slowing down his nomination if he did not answer his questions, then he answered his questions. It does not give you a lot of confidence that in the future, going forward, if he is approved, that he is going to be real forthcoming and real transparent about this.

I do not have a lot of anticipation or belief that we are going to get more information after this nomination hearing. Some are now saying: You have gotten your pound of flesh. Let him go, and we will keep working on this. The problem is, once he is gone, the discussion is over.

Others in my party have been trying to get information about what went horribly wrong in Benghazi and have gotten some of that information but only by using it as leverage to try to get the President to do what is the honorable thing; that is, to be more transparent with his ways.

In the first letter I sent to Brennan, I asked him the question: Is it legal to order the killing of American citizens and to have the CIA do what it is? He should not be compelled to even give your reasoning—not even specific to the case but any of your reasoning?

Finally, as these questions came forward, some of the things were leaked out. One of the most troubling things that came out is when Brennan and the President finally began to talk about the drone strike program, which, according to the former Press Secretary, they were to deny that it existed for years.

When they finally came out, they told us a couple things about their interpretation of it. One, they have no geographical limit to their drone strikes. They told us a couple things about what they thought was imminent. This is pretty important because a lot of Americans, myself included, believe if we are being attacked, we can respond with lethal force. But a lot of Americans think that we have to actually be engaged in that to respond with lethal force. But they told us the way their lawyers interpret "imminent" is imminent does not have to mean "immediate."

And our government lawyers could get together, government lawyers could get together and say imminent is not immediate. You have to understand, and what we should be asking the President is, Is this your standard for America? If you are going to assert that your lawyers interpret this way, are you going to assert—that your standard is that an imminent threat does not have to be immediate?

I am quite concerned when I hear this kind of evasiveness, with this sort of nonresponse to questions.

We also asked: Would it not be appropriate to require a judge or a court to review this?

See, here is the real interesting thing. We had a President who ran for office saying your phone should not be tapped without a warrant. I happen to agree with Candidate Obama. But what happened to Candidate Obama, who said, when we were debating the privacy of your phone, who does not care much about your right not to be killed by a drone without any kind of judicial proceeding?

I think we should demand it. The way things work around here, though, is people kind of say: Yes, we will demand it, and maybe later on this year we will talk about a bill or talk about getting something. What they should do is just say: No more. We are not going to move forward until we get some movement.

We are not going to let the President—any President, Republican or Democratic—do this.

One of the other questions I asked the President was: It is paradoxical that the Federal Government would need to go before a judge to authorize a wiretap on U.S. citizens even overseas but possibly not have any kind of oversight of killing an American here in America.

I also asked him how many citizens have been killed. We have not gotten an answer to that. They say not many, and hopefully it has not been many. But I think it is important to know. I think it would be important to know, if we are going to target Americans in America, if that list exists. I think it would be important to know if being close to someone is also justified. What if you just happen to live in the neighborhood of somebody who is a terrorist? Just because you are not being attacked does not mean you are a terrorist. Just because you are not going to be killed does not mean you are a target. It is OK because you were close to them? What if you happen to go to dinner with a guy you did not know or a woman you did not know and the government says they are a terrorist? Just because you are not going to be killed does not mean you are a target?

We also asked the question: Do you condone the CIA's practice of counting civilians killed by U.S. drone strikes as militarily simply because they are of the same age? Similar to every other question, no answer.

We asked him whether al-Awlaki's son was a target. No answer.

We asked how many people have been targeted? No answer.

Part of the problem with this is that we are—Congress in general is sloppy about writing legislation in general.

I will give an example. When the ObamaCare legislation was written—it is over 2,000 pages. It gives up to the Secretary of Health. I think 1,800 times, the power to decide at a later date what the rule would be. So since ObamaCare, of 2,000 pages, has been written, there have been now 9,000 pages of regulations.

Dodd-Frank is kind of the same way. Dodd-Frank is a couple thousand pages. It is now going to wind up with 8,000 or 9,000 pages of regulations.

We abdicate our responsibility by not writing legislation. We write shells of legislation that are imprecise and do not retain the power. Because of that, the executive branch and the bureaucracy, which is essentially the same thing, do whatever they want.

The problem happened also with the authorization of use of force in Afghanistan.

This happened over 10 years ago now—12 years ago. I thought we were going to war against the people who attacked us, and I am all for that. I would have voted for the war. I would have preferred it to have been a declaration of war. I think we were united in saying: Let's get those people who attacked us on 9/11 and make sure it never happens again.

The problem is, as this war has drug on, they take that authorization of use of force to mean pretty much anything. They have now said the war has no geographic limitations. So it is not a war in Afghanistan; it is a war in Yemen, Somalia, Mall. It is a war in unlimited pieces of regulations.

Were we a body that cared about our prerogative to declare war, we would take that power back. But I will tell you how poor—and this is on both sides of the aisle—how poor is our understanding of some belief in retaining that power here.

About 1 year ago, I tried to end the Iraq war. You may say: I thought the Iraq war was already over. It is. But we still have an authorization of use of force that says we can go to war in Iraq anytime. Since they think the use of force in Afghanistan means limitless war anywhere, anytime in the whole world, for goodness’ sake, wouldn’t we try to have an authorization of force if the war is over?

But here is the sad part. I actually got a vote on it. I think I got less than 20 votes. You cannot end a war after it is over if they have the remote possibility, because these authorizations to use force are used for many other things. So the authorization of force says you can go after al-Qaida or associated terrorists.

The problem is that when you allow the executive branch to sort of determine what is al-Qaida, you have got no idea. For the most part I will not be able to determine that either. All the information is classified. There are a lot of bad people. There is a war going on in Yemen. I do not know how much it has to do with us, you know, or how much there is an al-Qaida presence there trying to organize to come and attack us. Maybe there is. But maybe those are also people who are just fighting their local government.

How about Mali? I am not sure. In Mali, they are probably worried more about trying to get the next day’s food than coming over here to attack us. But we have to ask these questions. We have to take these limitations on force, because essentially what we have now is a war without the geographic boundaries.

We have many on my side who come down here and say, the battlefield is here in America. Be warned. Be alarmed. Alarm bells should go off when people tell you that the battlefield is in America. Why? Because when the battlefield is in America, we do not have due process. What they are talking about is they want the laws of war. Another way of putting that is, they call it the laws of war. Another way to put it is to call it martial law. That is what they want in the United States when they say the battlefield is here.

One of them, in fact, said, if they ask for a lawyer, you tell them to shut up. Well, if that is the standard we are going to have in America, I am quite concerned that the battlefield will be here and that the Constitution would not apply here. But I certainly want it to apply here. If you are engaged in combat overseas, you do not get due process. But when people say, oh, the battlefield has come to America and the battlefield is everywhere, the war is limitless in time and scope, be worried because your rights will not exist if you call America a battlefield for all time.

We have asked him whether the strikes are exclusively focused on al-Qaida and what is the definition of being part of al-Qaida. In 1947, the National Security Act was passed. It said the CIA does not operate in America. Most people—most laypeople know that. The CIA is supposed to be doing surveillance and otherwise outside the United States of foreign threats. The FBI does not either. They do some of the same thing. But they are different groups. The CIA operating in Iraq or Afghanistan does not get a warrant before they do whatever they do to snoop on our enemies. The FBI does not either. They operate under different rules, and for a reason. We do not want them to operate in the United States. We are not saying the CIA are bad people, we just do not want them operating with no rules or for rules we allow them to operate with overseas. We do not want them operating in our country.

The disappointing thing is that a month ago when I asked John Brennan the President says we cannot have tours in Yemen, I could not get an answer. He would not answer the question about the CIA operating in the United States. Only after yanking his chain, brow-beating him in committee, threatening not to let him leave does he finally say he is going to obey the law. We should be alarmed by that. Alarm bells should go off when we find that what is going on here is it takes that much for him to say he is going to obey the law.

The President has said: Don’t worry, because he is not going to kill you with a drone unless it is infeasible to catch you. Now that sounds kind of comforting. He is going to wait until we have a warrant. But if our standard for what we kill you is whether it is practical, that does bother me a little bit. It does not sound quite strict enough. I am kind of worried that maybe there is a sequester and the President is going to contract out the White House. Maybe he has not got enough people to go arrest you. He had policemen by him. He is saying he is going to lay off the policemen. Of course, he does not have anything to do with the police. He did not worry about that. But he had the policemen by him that he is going to lay off, so maybe it is infeasible because he has laid off the policemen so it is going to be easier to kill you.

I know that sounds as though we have gone a slippery slope beyond what he is asking for. But if his standard is it is infeasible to capture you and that is what you are hanging your hat on, I would be a little concerned that that may not be protection for Americans on American soil.

There is a law called posse comitatus. It has been on the books since 1800s, I am pretty sure. There is a law which says that Congress must give an answer. It would save me a lot of time and breath. My throat is already dry and I just got started. But if they would ask him for an answer: Can the military operate in the United States? Well, no, the law says the military cannot operate in the United States. It is very clear. He should simply do the honorable thing and say he will obey the law. It is simple. But I do not get why they refuse to answer it. It worries me that they refuse to answer the question. Because by refusing to answer it, I believe they think they have expansive power, unlimited power. The real irony of this is that many on the left, Senator Barack Obama included, were very critical of the Bush administration. They felt as though the Bush administration usurped power. They felt the Bush administration argued invalid agrandizement or grasping for power. John Yoo was one of the architects of this, believing basically that the President just says, hey, I am going to protect you, I can do whatever the hell I want.

Many on the left objected to that. Some of us on the right also objected to this usurpation of power by the Republican President. But the thing is, now that the shoe is on the other foot, we are not seeing any of that. We are now hearing the President says he is worried about wiretaps not at all worried about the legality of killing Americans on American soil with no judicial process.

But the law of posse comitatus prevents this from happening. It is very clear. It has been on the books for 150 years. I am pretty sure. I think it would be pretty easy for the President to go ahead and say that he will obey the law. We asked Brennan the question on this and we got no answer.

The answers we have gotten are almost more disturbing than getting an answer, really, to tell you the truth. Because when the President responds that I have not killed any Americans yet at home, and that I do not intend to do so, but I might, it is incredibly alarming and goes against the oath of the President. The President says in oath of office that I will preserve, I will protect, and I will defend the Constitution. It does not say I intend to or that I might.
Can you imagine the furor if people were talking about the second amendment? Can you imagine what conservatives would say if the President said, well, you know. I kind of like of the second amendment and I intend to, when convenient, to follow it. Is that the second amendment? Or what about those who believe in the first amendment, if the President were to say, I have not broken the first amendment yet, I intend to follow it, but I might break it, or I intend to follow it when it is feasible? So I have all of those rules, and this is what the President answered when he was at Google Campus a couple of weeks ago. They asked him the question: Can you kill Americans on American soil? He said: Well, the rules will probably be different outside the United States than inside. That basically means, yes, he thinks he can kill Americans on American soil, but he is going to have some rules. Do not worry about it, because he will make sure there will be a process, but it will not be due process. It will be a process that he sets up in secret in the White House, and I do not find that acceptable.

The only answer really acceptable, you know, is to ask a question that could be yes or no: Can you kill an American on American soil? It is a yes-or-no question. They have been very evasive. They have never really answered the question. But when asked it, we pretty much know he denies it, and he will not answer it, basically by not answering it you are saying yes. I was actually a little bit startled when I finally got the answer: Yes, we can kill Americans on American soil. I thought for sure that they would be evasive to the end, try to get their nominee through without opening Pandora's box.

But they have opened Pandora's box. It would be a mistake for us to ignore it. It would be a mistake for us to ignore the ramifications of what they have done. When we separate out police power from judicial power, it is an important separation. You know, the police can arrest you. They are allowed to do certain things. But the policeman that comes to our door and puts handcuffs on you does not decide your guilt. Sometimes we do not always think about how important the separation is. But if I am one of the 4,700 people who have been killed, you know, those who arrest you are not the ones who ultimately accuse you. The court, through the people, accuses you, and then you are given a trial to determine your guilt.

It is complicated. It is not always clear who is innocent and who is guilty. Judges and juries make mistakes. But at least we have a process. You get appeals most of the time. We have a significant process going on that has a several-hundred-year tradition. The least. So what gets me is about the process that the President favors is, it is the "trust me" process. You know, I have no intention of doing bad things. I will do good things. I am a good person.

I am not disputing his motives or saying he is not a good person. But I am disputing someone who is naive enough to think that is good enough for us. I think that our intentions are good enough for our Republic. It never would have been accepted. It would have been laughed out of the Constitutional Convention. The Founding Fathers would have objected so strenuously that that person would probably never have been elected to office in our country.

Someone who does not believe that the rules have to be in place, and that we cannot have our rights guaranteed by the intentions of our politicians—think about it. Congress has about a 10 percent approval rating. Think the American people want to face whether they are going to be killed by a drone on a politician? I certainly do not. It does not have anything to do with the country. It is what we do. The police power is an important separation. The court, I would be here today if this were a Republican President, because you cannot give that much power to one person. We separated the police power from the judiciary or from the jury power or from the executive. We believe in innocence and guilt. It is separate from the police power, purposefully so, with great forethought.

Some transform this—and the President has tried Brennan has tried to transform the law and law into what it is. I mean, what is that? If what is the kind of standard we are going to have in our country for deciding drone strikes?

When it comes to some of these people, though, I think some of the drone strikes have probably been justified. Al-Awlaki, I think, was a traitor. This is not from looking at classified documents, this is from reading the lay press. By all means, he gave up on his country, renounced his citizenship, and wanted to conspire with and aided the enemy.

One of the interesting questions about aiding the enemy is what exactly means and what and what are the standards to be. Kevin Williamson wrote for the National Review. He wrote an article on drones that I think truly brings this home if you are going to talk about and want to know who are the people who potentially could be killed. In some ways al-Awlaki was a symbol of someone who is betting through Internet talk and chatter. That was the main thing he was accused of. Actually, after the fact, they said he had more direct association. I don't know if that is true. I haven't seen the secret information on that.

What I would say is he was initially brought up as a sympathizer. Here is the problem. Many writers have said if you take up arms against your country, you are an enemy combatant. I think that's true. If you are in Afghanistan, have a grenade launcher on your shoulder and are shooting at Americans, you are an enemy combatant. You don't get due process.

Here is the question: If you are in Poughkeepsie and you are on the Internet, and you say I sympathize with some group around the world that doesn't like America, and say bad things about America, are you a traitor? I mean, you can try someone for treason for that. I am not sure if it will ring true that if you are a significant number opposed to what your government is doing in favor of what another. Kevin Williamson gets it pretty clearly:
If sympathizing with our enemies and propagandizing on their behalf is the equivalent of making war on the country, then the Johnson and Nixon administrations should have taught college in America.

During the 1960s, that is all that came out was anti-America, anti-war. Is objecting to your government or objecting to the policy of your government sympathizing with the enemy?

Some were openly sympathetic. No one will ever forget Jane Fonda swatting around in North Vietnamese armed guns, and it was despicable. It is one thing if you want to try her for treason, but are you going to drop a drone Hellfire missile on Jane Fonda?

Are you going to drop a drone Hellfire missile on those at Kent State?

Our country objected to what happened at Kent State, which was not good—but it was accidental since they were shooting over the heads of these people. Can you imagine we have gone from a country that was right all upset about the deaths at Kent State to a country which now is going to say, if you are in college and you are rabble rousing because you don’t like the government’s foreign policy or the government’s notice if someone will call the President to kill noncombatants. It seems like a pretty easy answer?

That is really all I am asking, about the drone strike program.

We actually had students, apparently during the Vietnam war, who were actually raising funds for the Vietcong. That does to me sound like treason. It sounds to me something like we are fighting an enemy and you are giving comfort to the enemy. That does sound like treason. I have no problem with some people actually being tried for treason, but they get a day in court. They don’t get a Hellfire missile sent to their house. There is a difference, though, between sympathizing and taking up arms. That is really all I am asking, about sympathy and summary executions of noncombatants. It seems like a pretty easy answer.

We could be done with this in a moment’s notice if someone will call the President and ask the question. We could be done with this because that is what I want to hear, not that he is going to use the military to repel an invasion. Nobody is questioning the authority of the President to repel an invasion. I am questioning the authority of the President to kill noncombatants. I think it, within hours, led them and perhaps exposed the whole ring.

I think it, within hours, led them and linked them up to several hijackers in Florida and ultimately would have permitted him to fly planes and don’t want to learn how to land them.

There were horrible and tragic occurrences that happened, human breakdown. How do we fix it? We fix it the same way we do everything—by a politician who unleashes a Hellfire missile on those at Kent State?

Are you going to drop a drone Hellfire missile on Jane Fonda?

I wouldn’t have had trouble at all with a drone strike on him. If we are going to take by extension the standard we used in putting him on the list that he was a sympathizer, agitator, and a pain in the royal—you know—not there are a lot of those people in America if that is going to be our standard.

That is why I would feel a little more comforted if it weren’t an accusation by a politician who unleashes a Hellfire missile. It seems like a little more comforted—and I think we would all sleep a little better in our houses at night—if we knew that before the Hellfire missile comes down, a policeman would come to your door and say accuse you of this. They might put handcuffs on you and take you to jail, but they don’t get to summarily execute you.

That is all I am asking. I am asking for the President to admit publicly he is not in favor of summary executions. Then it, within hours, led them and linked them up to several hijackers in Florida and ultimately would have permitted him to fly planes and don’t want to learn how to land them.

The last time the filibuster in our country and in the Senate is actually requesting 60 votes happen and we need to do everything by unanimous consent, so it almost never happens. I have been here 2 years, and I don’t think I have ever seen anybody come to the floor and spend half an hour filibustering as I am doing today. I think it is important, though, and I think the issue rises to such an occasion. There are a lot of things we disagree on, Republicans and Democrats. I think there are a lot of things we agree on, but a lot of things we could actually agree to if we could get together, try to do smaller bills, work on what we agreed and get away from some of the empty partisanship.

The reason I came to the floor today to do this is because I think certain things rise above party politics. Certain things rise above partisanship.

I think you are right to be secure in your person, the right to be secure in your home, the right to be tried by a jury of your peers. These are things that are so important and rise to such a level we shouldn't give up on them easily. I don't see this battle as a partisan battle at all. I don't see this as Republicans versus Democrats. I would say unlimited. He was accused of expansion of George Bush's opinion. George Bush was a President who believed in very expansive powers, some would say unlimited. He was accused of running an imperial Presidency. The irony is this President we have currently was elected in opposition to that. This President was one elected who, when he was in this body, was often very vocal at saying the President's powers were limited.

When you hear here, one of the first votes I was able to receive was a vote on whether we should go to war without congressional approval. The interesting part is that the war was beginning in Libya. It turned out to be a small war, but small wars sometimes lead to big wars. In fact, that was one of Eisenhower's admonitions, to beware of small wars, that you may find yourself in a big war. Fortunately, the Libyan war didn’t turn out to be a big war. I think it is still unacquiescent and it is still yet to be determined whether Libya will descend into the chaos of radical Islam. I think there is a chance they may still descend into that chaos.

But when the question came up about going to war in Libya, there was the question of, well, doesn't the Constitution say you have to declare war? And so we looked back through some of the President's writings as a candidate, and one of the President's writings I found was very instructive and I was quite proud of him for saying it. The President said that no President shall unilaterally go to war without the authority of Congress unless there is an imminent threat to the country. I guess we should be a little wary of his "unless" now, since we know imminent doesn’t have to be immediate and imminent no longer means what humans once thought imminent meant. But I do think that the President doesn't go to war by himself. I think it would be fair to say that Candidate Obama also felt the President didn't have the authority to imprison you indefinitely without a trial. And I can't help but say that, in 2007, Barack Obama of 2007 would be right down here with me arguing against this drone strike program if he were in the Senate. It amazes and disappoints me how much he has actually changed from what he once stood for.

But I forced a vote on his words. I took his exact words. We quoted him and put those words up on a standard next to me, and we voted on a sense-of-the-Senate that said: No President shall go to war without the authority of Congress—which basically just restates the Constitution. Now, you would think that would be a pretty easy vote for people. I think I got less than 20 votes. That is the sad state of affairs we are in. There are some who believe of what George Bush was actually probably believed that but refused to vote for it because they said: Well, he is a Republican, and I won't vote with a Republican. But I honestly say, were the shoe on the other foot? I think not. I think if President here and I a Republican Senator, I would have exactly the same opinion. My opinion today on drone strikes would be exactly the same opinion under George Bush. And I was critical of George Bush as well. Were there a Republican President today, I would have the same instinct and the same resolution to carry this forward. And on the issue of war, it is the same no matter which President.

One of the things you hear a lot of times in the media is about there being no bipartisanship in Congress. Well, the interesting thing is, actually, there is a lot of bipartisanship in Congress. If you look at people who don't really believe in much restraint of government as far as civil liberties, it really is on both sides. So you will find that often on these votes on whether the Constitution says we have to declare war in the Congress, Republicans and Democrats vote overwhelmingly against that.

Now, you need to realize the implications of that. What they are voting for is to say we don’t retain that power and we don't want it. The Constitution gave it to us, but we are giving it back. And this has been going on for a long time, really, probably for over 100 years, starting with Woodrow Wilson, who sort of grabbed for Presidential power, and Presidents have been getting more and more powerful for over 100 years. It is a fundamental change. That bill, there was a clause that said Americans can be indefinitely detained. What does that mean? Well, it means forever, basically, or without a trial, no sort of sentence, no sort of adjudication of guilt or innocence, an American citizen can be held. So there was another Republican Senator on the floor, and I asked the question: Does that mean an American could actually be sent to Guantanamo Bay from here, someone who is accused of something whenever gets a trial? And his answer was yes. His answer was yes, if they are a danger to the country.

The problem with that kind of thinking is, who gets to determine whether you are a danger? Who gets to determine whether you are guilty or innocent? It sort of begs the question of what our court system is set up to do, which is to try to find guilt or innocence. Guilt or innocence isn’t always apparent, and sometimes an accusation is unfounded. If the accusations are made because people politically don't like your point of view. So the question becomes, should we have a process where we try to determine innocence or guilt?

So in the national defense authorization bill, there was an amendment that said you can be indefinitely detained, an American could be sent to Guantanamo Bay, and we had a big fight over it. We lost the first time around in 2012. We had an amendment that tried to limit American citizens. This was a good example of bipartisanship on our side. We had 45 votes, and I would say it was probably about 38 Democrats that said: These are our powers, and we are not giving them up. There were people on both sides of the aisle who would stand firm and say: This is not a power I am willing to relinquish; this is not something that is good for the country. And by relinquishing the right to detain, you are giving up something very fundamental to our Republic, which is the checks and balances that we should have—checks and balances to prevent one body or one part of the three parts of government from overstepping the bounds of its authority and their power.

Unfortunately, the bipartisanship we have now, many in the media fail to understand. They see us not getting along on taxes and on spending, but they fail to understand that on something very important—on whether an individual has a right to a trial by jury, whether an individual has the right to not be detained indefinitely—one finds quite a bit of bipartisanship, although usually in the wrong direction.

Now, I will say there is some evolution and some trend toward people being more respectful of this, and there are a lot of times in the media is about there being more and more powerful for over 100 years, starting with Woodrow Wilson, who sort of grabbed for Presidential power, and Presidents have been getting more and more powerful for over 100 years. and about 7 Republicans. So that was an example of both sides kind of working together. But we fought and we lost.

The next year, we came back and we fought for the same amendment again and again. Interestingly, we beat them. We had 67 votes to say that you cannot detain an American. An American can’t be sent to Guantanamo Bay without a trial, without an accusation, without a jury, without the Bill of Rights. You don’t do that to Americans. We won the battle with 67 votes. So the bill passes, the House passes their version without our amendment in it, it goes to the conference committee, where they work out the differences, and they strip out our language. So sometimes when you win around here, you lose.

But with the 67, there was a pretty good mix—maybe 35, 40 Democrats and 15, 20 Republicans. So there is some emerging consensus or some kind of emerging group. One of the other Senators has called it the checks and balances caucus, and I think that is a very accurate term because that is part of what we are arguing for. We are arguing that no one person should get too much power or no one body will get too much power.

Some people see all that fighting and disputing between the different branches of government, and they see it in a bad light. They say: Oh, with all that bickering, that is gridlock. But in some ways, our Founding Fathers weren’t too opposed to a little gridlock, particularly if it were gridlock that said: You know what, we are not going to make it easy to get rid of the first amendment.

It is not easy to get a constitutional amendment in our country. We have added some through the years, but it is not easy to do. We make it hard to amend the Constitution. In fact, we make it so hard, we are not really a country that is majority rule. And I am sort of a stickler for talking about the differences between a democracy and a republic. I think some people are sloppy with their words and they love the idea that America is a democracy. Woodrow Wilson said we were going to war in the world war to make the world safe for democracy. Well, No. 1, we are not a democracy, and we were never intended to be a democracy.

When we came out of the Constitutional Convention, a woman went up to him and asked him: What will it be? Will it be a monarchy or a democracy? And he said: It is a republic. It is a constitutional republic, if you can keep it. He was already worrying about whether democratic action would lead to people straying away and giving a government too many powers.

So we are a republic, and it is important to know the differences between a republic and a democracy, particularly with our history and our country. In our country, we had a period of time where majorities passed some very egregious and unfair and unjust laws. These were called the Jim Crow laws. They passed laws based on race or the color of your skin, and these were passed by majorities.

The important thing about the Constitution and about rights and one of the best —it’s a right to speak. If you don’t like this or that, you can say it. The Founders thought it was very important, this democracy, and a republic. We have to be a democracy, and also considering the idea that majority State legislatures were voting on things such as the Jim Crow laws that would say that a White person can’t sell a house to a Black person. Those laws were passed by majority rule.

So any time someone comes up to me and says they want a democracy, this is my first question to them: You are OK with Jim Crow laws? You don’t want democracies doing things. But if you believe that rights are protected and that rights should be protected and that these individual rights are not something a democracy can overturn, then you do truly believe in a protection that is more important than any democratic rule.

There has been some dispute over this. There was a Supreme Court case by the name of Lochner back in 1905. The President doesn’t like Lochner at all. He is very much opposed to it. But the one thing about Lochner I like is that Lochner really expands the 14th amendment. The 13th, 14th, and 15th amendments were passed after the Civil War and usually over Democratic objections.

In my State, the Democrats ruled the State legislature in Kentucky for many, many years, and they voted against the 13th amendment, the 14th amendment, and the 15th amendment. The great champions of emancipation, of voting rights, of all of the postwar amendments were the Republicans.

Every African American in the country was snatched up and virtually every African American. In 1911, in Louisville, there were 25,730 Black Republicans, and there were 129 Black Democrats. Every African American was a Republican at one point in time. I try to tell people, even though the numbers have been, unfortunately, reversed, we are the party that believes in the immutability of rights. We don’t believe that the democracy can take away your rights. If a majority rule can take away your first, your second, or your fourth amendment rights. And I think if we got that message out, we might change some of what is going on.

But the President is an opponent of the President. This guy is saying he is telling me I have to work for him, but I haven’t been charged with anything. What is my crime?

But the President is an opponent of the President. This guy is saying he is telling me I have to work for him, but I haven’t been charged with anything. What is my crime?

Eventually, one court case did come forward, and it was ruled incorrectly. I am not sure exactly how the arguments were, but in Dred Scott they ruled that you can’t make the argument. I don’t know if habeas corpus was part of that case, but it should have been.

What I am trying to say, though, is that the rights of the Constitution—the rights of the individual that were enshrined in the Constitution—are important things that democracies can’t overturn.

When you get to the Lochner case, which was in 1905, the majority ruled five to four that the right to make a contract is part of your due process. Someone once gave me the determination how long your working hours are without due process. President Obama is a big opponent to this. But I would ask him—among the other things I am asking him today—to rethink the Lochner case because the Lochner case really is what precedes and what the case Buchanan v. Warley is predicated on.

Buchanan v. Warley is a case from 1917—interestingly, it comes from my State, Louisville, KY. There was a young African-American attorney by the name of William Warley. He was a Republican, like most African Americans were in Louisville in those days. He was a founder of the NAACP and, like most founders of the NAACP, a Republican.

What they did in 1914 was they sued because the Kentucky Legislature—by a majority rule, by democratic action—passed a law that said a White person couldn’t sell to a Black person in a White section of town or vice versa. This was the first case the NAACP brought up.

Moorfield Storey was the first president of the NAACP, a famous attorney. He and an attorney by the name of Clayton Blakely went forward with this case, and they won the case. It actually passed overwhelmingly. But, interestingly, this case to end Jim Crow was based on the Lochner decision. So those who don’t like the Lochner decision, go back. We could reexamine Lochner. In fact, there is a good book by Bernstein from George Mason talking about rehabilitating Lochner.

The thing is, with majority rule—if you say we are going to give deference to majority rule or we are going to have judicial restraint and we are going to say that whatever the majority wants is fine, you set yourself up for a diminishment of rights.

I go back to the discussion of the Constitution limits power that is given to Congress, but it doesn’t limit rights. The powers are enumerated; your rights are unenumerated. The powers given to the government are few and defined; the freedoms left to you are many and undefined. And that is important.

What does this have to do with Lochner? The case in Lochner whether a majority rule—a State legislature can take away your due process, your due process to contract. Can they take away your life and liberty without due process? And the Court ruled no. I think it is a wonderful decision. It expands the 14th amendment and says to the people that you have unenumerated rights.

Now, there is some dissension on how we look at these cases. But when you go forward to Buchanan v. Warley, the case about a Jim Crow law and housing segregation, one of the people who was going to dissent and I think he thought better of it when he thought about that he would be the first Justice in probably 70-some odd years to say that he believed in the Jim Crow laws and war that the Jim Crow laws—was Oliver Wendell Holmes. He actually writes an opinion that has been found but was never presented to the Court, and he ended up voting to get rid of the Jim Crow laws, but he actually wrote an opinion in favor because he believed so strongly in majority rule.

Some may think these are idle questions. I don’t think it is an idle question whether or not you have a democracy. The 14th amendment says we have unenumerated rights. I guess, by extension, when you go from the 14th amendment to the 9th and 10th amendments is the best way to look at this.

The 14th amendment talks about privileges and immunities, and when you look at what the 9th and 10th amendment do, they say those freedoms you didn’t relinquish or those powers you didn’t give to the government. The 14th amendment says we have unenumerated rights. I guess, by extension, when you go from the 14th amendment to the 9th and 10th amendments, they are not to be disbarred. Not only is the Federal Government not to trample on your rights, they are not to be disbarred. But these rights are unlimited. They are yours. You got them from your Creator. These are natural-born rights, and no democracy should be able to take these away from you.

When you talk about the Constitution, they could literally take away your freedom of speech or your freedom to practice your religion. I don’t think I will see that ever happen, and it is difficult to change our Constitution, but it is incredibly important that our Founding Fathers put it in there and made it difficult.

I always kind of joke that if you go to a conservative meeting and you talk about the second amendment, everyone on there is going to tell you they all love you—until you get to the fourth amendment. But if we are going to have the second amendment, I think you have to have the fourth amendment—the right to be free in your person from unreasonable searches and seizures. That is also what you have to have a warrant to come in your house. How are your guns going to be protected if they can come in your house without a warrant? You have to have the fourth amendment before you have to have the fifth amendment. We don’t talk about the fifth amendment very much. Everything is about the second amendment.
It has been all over the news. You can’t turn on a channel without hearing about the second amendment. But I think today is as good a day as any to talk about the fifth amendment.

I have come here to filibuster the nomination of John Brennan to be our next CIA director. I think the fifth amendment is important. But I think we shouldn’t be cavalier. I don’t think we should be casual in our disregard for the Constitution.

I think that to allow the President to trump the Constitution and say that the fifth amendment no longer applies is a travesty, and it is something we should not do lightly. So I think it is worth a discussion. So far, it is sort of a one-way discussion, but we will see. But it is worth a discussion that we talk about the fifth amendment.

It says that no person shall be deprived of their life or their liberty. That is what it means. It is pretty clear, and it is pretty plain. You can’t take away someone’s life and liberty without due process or an indictment.

If you change the words around, what do you have? A war—which, by the way, we have not declared a war. If there is no declaration of war, you are going to war without Congress, inconveniency is our standard for going to war without Congress, inconveniency is our standard for killing Americans on American soil with drones, I think we have sunk to a new low. I just cannot imagine as a country that is what we want to have.

I want to reiterate, This doesn’t have anything to do with the President being a Democrat. Whether he was a Democrat or Republican, I don’t question his motives. I met the President several times. I really don’t think he would do this. But the thing is, I am troubled by the fact he will not tell us he will not.

If he is a good man and we believe him to be a good man who would never kill noncombatants in a cafe in Houston, sitting out in a sidewalk cafe smoking—oh, that’s right, you are not allowed to smoke cigarettes anymore—let’s say they are sitting out in a cafe. If the President is not going to kill noncombatants, he is not going to kill them there? That is the troubling aspect of this, if the President will not acknowledge he is not going to kill noncombatants in America.

The real problem with this is we are now engaged in a limitless war. A lot of Americans may not know this but people all the time up here are saying it. You have to read between the lines sometimes to hear what they are saying. They are saying there is no geographic limit to the war. That is what Brennan has said. What does that mean? I thought we went to war in Afghanistan. I really thought that even at the time. I was not here, but I would imagine that that is why we were voting to go to war to get the people who attacked us on 9/11. I was all for it. I still am all for that. But we are now using that resolution to go to war to have no geographic limit for drone strikes anywhere in the whole world; and not only no geographic limit, no temporal limit, which means no timeline. There is no end to the war in Afghanistan. The war will never end.

If you have no geographic limit—many in this body will gladly give up their power, would gladly say America is now the battlefield so the laws of war should operate.

The laws of war are that there really is no due process in war. I am not arguing for due process in war; I think it is, frankly, impossible. If you have gone from the American to Afghanistan, if you are fighting against us, you don’t get due process. You don’t get your Miranda rights. It is an impossibility to have the Constitution operating in a battlefield. So I am not for that.

But this is the standard we get to: We don’t intend to kill anyone and we don’t intend to go to war without a declaration of war—which, by the way, we have not done since World War I, and when we did, it was voted on nearly unanimously.

But this is the standard we get to: We don’t intend to kill anyone and we don’t intend to go to war without a declaration of war—which, by the way, it is impractical to get your approval.

That was the point. If you do not get the point of the Constitution, if you don’t get the point of what kind of system our government set up, what kind of system our Founders set up, it was to make it impractical. It was to make it difficult to go to war. It was to make it difficult and make it important: There would be debate and checks and balances. If there is no declaration of war, we have no geographic limit, we have nothing, we have no definition of when we have broken the Constitution, but I think the Constitution is broken now the battlefield so the laws of war should operate.

That was the point. If you do not get the point of the Constitution, if you our Bill of Rights? Are we so frightened the next thing we are going to do is round up people of a different skin color because we think they have cousins who live in Lebanon?

We cannot really give up on what makes us special. What makes America special is the Bill of Rights. What makes us special is really that we are not a democracy. There are a lot of democracies around the world. We are a republic. We are a constitutional republic. We are a country that enshrined our rights, took care and made sure that we get from government. Will Rogers once wrote and said: "You're lucky you don't get all the Government you are paying for."

George Will recently wrote, and he sort of put a twist on it, and he said that used to be true, but now I think you are getting more government than you pay for. That is sort of the truth. We get a ton of government. Our taxes cover about 60 or 70 percent of what we spend. But if our country gets rich borrowing 30 cents on every dollar? What kind of family can spend 30 percent more than comes in?

Some things are pretty simple. Wealth accumulation for you or wealth distribution by say-ings. You don't get wealthy by spending more money than comes in. So as we look to these things, I think we need to be cognizant of the reasons we would want to have smaller, not bigger, government. But we would have smaller government if we paid attention to the rules.

The rules are very important, and when people talk about "oh, that would be a monarchy of the law." or "we would be too rigid to live under the laws, we need a living, breathing, evolving Constitution," I think things change over time. You get new technologies; drone strikes and things are new technologies. But I think we have a certain set of freedoms that are going to be the same now as they will be in 10,000 years.

I think the freedom for people to worship is something that I don't want majority rule to decide. You say: What do we give you now? Do you want to live with drone strikes? It is hard to worship after a Hellfire missile has been launched on you.

So all of our rights—there is a pan- oply of rights that are all interconnected, and they come from the basic right to life. If you don't have the right to be secure in your person, you don't have any other rights. So as we diminish one right we attack at the foundation. But if we are at a founda- tion or, it is strike and, on the other side, a person in America with no trial, with no accusation, I think we have come a long way from where we began.

I worry about it. I worry about it not just in the abstract sense, not just in the sense that these are a right in ab- stract and that we lose something we cannot actually touch or feel. I worry really about it in the sense that I don't know how you continue to exist as a country if you do not believe in some fundamental right, some fundamental right and wrongs. Some things are pretty simple.

After ObamaCare passed and there were some questions about its con- stitutionality, they asked a Represent- ative from the House side—he was asked: What does the Constitution say? He said: Why would I know? Most of the things we do up here have no constitu- tional justification.

We have gotten to the point where people care more about having enough votes. They think it is right if you have a vote. Never mind that to that there are certain immutable rights and wrongs; that there are cer- tain immutable rights that were there at the founding of our country that will be there in 100 years or 1,000 years from now: Your right to be secure in your person, the right that the govern- ment cannot take away these privi- leges.

This is not a new fight. Really, from the beginning of time there has been a struggle with the people versus the leaders. The leaders always want more. The amazing thing is it is sort of like a contagion. Not many people get to be President in this country. One person gets to be. We have had in the last 44 or 45 Presidents. We have not had many Presidents. But there is some- thing contagious about the office. It is that power corrupts, I think.

Lord Acton said it is not just that power corrupts, but that absolute power corrupts absolutely. I think people can become intoxicated with power. I don't know if that is the explanation for President Obama's about-face. He was one who at one time was so unreasonable and makes some body be- lieved in some restraint, believed in Senate authority, believed in—actually he did not even believe in raising the debt ceiling when he was here. The thing is, what we would hope for is—somebody have a President who be- lieves, even after assuming office, that the powers of the office should be protected. I think we run the risk, as we allow more and more power to gravi- tate to the President, we run the risk of living under an imperial Presidency. I have said some inflammatory state- ments: that the President is acting like a king. Some of that is inflammatory and provocative, but some of it has some ring of truth to it or I would not get so much push-back. Kings operate by edict. They say it is so; make it so. There is no give-and-take. There are no checks and balances between the legis- lature and the Presidency.

This has been going on for a long time. But it is not just today. And, frankly, I wish more people were inter- ested in it. I wish we had a dozen peo- ple down here saying: No President should be allowed to say that. There is no give-and-take. There are no checks and balances between the legis- lature and the Presidency.

If that is the standard we are going to live under, we have a great danger in our country. It is not enough. We live under the rule of law, and the law is quite explicit. The fifth amendment says no person shall be detained with- out an indictment or without due proc- ess.

I find the answer to be incredibly easy. I have asked the President an easy question. My question is, Can you kill an American on American soil, a noncombatant, with a drone strike? It should be an easy answer.

(Mr. HINKEPHEL asked the chair.)

When a President will not answer a question or when they answer the ques- tion and it is an evasive answer, our concern is if they answer yes. I thought they would never answer the question, but they finally did. They said: Yes, we can conceive of situations when we might. The situations they conceive of, though, are attacks on the country, which I don’t disagree with, so they are talking about things that are not controversial.

If planes are attacking the Twin Towers, New York or DC, there is not any question on either side of the aisle among those in the chamber. It or the universe who doesn’t believe we can repel lethal threats. What we are talking about are the noncombatants who are either eating dinner, sleeping in their house or walking down the street. A large percentage of the drone strikes have been people who were not carrying arms or in combat.

Were they bad people? I am not positive I could say one way or the other, but I don’t want that sort of standard to be used in America. I don’t want the standard to be use if someone came to a bad person who happens to be a male between the ages of 16 and 50, that they are no longer a civilian but actually a militant. Is that the standard we are going to use in America?

I don’t stand for any sympathizing. Has anybody ever been on the Internet? Has anyone ever seen crackpots who are on the Internet and say all kinds of crazy things? If someone is saying crazy things and they happen to be right, then is that enough for a Hellfire missile to come down on their house? Is sympathizing enough? People have written and talked about this. During the Vietnam war there were some people who probably were terrorist and probably should have been tried for treason. Having said that, I would not kill them without some sort of due process or trial. The idea of a right to trial by jury has been the basis of our history for hundreds of years. It is the basis of a foundational principle for our country. I cannot imagine we would be so cavalier as to let it go.

As we move forward with this nominating process, I have decided to occupy as much time as I can on the floor to bring attention to this issue. Ultimately, I cannot win. There are not enough votes. There would be if there was truly an uprising of bipartisan support that would come to the floor and say: John Brennan is not about a constitutional principle and we are willing to delay this until the President can explicitly say noncombatants in America will not be killed with drone strikes. I think that is pretty easy to answer, but it has been like pulling teeth.

I have written letter after letter for weeks and weeks trying to get an answer on this and we have not had much luck. There have been people who have written about this lawfully. They have leaked operations directed against citizens, and there is a question both in the country and outside the country of what the standard will be. Will it be the same standard? Some say there is no standard once we get outside the country and that anybody can be killed whether they are an American citizen or not.

Frankly, I don’t like the idea of no standard. For example, the most prominent American who was killed overseas was al-Awlaki. His name was publicly known to be on a kill list for months. I see no reason why he could not have been tried in a Federal court. The next time he returned home, he would still be tried—given representation, and tried for treason. These are not frequent cases that occur overseas, so I see no reason why we would not use a Federal court. The Federal courts are adapted in such a way that we can go into secret session if there is classified material. The Federal courts in Washington, DC, Philadelphia, and New York have done this on occasion. I think we could do this in a Federal court. We have convicted a few terrorists in the past, but that is not the standard. We have convicted people who number up to several hundred—in the United States in our courts.

The main thing I object to is people becoming so fearful they cavalierly give up their rights. We had two terrorists in Bowling Green, KY, my hometown, which has 50,000 people. Who would have thought we would have two terrorists? They were conspiring to either buy or send Stinger missiles to Iraq. I am glad they were caught and punished. They were tried in a court.

Many people said let’s just send them to Guantanamo Bay forever. Once we go down that path where we are not going to have any due process—our courts have done a pretty good job. In fact, I think we have not let off anybody from one of our courts that should have been kept here and tried.

I do have a question as to how the terrorists got into the country. That goes back to the issue of not wanting terrorism to occur, but how should we combat it? Is it best if we combat it in Yemen, Mali, Somalia, Afghanistan, Pakistan or should we combat terrorism by knowing who is coming into and leaving our country?

For example, we have allowed 60,000 people from Iraq to come into this country in the last 2 or 3 years. Frankly, I think that is a lot. They come here under asylum. The problem with asylum is I thought asylum was when a person doesn’t feel safe. We won the war in Iraq. They have a democratic government over there, and I would not understand why they would want to leave a democratic government. Also, the 60,000 who leave—other than maybe the two we captured in Bowling Green we present in that most of them are pro-Western—are the people we want to run Iraq. There are all kinds of reasons to stay in Iraq to run the country.

In less than so many people come in, we didn’t do a very good job because the two terrorists who were allowed to go to Bowling Green had their fingerprints on an IED that was in a warehouse somewhere. They did not find a match on any of the fragments with their fingerprints on a database until after we caught them. Once we knew their names and had their fingerprints, we checked some fragments for their fingerprints, and that is what we have been doing in the warehouse for years and years. So we are not quite doing the job.

Sometimes we want to analyze so much information that we get overwhelmed with the information. We collect millions and millions and billions of pieces and bits of information, but it cannot all be analyzed. Some of it, I fear, goes against our rights to privacy. Any of our e-mails that are over 6 months old can be looked at. We found out about this recently when we had an adulterous affair in our military.

I believe our third-party records are ours. I had an amendment recently on this, and I told people my Visa bill is pretty private. Just because I use my Visa card doesn’t mean I have given up my information and that the government gets to look at my Visa bill every month. That is not the standard.

A lot of these things have been slipping away from us for a long time. It is not just President Obama; it is 40 or 50 years of court cases.

Thirty, forty or fifty years ago, we declared that once you had your records, they were not private anymore. I think that is absurd. Think of the age we live in and how a lot of people don’t use cash at all. Our Visa cards have everything on it. We can look at a person’s Visa bill and find out if they have been a psychiatrist, what kind of medicines they are on, what kind of magazines they get, what kind of books they get. We can look at a person’s Visa bill and find out if they gamble, or drink or what their travel plans are. We can find out a ton of information on a person’s Visa bill.

Should people be allowed to look at a Visa bill, without asking a judge, and without the constitutional protection? I hope to be in this. We are not saying we cannot do this for a terrorist, but what we should do is go to a judge and present some evidence and say we think he is a terrorist and we want to look at his Visa bill. People in America should not be able to have their Visa bill open to scrutiny, and that is basically what we have now. Our banking records, our Visa statements, and all our records that are held by a third party are not protected.

Some people may have heard about how they want to have cyber security. Everybody wants their computers to be secure, including the computer companies. They work nonstop trying to keep hackers out of computer law. They want to pass giving immunity to the computer companies. A lot of us don’t think much of it. We check off the confidentiality button and hope that any bills that have signed a contract, they will not be done. They sort of it in a way that is anonymous, and we put up with that in order to get a search engine. I am OK with that.
What I am concerned about is when we pass the cyber security bill, we cannot sue them if they breach the policy. So then everybody’s computer, searches, and reading habits are open to the Federal Government. Because we are porous of people coming at us and fearful of the people we are fighting our rights. I thought we were fighting to preserve our rights.

So what are we fighting for? These battles are going on and on throughout the country, the important thing is—what about these battles is that they are not always Republican v. Democrat. These are battles that are sometimes coalitions of people from the right and people from the left who have gotten together and fought over these issues.

In the case of trying to get the President to acknowledge he will not do drone strikes, there have been people on the Democratic side of the aisle who have aligned with me and helped me get this information. The President probably refused to tell me when we all froze over to give me anything, but the fact is we had Democrats ask to get information also. Suddenly we were able to get a coalition and get the information, but it has not been easy. The fact that we have to acknowledge limitations as to the President’s power worries me that they believe in an expansive Presidential power. In order to do that, we have to be protective of our rights. We have to be able to not so easily give up our rights.

There is a white paper that was written, and the title of it is “The lawfulness of a lethal operation directed against a U.S. Citizen who is an operational leader of al-Qaida, foreign associated forces,” and this is from the Department of Justice. This white paper sets forth a legal framework for considering the circumstances for which the U.S. Government could use lethal force. One of the things they do in the documents is—particularly—what they are telling us is that they tell of the criteria for when they can kill people overseas.

We don’t know the criteria for killing people in this country. They make a contention that the rules will be different, but no one is acknowledging exactly whom they can kill or what the rules will be. For the people who are killed overseas by drone strikes, the thing they come up with is that they say it has to be an imminent threat, but it does not have to be imminent.

To try to figure out, or try that there would be government lawyers could come up with a definition for imminent threat that says it is not immediate, so that is the first problem with it. Is that going to be the standard that is used in America, then there would be an imminent threat, but it doesn’t have to be immediate?

My next question is: What does that mean? Does that mean noncombatants who I think might someday be combatants are an imminent threat? It is a pretty important question. What is imminent. There is no question of what imminent lethal force is. If someone is aiming a gun, a missile or a bomb at you, there is an imminent threat, and no one questions that. No one questions using lethal force to stop any kind of imminent attack. We become a little bit worried when the President says imminent means something different. When that happens—and then we see from the unclassified portion of the drone attacks overseas—many of these people are not involved in combat. They might someday be involved in combat, they might have been involved in combat, but when we kill them, most of them are not involved in combat. So even overseas there is some question of this program, but my questions are primarily directed toward what we do in this country.

It says the U.S. Government can use lethal force in a foreign country outside the area of active hostilities. That is, once again, the point. We are not talking about a battlefield. But because the President would not tell me, he is now telling Congress that the battlefiel is not just Afghanistan. The battlefield has no geographic limits so the battlefield is the whole world, and many in this body say the battlefield is the United States. So the acknowledges—how is it that the battlefield is the United States, this whole idea of what is imminent versus what is immediate becomes pretty important because we are talking about our neighbors now.

The other thing about this is we need to try to understand who these terrorists are. Members of al-Qaeda. There are no people walking around with a card that says “al-Qaida” on it. There are bad people. There were bad people associated with the terrorists—and we have killed a lot of them—who were in Afghanistan training and part of the group that attacked us. But there are terrorists all over the world who are unhappy with their own local governments or of the types of governments or any of us do. Once we acknowledge that the battlefield is the United States, then we have to ask—is that the United States, this whole idea of what is imminent versus what is immediate becomes important because we are talking about our neighbors now.

I have one other question and that is that we are fighting about this. There is no question that the government is putting the limits to apply not only there but here. In our Constitution, it is why we have gone to war, to defend these rights. Will we think the war still has purpose if we are no longer able to enjoy these rights at home?

The problem as I see it as we go forward is that I wish I could tell people there is an end to this, that there would be a grand battle for our constitutional rights or for what rights we lose overseas, which are here if we travel. The problem is they don’t see an end to the war. They see perpetual war, perpetual war without geographic limits, and they see the battlefield here, so they want the laws of war to apply not only here but here. In other words, what they are saying is the laws of war are martial law. These are the laws of war. These are the laws that are accepted in war.

We accept a lot of things on the battlefield that we don’t want to accept here. I acknowledge we accept that we don’t get Miranda rights on the battlefield. We don’t get due process. We don’t get an attorney. If they are shooting at us, we shoot back and kill them. The situation is sitting in a cafe in Houston, they do get Miranda rights, they do get accused of a crime, they do get a jury of their peers. That is what we are talking about here. The President should unequivocally come forward and state that noncombatants—people not involved with lethal force—will not have drones dropped on them.
The other thing he should acknowledge is the law—not only the constitutional law but the law since the Civil War—has said the military doesn’t operate in the United States. Why? The military operates under different rules of engagement than policemen. The rules are stricter for policemen. We do it because we are not in a war here so the policemen have to call judges. A lot of people think this is not fair, though, and they will say, These people are terrible, awful people who would cut your head off. They are right; they really are bad people. We have really bad people in our country sometimes. We have murderers and rapists. But tonight at 4 a.m. if there is a rapist going around the neighborhood and you get to a house and there isn’t an immigrant thing going on but you are told he might be in this house, before the door is broken down, they call on a cell phone, they get a judge out of bed, and they say, we have chased him into this neighborhood, no one is answering, we want to get the door down, we have a warrant. Most of the time the police have to call for a warrant. We have a process. But when he is arrested, they don’t just string him up. We don’t have lynchings in our country. We don’t let mobs decide who is guilty and who is not.

I don’t question the President’s motives. I don’t think the President would purposefully take innocent people and kill them. Really I don’t think he would drop a Hellfire missile on a cafe or a restaurant. If he is not going to, he has no intent to kill Americans in America?

The other thing he should acknowledge is the law since the Civil War—has said the military doesn’t operate in the United States. Why? The military operates under different rules of engagement than policemen. The rules are stricter for policemen. We do it because we are not in a war here so the policemen have to call judges. A lot of people think this is not fair, though, and they will say, These people are terrible, awful people who would cut your head off. They are right; they really are bad people. We have really bad people in our country sometimes. We have murderers and rapists. But tonight at 4 a.m. if there is a rapist going around the neighborhood and you get to a house and there isn’t an immigrant thing going on but you are told he might be in this house, before the door is broken down, they call on a cell phone, they get a judge out of bed, and they say, we have chased him into this neighborhood, no one is answering, we want to get the door down, we have a warrant. Most of the time the police have to call for a warrant. We have a process. But when he is arrested, they don’t just string him up. We don’t have lynchings in our country. We don’t let mobs decide who is guilty and who is not.

I don’t question the President’s motives. I don’t think the President would purposefully take innocent people and kill them. Really I don’t think he would drop a Hellfire missile on a cafe or a restaurant. If he is not going to, he has no intent to kill Americans in America?

The other thing he should acknowledge is the law since the Civil War—has said the military doesn’t operate in the United States. Why? The military operates under different rules of engagement than policemen. The rules are stricter for policemen. We do it because we are not in a war here so the policemen have to call judges. Typically what I am talking about is American citizens, but there needs to be some oversight. But the problem of waiting to do this and saying, Oh, we will do this sometime, we will get to it eventually, never happens. The same way with saying, Oh, we will get under control what we will do without a President for more information, but it never happens. If we do not take a stand for something we believe in, it is going to slip away from us. I think our rights are gradually eroding. I think they are gradually slipping away from us. I think the understanding of the Constitution as a document that restrains the government, that restrains the size and scope of the government, has been lost on a lot of people. I think it is something we shouldn’t give up on.

When the President goes through his three different items that were leaked through this memo, he says there has to be an imminent threat. He says their capture has to be inconvenient or ineffective. And he says the operation of killing the person has to be conducted within a manner consistent with the applicable law of war.

Here is the problem. That sounds fine if you are in Afghanistan and in the mountains fighting a war. But I am talking about downtown Washington, DC. I am talking about living in the suburbs of Houston or Atlanta. Are we going to have drone strike programs in America consistent with the applicable law of war?

See, the other way to put “law of war”—and this is not a stretch, this is just turning the words around—“martial law.” Now people, if you put it that way, might have a little different impression. Do we want martial law in our country?

If you go back to the battle we had over indefinite detention last year, where they are saying they can take a citizen without a trial and actually send them from America to Guantanamo Bay if they are accused of terrorism—accused, not convicted; accused of terrorism—you start to worry about some of the stuff happening in our country, that this could actually happen.

One of the sort of ironies of looking at different governments and looking at what makes people unhappy—in Tahrir Square in Cairo, there have been hundreds of thousands of people protesting. It is interesting what they are protesting. One of the large things they are protesting is something called an emergency decree, which I believe went in place by Mubarak 20-some-odd years ago. So you get leaders who come in, and they use fear to accumulate power, and you get a decree. So you get martial law. The martial law, ironically enough, in Egypt allows detention without trial. They do have the right to trial, but there is an exception, and it has been accepted for the last 10 years, and the people are hopping mad over it. So we get involved in their country and their politics and give them money and weapons, and we have some of the same debate and problems here at home—whether or not you can indefinitely detain.

The President’s response to this was also pretty disappointing. It would not have become law without him. I think he has the power to sign it anyway. Empty threats are of no value, and he struck no great blow for America or for American freedoms by not vetoing this. But when he signed it, he said something similar to what he is saying now. He said: Well, I have no intent to indefinitely detain people.

Am I the only one in America who is a little bit underwhelmed by the President saying he has no intent to detain somebody but he is going to sign it into law saying he has the power to? That is the same thing we are getting now in this drone strike program: Don’t worry. Everything is OK. I am your leader, and I would never detain you. I would never shoot Hellfire missiles at noncombatants. I will not do that.

I can take him at his word, but what about the next guy and the next guy? In 1923, when they destroyed the currency in Germany, they elected Hitler. I am not saying anybody is Hitler, so I am not saying that I am doing that to rectify blight. But I am saying if there is a danger, even in a democratic country, that someday you get a leader who comes in, in the middle of chaos, and says: Those people did it. Those people are the mistake. Those people are the wrong people. We are going to get rid of them.

If the laws have been removed that prevented that from happening, if the laws have been removed and they say: We can indefinitely detain—in Hitler’s case, he said: The Jews, those bankers, the Jews did this to us. And they were indefinitely detained. Now, am I saying this is going to happen in our country? Unlikely. I cannot imagine any of our leaders, for all of our disagreements, doing that. But if you do not have the constitutional protections that have been that protection because you do not know who the next guy is and the next guy or the next woman.

When Madison wrote about this, he was very explicit. He said: We have these rules in place because we do not have a government of angels. If we had a government of angels, we would not need these rules.

I will never forget the discussion with somebody about the Kelo case. The government took private property and gave it to a richer person who had private property who wanted to develop it. Ironically, the justification they used was blight. So they take it from one private individual and give it to a rich corporation, and they say they are doing that to rectify blight. But when they did that and when they came down with the ruling, it was concerning the logic of the way they got to this ruling, that basically they really do not have a government of angels. When the Kelo decision came down, it really bothered me. But I remember we started having the battle in our local government. In our local government, there was a battle over a resolution. The resolution said—it was in the city council—the resolution said the local city government cannot take private land and give it to another person. It was really like so many other things that the eminent domain was to have highways and thoroughfares that you might not get otherwise, but it was never intended to take from a private owner and give to a corporation. That is what they did with the Kelo decision.

So, anyway, local governments began talking about this, and I was talking to one of my local government officials—this is probably 20 years ago, 15 years ago—and their response was, but I would never do that. I would never take private land through eminent domain and give it to another corporation. I would never do that.

And I believed that person. And I really, frankly, give the President the benefit of the doubt when it comes to his motives. I do not think he probably will kill noncombatants. But I certainly do not want him to claim that he has the authority to kill noncombatants. So this is a big deal. It is a constitutional deal.

So with the eminent domain, we finally passed it in our local commission. It was like 3 to 2, but in my town in Kentucky, you cannot take private property with eminent domain and give it to another private individual, because it is not about the individuals involved, it is about the fact that we do not always have angels running our government. We do not always know whom we are going to get.

If we ask the question. Do you want a government that is run by majority rule or a government that is restrained by its documents, it is a pretty important question. Ultimately, there are ramifications to majority rule, to basically whatever the majority wants. In fact, Martin Luther King wrote—this is one of my favorite quotes from him—he said: An unjust law is any law that a majority passes on a minority but does not make binding on themselves. I thought it was a great statement because you could probably almost apply that to any law written on any subject. If the law.expects to apply to certain people and is not applied to everyone, then by definition, there is an unjust law. What a great way to put it succinctly and a great way that we should look as far as trying to write rules.

But you have to decide as a country whether you want majorities or politicians to decide things or whether you want reliance on documents and on a process and on a rule of law that protects you.

If we rely on, basically, the whims of politicians, I think it is a big mistake. If we are going to rely on the politician basically sitting in the Oval Office going through flashcards and a PowerPoint presentation to make the decision on life and death for Americans in America, I think it is a huge mistake.

Any people who watch trials and court cases realize that even courts are not perfectly amazing. We may even get it wrong with courts and trials and juries. Many States and even many people who were for the death penalty have questioned their support of the death penalty because of the imperfections in courts. Through DNA testing, we have found we do not always get it right even with that. I think in Illinois they stopped the death penalty after having so many DNA testings that showed there was an incorrect diagnosis of who had committed the crime.

So the question becomes, even with all the checks and balances of the court, are you worried at all about having one politician accuse, secretly charge, I guess—if you can call it a charge and then execute Americans? I am incredibly troubled by that. I cannot imagine we as a free country would let that stand. I think it is an insult to every soldier in uniform fighting for American freedom around the world that we would give up on the home, that the President would cavalierly or incorrectly or without forethought, with insufficient forethought, tell us, not go ahead and explicitly say: This will never happen in America.

His answer to me should not have been, no, we will not kill noncombatants. It should be, never—no, never. We will never in America come to that. Under my watch, we will never, ever allow this to happen in America.

It is incredibly disappointing. It should be disappointing to all Americans or anyone who believes in this. We have to realize that trying to figure out guilt or innocence is very complex. We have tried who has ever decided on a jury realizes how difficult it is to determine guilt. And sometimes you are unsure. Some cases are actually decided by, gosh, the evidence was so equal, but there was not a preponderance. I could not become completely convinced, and this person is going to be put to death.

Contrast the feeling a juror has and what a juror is trying to do in finding innocence or guilt and letting someone be punished with the current standard. Our current standard for killing someone overseas is that you can be sympathizing, you can be close to people who we think are bad, you can be in a caravans that we say bears the signature of bad people.

Now, there is another debate that can be had about whether those are sufficient standards for war. And the standards are different for war in our country. But we have to adamantly and unequivocally stand up and say, those who would say this is a battlefield: The hell it is a battlefield. This is our country. If you want to say this is a battlefield—if you say we are going to have the laws of war here, we are going to have martial law here—by golly, let’s have a debate about it. Let’s have a discussion in the country. Let’s have everybody talking about, are we the battlefield? Is this a battlefield? Is our country a battlefield? Because what that means is that you get no due process in a battlefield.

I am not here to argue and say that you get due process in a battlefield. I am here to argue that we cannot let America be a battlefield because we cannot say that we are no longer going to have due process, that we are no longer going to have presentment of charges and grand juries. It is impossible in a battlefield. In Afghanistan, it is impossible to say: Hey, wait a minute, can I read you your Miranda rights? It is impossible. We are not arguing for that. We are not arguing for a judge or a jury or anything else. If people are shooting at our troops, they can intervene with drone strikes. It is not even the technology so much that I am opposed to, but the technology opens doors that we need to be concerned with.

Defense of our soldiers in war—there is no discussion involved with that. But realize the danger to saying America is at war, America is the battlefield, because also realize the danger that these people—they are Republicans and Democrats—these people do not believe there is any limit to the war, there is no geographic limit, and there is no temporal limit. It is a perpetual war. And many of them—if you prompt them or provoke them—will open up and say: Oh, yes, America is a battlefield. We need the laws of war. And you ask them: When is the war going to end. When will we win the war, they will admit it—some of them will frankly admit it. They will say the war may go on for a long time. Some of them have been fighting for 10, 20 years being in these countries. But basically we are talking about perpetual war. We are talking about a war with no geographic limit, no temporal limit, and a war that has come to our country.

There will be bad people who come to our country whom we need to repel. We are not talking about that. If planes are being flown into the Twin Towers, we have the right to shoot them down. That is an act of war. No one questions that. If someone is standing outside the Capitol with a grenade launcher, we have a lot of brave Capitol policemen. I hope they kill the person immediately. Lethal force to repel lethal force has never been questioned by anybody and is not even controversial.

But they want to make the debate about that and not about killing noncombatants driving in their car down Constitution Avenue—there may be bad people who are driving in their car, and there may be bad people sitting in cafes around the country. If there are, accuse them of a crime, arrest them and try them.

The battlefield coming to America or acknowledging that is an enormous mistake. So there are some big issues, some issues that we as a country gloss over. We can watch the nightly news. There is sometimes so much hysteria about so many issues, so many people yelling back and forth. But this is an issue that I think if we could get a frank discussion—I have proposed to the leadership we did not have a debate with this—but I proposed for a constitutional debate or a debate of importance that everybody come, and instead of hearing me all day, we take 2 or 3 minutes and we go around the room and everybody speaks, it is limited, but there is some kind of debate and discussion—less speechmaking and more debate.

I proposed we have lunch together. I have asked to come to the Democratic lunch. We have not gotten it secured yet. It has only been 2 years so it may happen, but there are many reasons for discussion. There are many reasons why we should have civility. There are reasons why both sides of the aisle can agree to this. If we were to have a vote, maybe not on the nomination but a vote on restricting drones—there is a bill out there that we are working on that would restrict drones to imminent threats. It does not even get into the distinction of the military—things in the country would be the FBI; it would not be the military because that is the law. There is an important reason why both sides of the aisle can agree to this.

But we have a bill we are going to come forward with that we are working on that would simply say there has to be a real imminent lethal threat, something we can see. Then I think people could agree to that because it is not so much the drone we object to. If some guy is robbing a liquor store 2 blocks from here and the policemen come up and he comes out brandishing a gun, he or she can be shot. Once again, they do not have to Miranda rights; they do not get a trial. They do not get anything. If you come out brandishing a weapon and people are threatened by it, you can be shot.

So it is important to know what we are talking about. We are not talking about the guy coming out of the liquor store with a weapon. Even a drone could kill him if the FBI had drones. So my objection to drones is not so much the technology. There may be a use for law enforcement here, there is also potential for abuses.

Many government agencies have drones. These hopefully will remain unarmed drones. This is a different subject. It is a part of the discussion—less speechmaking and more debate.
not have two-way television. This was back in the 1970s. We did not have the ability to look at people. The government could not look at me in my house 24 hours a day.

So you kind of get the feeling for how terrifically low that was to happen. But technology was behind that. Actually ‘1843’ was written, I think, in 1949. So talk about—he was truly being able to foresee the future. But now fast forward another 30 or 40 years and look at the technology we have now. We have drones that are less than an ounce, presumably with cameras—it is hard for me to believe that—but less than an ounce with a camera. It is not impossible to conceive that you could have a drone fly outside your window and see what your reading material is.

It is not impossible to say they could not send drones up to your mailbox and read at least what kind of mail you are getting or where it is from. It is not inconceivable that drones could follow you and then someone had an important Supreme Court case last year, though, that was a blow for privacy. This was a Supreme Court case that had to do with GPS tagging. Everyone knows what GPS is. But what they were doing is they were shooting them to cars or tagging them when you were not with your car and then following you around waiting for you to commit a crime. If you tag everybody’s car and wait for them to speed, we are going to have a big deal. There is going to be a problem. There is also a problem with following people around waiting for people to commit a crime. So the Supreme Court ruled, I think it was unanimously, that you have to have a warrant to do that.

The thing about surveillance is those of us who believe in privacy are not arguing against any surveillance. What we are arguing is that you have to have a reason to do it and you have to ask for a judgment. So it is not a society where there is no surveillance or a society where you have absolute privacy. If you commit a crime, the police go to the judge and ask for permission to do this.

But there are some worrisome things about the direction of drones. For example, the EPA now has drones. The EPA is flying drones over farmland. I think some of this may be even in the defecation patterns of the cows. I do not know what they are doing for because manure in streams is said to be a pollutant and, actually, frankly, thousands of animals might.

But the whole idea, if you think someone is dumping anything in a stream—I am not supposed to have laws stopping that, get a warrant, search them or get a warrant and spy on them with a satellite or drone or whatever you want to do. But you have to have some kind of probable cause they are committing a crime. Because you do not want to have a justice system into a society where every aspect of our life would just be open to the government to watch what we are doing.

They say there is something called an open spaces concept. They say: You have 40 acres. The land is open so it is not private anymore. I think that is absurd. I think that is sort of analogous to the whole banking secrecy, such as you gave your records to your banker and if anybody looks at them. That is absurd. I have a 40-acre farm. I go hunting out there. I am supposed to not care if people watch me, everything I do once I am outside my house. My privacy is only in my house and my space, my property.

I disagree with that. One of the interesting things about the right to privacy, and you actually get some disagreement from people on the right about this. There was a case called the Griswold case. It had to do with birth control. A lot of conservatives objected to it because they saw it as a building block for Roe v. Wade. I am pro-life and did not like the decision in Roe v. Wade, but I actually do not mind the decision itself so much. The reason is, going back to a little bit of the discussion we had earlier on Lochner, is that with Griswold, what I see is they talked about a right to privacy.

Some said—the conservatives who are arguing this is being created coming up with new things or creating things—they thought the right to privacy was not in the Constitution so you do not have it. I think that is a mistake in notion. Because, for example, the right to privacy is not in the Constitution either, but I do not think any of the Founding Fathers or most of us today would argue you do not have a right to private property. In fact, I think it is one of the most important parts. In fact, there was some debate about having it in there. But I think the right to privacy, the right to private property, they are part of what I would call the unenumerated rights. The unenumerated rights are basically everything else not given to the government.

You gave the government—or we give the government, through the compact of the Constitution, we give the government enumerated powers. There are about 17 to 19, depending on how you count them. But as Madison said, they are “few and defined.” When you talk about the rights, though, the 9th and 10th amendment will say those rights not specifically delegated to the Federal Government are left to the States and the people respectively. They are not to be disparaged.

So the interesting thing about your rights is there is not sort of a list of your rights. In fact, when the Founding Fathers were putting together the Bill of Rights, one of the objections to the Bill of Rights was they said if we put the Bill of Rights together, everybody will think that is all of their rights. They will say, if it is not listed, you do not get it.

So the 9th and 10th amendments were an important part of it. In fact, I do not know I would have voted for the Bill of Right’s inclusion if you did not have the 9th and 10th. I like all the others, of course. But then the 9th and 10th protect all those not mentioned.

So it is an interesting thing that some on the right disagree. In fact, the majority does not like the Griswold decision. But I disagree because I think your right to privacy is yours, the same as I think your right to private property is yours. It was not delegated, it was not taken, it was not given to the Federal Government. It is yours naturally or, as many of us believe, it is comes from your Creator. So your rights are national and in born. They were enshrined in the Constitution, not given to you but enshrined and protected. As Patrick Henry said, it is not that the Constitution was not delegated among men to protect the government, they were to protect the people from the government.

It was to limit the size of government, to try to restrain the size of government, to try to allow for a government that lived under a rule of law. When Hayek said nothing distinguishes an arbitrary government from a constitutional government more clearly than this concept of the rule of law, the important thing about the rule of law is also that the rule of law is something that—it gives a certainty. Businessmen have talked about certainty, about relinquishing the floor. I would like to hear a few comments from Senator Lee.

Mr. LEE. The issues we are discussing are of profound importance to the American people for the reasons Senator Paul has identified. Americans have every reason to be concerned anytime decisions are made by government that impair one of the fundamental God-given protected rights that Americans have.

Anytime the government wants to intrude upon life or liberty or property, it must do so in a way that comports with time-honored, centuries-old understandings of due process. The rule of law, in other words, must operate in order to protect those God-given interests to make sure they are not arbitrarily, capriciously deprived of any citizen.

We are talking about the sanctity of human life. When the interest at stake is not just liberty or property but life itself, we have to protect it. We have to take steps to protect that. So I think it is important we carefully scrutinize and evaluate any government programs that the potential to deprive any American citizen of his or her life without due process of law.

I was concerned, as was Senator Paul, recently, when the Obama administration leaked what was characterized as a Department of Justice white paper outlining the circumstances—outlining the legal criteria that this administration would... use in deciding when and whether and under what circumstances to snuff out human life, the human life of an American citizen no less, using a drone.

The memorandum started out with certain somewhat predictable or familiar concepts. The memorandum started out by explaining an imminent standard, explaining that certainly could not happen absent an imminent threat to American national security, an imminent threat to American life, for example. Then we think of imminent judgment call in order to turn on some kind of an imminent threat to American national security, an imminent threat to American life, for example. Then we think of imminent judgment call in order to make a spur-of-the-moment judgment call in order to turn on some kind of an imminent threat to American national security, an imminent threat to American life, for example.

Significantly, however, this is not how the Department of Justice white paper actually read. Although it used the word "imminence," it defined imminence as something far different than we normally think of, than we as Americans use this kind of language, certainly in any legal or constitutional analytical context.

If I could read from that memorandum, I would point out this condition of imminence is described as follows.

"The condition that an operational leader—an operational leader of a group presenting a threat to the United States—presented imminent threat of violent attack against the United States does not require the United States to have clear evidence that a specific attack on U.S. persons and interests will take place in the immediate future.

Wouldn't it be the Senator's understanding if something is imminent, it would need to be something occurring immediately?

Mr. PAUL. Yes. I think there is really no question about using lethal force against an imminent attack. I think that is why we need to make the question we are asking the President very clearly. The question is if planes are attacking the World Trade Center, we do believe in an imminent defense. We do believe in a 747 right through it? If that is the case, how is that compatible with time-honored notions of due process, those notions deeply embedded in our founding documents, those notions we understand come from God and cannot be re-voked by any government?

I wish I could say that the memorandum and the Department of Justice white paper is the only problem. It is not. We look to the very next page, the page dealing with feasibility of capture. Of the one other standards outlined in the Department of Justice white paper, the circumstances in which the government of the United States may take a human life using a drone in a case involving a U.S. citizen that the capture must be feasible, and the United States must be continuing to monitor whether capture becomes feasible at some point.

As to this standard on page 8 of the Department of Justice white paper, it says:

"Second, regarding to the feasibility of capture, capture would not be feasible if it could not be physically effectuated during the relevant window of opportunity or if the relevant country were to decline to consent to a capture operation. Other factors such as undue risk to U.S. personnel conducting a potential capture operation could also be relevant. Feasibility would be a highly fact-specific and potentially unavailable to the chain of command to the President of the United States."

In other words, they are saying it has to be something that could not be physically effectuated during the relevant window. What is the relevant window? The white paper makes absolutely no effort whatsoever to define what relevant window is. Who then makes this determination, and according to what factors is that determination made?

Here yet again we have a standardless standard. We have a standard that is so broad, so malleable, so easily subject to so many varying interpretations, no one can reasonably look into this and decide who the government may kill with a drone and who the government may not kill with a drone. The way they frame it, it seems to me, is fundamentally incompatible with time-honored notions of due process. Would the Senator not agree with that assessment?

Mr. PAUL. Absolutely. At this point, I will entertain comments from Senator Cruz and a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRUZ). The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CRUZ. Would the Senator from Kentucky yield for a question?

Mr. PAUL. I will not yield the floor, but I will acknowledge a question to the Chair.

Mr. CRUZ. I wish to ask the Senator's reaction to the testimony Attorney General Eric Holder gave the Senate this morning in the Senate Judiciary Committee. I wish to describe that testimony for the Senate and ask the Senator's reaction to that testimony.

Mr. PAUL. I would begin by saying that Senator after Senator on the Judiciary Committee invoked the leadership of the Senator from Kentucky on the issue of drones and asked Attorney General Holder about the standards for drone strikes in the United States. Indeed, although the Senator does not serve on the Judiciary Committee, it was as if he were serving in absentia, because the Attorney General was forced over and over again to respond.

I would note the Senator's standing here today, like a modern "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," must surely be making Jimmy Stewart smile. My only regret is that not 99 of our colleagues here today standing with the Senator in defense of the most fundamental principle in our Declaration of Independence and our Constitution; namely, each of us is endowed with certain unalienable rights by our Creator and that first among them is life, the right to life, and the right not to have life arbitrarily extinguished by our government without due process of law.

At the hearing this morning, Attorney General Holder was asked about the letter he sent the Senator in which the Senator asked him whether the U.S. Government could use a drone strike to kill a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil. As the Senator knows, Attorney General Holder responded in writing he could imagine a circumstance where that would be permissible. The two examples he gave were: No. 1, Pearl Harbor; and No. 2, the tragic attacks on this country on September 11, 2001. In the second example, Attorney General Holder was asked for more specifics. In particular, both of those were military strikes on our country with imminent and, indeed, grievous loss of life that flowed from it. Few, if any, disagree that the U.S. Government may act swiftly to prevent a military attack which would mean immediate loss of life. The question Attorney General Holder was asked three different times was whether the U.S. Government could take a U.S. citizen, who was a terrorist on U.S. soil, who was not engaged in any imminent threat to life or bodily harm, simply sitting at a cafe—could the U.S. Government use a drone strike to kill that U.S. citizen on U.S. soil?

Three times when asked that direct question, Attorney General Holder responded that in his judgment that was not "appropriate.

The first question—and if I may, I wish I had more questions—does it surprise the Senator the Attorney General would speak in vague, amorphous terms of appropriateness and prosecutorial discretion rather than the bright lines of what the Constitution protects, namely, the right of every American to have our life protected by the Constitution?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I am quite surprised, although I guess I shouldn't be, that we don't get direct responses. It is a pretty direct question. It is the question you are asking all morning. It is the question I have been asking for a month and a half. I am talking about situations where you have a noncombatant, someone not posing an imminent threat, who they think may someday pose an imminent threat because that is what we are doing overseas. If that is the standard overseas, I am asking is that going to be the standard here? It amazes me.

Part of Mr. Holder's answer here in the midst of a filibuster is because they won't answer the question directly. I applaud the attempts to try to get a more specific question. I am not terribly surprised we have had trouble getting a direct answer.

Mr. CRUZ. Would the Senator yield for additional questions?

Mr. PAUL. As long as I do not yield the floor.

Mr. CRUZ. After three times declining to answer a direct question, would killing a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil with a drone strike when that U.S. citizen did not present an imminent threat, would that be constitutional—after three times declining to answer would not be appropriate, finally, the fourth time Attorney General Holder responded to vigorous questioning—in particular during the course of the questioning, the point was made that Attorney General Holder is not an advice columnist giving advice on etiquette and appropriateness. The Attorney General is the chief legal officer of the United States. I will note I observed it was more than a little astonishing the chief legal officer of the United States to simply answer one-word, one-syllable, two-letter answer to the question: Does the Constitution allow the Federal Government to kill with a drone strike a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil who is not posing an immediate threat? The proper answer I suggested at that hearing should be no. That should be a very easy answer for the Attorney General to give.

Finally, the fourth time around, Attorney General Holder stated: Let me be clear. Translate my appropriate to no. I thought I was saying no. All right? No. Finally, after three times refusing to answer the question whether it would be constitutional to do so, the fourth time the Attorney General answered:

The question I want to ask is the Senator's reaction to this exchange. In particular when Attorney General Holder on the fourth time finally stated his opinion and I assume the opinion of the President—that it is unconstitutional for the Federal Government to kill a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil who does not pose an imminent threat, when he stated that, my response was I wish he had simply said so in his letter to the Senator at the beginning. I wish John Brennan in his questioning the Senator provided had said so in the beginning.

Indeed I then said: The Senator from Kentucky and I are going to introduce legislation in this body to make clear that the U.S. Government may not kill a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil if that individual does not pose an imminent threat of death or grievous bodily harm. I observed that if the Attorney General's view was that it was unconstitutional for the U.S. Government to do so, then I assumed he would be supporting that legislation. I would welcome the Senator's reaction to that exchange.

Mr. PAUL. Well, Mr. President, the response is a little bit troubling; that it took so much work and so much effort of cross-examination to finally get an answer.

I will note, in his final answer, I don't ever see the words "constitutional" or "unconstitutional." He is responding to Senator Cruz's word of "constitutional" when he says: Let it be clear and the answer would be "appropriate" to "no." I thought I was saying no. All right. No.

Well, words do make a difference, and I would feel a little more comfortable if we would get in writing a letter that says drones can't be used except under imminent threat, and define that as an imminent threat where you actually have a lethal attack underway. If we could get to that, I think we can get it somewhere.

But what still disappoints me about the whole thing is that it takes so much work to get people to say they are not actively engaged in combat with drones in America, on American soil, is constitutional. That sure would have short-circuited and saved quite a bit of time.

I will say, though, that I will believe a little more of the sincerity of the President and of the Attorney General if we get a public endorsement of the bill that says drones can't be used except under imminent threat, and define that as an imminent threat where you actually have a lethal attack underway. If we could get to that, I think this is something that both parties ought to be able to unite by. It is such a basic principle I can't imagine we couldn't unite by this. And it would have gone a long way to getting these answers.

But what still disappoints me about the whole thing is that it takes so much work to get the administration to admit they will adhere to the Constitution. This should be a much simpler process.

I commend the Senator from Texas for not letting go and for trying to get this information. I would welcome any more comments that he has.

Mr. CRUZ. If the Senator would yield for one final question, is the Senator from Kentucky aware of any precedent whatsoever—any Supreme Court case, any lower court case, the decision of any President of the United States, beginning with George Washington up to this President, the standing view of any Member of this Senate, beginning with the very first Congress up to the present—for the proposition that this administration seems willing to embrace, or at least unwilling to renounce, that as an event of war overseas, the Constitution somehow permits, or at least does not foreclose on, the U.S. Government killing a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil who is not flying a plane into the Pentagon, but who is simply sitting quietly at a cafe, peaceably enjoying breakfast?
Is the Senator from Kentucky aware of any precedent whatsoever for what I consider to be the remarkable proposition that the U.S. Government, without indicting him, without bringing him before a jury, without any due process whatsoever could simply send a drone to kill that U.S. citizen on U.S. soil?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I am aware of no legal precedent for taking the life of an American without the fifth amendment due process. What is troubling, though, is that Attorney General Eric Holder is on record as actually arguing that the fifth amendment right to due process is to be determined and is to be applicable when determined solely by the executive branch.

I would appreciate the comments and opinions of the Senator from Texas on the idea that the executive branch gets to determine when the Bill of Rights applies.

Mr. CRUZ. If I may give my views on that question and then ask for the Senator’s response to my views on whether the executive may determine its own limitations, I would suggest the genesis of our constitution is found in the notion that the President is not a king, that we are not ruled by a monarchy, and that no man or woman is above the law. Accordingly, no man or woman may determine the applicability of the law to himself or herself.

For the Framers of our Constitution won not one but two revolutions. The first revolution they won was a bloody battle for our independence from King George, and a great many of them gave the ultimate sacrifice so that we might enjoy the freedom we do today. But the far more important war they won was the war of ideas, where for millennia men and women had been told that rights come from kings and queens and are given by grace, to be taken away at the whim of the monarch. What our Framers concluded, instead, is that our rights don’t come from any king or queen or president; they come from God Almighty, and sovereignty does not originate from the monarch or the president, it originates from we the people.

Accordingly, the Constitution served, as Thomas Jefferson put it, as chains to bind the mischief of government. And I would suggest that anytime power is taken away in one place—in the Executive—that liberty is threatened. And that should be a view that receives support not just from Republicans, not just from Democrats or Independents or Libertarians, that should be a view that receives support from everybody; that none of us should want to live in a country where the President or the Executive asserts the authority to take the life of a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil without due process of law and absent any imminent threat of harm.

I would suggest the idea that we should simply trust the Attorney General, trust the Director of the CIA, or trust the President to exercise an astonishing power to take the life of any U.S. citizen, in my judgment, is fundamentally inconsistent with the Bill of Rights. And I would, therefore, ask the Senator from Kentucky for his reaction and whether he shares my understanding that our rights are protected not by the President, but by the Constitution and, ultimately, they are rights that each of us was given by our Creator, and we are obliged to protect the natural rights to life, liberty, and property that every man and woman in America enjoys?

Mr. PAUL. Well, Mr. President, this is what makes this debate so important. This debate is about the fundamental rights that we—most of us, or many of us—believe derive from our Creator and that it is important we not give up on these; that we not allow a majority vote or one branch of government to say we have now decided you don’t get all these rights anymore.

Our Founders would never make it difficult to change things, to take away our rights. So this is an important battle and one in which I think we should engage because the President needs to be more forthcoming. The President needs to let us know what his plans are, if he is going to overrule the fifth amendment and if the Attorney General is going to decide when the fifth amendment applies. That is a pretty important distinction and change from the history of our country.

Mr. President, at this time I would like to ask for any comments, without yielding the floor, from the Senator from Utah.

Mr. LEE. In response to Senator PAUL’s question, I would like to add to the Senator’s remarks and those of the junior Senator from Texas the fact that in the concluding paragraph of the Department of Justice white paper on this issue, the Department concludes as follows:

In sum, an operation in the circumstances and under the constraints described above would not result in a violation of any due process rights.

It is a rather interesting conclusion, in light of the fact that two out of the three analytical points outlined above in the memorandum, in the white paper are themselves so broad as to be arguably meaningless or, at a minimum, capable of being interpreted in such a way as to deprive American citizens to the arbitrary deprivation of their own right to live.

First, as I mentioned earlier, by proposing an imminent standard that leaves out anything imminent—in other words, it is not just peanut butter without the jelly; it is peanut butter without the peanut butter. There is no “there” there—they define out of existence the very imminent standard they purport to create and follow. That is not due process. It is the opposite of due process.

Secondly, they outline a set of circumstances in which this attack may occur, where capture is infeasible, and then they define an understanding of feasibility that is so broad as to render it virtually meaningless.

So at the conclusion of the memo—and the memo says:

In sum, an operation in the circumstances and under the constraints described above would not result in a violation of any due process rights.

It is describing constraints that are not really constraints, and that is a problem. That amounts to a deprivation of due process.

In light of these circumstances, I think really it is imperative the American people, or those who serve in this body—at a minimum, those who serve on the Senate Judiciary Committee—be given an opportunity to review the wholesale legal analyses identified by the Attorney General today that have been prepared by the Office of Legal Counsel of the Department of Justice. This is the chief advisory body within the United States Department of Justice. It is the job of the fine lawyers in the Office of Legal Counsel to render this advice, and we ought to have the benefit of that. At a minimum, we ought to have the benefit of that within the Senate Judiciary Committee.

I hope that is satisfactory and in response to the Senator’s question.

Mr. PAUL. Yes, I agree with the comments of the Senator from Utah.

The whole problem is that if the President says my plan has due process, that would be sort of like me saying I have passed my law, and I think it is constitutional. Well, the same branch of government doesn’t get to judge whether it is constitutional. That is the whole idea of the checks and balances.

We pass a law in the Senate and the Supreme Court can rule on whether it is constitutional. So the President gets to decide that he is going to abrogate the fifth amendment or abbreviate the fifth amendment or do certain things, and then he says: Oh, I am really not bound by the way I interpret it. I am applying the fifth amendment to my process.

Well, he can’t do that. He can’t be judge, jury, executioner, and Supreme Court all rolled into one. That is an aberration of power and he cannot allow.

Mr. President, at this time I would like to entertain comments or a question from the Senator from Kansas without yielding the floor, if I may.

Mr. MORAN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Utah. I would like to ask a series of questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.
Mr. MORAN. First, let me outline a thought I had in listening to this conversation and ask the Senator a question about it.

We have seen the actions of our President to be determined unconstitutional in the course of appeals in the District of Columbia in a case in which the President made the determination he could determine the definition of a recess in the Senate—and so we now have a court that has declared the President’s conclusion in that case unconstitutional.

I don’t know that we want to get into the magnitude or evaluating what constitutional violations are most damaging to the American people or to our rights and liberties, but I would ask the Senator to compare the consequences of the President being wrong once again in regard to the constitutionality of utilizing a drone strike to end the life of an American citizen.

Again, I am suggesting that we have seen precedent where the President acts unconstitutionally. Fortunately, the legal process is there to make certain a determination is made as to the constitutionality of that act.

In this case, what would be the consequences of a drone strike compared to whether an appointment to an administrative body under the recess clause is constitutional?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I think the analogy is apt. The difference is a recess appointment until we resolve this, where we could conclude this debate and get on to the nomination, would be for the majority party to come forward with a resolution that says: You know what. We are not going to kill noncombatants in America with drone strikes; we are not going to use the military; we are going to reaffirm the law.

So there is a resolution that both parties could come forward—and it would be a wonderful resolution to this process to say: The Senate goes on recess without bringing a change in the fifth amendment. If you are an American and you live in America, you will not be killed without being accused of a crime, tried by a jury, and convicted by an impartial jury. So we have different rules and we have made it different.

But the Senator is right. I think people would understand that it would be wrong for a military officer to shoot someone on the streets of America. It is prohibited for a good reason; not because our soldiers are bad people, but it is because the Constitution is different for soldiers. That is what is most troubling about many of these people who say, oh, Wichita is the battlefield. And if it is the battlefield, they don’t understand why the military can’t act in Wichita or Houston or Bowling Green. KY. So it does delve into the problem that we have to debate: Is there a limitation to where the battlefield is?

If the Senator has another question, I would yield for a question without yielding the floor.

Mr. MORAN. Mr. President, I have an additional question, and I believe it is my final question.

I would ask the Senator from Kentucky, through the President—we are here at this point in time in the juncture of the Senate with the issue of whether to confirm a particular individual to a particular office, an administrative appointment. I would ask the Senator if he doesn’t believe the issue of whether the Senate is constitutional in taking a recess appointment, and whether the Senate is constitutional in a recess appointment. Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I believe it is more important than just the nomination of one individual.

When we are talking about whether the Bill of Rights is going to be changed, when we are talking about whether you will have the due process to be lived in a court, whether you will be killed summarily executed without a trial—that is an important change in the history of our country.

The Senator’s response also made me think of something else. Another way to resolve this, where we could conclude this debate and get on to the nomination, would be for the majority party to come forward with a resolution that says: You know what. We are not going to kill noncombatants in America with drone strikes; we are not going to use the military; we are going to reaffirm the law.

In my understanding of the Constitution, was that a difficult question the Senator asked, and I find it quite remarkable that they treated it as a difficult question. To me, there is no dispute—at least no serious dispute—that if an individual poses an imminent threat of harm—if an individual is robbing a bank, there is no dispute that law enforcement, a SWAT team, can use deadly force to prevent the imminent threat to life. It is constitutional.

What this issue is about is an individual who is not posing an imminent threat—a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil—and the administration’s continued reluctance to say. The Constitution forbids killing that U.S. citizen without due process of law.

So what I want to ask the Senator about is efficacy.

Let’s take a hypothetical individual whom the U.S. Government believes to be a terrorist, who is sitting at a cafe enjoying a cup of coffee, not posing an imminent threat to anybody. The question I would like to ask about is efficacy—why if I might, I would like to ask a couple of questions.

No. 1, if it turns out the intelligence is incorrect, that this individual the U.S. Government suspects of being a terrorist is not in fact a terrorist, that they have the wrong guy; and if a drone strike is used and that individual is killed, is there an effective remedy to correct that tragic mistake?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I think the question is well put.

The first aspect of the question is, What is the President thinking? Why would the President not respond to us? Why would the President not answer a pretty easy question and say that noncombatants in the United States will not be killed by drones?

It is true the reason is complicated—and it is conjecture because I can’t get in his mind. But I would say it is sort of a contagion or an infection that affects Republicans and Democrats. When they get into the White House. They see the power of the Presidency. It is enormous. They see themselves as good people, and they say: I can’t give up any power because I am going to do good with that power.

The problem they don’t see is that the power itself is intoxicating, and the power someday may be in the hands of someone else who is less inclined to use it in a good way. I think that is why the power grows and grows, because everybody believes themselves to be doing the right thing.

With regard to exactly what would happen in the situation when there is not an imminent threat, it boggles the mind when we can’t answer that question. And I don’t have a good understanding as to why exactly we can’t get a response.

I would yield for a response from the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CRUZ. Mr. President, if I could ask the second question, in the instance that we have the President saying that there is a wrong and a U.S. citizen was killed by his or her government without due process of law, there obviously would be no remedy. But I would ask about the alternate scenario.

If it were the case that this individual was in fact a terrorist, was involved in a plot to threaten the lives and threaten the safety of other Americans; if this U.S. citizen sitting in a cafe is killed with a drone strike—focusing on efficacy—once he is killed, am I correct that you can’t interrogate him further; you can’t find out who else was in the terrorist plot with him; you can’t find out what methods he had put in place; you can’t find out if there is an imminent threat planned that he may know about? But if a drone from the sky simply kills him, that knowledge perishes with him at that cafe and so undermines the legitimate efforts of our government to protect the safety and security of Americans.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I think it is an excellent question and really gets to the root of the whole problem we are talking about because we are talking about people who may not all be good people; people and they may be plotting to do something bad to America, and they may be in a cafe. So there may be all kinds of reasons to arrest and punish them, but there may be all kinds of reasons to try to get more information from them. Particularly if they are not involved in combat, it is hard to imagine why you would want to kill them. If they are not involved in combat, why not capture them and try to get some useful information?

So it is a little bit difficult to understand why the President wouldn’t say what is obvious: Why would we want to kill noncombatants in America?

The reason we keep asking the question is if the drone strikes overseas, if we are not privy to all of the details because some of it is classified. But the details that have been in the press are that a lot of these people being killed overseas are not in combat.

So the real question is, If you are going to take this drone strike overseas and it has no geographic limitations, and you are bringing it home to America, does the President not think it is incumbent upon him to say: Well, yes, we are bringing it home, but we are not going to kill noncombatants?

What an important question. I think the Senator has phrased it appropriately and I would anticipate or respect any other response he would like to give.

Mr. CRUZ. One final question for the Senator from Kentucky.

I am aware the Senator from Kentucky is originally from the great State of Texas. As the Senator is no doubt aware, today is the 177th anniversary of the fall of the Alamo.

One hundred eighty-two men were stationed at the Alamo, and after 13 days of a bitter siege, fighting an army of thousands, those patriots gave their lives for freedom. They put everything on the line to stand against tyranny and to stand for the fundamental right of every man and woman to breathe freely, to control our own lives, our own autonomy, to make decisions about what our future would be.

If I may presume to speak on behalf of 26 million Texans, I would say I have no doubt that Texans are proud to see the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, as a native-born Texan, fighting so valiantly and serving as such a clarion voice for liberty at a time when sometimes liberty has few champions.

Indeed, I would suggest if those brave patriots of the Alamo were here, William Barrett Travis and Davy Crockett and Jim Bowie and each of the others who gave their lives for freedom, they would be standing side by side with the Senator and would be proud to call him brother.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I would like to say that I appreciate the remarks of the Senator from Texas. If the filibuster goes on long enough, we will be able to hear a few words from William Barrett Travis’s last words at the Alamo. We had to memorize that as a kid, and I am afraid my memory has gone a little dusty. But the Senator is younger and may remember that for us.

The issue at hand is an issue that goes beyond party politics. It goes beyond nominations. It goes beyond the President is a Democrat and I am a Republican. I voted for three of the President’s nominations, much to the chagrin of much of the press are that a lot of these people being killed overseas are not in combat.

So the real question is, If you are going to take this drone strike overseas and it has no geographic limitations, and you are bringing it home to America, does the President not think it is incumbent upon him to say: Well, yes, we are bringing it home, but we are not going to kill noncombatants?

What an important question. I think the Senator has phrased it appropriately and I would anticipate or respect any other response he would like to give.

Mr. CRUZ. One final question for the Senator from Kentucky.

I am aware the Senator from Kentucky is originally from the great State of Texas. As the Senator is no doubt aware, today is the 177th anniversary of the fall of the Alamo.

One hundred eighty-two men were stationed at the Alamo, and after 13 days of a bitter siege, fighting an army of thousands, those patriots gave their lives for freedom. comes up, of people not involved in combat, is that a lot of the people who have been the victims or have been killed by these drone strikes were not involved in combat when they were killed. They were riding in cars, walking down the street, traveling in caravans, or doing things that little children do. I am just saying, regarding the standard for whom we kill overseas, we have to ask the question, and I don’t think we are doing our job if we do not ask the President: Are you going to use the same standards to kill a child overseas than you would to kill a child in Kentucky?

My question is, Does that glorious letter give you encouragement and sustenance as he stands and fights for liberty, of patriotism and courage to come to our aid, with all dispatch. It is my view that the letter at the Alamo talks about is that there are things bigger than the individual. At the time he wrote that, I don’t think they had much hope of surviving, and he died at the Alamo, as well as other volunteers, some from my State of Kentucky. But there was an issue bigger to them at the time, that they saw as bigger than the issue of the individual. I think that is what this debate is about.

This is not really about the person of John Brennan. It really is not about the person of Barack Obama. This is about the body of the Constitution, it is about our respect for it, and it is about whether we will hold these principles so dear and we will hold these principles to the point where we are willing to try to enjoin a debate, to try to get both sides to talk about this and to try to admit it, because we don’t want innocent people to be killed in America. We want to have the process that has protected our freedoms for a couple of hundred years, that has remained intact, and we are unwilling to diminish that simply because of fear.

PDR said, “There is nothing to fear but fear itself.” I think we should also say that we should not let fear be so great that we allow the loss of our freedoms. I think that is where we are, that sometimes terrorists are everywhere and they are trying to attack us, but we need to remember that it is our freedom that is precious, and we need to try to do everything we can to uphold that.

At this time, I would entertain a question, without yielding the floor, from the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. Wyden. Mr. President, the issue of American security and American freedom really does not get enough discussion here in the Senate. It is my view that the letter at the Alamo has made a number of important points this day, and I would like to make a few minutes to lay out my views on this issue and then pose a question to my colleague from Kentucky. We have talked often about these issues. I always learn a great deal.

Of course the Senate will be voting on the nomination of John Brennan, the Deputy National Security Adviser, to be the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. I voted in favor of Mr. Brennan during Tuesday’s Intelligence Committee meeting, and I intend to vote for Mr. Brennan on the floor. Virtually every member of the Intelligence Committee now, in my view, believes Mr. Brennan has substantial done to ensure that we understand fully the implications of what these heretofore secret opinions contain and we have a chance to discuss them as well.

In his capacity as Deputy National Security Adviser, John Brennan has served as the President’s top counterterrorism adviser and one of the administration’s chief spokesman regarding targeted killing and the use of drones. He would continue to play a decisive role as U.S. counterterrorism chief if he is confirmed as Director of the CIA, and the Intelligence Committee is charged with conducting vigilant oversight of these particular efforts.

A number of colleagues on the Senate Intelligence Committee of both political parties I think share a number of the views that Senator PAUL and a number on this side of the aisle have been expressing today and in the past few days. I would especially like to express my appreciation to the former chair of the Intelligence Committee, Senator ROCKEFELLER. There is no one more committed to the principles the CIA stands for. There is no individual more committed to the principles the CIA stands for than Senator ROCKEFELLER, and he believes the need to be explored. One question I will bring up to Senator PAUL involves the need to be explored. One question I will ask this question a number of times and that is the question he and I have been interested in for some time. I am glad the Senator from Kentucky has asked the question. We have now gotten an answer that is unequivocal from Mr. Brennan.

That brings us to the second response from Attorney General Holder. This letter repeated the statement that the U.S. Government has not carried out any drone strikes inside the United States and that administration has no intention of doing so. It goes on to say that the Obama administration “rejects the use of military force where well-established law enforcement authorities in this country provide the best means for incapacitating a terrorist threat.” I would certainly agree with this position. It is clear and forthright. I have been interested in this for some time, I am glad the Senator from Kentucky has asked the question. We have now gotten an answer that is unequivocal from Mr. Brennan.

The Attorney General went on to state:

It is possible . . . to imagine an extraordinary circumstance such as Pearl Harbor or the 911 attacks—in which it would be necessary and appropriate under the Constitution and . . . laws of the United States for the President to authorize the military to use lethal force within the territory of the United States.

This is what I wish to unpack a little bit with my colleague from Kentucky after asking this question a number of times and about what the answer ought to be. On this particular issue it seems to me the Attorney General has certainly moved in the direction of what we wanted to hear. I want to kind of outline it, and I think we agree on most of it, but I want to have a chance to exchange some thoughts.

One of the core principles of American democracy is that we do not ask our military to patrol our streets. It was important to me to hear the Attorney General emphasize that principle. I know there are some who believe the military ought to be given more domestic counterterror responsibilities and that we need to increase the number of terrorist suspects inside the country. I do not share that view, and I know the Senator from Kentucky does not share that view. I am grateful the Obama administration has now said they don’t support that of them—that view, as I have talked with a number of colleagues, I actually voted against the annual Defense authorization bill for the past 2 years because I was concerned that those two bills didn’t adequately address that particular principle.

The Attorney General suggested what I think we would all consider an unlikely scenario, the Pearl Harbor and 9/11 attacks, in which it would be lawful and appropriate for the President to authorize the military to protect the United States. As I read that statement—and this is the point of my question to my friend from Kentucky—it sounds a lot like the language that is in article 4 of the Constitution which directs the U.S. Government to protect the individual States from invasion. In my judgment, if the United States is being attacked by a foreign power, such as the 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor, the President can indeed have the military power to use the military to defend our country.

The reason I have been asking this question and have been interested in exploring it with my colleague from Kentucky is that I think it is extremely important to establish that unless we have an extraordinary situation, such as Pearl Harbor, the President should not go around ordering the military to use lethal force inside the United States. Our military—we are charged with the role in efforts to combat terrorism overseas, but here at home we rely on the FBI and other law enforcement agencies to track down the terrorists, and they do their job well.

I thought it was helpful to see the Attorney General, as part of what has been discussed here, clarify and establish that the President can only use military force inside the United States in extraordinary circumstances such as the Pearl Harbor attack. The Senator from Kentucky and I have had discussions over this, and I thought about it overnight and thought about our discussions. My sense is that the Senator from Kentucky doesn’t believe the Attorney General’s response was clear enough. I very much respect his view on this point.

One of the reasons why I wanted to walk briefly through a little bit of history is that I think there are some issues still to be debated. My colleague has certainly been correct in asking valid questions because the Attorney General has left open the possibility of using military force inside the United States.
States outside of the extraordinary Pearl Harbor circumstance I have mentioned.

So, through the Chair, I ask the Senator: I think the Senator is raising some important questions, and in fact, my friend has asked some of the most important questions that we could be asking here on the floor of the Senate. It seems to me the Attorney General has ruled out using military force inside the United States except in cases of an actual attack by a foreign power. I understand why my colleague from Kentucky would say we ought to be engaging more with the administration and asking for additional insight. I want it understood that I have great respect for his effort to ask these kinds of questions and force them to be debated on the floor. Senator Paul has certainly been digging into these issues in great detail. Frankly, on the question of how we balance American security and American liberty, we have worked together, and we are certainly going to be working together in the future on these issues in the days ahead.

I wish to allow the Senator from Kentucky to respond to my question. I ask that my friend recognize that while we are a bit on a part respect of the Attorney General’s response which I have cited this afternoon where there would be an instance of an extraordinary threat to our country, I do see—as almost part of what article 4 is about—that the President’s ability to defend us in those kinds of situations. I know my colleague from Kentucky may see it differently, and, frankly, he is raising important issues. I am interested in his thoughts on that this afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Brown). The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Oregon for coming to the floor and being a champion for the Bill of Rights, and a lot of grief in Washington about a lack of civility—people yelling and screaming at each other. In my dealings with Senator Wyden—who is on the other side of the aisle—I think it is evident that people can be from different perspectives, find common ground, and try to get to a point which is not a partisan point. I have tried to make it not so much about red as it is about principles. I voted for two or three of the President’s nominations, and I think he deserves some latitude with his political nominees. I think the Senator from Oregon said it well when he said we have use of authorization of force in Afghanistan. Most people think that was going toward Afghanistan. It has been so broadly interpreted that it means worldwide war basically forever, and that is sort of why we get into some of these problems. Not only is it worldwide, which is a big debate in and of itself, worldwide means at home too. The battlefield is here.

I agree with the Senator from Oregon that Brennan was very forthright. It was a little bit onerous getting the response, but once we got the response, it was exactly what was appropriate. He said he would obey the law, and the law was very clear: The CIA does not operate in the United States. The problem is not with his response but that the Department of Defense is the one directing the drone programs and it doesn’t answer the final question. As far as Holder’s response, if it would have been written as the Senator from Oregon from the Defense Department, it wouldn’t have been a problem.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. RUBIO. I thank my colleague for the opportunity. Let me begin by—I have been here a while. Let me give my colleague some free advice: Keep some water nearby. It is handy. Trust me.

Anyway, I thank the Senator for entertaining my question. Let me just begin by saying my question is about the motivation for being here on the floor today. What brought me here is I have been reading some of the accounts of what is going on and people are talking about the involvement of the Senator from Kentucky in a filibuster and some are already characterizing it as another Republican filibuster of one of the President’s nominees. Just to be clear, because, as I understand, the only thing I have heard the Senator from Kentucky say leading up to now about the primary issue in coming to the floor today is that the Senator from Kentucky straightforwardly asked a question on an issue of constitutional importance. Yet he has not received a straightforward answer. Not only has the Senator from Kentucky not received an answer, but we saw on the Floor earlier this morning that quite frankly—I watched the video two or three times and I personally do not understand why it was so difficult to basically just say yes or no.

So I wish to start out by asking, just to be clear, the motivation to be on the floor today is not to deny the President a vote on one of his nominees but the motivation is that the Senator from Kentucky has asked this administration a very important and relevant question and has been unable to receive a straightforward answer to that question.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, my response to that is yes. In fact, I have actually voted for several of the President’s nominations. My trying to draw attention to this issue is because I believe it is an incredibly fundamental issue and that is, how we would kill people—and I believe, as did the American people, whether the Constitution applies, the fifth amendment applies.

My motivation in doing this is not partisan. It is something that has to do—and I have said, frankly—and I truly mean this—if it were a Republican President today I would still be in the same place because the American people deserve answers on this.

There are different rules in war than there are in the court. I need to ask a question of the floor and separate ourselves and say we are not completely—we are not in the middle of a battle zone. We still do have Miranda rights and we still get an attorney in the United States. It is not the same as a battlefield, but if he is bringing battlefield strategy home, we need to know before he starts doing it and at least we need to know the rules. Does the Constitution apply?

I would entertain a further question from the Senator from Florida without yielding the floor.

Mr. RUBIO. Without yielding the floor, the followup question I have—because I think this is actually a very useful exercise for the folks who have been snowed in today and there is nothing better to watch than C-SPAN and for the people who are able to be here today to actually understand the structure of our government and how it was designed, with constitutional opinion we have gotten away from some of that.

Let me describe for a second my position that leads up to the question I am going to ask a member of the Intelligence Committee, which means we reviewed this nomination. I have questions that I care about that were somewhat different than the valid ones the Senator from Kentucky is raising. As a member of that committee, I asked those questions and I am going to seek answers to those questions.

We have a job to do. I think that is important for people to understand. Members of the Senate have an important constitutional duty and responsibility to ask questions and consent on these nominations. We have an obligation not just to pass these folks through but to actually ask serious questions to determine if they are qualified for the position they are going to be doing. We want the Secretaries to be doing that in both parties, no matter who the President may be.

So I undertook that effort as far as the Intelligence Committee. I asked my questions. I got answers to my questions. The nominee is qualified and I believe the President has a right to his nominee, even if they are not the people we would nominate. I believe ultimately these nominees deserve a vote. That is why I voted yesterday to move this nomination on. Just as the President has a right to his nominations and ultimately to have a vote on those nominations, so, too, do Members of the Senate have a right to ask questions. There can be no liberty when you combine the executive and the legislative, and it is about how we limit usurpation of power by checking and balancing each of the different powers.

So when Montesquieu wrote that there can be no liberty when you combine the executive and the legislative, they were separated for a reason. When the Constitution says Congress declares war not the President, it was separated for a reason. So when we look forward to these things—and the Senator from Kansas brought this up earlier—when the President says, I have the ability to determine when you are in session or not and I can do recess appointments when I think you are out of session or not and I can do recess appointments when I think you are out of session, that is a great usurpation of power to one branch and we should fight it as an institution, Republican and Democrat, and not make these partisan issues.

So I agree with the Senator from Florida. I believe there is a need for those checks and balances. By the body not struggling to get as much information as they can—not even in this case as much about the individual as about the policy—then I think it is a mistake for the body not to. I agree with the Senator from Florida, and I think it is about how one feels about the nomination or where the Senator thinks the program or where the Senator believes the President is going to bring us. At the time I yield, without yielding the floor, for another question.

Mr. RUBIO. This will probably be my last question. Before I get to it, let me say that all the other Senators—I know some of my colleagues have already come to the floor and some might be watching some might be nearby. I would just say this, to think about this institution. It is a defense of the legislative branch. It is a defense of the Senate as an institution. Irrespective of how one feels about the nomination or the program or where the Senator falls on this constitutional issue, it is a defense of this institution, and it is a defense of our constitutional right, a constitutional obligation to ask relevant questions of public policy and to get answers, to ask questions so the people back home will know the answers to these questions. If we are not going to ask questions of who is going to ask them? The press? Maybe in a press conference, but that is not what they are paid to do; that is what we are paid to do. That is what we were elected to do.

So I would like to hear the Senator’s views on that, because my belief and what I am picking up from everything Senator PAUL is saying, the Senator from Florida has it exactly right. This is about checks and balances and it is about how we limit the power of government, and it is about how we limit usurpation of power by checking and balancing each of the different powers.

So when Montesquieu wrote that there can be no liberty when you combine the executive and the legislative, they were separated for a reason. When the Constitution says Congress declares war not the President, it was separated for a reason. So when we look forward to these things—and the Senator from Kansas brought this up earlier—when the President says, I have the ability to determine when you are in session or not and I can do recess appointments when I think you are out of session, that is a great usurpation of power to one branch and we should fight it as an institution, Republican and Democrat, and not make these partisan issues.

So I agree with the Senator from Florida. I believe there is a need for those checks and balances. By the body not struggling to get as much information as they can—not even in this case as much about the individual as about the policy—then I think it is a mistake for the body not to. I agree with the Senator from Florida and I think it is about how one feels about the nomination or the program. At the time I yield, without yielding the floor, for another question.
for a moment. One may or may not agree with the position of the Senator from Kentucky on this issue. Maybe a Senator saw the Attorney General’s answer and saw his testimony this morning and that Senator is satisfied with the answer. Senator Paul, The answer to the question is that we have tried the normal channels and have been for a month. We sent the standard letters. We sent three different letters to John Brennan and we didn’t get any response. But when the leverage became apparent that both Republicans and Democrats on the Intelligence Committee were asking for more answers, then we finally began to get answers. The answers unfortunately didn’t quite answer the question.

As the days wore on, we have actually gotten more answers. Since I have been standing here this morning, we have now gotten the report of the Attorney General’s testimony before the Judiciary Committee and under withering cross-examination, I guess is the best way to put it, he finally owns up and says: Well, maybe somebody in a cafe, it wouldn’t be appropriate to kill them in America.

The Senator from Texas wanted to go one step further. We don’t want you to say whether you think you have the power to do it, whether you think you have the constitutional authority to kill a noncombatant in a restaurant or in their house or in their church or wherever. Do you think you have the power to kill noncombatants? It is a pretty important question. I think we may have eeked out some of the answer from Attorney General Holder.

It would be nice if we would actually get that in clean language, where the Attorney General would now say this is our policy. But, see, this comes from the “world-as-a-battlefield” theory which gives the executive branch so much power. If you allow them the power to make the rules, to make the decisions without any kind of oversight or scrutiny, the danger is that there will be no process. So the thing is right now we have a program going on where we kill people around the world with drone strikes, and there are criteria and standards for how we do it.

The obvious question is: You are going to do that in America? Under what circumstances? At least the allegations, we have had some who have said the bulk of the drone strikes around the world have been signature killings, which means the people are not identified who are being killed, that it is a long line of traffic and we blow up where we think you might be with your friends. Now, we can debate whether in war we may have a looser criteria for whom we are blowing up, but I would think that in America we would not blow up a caravan going from a wedding to a funeral, from a church to a house, from a political meeting back to their home. We would have different rules in America. If you are accused of a crime, if they think you are somehow a terrorist, then they would arrest you, particularly if you are in a noncombat opportunity. Why in the world would the President take the position that if you are eating in a cafeteria, you are eating in a restaurant and you are asleep, that you could not be arrested?

So it is a real easy question, and the President should, very frankly, answer the question: I will not kill noncombatants in America. I cannot imagine why this President cannot answer an easy question.

There have been people on both the right and the left who have been asking these questions. Glenn Greenwald writes a lot about this issue. This is a pretty interesting proposition that he puts forward. He says:

If you posit that the entire world is a “battlefield,” then you’re authorizing him to do anything in the world what he can do on a battlefield.

That has been my point. If the United States is the battlefield, and we are going to have the laws of war—or another way it can be put is martial law—in America, if we are going to have that in America, you need to know about it because martial law—living under martial law—is the way they live in Egypt. That is why they just had a rebellion in Egypt and overthrow Mubarak. Because they had, by martial law, indefinite detention.

So those who say the battlefield is here, we need to live under the laws of war in our country—and they tell you to shut up if you want an attorney—by golly, be careful about that. Be quite careful if you are going to let us go to that sense.

So Greenwald says:

If you posit that the entire world is a “battlefield,” then you’re authorizing him to do anywhere in the world what he can do on a battlefield: kill, imprison, eavesdrop, detain—all without limits or oversight or accountability. That’s why “the-world-is-a-battlefield” theory was so radical and alarming (not to mention controversial). . . .

He also quotes from Esquire, from Charles Pierce, who said:

This is why the argument many liberals are making—that the drone program is acceptable both morally and as a matter of practical politics because of the faith you have in the guy who happens to be presiding over it at the moment. So you will remember, many of these people did not like George Bush, and they railed and railed about wiretaps, and now they are suspiciously quiet when we get to a killing program.

But he says: If you have so much confidence because you like the guy, the President in charge of this—he says—that “is criminally naïve, intellectually empty, and as false as blue money to the future.”

He goes on to say:

The powers we have allowed to leach away from their constitutional points of origin into that office have created in the presidency a foul strain of outlawry that (worse) is seen as the proper order of things. If that is the case—

And the author says he believes it is—then the very nature of the presidency of the United States at its core has become the vehicle for permanently unlawful behavior.

This is coming from a liberal.

Every four years, we elect a new criminal because that’s what the convince job description.

So we have to ask some important questions. I am not asking any questions about the President’s motives. I do not question his motives. I, frankly, do not think he is killing people in restaurants tonight or in their house tonight. But this is about the rule of law. It is not so much about him. It is not so much about John Brennan. It is about having rules so that someday, if we do have the misfortune of electing someone who you do not trust—electing someone who might kill innocent people or who might kill people whom they disagree with politically or they might kill people whom they disagree with the President or might kill people of another ethnic group—we are protected. That is what these protections are about. But they are not so much about the individuals involved now.

But there is a program that is going on around the world that is killing individuals with drones, and it is done in a warlike fashion. The thing is, in war you do not get due process. So these people around the world do not get Miranda rights, and I am not arguing for that. If you have a gun leveled at an American in Afghanistan, you are going to be killed with no due process. I am not arguing for that. But I am arguing it is different if you are in Afghanistan with a weapon at us or here pointing a weapon at us. It is different if you are eating dinner or if you are in your home at night.

So I think there are clear and distinct differences, and there is no excuse for the President not giving us a clear-cut answer.

There is a writer by the name of Conor Friedersdorf who writes for The Atlantic. I will get into that in just a minute.

At this time, I would like to, without yielding the floor, stop for a question from the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. I thank the Senator from Kentucky.

First of all, let me say, I appreciate the Senator’s passion. I appreciate the fact that, as he knows—and he and I have had some discussions about this issue over the last several days and weeks—the Senator is bringing this to the floor. What has done. We have talked about the Senator’s question that he submitted to Mr. Brennan for answering. This is not a rocket science question. This is a question that is perfectly reasonable, perfectly straightforward. It is an answer that ought to be able to be addressed by the administration in a very quick, simple, direct response. I have been dumb-founded, as the Senator from Kentucky knows, about the fact that he did not get a straightforward, simple answer immediately.

But the fact of whether a drone attack—and I am one of those who thinks we need to detain and interrogate folks as opposed to just firing drones at everybody because we are losing a lot of valuable information from folks whom we take shots at versus folks whom we are able to detain and interrogate—but the fact of whether a drone attack is carried out.

The Senator’s position, as I understand it, is that the drone program is not clear and straightforward. It answers have not all been good. Brennan has answered, with the appropriate answer: The CIA does not work in America. That is very evasive on the question, in spite of having given the Senator a letter just yesterday on this issue—that there still is not a straightforward, black-or-white, as it appears to me they could give you, answer to this question; am I correct about that?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia is correct. I also, while he is on the floor, want to thank him for his interest in the administration informing us to come forward. Because it has been a very onerous task, and without his leadership on the Intelligence Committee, as well as Republicans and Democrats asking for more information, we might not have gotten anywhere. With that input, we have been able to get some answers.

The answers have not all been good. Brennan has answered, with the appropriate answer: The CIA does not work in America. We have had a root canal and more difficult than having a root canal.

I again am appreciative of the Senator being forceful in asking the question, and I think at the end of the day, again, he has had no issue relative to ultimately having a vote on Mr. Brennan.

I am not supportive of the nomination of Mr. Brennan, but I think he ought to have a vote, and I intend to express myself in much greater detail on it a little later. But from the standpoint of simply moving the issue forward, if the administration had come to the Senator with a direct answer days or weeks ago, when he asked the question, we probably would not be here now.

Again, I thank the Senator for his comments on this issue.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I wish to thank the ranking member of the Intelligence Committee and also say this could come to a close anytime if the President will sort this out. Mr. Brennan, the Attorney General Holder was trying to say this morning, and put it into actual words, that he thinks he has the military authority to reject imminent attack. I think we all agree to that. But if he says he is not going to use drones on people who are not engaged in combat in America, I think we could be done with this debate—I think one phone call from the President to clarify what his position is or from the Attorney General to actually write out what his position is or cannot stop to even ask permission from Congress. You do that. Imminent threats are repulsed.

But because of all the drone attacks—and I am not saying they are necessarily wrong the way they are done—it is just that they are done at people who are not in the middle of a battle. So if we transfer that to America, I do not think that is acceptable for America.

It is a different debate on whether it is always a good idea, whether we should do it, what the rules should be overseas. But the rules we have currently I do not think are appropriate for the United States.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Again, Mr. President, if I could direct a question to the Senator: The fact is that from a pure oversight standpoint—Armed Services, Intel—these committees that have jurisdiction over the issue of fighting the war on terrorism need to have the right kind of information so we can ask the right questions. Getting the right kind of information out of this administration has been worse than having a root canal and more difficult than having a root canal.

I again am appreciative of the Senator being forceful in asking the question, and I think at the end of the day, again, he has had no issue relative to ultimately having a vote on Mr. Brennan.

I am not supportive of the nomination of Mr. Brennan, but I think he ought to have a vote, and I intend to express myself in much greater detail on it a little later. But from the standpoint of simply moving the issue forward, if the administration had come to the Senator with a direct answer days or weeks ago, when he asked the question, we probably would not be here now.

Again, I thank the Senator for his comments on this issue.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I wish to thank the ranking member of the Intelligence Committee and also say this could come to a close anytime if the President will sort this out. Mr. Brennan, the Attorney General Holder was trying to say this morning, and put it into actual words, that he thinks he has the military authority to reject imminent attack. branch will decide when and if to use the fifth amendment.

I understand in times of war and on battlefields that is a different story. I am talking about in the United States. I do not think the executive branch gets an option of whether to adhere to the fifth amendment in the United States. But if they could be more clear on that, I think we could be done with this debate at any time.

I have a request to a vote on Brennan, on the nominee for the CIA. But I have objected to the idea that basically we are just going to throw out the baby with the bathwater and the Bill of Rights becomes something of lesser importance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, would my friend yield without losing for the floor for unanimous consent request?

Mr. PAUL. Without yielding the floor, I would be happy to yield.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 43; that the cloture motion at the desk be reported; that the mandatory quorum under rule XXII be waived; that there be 90 minutes for debate, with 30 minutes under the control of the chair and 1 hour under the control of the vice-chair of the Intelligence Committee, with the balance of the vice-chair’s time under the control of Senator PAUL; that following the use or yielding back of that time on the nomination, the Senate proceed to vote on the cloture motion; that if cloture is invoked, the Senate proceed to vote on the cloture motion; that if cloture is invoked, the Senate proceed to vote on the consideration of Calendar No. 43; and 30 minutes under the control of Senator FEINSTEIN or their designee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the majority leader’s consent request?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I would simply say, if there is objection, we will come back tomorrow.

Mr. PAUL. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me, if I may, direct a question to the majority leader through the Chair. As I understand what the Senator is asking, for 90 more minutes—30 minutes to Senator FEINSTEIN and 30 minutes for me, and Senator PAUL would have 30 minutes— it would be right now, basically?

Mr. REID. Yes, CIA.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Continuing to reserve the right to object, I guess, then, I would direct a question to the Senator from Kentucky since he has the floor. What amount of time does the Senator from Kentucky think he may utilize? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I would be happy with a vote now. I have talked a lot today. But the only thing I would like is a clarification. If the President or the Attorney General will clarify that they are not going to kill noncombatants in America—he essentially almost said that this morning.

He could—and, remarks, that he virtually agreed ultimately with Senator CRUZ, and put it in a coherent statement that says the drone program will not kill Americans who are not involved in combat. I think he probably agrees to that. I do not understand why we could not put that into words. But if he does, I want no more time. If not, I will continue to object. If the administration and the Attorney General will not provide an accurate answer, I object.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I am not in a position to talk for the Attorney General. We will just finish this matter tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, everyone should plan on coming tomorrow. We are through for the night.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, at this time, without yielding the floor, I would like to entertain a question from the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. TOOMEY. Mr. President, I want to thank the Senator from Kentucky for raising a very important issue. I would just like to have a little bit of clarification so that I understand exactly what has transpired and the exact question to which the Senator from Kentucky would like a response.

My misunderstanding is, this seems like a very simple and basic request. So I am surprised that we did not have a simple and straightforward answer. So I wonder if the Senator from Kentucky would just summarize briefly for me, so that I understand clearly the exact request that he made to the administration.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, in late January we sent a letter to John Brennan, the nominee for the CIA, asking a bunch of questions. Included among those was whether you kill an American in America with a drone strike? We got no response and no response and no response.

Thanks to the intervention of the ranking member on the Intelligence Committee, as well as members from the opposite aisle on the Intelligence Committee, we finally got an answer about 2 days ago. The answer from John Brennan was that he acknowledged that the CIA cannot act in the United States. That is the law. That was nice. But the Attorney General responded and said they do not intend to. They have not yet, but they might.

Mr. TOOMEY. Am I correct in understanding that that is currently the state of play? That is the most recent response the Senator has gotten in writing from the administration?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, that is the only direct response I have gotten. I have also read the testimony from the Judiciary Committee where the Senator from Texas cross-examined the Attorney General, who responded indirectly to my question by saying: It was inappropriate, we probably would not do that.

But he would not answer directly whether it was unconstitutional. It appears at the end that he may have said that it would be unconstitutional, say, to kill noncombatants.

We should have a pretty simple answer really. That is all I am asking. I can be done anytime if I could just get a response from the administration or the Attorney General saying they do not believe they have the authority to kill noncombatants in America.

Mr. TOOMEY. Further clarification: If the administration seems to be unwilling to state unequivocally that they recognize they do not have the legal authority to kill a noncombatant American on American soil, did they suggest under what circumstances they would?

Did they suggest a process by which they would identify an American citizen noncombatant on American soil who might be subject to being killed by a drone strike?

Mr. PAUL. Well, there has been a white paper that was released that goes through a series of things. They do have a step or a process they go through in determining whom to kill. The problem I have is that in foreign countries—I do not know the exact number because it is classified, but in foreign countries many of the people being killed are not actively engaged in terrorism.

I am not saying that is right or wrong or making an opinion on that matter. But I am saying that is not a standard I can live with in the United States. So let’s say one-third of the drone strikes are going against people who are eating dinner with their family or walking down the road or sleeping in their house. If that is our standard and we are going to do drone strikes in America, I could not tolerate or live with myself if I would accept a standard in the United States that would allow that to happen.

Mr. TOOMEY. Mr. President, judging from the response, what I understand is... that there is a standard that applies overseas. But we have not gotten—correct me if I am mistaken—a definitive word as to whether that same standard would apply domestically to American citizens. If we have not gotten a definitive answer, then we still seem to me—again, correct me if I am wrong—but then it would suggest to me that we have no idea what standard would be used. I cannot imagine that we would find it acceptable to be in a situation where an administration would suggest that using a drone to kill an American noncombatant on American soil, without even disclosing the process by which they would determine that was appropriate—this is kind of hard to understand. Am I understanding it incorrectly?

Mr. PAUL. Well, the interesting thing about this is for many years, no one would talk about the drone strike program at all. Then, recently, one of the former spokespersons for the President was instructed to say it existed. But now that it is in the open, the President, a week ago, was asked at Google when he was there for an interview: Can you do this?

His answer: Well, you know, the rules would be the same.

That implies he thinks he can do it in America. Then the question becomes, What are those rules? This is as much about the checks and balances of—you know, is there the ability to advise and consent. This is some friendly advice I am giving to the President today that he ought to think about or we should think about as a body whether we are a check and balance to the power of the Executive, whether it is Republican or Democratic.

I think it is immaterial. No President should have the power to make these decisions unilaterally.

Mr. TOOMEY. Mr. President, I will finish. I just want to make two points: One is I think we ought to have a robust debate about the circumstances under which we would use drone strikes overseas and understand the implications. Think about this. We have what is still, to the United States, a relatively new threat in the form of noncombatants on American soil, with whom we are eating dinner; that, really, if you want to say that you can use drones in America to strike people, not only would it have to be remarkably different, it could not be anything like the way we use drones around the globe, which brings up some other important questions.

The thing that has brought us to a much bigger and important debate. When people tell you that America is a battlefield, when they tell you the battlefield is here, realize what they are telling you. They are telling you your Bill of Rights do not apply because in the battlefield, you really do not have due process. I am not arguing for that. I am not arguing for some kind of silly rules for soldiers to ask for Miranda rights and do all this. War is war. War is hell. But there is no perpetual war. We cannot have war that has no temporal limits. We cannot then have war that is part of our daily life in our country; that we are going to say from now on in our country, you do not have the protections of the Bill of Rights.

So I think it is incredibly important. We have been kind of blase about this whole drone strike program. It should come home to where we can really think about it. That is what they are asking to do. They are asking to bring the drone strikes to the homeland.

So I think we need to be careful. We need to ask important questions. I think at the very least we need to be asking the question: Can you do this with no due process? Are we not going to have an accusation? Are we not going to have a public accusation or charge? Are we not going to have a trial by jury?

I started out today reading from “Alice in Wonderland.” I would like to go back to “Alice in Wonderland,” because it sort of points out the absurdity of where we are at this point. I think of Lewis Carroll as being fiction. Of course it is fiction. We think Alice never fell down a rabbit hole. Of course she didn’t. She is not real. The white queen and her caustic judgments are not really a threat to us. But there is a question: Has America the beautiful become Alice’s Wonderland? We can hear the queen saying: No. No. But her response is, Sentence first, verdict afterwards.

Well, that is absurd. How could we sentence someone without determining first whether they are guilty or innocent? Only in Alice’s Wonderland would you sentence someone before you try them. Would you sentence someone to death before you accuse them? Do we really live in Alice’s Wonderland? Is there no one willing to stand up and say to the President: For goodness’ sake, you can’t sentence people before you try them. You can’t sentence people before you determine whether they are guilty.

There has been discussion in our country about whether even the courts can sometimes make mistakes. Some states have gotten rid of the death penalty because they have made mistakes and through DNA testing they have found that sometimes they convicted the wrong person. Can you imagine, with all the checks and balances of our system—which I think is the best in the entire world, with attorneys on both sides whether you can afford them or not. There is an argument back and forth, and there are all of these procedural protections, and you may appeal, and still sometimes we get it wrong.

If we can get it wrong in the best system in the world, do you think one politician might get it wrong? You will never know because nobody is told who is going to be killed. It is a secret list. Has he done this? How do you protest? How do you say: I am innocent. How do you say: Yes, I e-mail with my cousin who lives in the Middle East, and I didn’t know he was involved in that. Do you not get a chance to explain yourself in a court of law before you get a Hellfire missile dropped on your head?

It amazes me that people are so willing and eager to throw out the Bill of Rights and just say: Oh, that is fine. Terrorists are a big threat to us, and I am so fearful that they will attack me that I am willing to give up my rights. I am willing to give up on the Bill of Rights.

I think we give up too easily.

The President has responded, and he said he hasn’t tried anybody yet in America. He says he doesn’t intend to kill anyone in America, but he might. I, frankly, just don’t think that is good enough.

The President’s oath of office says “I will...” not “I might” or “I intend to,” the President says “I will protect, preserve, and defend the Constitution.” He doesn’t say “I will do it when it is practical” or “I will do it unless it is infeasible, unless it is unpleasant, people argue with me. I have to go through Congress, and I can’t get anything done, then I won’t obey the Constitution.” It is out there. It is a rule. He doesn’t have to choose.

Recently he made some choices where it appears as if he believes he does have some sort of superpower, some power that sort of exceeds the other branches of government. Recently he made some choices where it appears as if he decides when he is in recess, he decides when we are working. The court rebuked him. The court told him it is unconstitutional, and they reversed his decision. Do you know the people he appointed through a recess—do you know what they are doing right now? They are still at their post. They are still working in defiance of the court. This will have to go to the Supreme Court. I guess it will take another year or so to go up there, but he has been doing this so often on the other side of the aisle because, frankly, many on the left and some on the right—we truly do believe in civil liberties and in protecting the individual. I think the President was one of those when he was in the Senate.

The President, when he ran for office, often talked about, it isn’t American to torture people. I agree with him. He said it isn’t American to give up the right to privacy, to say you don’t need a warrant to tap someone’s phone. I agreed with him, and I respected that about him. I can’t for the life of me understand how he goes from that kind of belief where he believes so much in the constitutional protections to your phone, to being willing to give up the right to the constitutional protection to your life? It doesn’t make any sense at all. And if he does, why won’t he say it?

I have my own sort of theory on this, and this applies both to Republicans and Democrats. My theory is that it is sort of a contagion, it is sort of an infection that you get when occupying the Oval Office. They think, oh, I am a good person, so more power for me would be a good thing.

LBJ once said that power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely. There is a danger when someone has so much power that they think more power, more power and more power—I will do good with that power. The problem is that even if that is a good person, someday someone occupying that office may not be a good person. Someday you may get someone in the Oval Office who says: What about those people? They look different. What about those people? They have a different color ideology than I have. What about those people?

The danger is also that we have already defined some of the people who we think might be terrorists. The Bureau of Justice came out with a list of characteristics, and they said: If you see this, report on it. If you see this, tell someone. They want you to inform on your neighbors. They want you to know to which one of your neighbors is a terrorist. They gave you some descriptions of people to be worried about. They said people missing fingers, people with colored stains on their clothes, people who have weaponized their clothing, people who have multiple guns, people who like to use cash. If that is the criteria or the criterion for who is a terrorist, I would be a little bit worried if you are one of those people—you might have a drone attack in your bed tonight.

This has gone on in more than one place. The fusion centers they developed were supposed to be a liaison between the Federal Government and the local government. In these fusion centers, for example, in Missouri, they also came up with some characteristics of people who might be terrorists. They actually send it out as a memo to all the police officers. Can you imagine if you are a neighbor of the people on this list, people who are pro-life, people who are for secure borders, people who support third-party candidates? The big irony of all is who people belong to the Constitutional Party. If you believe in the Constitution too much, you might be a terrorist. They misidentify, and they eventually apologized. Now they don’t—they try not to have their memos become public, I think.

The point is, if this is what we are getting to and this is the criterion for who is a terrorist, you would think—you really would think you would be worried about giving your President the authority to kill Americans on American soil without any kind of due process. I find it quite alarming.

I think the President could have given a pretty simple response that I think shows absolutely no regard for individual rights or for Americans. He said: Well, if you are a male who is 16 and over, we have a list of people who are a potential combatant. They might be the son of a bad person, is that enough to kill you?

We have a lot of bad people. If you happen to be the son of a bad person, is that enough to kill you?

The other thing is that people killed overseas who are not the target—they don’t call them civilians because they say anybody between the age of 16 and 50 who is a male is a potential combatant. Are we going to use that same standard here in our country? Are we going to use the standard in our country that if you just happen to be a male and you happen to be standing near somebody we have judged to be a problem, that we are going to go ahead and, oh, I guess that is not even collateral damage; that person was probably a bad person because he was standing close to this person?

I think there are different standards for war that are within our country. It is not always going to be perfect, and there is a legitimate debate over what the rules should be in a war, where a war is overseas, and exactly what happens. I think good, honest people can disagree on some of that. What I worry about are the people who say America is a battlefield because when they say America is a battlefield, they are reversing the laws of war to apply here. The reverse of that is logically, if you reverse the laws of war, they are talking about martial law, is what they are talking about, law that is acceptable under extreme circumstances.

I don’t think what we have in our country right now is a circumstance where I would accept martial law, but we have already instituted some of the things you will see in other countries under martial law. In Egypt, they have indefinite detention. That is their emergency decree that occurred back in the 1970s, and it went on and on to the present. They have martial law, and they are very unhappy about having martial law, indefinite detention. You have to ask. We have indefinite detention in America.

The President’s response again was inadequate. What did the President say to having indefinite detention in our country? He said: Well, I don’t intend to use it. Rather have a President who has the chutzpa to not sign the legislation and send it back and say: Take it out or I won’t sign it. I would have a lot of respect for someone like that.

Mr. President, without yielding the floor, I would be happy to entertain a question from the Senator from Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BLUMENTHAL). The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I wanted to come to the floor to pose a few questions to my colleague from Kentucky. First, I would say that I admire his fortitude and his willingness to ask appropriate and reasonable questions of the administration on a matter of grave concern. This is a matter more important than our constitutional government itself that does not give sole power to the administration to make these decisions but recognizes that the Congress is a coequal branch of government. Indeed, we have important oversight responsibilities in the Department of Justice, the Department of Defense, and there isn’t a more delicate and important matter than the limitations placed on the government when it comes to dealing with our own citizens.

I would like to ask the Senator from Kentucky whether he is aware of some of these issues.

First of all, shortly after President Obama took office, the Holder Justice Department declassified and released detailed, previously top-secret legal memos attempting to explain the legal rationale for the enhanced interrogation program the Central Intelligence Agency used during the Bush administration. I would rather have a President who has the Office of Legal Counsel at the Department of Justice, which is frequently called the lawyer for the executive branch, which issues those authoritative memos. President Obama, Eric Holder presumably decided that they would release those previously classified memos that explained the legal rationale for the enhanced interrogation program.

I would further ask the Senator if he recalls that when the Obama administration made these legal memos—highly classified legal memos—public documents, does he remember the then Attorney General’s statement the next day? In fact, he said: We are disclosing these memos consistent with our commitment to the rule of law. Yet today, that same Justice Department refuses to release to Members of Congress—including this Senator, the Senator from Kentucky, and other Members who have oversight responsibilities—the very same legal rationale in this case for the drone strikes the Senator from Kentucky is talking about.

So I wanted to ask, first of all, of the Senator from Kentucky whether he believes I have accurately recited the facts, but then to ask him whether he sees a double standard here on the part of the Obama-Holder Justice Department where on one hand they release these highly classified legal Office of Legal Counsel, and in this case, instead of releasing the legal rationale for the authority to make drone strikes, they issue what is, in essence, a white paper, or press release, that was linked to the news media. I would ask the Senator from Kentucky to respond.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, the question from the Senator from Texas is a very good one, and there does seem to be a double standard going on here. There seems to be one standard for wiretapping of phones or interrogation, but there seems to be much less a standard for actually killing. It seems to be hypocritical and one would wonder why.

With regard to releasing the memos and how they come about their process, some of that was leaked. It is always curious to me that it is as if the leaks come out on purpose; as if they are intended. The leaks happen right before a nomination process. I don’t know the truth of that, but I do think that not only should we get the memos, but if there is going to be a drone strike program in America, perhaps we should actually be writing the rules and sending them to the President. That would be our job—not to listen to him and what he is going to do on drone strikes in America, but actually be writing the rules and sending them to the President. That would be our job—not to listen to him and what he is going to do on drone strikes in America, but actually be writing the rules and sending them to the President.

I see no reason not only to get the drone memos, and I think it would be more consistent with their earlier position, but I think that we should do it. I think that should be a secret—how we are going to go about this in America. I see no reason not only to get the drone memos, and I think it would be more consistent with their earlier position, but I think that we should do it. I think that should be a secret—how we are going to go about this in America.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. To the Senator’s last point, I am reading from a letter dated March 4. It is from the former Attorney General to Senator PAUL, and he says: The question you have posed is therefore entirely hypothetical, unlikely to occur, and
Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, the questions and points the Senator from Texas has made are very good points, and it also shows we are not that far apart in trying to find an answer to this, because, there is no ultimate ability for the Constitution. I am already getting tired and I don’t know how long I will be able to do this, so I can’t ultimately stop the nomination. But what I can do is try to draw attention to this and try to get an answer. That would be something, if we could get an answer from the President. And I think we would all sleep better and feel more comfortable if he would say explicitly that noncombatants in America won’t be killed with drones. The reason it has to be answered is because our foreign drone strike program does kill noncombatants. They may argue they are conspiring or they may some day be combatants, but if that is the same standard we are going to be using in the United States as in any country than I know about. Ours is a country where dissent, vocal dissent, even vehement, vociferous dissent as far as whether our country should go to war, whether our country should raise taxes higher than they have been allowed. We allow a great deal of dissent in our country. But some of the people whom we have said we are targeting have been dissenters, probably traitors too, but they have also been people who have been more than they have been shooting anybody.

That is not to say you can’t be a traitor even if you don’t shoot anybody. But if you are going to be accused of treason or of being a traitor in the United States, I would think you would get your day in court, probably. It is particularly troublesome since some of the descriptions of who might be a terrorist are such that I would be a little bit concerned about the slippery slope to where is the line that is a terrorist. I can’t imagine that noncombatants in America we would do that without an open accusation, without a trial by a jury, without a verdict.

I think it is important this discussion go on, and I am not ultimately settling the goal that I can stop this nomination. I am here today to draw attention to a constitutional principle, to try to get the administration to admit publicly they will not kill Americans who are not involved in combat. But even if that is the case with Brennan or his nomination, it has to do with a constitutional principle. Ultimately, Brennan will be approved. He will be the head of the CIA. This will be a blip in his nomination process. I hope people will see it more as an argument for how important our rights are; that no one, no branch of government, no individual politician should be above the law, should be able to dictate and say what they think the law is.

We had some of this even under a Republican President. I was critical of President Bush for saying he had the ability to interpret the law; he had the ability to put signing statements, which were extensive sometimes, which gave his interpretation of what the law was or what he thought the law was. So I have been critical of both sides thinking they have more power than they have.

The Founding Fathers were brilliant in the sense that they separated the powers and had these coequal powers of government, these branches of government that were somewhat pitted against each other. And by having equal power and by being able to judge the power of the other branch, no one branch could accumulate too much power. But in our country it has been going the other way for a long time. It hasn’t been just Democratic Presidents or just Republican Presidents, it has frankly been both. For maybe 100 years or so power has been gravitating and gravitating and gravitating to the Presidency. And not just the Presidency. When people talk about the bureaucracy, these are people who are within the executive branch. We gave up that power that should have been ours, that should have been written into the legislation. We gave up that power, and as a consequence we gave it to the executive branch. We gave it to people—many of them, called judges, who are unelected. So we gave away power. It is a struggle, and it should be a perpetual struggle, but we shouldn’t give in on that struggle and give up that power. There was mention the President should reveal to us drone memos on how he is making the decisions. We have had some leaks about that, but I would go one step further. Not only should the President let Congress know what he is doing, maybe we should tell him what to do. Congress should be setting the rules for how we do drone strikes. Maybe the Congress should be protecting the American people from their government.

That sounds terrible, protecting you from your government. That is what the Constitution was about. The Constitution wasn’t written to restrain your behavior. It was written to restrain your government’s behavior. I hope people get that when we talk about religion and the first amendment. But if you read the first amendment, it says Congress shall make no law. It doesn’t say anything about your religious preferences. It is not supposed to limit your involvement in government. It is really not supposed to limit so much religious involvement in government or even religion.

We have a prayer every morning in the Senate. You can’t have it in your public schools, you can’t have a prayer every morning. Explain that to me. We have the Ten Commandments around here. So does the Supreme Court. But one we hope no President will ever have to confront.

But he goes on to say, in response to Senator PAUL’s question:

It is possible, I suppose, to imagine an extraordinary circumstance in which it would be necessary and appropriate under the Constitution and applicable laws of the United States for the President to authorize the military to use force within the territory of the United States.

In other words, to the Senator’s point, on one hand he said it was a hypothetical question, unlike to occur, and one we hope no President would ever have to confront; and then, on the other hand, he said it is possible to imagine a scenario under which it would happen. That would appear to cast a further lack of clarity on something that should be a straightforward yes or no.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, here is the interesting thing about saying it is hypothetical and it wouldn’t happen. I could buy that, except for the fact that our foreign drone strike program—a significant amount of the drone strikes—are on people not actively engaged in combat. Whether that is right or wrong is another question, but since we already have an example of a significant amount of those being used on those not engaged in active combat. It is hard for him to say this is a rare, unusual, hypothetical thing that could never happen, because it seems as though it is a big part of the drone program overseas.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I said that was my last question, but I would ask the Senator to yield for this last question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. It strikes me, Mr. President, that there is a clear double standard here. The Senator has asked a reasonable question, to which he has not gotten a clear answer, and one that is clearly within the purview of the Senate in our oversight capacity for the Department of Justice and as a coequal branch of government. On one hand, the Obama-Holder Justice Department not only released a white paper but released previously classified legal memos from the Office of Legal Counsel on the enhanced interrogation program, saying it was consistent with their commitment to the rule of law, but today, in response to an eminently reasonable request, is giving the Senator from Kentucky what I think can appropriately be called the Heisman, or stiff arm, and denying him access to that.

So I wanted to come to the floor and make that point and ask those questions and say again that I admire the Senator’s fortitude and willingness to make that point and ask those questions and say again that I admire the Senator’s fortitude and willingness to make that point and ask those questions and say again that I admire the Senator’s fortitude and willingness to make that point and ask those questions.
you can’t have it in your local school. I think we have gotten confused on things. It was really about government getting involved in your religion.

We didn’t want to establish a church. We thought it was a bad idea to have an official church, and I still think it is a bad idea to have an official church because then the government would be telling the church what to do. But it is really all about the documents that we have protecting you from an overbearing government.

You are saying—I was given a few defined powers, the enumerated powers. There are 17, 19—depends on how you want to count them—but there are not very many. They are few and defined. But your liberties are many—basically, unlimited and undefined.

When you read the ninth and tenth amendment, it says those rights not explicitly given to government are left to the States and the people. They are yours. They are not to be disregarded. When Montesquieu talked about the separation of powers and the different checks and balances, he said: There can be no liberty when you combine the executive and the legislative. Likewise, to that basic scheme be no liberty when you combine the executive and the judiciary.

So if you allow the President to tell you he can have drone strikes on Americans, on American soil, you are allowing him to be not only the executive, you are allowing him to be the judiciary. If he makes it secret, nobody can object.

I remember one time I was complaining to another Senator about these things called suspicious activity reports. Your bank is required to file them on you. In fact, if you pay your Visa bill through your bank, over the phone, you have done a wire transfer, and you can be part of a suspicious activity report. If you turn cash in to the bank or get cash out of the bank over a certain amount, you can get a suspicious activity report.

I was concerned about this because there have been 8 million filed since 9/11, and the Senator’s response is he has never heard anybody complain about it. The reason nobody complains is they are secret. They don’t tell you they are doing this.

So if you get on the kill list, it is a little bit like Cain. We may have a kill list for a couple of years in the United States, on American citizens, and nobody might complain because it is secret. You don’t know you are on the list.

So I think it is important that we have a big debate and discussion over this; that we let the President know he doesn’t get to write all of these rules on killing American citizens; that the Constitution still applies in our country.

The reason this is a big debate is that when you are in a war, the Constitution doesn’t always apply on the battlefield in another country. There is a debate over whether the Constitution is here or whether it extends beyond the borders. But the practical matter is we can’t really enforce the Constitution beyond our borders. You sort of consent to your Constitution, you sort of consent to your government by voting for it. That is the problem in our country, but it doesn’t happen in Mexico, Europe, or Afghanistan, and it certainly doesn’t happen in the middle of hostilities. So you don’t really get due process over there. That is the real danger. That is the problem. That is the rub.

This whole thing is about the use of authorization of force that was passed after 9/11 to go to war in Afghanistan. If you had voted on that—you didn’t; your leaders did. But had you voted on that, you would have thought: I am going to war in Afghanistan to get the people who attacked us on 9/11. I was all for it. I still am. I think that was something we needed to do. We could have stuck. We could have done it. I don’t think you would have thought, when you voted for that, you were voting for a worldwide war with no end that included America as part of the battlefield. That is the real problem.

The President, John Brennan, who wants to be head of the CIA, and Eric Holder, the Attorney General, they all believe—and many here believe this also—there is no geographic limit to the war. It is not in Afghanistan. They say it is everywhere, but they say everywhere includes here.

Here is the problem: If you don’t think you can apply due process in the middle of a war, what happens if they say the war is here? That means you don’t get any protection. So if you are accused of a crime, I guess that is it.

I can’t imagine that is what we want as Americans. I just can’t imagine we would believe or acquiesce or allow the President to basically say he is going to make the decisions for us; that he basically would kill noncombatants in America.

I, frankly, think eventually he will admit—it would be nice if he would admit it tonight—that he is not going to do it. If anybody has a phone, give him a call. Let him know we would like to know an answer. And I think it would be appropriate.

When the Attorney General came this morning to the Judiciary Committee, he was asked repeatedly this question: Can you kill noncombatants if they are sitting and having tea somewhere in America? He kind of wobbled and wobbled and went around the issue. Finally, we said: We want to know, is it constitutional? Do you think you can do this?

Instead of saying we might not, we don’t intend to—and it sounds like he finally admits at the end that it is unconstitutional. But then why can’t we get them to say explicitly: We are not going to do this? I see no reason. It would take them 5 minutes to jot this down on a piece of paper. If they don’t intend to do it, why not tell us?

When your government won’t tell you they are not going to do something, when they won’t answer, no, they don’t have the power, they are saying to you, yes, they have the power.

If they will not answer your question and say: No, I will not kill Americans who are not involved in combat here at home, if they cannot tell you that, they are saying yes, they will kill Americans not involved in combat. It is a simple question.

Conor Friedersdorf writes for the Atlantic, and he writes:

Does President Obama think that he has the power to kill American citizens on U.S. soil? If he accuses a guy in the Arizona desert or rural Montana of being an Al Qaeda terrorist, is it ever kosher to send a drone over to blow him up, as was done to—

People overseas—

Or is it never okay to drone strike an—American citizen to death here in America?

It’s an easy question.

Answering it wouldn’t jeopardize national security in any way.

So why do Obama administration officials keep dodging it?

When the President was asked this question in a Google Plus interview last week, he said: Well we might have different rules inside the country than outside the country.

I think that sort of assumes he thinks he can kill Americans here, and he might have different rules. He might have more protections, but he is not going to tell you. He says it is secret. I, for one, am not very comfortable.

When the President says he hasn’t killed any Americans yet and he doesn’t intend to kill any Americans—but he might—that doesn’t really comfort me so much. I don’t think that is strong enough language.

The White House of office says, “I will preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution.” It doesn’t say: I intend to. It doesn’t say: I intend to preserve, if it is convenient; I intend to preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution if it is convenient.

In his memo, he says he is only going to kill people if it is infeasible. To me, that sounds a little bit like, yes, it is tough. It is inconvenient, so I am going to preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution as long as it is feasible. It just doesn’t inspire me.

Friedersdorf goes on to say with regard to the President’s answer in Google: “But he still didn’t give a straight answer.”

Counterterrorism adviser John Brennan—whose nomination we are talking about—won’t answer either. He finally did answer, but only under duress. His answer was actually the appropriate answer. He said the CIA can’t do this in America. But it begs the question: be the CIA not in charge of the drone program? The Department of Defense is. So we need an answer from the Department of Defense, and we get an answer from Eric Holder that says they haven’t done it yet. They don’t intend to do it, but they might. He doesn’t say specifically that they will not.

These answers have been out there for a while, and we have been through this and around this and asked questions. These are simple questions. These are questions I can’t imagine why we can’t get an explicit answer to—unless the answer is no. Unless the answer is that they don’t want limitations on their power. Unless the answer is that they don’t want constraints on their power. That their answer is no to the Bill of Rights doesn’t apply to them when they think it doesn’t apply to them. And that is the real danger.

Eric Holder—your Attorney General—was asked about this and asked about the fifth amendment. He was asked: Does it apply? He said: Well, it applies when we think it applies.

What does that mean? I know it is a debatable question—overseas. American citizens, this and that—but I don’t think it is a debatable question. In our country, does the fifth amendment apply? I don’t know how you can argue the fact that doesn’t apply. I don’t know how you can argue we have an exemption to the Bill of Rights when we want to.

But this is the President—the same President who argued that the terrorist groups plotting undetectable attacks eminently attack.

Imminence has always been a tricky concept to exclude any actual adversary attack. So if we say al-Qaida is always at risk, it means the Senate is in recess because he didn’t get a few of his appointees last year, also argued that the Senate was in recess and said he could appoint anybody he wanted—and he did.

It went to court, and the court rebuked him. The court said: You don’t get to decide all the rules for all of government. The Senate decides when they are in recess; you decide when you are in recess, but you don’t get to decide if the Senate is in recess.

They struck him down. Has he obeyed the ruling? Has he listened to what the court did? Has he been chastised and rebuked by the court? The people he appointed illegally are still doing that job. All of their decisions are probably invalid. So for the last 2 or 2 1/2 years—however long these recess appointments have been out there—all of these decisions are going to be a huge mess. They have made all these decisions that it is going to be uncertain whether the decisions are going to be valid. All of this happened because for some reason he thought he had power he doesn’t actually have. I think there are some analogies to what we are talking about.

Now, one of the rules he said he would adhere to, as far as the drone strikes overseas, was that there has to be an imminence to the threat. Then his team of lawyers followed up and concluded: Well, it has to be imminent, but it doesn’t have to be immediate. I think only a gaggle of government lawyers could come together and say “imminent” doesn’t mean “immediate.”

Spencer Ackerman wrote, in Wired, about this. The title is, “How Obama Transformed an Old Military Concept So He Can Drone Americans.”

“Imminence” used to mean something in military terms; namely, that an adversary attack was imminent. Ackerman goes on:

“Iminence” used to mean something in military terms; namely, that an adversary attack was imminent. In order to justify his drone strikes on American citizens, President Obama redefined the concept to exclude any actual adversary attack.

It is important to get that and to register that he has defined a potential imminent attack to mean that it excludes any actual adversary attack. So you are under imminent attack but there is no attack. It is a bizarre logic, but it is done so that they can do to grant them more power.

Ackerman goes on to say:

“That’s the heart of the Justice Department’s newly leaked white paper—

These drone memos—first reported by NBC News, explaining why a “broader concept of imminence” (pdf) trumps traditional Constitutional protections American citizens enjoy from being killed by their government without due process. It’s an especially striking claim when considering that the actual number of American citizens who are “senior operational leader[s] of al-Qaida or its associated forces” is vanishingly small. As much as Obama talks about rejecting the concept of “perpetual war” he’s providing, and institutionalizing a blueprint for it.

This is what we are talking about, Don’t think if you give the President the power to kill Americans, that it is a temporary power.

The use of authorization of force, they say, has no geographic limit and no temporal limit. There is no end to the war. There is no end to the lessening or the abbreviation or the giving up of your rights. If you give up your rights now, don’t expect to get them back.

Ackerman goes on:

Imminence has always been a tricky concept. It used to depend on observable battlefield preparations, like tanks amassing near a front line, missile assemblage, or the fueling of fighter jet squadrons. Even under those circumstances, there has been little consensus—internationally about various wars that we have had in the past.

President George W. Bush contended that the U.S. had to invade Iraq not because the government knew Saddam Hussein was about to launch an attack upon America, but because it didn’t.

Because it was unknown, because we fear things we don’t know—we don’t know so we conclude yes, and we preemptively attack.

Bush contended that the uncertainty about Saddam’s weapons of mass destruction augmented by 9/11’s warnings of shadowy terrorist groups plotting undetectable attacks redefined “imminence. . . .”

So when I say this is not a partisan battle, I am true to my word. President Bush started this. President Obama is expanding this.

The real irony, though, is President Obama ran as the anti-Bush candidate. He ran as the guy with the real moral umbrage at what President Bush was doing and in the end he is taking Presidential power to a new level beyond what President Bush could have ever imagined. So Bush contended that they could invade because they were uncertain about what Saddam could do. He: . . . redefined “imminence” to mean the absence of dispositive proof refuting the existence of an unconventional weapons program. . . .

Imminence is the absence of proof that you don’t have something. So you have to prove a negative, you have to prove you don’t have something, or you are an imminent threat.

That would be sort of like saying to Mexico: Prove to us you don’t have a nuclear weapon or we are going to bomb Mexico City. It is a bizarre notion of imminence. So Mexico is now an imminent threat to the United States because they are unwilling to prove they don’t have a nuclear weapon. You can see the convoluted logic that occurs here.

But when U.S. troops invaded, they learned that Saddam did not possess what Bush or Condoleezza Rice famously termed a smoking gun that could come in the form of a mushroom cloud.

The undated Justice Department white paper, a summary of a number of still-classified legal analyses, redefines imminence once again. Al-Qaida can now “continually planning attacks,” the undated white paper says, and so a preemptive attack “does not require the United States to have clear evidence that a specific attack on U.S. persons and interests in the immediate future.”

Realize what this means. First of all, nobody has an al-Qaida card. I think we say every terrorist in the world is in al-Qaida because then they have to prove otherwise. So nobody has an al-Qaida card. Everyone is in al-Qaida.

So we say that unless you can prove that you are not attacking us, because we know the history of al-Qaida is to continue to attack us, we can preemptively attack you.

But now we are talking about bringing that kind of gobbledygook, jumbled logic to the United States. Are these going to be the standards by which we kill Americans?

Ackerman goes on:

For an adversary attack to be “imminent” and a preemptive U.S. response justified, U.S. officials need only “incorporate considerations of the relevant window of opportunity, the possibility of reducing collateral damage to civilians, and the likelihood of heading off future disastrous attacks on American soil.”

So if we say al-Qaida is always attacking us and we say you are part of al-Qaida, then we can kill you. But the thing is, that is an accusation. If you are a U.S. citizen, you live in San Francisco or Houston or Seattle and someone says you are a member of al-Qaida, should not you get a chance to defend yourself? Shouldn’t you get to go to court? Shouldn’t you get a lawyer? Are these not things that we would want in our country?

Ackerman goes on. He says:

There is a subtle work in the Justice Department framework. It takes imminence out of the context of something an enemy does and places it into the context of a policymaker’s epistemic limitations.

So really we are not looking to say someone has a rocket launcher on their shoulder. We are saying because we think that these people do not like us and will come to attack us, we can presumably kill them.

Realize that this kind of logic is being used overseas, and that is debatable. But now they are going to bring this logic to America. So when you read something like this, that imminence is out of the equation and in its place we are going to put a “policymaker’s epistemic limitations” or estimation—that is how we are going to decide who is going to be killed in America? All we know is what we have in the foreign drone program.

We have no evidence yet because no one has told us. They just told us they have not killed anyone yet, they don’t intend to, but they might—but they haven’t told us what the rules are they are going to use. This content—what rules are going to be used in America? If you are going to kill noncombatants, people eating dinner in America, there have to be some rules. Does the Constitution apply?

When the bully pulpit was asked about the fifth amendment, he said the fifth amendment applies when they think it applies. He says the executive branch is very careful and they are very conscious of the fifth amendment and they do try to apply the fifth amendment when they can. I mean, it is a different story when you are talking about a war overseas and you are talking about people who live in our country. You don’t get the option of determining when the fifth amendment applies.

Ackerman goes on to say:

If there is a reasonable debate about what imminence means in an era of terrorism, and what standards ought to be accepted for defining it as an international norm, that framework—where they talk about that they are thinking about what the terrorist is thinking rather than what the terrorist is doing basically preempts the whole idea of determining or trying to discuss or figure out what imminence really means.

Ackerman goes on:

All that matters to justify a drone strike attack is for the U.S. to recognize that it can’t kill knowing.

So interestingly it’s not intelligence that drives the attack, it’s you saying I don’t know but I am worried that these people do attack us continually, so by me not knowing their plans, that is a justification for an attack. Realize, that could be the standard in the United States.

It’s the logical equivalent of the CIA’s signature strikes, which target anonymous military-age males in areas where terrorists operate.

This should be the thing that should just scare the you-know-what out of you. If we are killing people overseas who we don’t know their name because we think they are in a caravan going from a place where we think there are bad people to another place where there are bad people, that is a fairly loose standard. So, let’s say there are people going from a Constitution Party meeting to a Libertarian Party meeting. Both these groups don’t like big government. They hate big government. They are opposed to government. They are nonviolent as far as I know, but they were on the Fusion List for going to a terrorist meeting. But kill people in a caravan going from one meeting to the next? Are we going to have to name the person we kill in the United States?

You say, oh, that is absurd. We would never do that. Well, what about whose phone we tap? Do we have to name that person? It used to be the requirement. It has gotten less so over time. We have gotten to the point where the fourth amendment protections to name the person, place, and what you want to look at have become looser over time. I think it is a legitimate question. If you are going to target Americans or non-Americans, are you going to name them first? Are you going to tell us who is on the list? The list overseas is secret so the question is, is the list going to be secret in the United States? How do you get your due process if you don’t know you are on the list? It is a little bit late after the drone attack to say: Hey, it wasn’t me. I didn’t really mean what I said in that e-mail. I should not have made that comment on line.

Some liberals think they have had a double standard on this and haven’t been very good. Some have been more honest in their criticism of the President being hypocritical. The President seemed to be concerned at one time about warrants for wiretaps. He seemed to be concerned about Americans and torture. He seems to have lost a little bit of that when we talk about whether to kill Americans on American soil. And Eugene Robinson would consider a liberal pundit, wrote an article printed in the San Antonio News called “Judicial Review Needed For Drone Hits Of Citizens.” He begins this way. He says:

If George W. Bush had told us that the “war on terror” gave him the right to execute an American citizen overseas with a missile fired from a drone aircraft, without due process or judicial review, I’d have gone ballistic.

These are Eugene Robinson’s words. If he had heard this about George Bush, he would have gone ballistic. To his credit he says:

It makes no difference that the president making this chilling claim is Barack Obama. What’s wrong is wrong.

Robinson goes on to say:

The moral and ethical questions posed by the advent of drone warfare are painfully complex. We had better start working out some answers because, as an administration spokesman told me recently, drone attacks are the new cold war, they are an instrument of the United States.

These attacks have become normal. They have become commonplace. They have become the rule rather than the exception. But at least Eugene Robinson is someone who is consistent in his application of criticism. He says he would have gone ballistic had George W. Bush done exactly what President Obama is doing and his response is, “It is a different president.”

Making this chilling claim is Barack Obama. What’s wrong is wrong.

The question of when we get due process, whether it applies to you here or overseas, is a big question. Under our concept of government, it is not a question that should be left up to one branch of government. You know, should one branch of government get to decide that you don’t get due process? That the fifth amendment doesn’t apply to you? This is an incredibly important question. John Brennan and the nomination today pale in comparison to that question. Does the President alone, unilaterally, get to decide whether the fifth amendment applies when they think it applies? He says they try to give some kind of process. It is not due process. Due process involves a jury and a judge and public trial and an accusation. By process, they mean they get together and look at a PowerPoint presentation. They go through some flash cards and they decide who they are going to kill. That is the process. They may say you are demeaning the process by treating it flippanly, about whether they are serious about the process. Is that the process you want for someone in America? Do you want in America, for the process for you being accused of a crime, to be a PowerPoint presentation? If you are a political party you are part of, maybe in a political party you are part of, maybe in a political party you are part of?

There are things in politics that are partisan. I don’t think I would want Americans to be subject to any partisan ship with determining whether you get the fifth amendment, whether you get a jury trial. I can’t imagine anybody would. I don’t care whether it is a Republican or Democrat, I don’t want a politician deciding my innocence or guilt; it is as simple as that. The President should say unequivocally we are not going to kill non-combatants, we are not going to do PowerPoint presentations in the Oval Office on Tuesdays. We are not going to have Terrorist Tuesdays for Americans. He should say that. I don’t think it is that hard. It is an easy question to the President.

Mr. President, are you going to have Terrorist Tuesdays for Americans? who is going to die and who is going to live? Are they going to publicly charge people or are they going to secretly charge people? Are they going to have any kind of trial or any kind of representation? Does anybody get a chance to say, ‘Hey, it wasn’t me. I didn’t do it?’ Does anybody get a chance to represent or have representation?

This is an article we found interesting also by Noah Shachtman. This was also printed in “Wired”. It is called “U.S. Drones Can Now Kill Joe Schmo Military Officials`. This is not quite about the domestic issue so much and a little bit about the foreign issue. However, there is a linkage between the foreign drone attacks and what will become the domestic drone attacks.

Why? Because those are the only drone attacks we know and we have not been told that there will be an American plan for killing Americans and a foreign plan for killing Americans overseas. We have not been told that. We have been told to go and sit in a corner—including the Senate and Congress—and be quiet. They have a process. They have a PowerPoint presentation, and they have flashcards. I don’t think that is adequate.

Noah Shachtman writes in “Wired”:

“In September, American-born militant Anwar al-Awlaki was killed by a U.S. drone strike in Yemen. In the seven months since, the al-Qaida affiliate there has only grown in the local food distribution business and make good money selling it. But the question is whether that is the kind of standard we would like to have in America. Would a signature strike be acceptable if these are quotations that ought to be asked and the President ought to answer.

These people are being targeted by their signature. Their behavior is captured by wiretaps, overhead surveillance, and local informants.

Shachtman goes on to say:

“A similar approach might not work in this case, however.

In Yemen, where we have a lot of drone strikes, he says: Every Yemeni is armed. It is going to be kind of hard to tell who is friend or foe when they are all fighting and they are all mad at each other.

So how can they differentiate between suspected militants and armed Yemenis? Shachtman says:

“What’s more, al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula—the Yemeni affiliate of the terror collective—‘is joined at the hip’ with an insurgency largely focused on toppling the local government, another official told The Washington Post last week. So there’s a very real risk of America being ‘perceived as taking sides in a civil war.

The Yemeni campaign—actually, two separate efforts run by the CIA and the military’s Joint Special Operations Command—will still be more tightly restricted than the Pakistani drone war at its peak. Potential targets need to be seen or heard doing something that indicates they are plotting against the West, or are high up the militant hierarchy.

‘You don’t necessarily need to know the guy’s name. You don’t have to have a 100% sure thing. You have to know the activities this person has been engaged in,’ a U.S. Official tells the Journal.

Gregory Johnsen, a Yemen analyst at Princeton University, believes that these ‘signature’ strikes—‘or something an awful lot like them’—have actually been going on for quite a while in Yemen.

He goes on to say that he thinks that Awlaki’s son was killed just a month after his dad,” in a signature strike. He says he thinks “... there have been 13 attacks in Yemen in 2012.”

When we talk to people around here, they say there are many more signature strikes. What are we supposed to believe? A lot of people are saying they have evidence and have heard there are signature strikes. Those in power who have the secret say we are not. It is hard to know what to believe.

I think one thing that is easy to understand, though, is that I cannot imagine we would allow such a standard in the United States where we don’t name whom we are killing and that we kill people involved in a caravans. I think it should be pretty easy for the President to say there will be no signature strikes in America.

Shachtman goes on to say:

“Many of them have hit lower-level militants, not top terror names. This authorization only makes targeted killings legally acceptable in America. It is a consensus-driven document adopted by the Senate and the House Intelligence Committees in 2001. The Senate Intelligence Committee has pointed out that the killing of American citizens is only legal under the Authorization for Use of Military Force.”

But despite the increased pace of strikes—these 13 attacks are more than they were in all of 2011—al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula. . . . In fact, White House counterterrorism adviser John Brennan last week called it the terror group’s “most active operational franchise.”

All of which leads Micah Zenko at the Council of Foreign Relations to wonder whether this drone campaign is going. By any common-sense definition, these vast targeted killings should be characterized as America’s Third War since 9/11,” he writes. “Unlike Iraq and Afghanistan—where government agencies acted according to articulated strategies, congressional hearings and press conferences provided some oversight and the messy explicit endgame in the U.S. combat role would end—the Third War is Orwellian in its lack of cogent strategy, transparency, and end date.”

“Since these attacks have covert, the administration will offer no public defense, he adds. But “it begs [CIA director David Petraeus’] haunting question at the onset of the Iraq war in 2003: ‘Tell me how this ends?’”

That is a question I have for the President: How does the war end? How do we win? How do we declare victory and when will the war end? The problem is we have come up with a scheme that basically has no geographic limitations to where the war is fought. It is harder to defeat an enemy if the entire war is the battlefield. It is not only a problem with determining victory, it is a problem with ultimately coming home.

The other problem with having no geographic limitations to this is saying that war is here; the war is in America and the battlefield here at home is one where we are going to have rules or the laws of war are going to apply in our everyday life.

Before we were talking about drone strikes in America, the Center for Constitutional Rights has been concerned even about American citizens overseas. On September 30, they put out this release which said:

"Today, in response to the news that a missile attack by an American drone aircraft had killed Anwar Al-Awlaki in Yemen, the Yemen, the Center for Constitutional Rights, which had previously brought a challenge in federal court to the legality of the authorization to target Al-Awlaki in Yemen, released the following statement: "The assassination of Anwar Al-Awlaki by American drone attacks is the latest of many affronts to domestically based U.S. citizens, many of whom have been denied the right to a fair trial, and who are suffering the consequences of extraterritorial killings. These cases demonstrate that the government's use of drones is not only illegal but also contrary to the Constitution."

Now what they have said there is not completely non-controversial, and I might even take some issue with the fact that they are using the Constitution applies everywhere. Some argue it applies to U.S. citizens whether here or at home, and I think there is some debate as to that. I think the only place we can guarantee that the Constitution applies is in our country. The only other place we ultimately control is in our country. The courts we ultimately control are here. However, the entity doing the killing is the American military killing a citizen overseas. So I personally have been of the belief that what is happening is totally extraterritorial. It is one of the four crimes in the Constitution that is actually labeled, displayed, and given to the Federal courts.

There are specifics on what is actually treason. I personally don't think it would be that hard to try people for treason. I think we could do it without—oh we could start at the very top court and not have appeal after appeal. I think the evidence that Al-Awlaki could have been tried in Federal court for treason and then targeted.

People say: Why would we want to give any protection to people who have denounced their citizenship, who hate America, and who are conspiring with the enemy?

I guess the way I would respond is that I don't like murderers and rapists either. I don't like violent people who commit crimes in our country. But because we prize our system so much and because we want to make sure we arrest, convict, and possibly execute the right person, we have trials. So we think it is pretty important that we have trials. So I agree when people say these are bad people. Yes, these are bad people. Many of them deserve what they get. The problem is, if we give up on the process of how we do it, if we give up on the Constitution, or if we say that kind of standard is going to be brought back to the homeland, or if we say America is a battlefield, there is a real problem. There is a problem in doing that because I think if we do that, the standard becomes so loose, we really won't have what we really expect as Americans.

The Center for the Constitutional Rights goes on with this comment by Pardiss Kebriaei, a senior staff attorney. The court noted that they were not asked if there were non-existent disturbing questions raised by the authority being asserted by the United States.

There certainly are disturbing questions that need to be asked again and answered by the U.S. Government about the circumstances and about the legal standard that governs it.

In October 2012 there was an article by Greg Miller in the Washington Post. It was entitled "Plan for Hunting Terrorists Signals U.S. Intends to Keep Adding Names To Kill List." The editor notes that this project was based on interviews with dozens of current and former national security officials, intelligence analysts, and others who have examined and are examining the U.S. counterterrorism policies and the practice of targeted killings.

This is the first of three stories that appeared:

Over the past 2 years, the Obama administration has secretly developing a new blueprint for pursuing terrorists, a next-generation targeting list called the "disposition matrix." The matrix contains the names of terrorism suspects arrayed against an account of the resources being marshaled to track them down in the act of plotting attacks or clandestine operations. U.S. officials said the database is designed to go beyond existing kill lists, mapping plans for the "disposition" of suspects beyond the reach of American drones.

Although the matrix is a work in progress, the effort to create it reflects a reality setting in among senior national security officials that the United States' conventional wars are winding down, but the government expects to continue adding names to kill or capture lists for years.

Among senior Obama administration officials, there is a broad consensus that such operations will at least continue for another decade. Given the way the al-Qaeda continues to metastasize, some officials said no clear end is in sight.

"We can't possibly kill everyone who wants to harm us," a senior administration official said. "It's a necessary part of what we do.

"We're not going to wind up in 10 years in a world of everybody holding hands any saying, "We love America.""

That timeline suggests that the United States has reached a milestone in the war what was once known as the global war on terrorism. Targeting lists that were regarded as finite emergency measures after the attacks of September 11 are now fixtures of the national security apparatus. The rosters expand and contract with the pace of drone strikes but never go zero.

Meanwhile, a significant milestone looms: The number of militants and civilians killed in the drone campaign over 10 years will soon exceed 3,000 by certain estimates.

We have heard an estimate recently by a Member of the Senate who said 4,700 have been killed.

The Obama administration has touted its success against the terrorist network, including the death of Osama bin Laden, as signature achievements that argue for President Obama's reelection. The administration has taken tentative steps toward greater transparency, formally acknowledging for the first time the United States' use of armed drones.

Less visible is the extent to which Obama has institutionalized the highly classified practice of targeted killing, transforming ad-hoc elements into a counterterrorism infrastructure capable of sustaining a seemingly permanent war.

Spokesmen for the White House, the National Counterterrorism Center, the CIA and other agencies declined to comment on the matter privately, offering that the development of the matrix is part of a series of moves, in Washington and overseas, to embed counterterrorism tools into U.S. policy for the long haul.

White House counterterrorism adviser John O. Brennan is seeking to codify the administration's approach to generating capture/kill lists, part of a broader effort.

CIA Director David Petraeus is pushing for an expansion of the agency's fleet of armed drones. The proposal, which would need White House approval, reflects the agency's transformation into a paramilitary force and makes clear that it does not intend to disband its drone program and return to pre-Sept. 11 focus on gathering intelligence.

The U.S. Joint Special Operations Command, which carried out the raid that killed bin Laden, has moved command teams into suspected terrorist hotbeds in Africa. A rugged U.S. outpost in Djibouti has been transformed into a launchpad for counterterrorism operations across the Horn of Africa and into the Middle East.

The Joint Special Operations Command has also established a secret targeting center across the Potomac River from Washington. The current and former U.S. official said the elite command's targeting cells have traditionally been located along the front lines of its missions, including Iraq and Afghanistan. But the joint committee has now created a national capital region task force that is a 15-minute commute from the White House so it can be more directly involved in deliberations about the al-Qaeda list.

The developments were described by current and former officials to White House as well as intelligence and counterterrorism agencies. Most spoke on the condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the subject. These counterterrorism comments have been affixed to a legal foundation for targeted killings the Obama administration has discussed more openly over the past year. In a series of speeches, administration officials have cited the legal basis, including the congressional authorization to use military force.

This really gets to the crux of the matter, which is that the authorizations for all of these activities around the world and then ultimately here at home all come from the use of authorization of force when we went to war against Afghanistan after 9/11. The question is how do we conclude war? Is perpetual war OK with everybody? How would we conclude the war in Afghanistan?

The President said he is bringing troops home. It is actually another thing I admire about the President. I think we have accomplished our plan. But the thing is, if we are going to end the war, why would we not end the war? I think it means we end that war and we go somewhere else. There is a question of whether we can continually afford perpetual war. There is a question of whether it is advisable. There is a question of whether we or not we go so many places that maybe in the end we are doing more harm than good.

The thing about the wars as they go on is we have to figure out a way to try to end war. We have to figure out a way to try to limit war. Our goal should be to end all war and war projections that have no limit. To say there are no geographic limits on war I don't think should be an admirable thing. I think it is a mistake in policy to say we can have perpetual war with no limits, with no geographic limits, with no temporal limits.

It is hard to end a war anymore, though. It used to be easy. In the old days, you won a war and you came home. The problem is that we can't even afford wars anymore. The Iraq war has been over for a couple of years now—at least a couple of years. I tried to introduce a resolution to end the Iraq war, to deauthorize the war, and it was voted down. I think I got less than 15 votes to support it. Why not end war?

The problem is that people take these resolutions and they stretch them and they pull them and they contort them to mean things that really they were never intended to mean. I don't think being involved in a protracted war in Yemen or Mali or any of these other places was intended when we went to war in Afghanistan. I just don't think that was the intention.

Critics contend that the justifications for the drone war have become more tenuous as the campaign has extended further and further beyond the core group of al-Qaida operatives behind the strikes on New York and Washington. Critics note that the administration doesn't even confirm the CIA's involvement or the identities of those who were killed. Certain strikes are now under legal challenge, including the killing last year of the son of al-Awlaki.

Counterterrorism experts have said, though, that the reliance on these targeted killings is self-perpetuating, yielding undeniable short-term results that may obscure the long-term costs. I think that is a good way of putting it because when we think about it, obviously they are killing some bad people. This is war, and there has been some short-term good. The question is, Does the short-term good outweigh the long-term costs not only in dollars but the long-term costs of whether we are encouraging a next generation of terrorists?

This is a quote from Bruce Riedel, a former CIA analyst. He says:

The problem with the drones is it's like your lawn mower. You got to mow the lawn all the time. The minute you stop mowing, the grass is going to grow back.

Maybe there is an infinite number of terrorists. Maybe the drone strikes aren't the ultimate answer. There are a billion Muslims in the world. Maybe there needs to be some component of this that isn't just the killing fields. I am not saying that many of these people aren't allied against us and would attack us to die: I am just not sure it is the ultimate answer, it is the ultimate way. I am also concerned that the people who are the strongest proponents of this are also those who want to bring the war to America and say America is part of this perpetual battlefield.

The United States now operates multiple drone programs, including acknowledged U.S. military patrols over contested zones in Afghanistan and Pakistan, and alleged and suspected CIA surveillance flights over Iran. Strikes against al-Qaida, however, are carried out under secret lethal programs involving the CIA and the CSOC. The matrix was developed by the NCTC under former Director Michael Leiter to augment those organizations' separate targeting killing lists. The result is a single, continually evolving database in which biographies, locations, known associates, and affiliated organizations are all catalogued.

So are strategies for taking targets down, including extradition requests, capture operations and drone strikes, now under legal challenge. Certain strikes are now under legal challenge, including the killing last year of the son of al-Awlaki.

The database is meant to map out continuous terrorist travel, a so-called menu that spells out each agency's role in a case a suspect surfaces in an unexpected spot. "If he's in Saudi Arabia, pick up with the Saudis," said the former official. "If traveling overseas to al-Shabaab...we can pick him up by ship, if in Yemen, kid or have the Yemenis pick him up.

There has been some discussion as to what to do with these people. It is a complicated situation, but I think the take-home message from all of this is that what we are stuck in is a very messy sort of decisionmaking, a type of decisionmaking that is not think is appropriate for the homeland, for the United States. I think the idea that in the United States this is to be a battlefield, and you do not need an attorney, you do not need a court, or you do not get due process, is really repugnant to the American people, and should be.

I think it is something we have given up on too easily if we let the President dictate the terms of this. If the President is unwilling to say clearly and unequivocally that he is not going to kill noncombatants in America, I do not think we should tolerate that. I think there should be a huge outcry and the President should come forward and explain how this works.

This discussion tonight is not so much about John Brennan, it is not about his nomination so much as it is about whether we believe that in America there are some rights that are so special that we are not willing to give up on these.

So as we move forward into this debate, it is not about who gets nominated to be the head of the CIA. It is about principles that are bigger than the people. It is about something bigger and larger than the people involved. It is about constitutional principles that we should not give up on.

In as we move forward in the debate, we need to understand and we need to fight for something that is classically American, something we are proud of and something our soldiers fight for; that is, our rights, our individual rights, our right to be seen as an American, to be tried in a court by our peers. I think if we are to give up on that it is a huge mistake.

One of the things we have to ask is, What kind of standard will there be? If there is going to be a program in America, what kind of standard? If we are going to kill Americans in America, what kind of standard will there be? If the standard should be the sympathy, you can imagine the craziness of this.

Mr. President, I would at this time yield for a question, without yielding the floor, from my colleague from Kansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MORAN. Mr. President, thank you.

Through the Chair, Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator from Kentucky a couple of questions.

I have been listening to the conversation, to the debate, to the discussion on the Senate floor throughout the afternoon, and I would ask the Senator from Kentucky these questions: Is it not true that the Constitution of the United States is a document designed to protect the freedoms and liberties of Americans?

Would you ask the Senator from Kentucky, while sometimes perceived to be a grant of authority, is not really the main purpose of the U.S. Constitution to make sure the American people enjoy certain liberties and freedoms that the Founding Fathers who wrote that document believed were important for American citizens? And whether or not that is true, I will let the Senator from Kentucky tell me, but if that is the case, if it is constitutional to intentionally kill an American citizen in the United States in the process of law, then what is not constitutional under the U.S. Constitution?

If the conclusion is reached—as the administration, at least, is unwilling to say that is not the case—if the conclusion is reached that the powers of the Constitution for the executive to allow for the killing of an American citizen in the United States, then what is left in our Constitution that would prohibit other behavior? If we go this far, what liberties remain for Americans?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I think it is a good question because, ultimately, the question is, Who gets to decide? Does the President get to decide unilaterally that he is going to do this? And how would you challenge it? If you are dead, you have a tough time challenging, basically, his authority to do this.

But, no, I cannot imagine in any way that you can usurp and go beyond the constitutional requirements in the United States. I see no way he can do that, and I cannot imagine that he would even assert such a thing. But it still puzzles the mind that he will not explicitly say he will not do this.

Mr. MORAN. Well, I would, again, through the Presiding Officer, ask a question of the Senator from Kentucky.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MORAN. Again, in the absence of the assurance or the statement from the administration—from the President, the Attorney General or his Attorney General—I ask the Senator from Kentucky, is not this the appropriate venue for us to insist upon that answer? Is it not appropriate for this to be the venue on which we, as a U.S. Senate, make clear that it is unconstitutional, for the destruction of a drone of a U.S. citizen in the United States by military action?

This is the opportune moment because of the pending confirmation of the nomination of the head of the Central Intelligence Agency. So while today's order of business really is an administrative appointment, is this issue not so important that we need to utilize this moment, this time in the Senate to make certain that question is answered in a way that makes clear—not only for today and for the current occupant of the CIA and its administration, but for all future Americans, all future CIA's, all future military leaders—that it is clear that in the United States American citizens cannot be killed without due process of law?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I think it is a good point. I think also a point to be made is that one resolution to this impasse would be to have a resolution come forward from the Senate saying exactly that; that our understanding is—and this has been something that Senator Cruz and I have discussed: whether we should limit the President's power by legislation or by resolution. By saying that repeating an imminent threat is something the President can do, but killing noncombatants is not something that is allowed under the Constitution.

I think the courts would rule that way should the courts ever have to rule on this. But it would be much simpler and more healthy for the country if the President would simply come out and say that.

Mr. MORAN. Perhaps, Mr. President, finally, I would ask the Senator from Kentucky, while this opportunity to discuss this issue on the Senate floor has occurred today, it certainly is an opportunity for the American people to understand a significant basic constitutional right may be at stake. And while the Senator from Kentucky has led this discussion, I would ask him, has he now received, as a result of bringing this attention to this issue, any conversations from the Attorney General or the President of the United States that the administration agrees that there is no constitutional right to end the life of an American citizen using a drone flying over the land of the United States and attacking a U.S. citizen?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, since we began this today, I have had no communications from the White House or the Attorney General. The only thing we have gotten indirectly was that the Attorney General was before the Judiciary Committee today and that he did seem to backtrack or acknowledge a little bit, under withering cross-examination. He was not very forthcoming in saying what he would like to hear; that they will not kill noncombatants in America. But I think that is still a possibility from them. I think his answers were not inconsistent with that.

But you would think it would be a little difficult for them to make it easier on everyone, and you would think they would want to reassure the public that they have no intention—not just they have no intention—but that they will not kill Americans.

Mr. MORAN. Mr. President, if I can ask the Senator from Kentucky a question through the Presiding Officer, while there is a significantly important issue before the Senate today—and that is the confirmation of the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency—I would ask the Senator from Kentucky, is not the more important issue, the less pedestrian issue, that we face on the Senate floor and in the United States of America one that has been with us throughout our history, one that was with us when the Constitution was written, and one that has been with us every day thereafter; that is, what is the meaning of the words contained in the U.S. Constitution, and what do they mean for everyday citizens, for three out of three and many of the judges that the President has put forward, not necessarily because I agree with their politics. I do not agree with much of the President's politics.

In fact, one of the few things I did agree with the President was the idea of civil liberties, was the idea that you do not tap someone's phone without a wire, without a warrant, that you do not torture Americans, and that you did not kill Americans without due process. These are things I thought the President and I agreed on. So I am not so sure exactly, you know, where we stand with that. I actually kind of think that probably he still does agree with me, or I still agree with him. But the question is, why cannot he publicly go ahead and announce he is not going to kill noncombatants?

This is a resolution we have talked about. This resolution says: "To express the sense of the Senate against the use of drones to target American citizens on American soil." Expressing the sense of the Senate against the use of drones to execute American citizens on American soil. Resolved, that it is the sense of the Senate that the use of drones to execute or target American citizens on American soil who pose no imminent threat clearly violates the constitutional due process of rights. The American people deserve a clear, concise and unequivocal public statement from the President of the United States that contains detailed legal reasoning, including but not limited to the balance between national security and due process, limits of executive power, and distinctions between citizens and noncitizens within and outside the borders of the United States.

The use of lethal force against American citizens and noncitizens by drones in the execution of the lethal force within the United States territory.

There is another article that I think is of interest. This is another article by Spencer Ackerman from Wired. This is about once again the signature strikes, the idea that basically we are killing people whose names we did not know. The title of this was: “CIA Drones Kill Large Groups Without Knowing Who They Are.”

The expansion of the CIA’s undeclared drone war into the tribal areas of Pakistan required a big expansion of who can be marked for death. Once the standard for targeted killing is set, there is no cut-off point. The article does not define the standards, [but the standards are said to be] “suspicion” and “association.”

While this is overseas, it kind of gets to the point we have been talking about: What is the standard that will be used in America? If we are to have drone strikes in America, what is the standard we will use? Is it a standard that says you have to be suspicious, or that you have to be associated?

Strikes targeting those people, usually non-citizens, are often called signature strikes. The bulk of the CIA’s drone strikes are signature strikes now, which is a remarkable thing. So what we are talking about—that is one of the reasons why we are concerned here—is that if the President claims he can do strikes in America, and the bulk of the current strikes overseas are signature strikes, would it not be worrisome that we could kill people in America without evening knowing their name?

The reality is that drone strikes now are “signature” strikes.

It was written in the Wall Street Journal in an article by Adam Entous, Siobhan Gorman, and Julian Barnes. And the “bulk” really means the bulk. The Journal reports that the growth in clusters of people targeted by the CIA has required the agency to tell its Pakistani counterparts about mass attacks. We are talking about pretty significant attacks here. They are only notifying them when they are going to kill mass numbers of people.

Determining who is the target is not a question of intelligence collection. The cameras on the CIA fleet of Predators and Reapers work just fine. It is a question of intelligence analysis, interpreting the imagery collected from the drones, from the spies and spotters below, to understand who is a terrorist and who, say, drops off the terrorist’s laundry. Admittedly, in a war with a shadowy enemy, it can be difficult to distinguish between the two. So the question is, is this the kind of standard we will use in the United States? Will we use a standard where people do not have to know the person’s name?

The President has indicated his drone strikes in America will have different rules than his drone strikes outside of America. But we have heard no rules on what those drone strikes will be. So we have drone strikes inside and outside. They are going to have different rules. But we already know that in a large percentage of the drone strikes overseas we are not naming the person. Is that going to be the standard? We also know we have targeted people for sympathizing with the enemy. We talked about that before. In the 1960s, we had many people who sympathized with North Vietnam. Many people will remember Jane Fonda. She showed up in a dress and North Vietnamese artillery and thinking, gleefully, that she was just right at home with the North Vietnamese.

I am not a great fan of Jane Fonda. I am really not too interested in putting her on the list. We have had many people who have dissented in our country. We have had people in our country who have been against the Afghan war, against the Iraq war. I was opposed to the Iraq war. There have been people against the government on occasion. What are the criteria for who will be killed? Does the fifth amendment apply? Will the list be secret or not secret? Can you kill non-combatants?

And people say, well, the President would never kill noncombatants. The problem is, is that who we are killing overseas. We are alleging that they may be conspiring someday to be combatants or they might have been yesterday. But are we going to take that same kind of standard and use it in America? Are we going to have a standard that if you are on your iPad typing an email in a cafe that you can be targeted in a drone strike? These are not questions that are inconsequential. These are questions that should be known. These are questions that should be public. These are questions that should be discussed in Congress. In fact, we should not be asking him for drone memos, we should be giving him drone memos. We should not be asking him how is he going to run the drone program, we should be telling him how he is to run the drone program. That is our authority. We have abdicated our authority. We do not do what we are supposed to. We are supposed to take these decisions here.

But we have let the President make those decisions because we have largely abdicated our responsibility.

In this Spencer Ackerman story from Wired, he talks about and goes on to say:

Fundamentally, though, it is a question of policy, whether it is acceptable for the CIA to kill someone without fully knowing if he is a sympathizer or the laundry guy.

The Journal reports:

The CIA’s willingness to strike without such knowledge, sanctioned in full by President Barack Obama, is causing problems for the State Department and the military. As the New York Times recently written, a large volume of drone attacks in Pakistani tribal areas contributes to Pakistani intransigence on another issue of huge importance to the United States, continuing to deliver the insurgent groups it sponsors to peace talks aimed at ending the Afghan war.

The drones do not cause that intransigence. Pakistani leaders, after all, cooperate with the drones and exploit popular anti-American sentiment to shake down Washington. The strikes become cards for Pakistan to play, however cynically.

I think this is quite true of Pakistan. They play both sides to the middle. They play both sides to get more money from us. I think they have been complicit in the drone attacks, and then they complain about them publicly. They use the idea of our people, and one privately to us. But the question is, have we gotten involved more in Pakistan than getting al-Qaeda leaders, and have we gotten more involved with a war in Pakistan that involves people who want to be free of their central government?

Ultimately, we as a country need to figure out how to end the war. We have had the war in Afghanistan for 12 years now. The war basically has authorized a worldwide war. Not only, can I worried about the perpetual nature of the war, I am also worried that there are no geographic limitations to the war. But I am particularly concerned, and what today has all been about, is I am worried that they have written the battlefield now. My side, their side, the President, everybody thinks that America is the battlefield. The problem is, they all think you do not get due process in a battlefield. Largely they are correct. When you are overseas in a battlefield, it is hard to have due process. We are not going to ask for Miranda rights before we shoot people in battle. But America is different.

So one of the most important things I hope that will come from today is people will say and people will listen: How do we end the war in Iraq? How do we end the war in Afghanistan? I got a vote. I tried to end the Iraq war 2 years after it ended, by taking away the authorization of use of force. I still could not get that voted on.

It is even more important not only to end the war in Iraq, but ultimately to end the war in Afghanistan. Because the war in Afghanistan, the use of authorization of force is used to create a worldwide war without limitations, to sometimes commit war that the battlefield is here at home. This battlefield being here at home means you do not get due process at home.
There have been Members of the Senate stand up and say, when they ask you for a lawyer, you tell them to shut up. Is that the kind of due process we want in our country? Is that what we are moving toward? So the questions we are asking here are important questions. The question is: Does the Bill of Rights apply? Can they have exceptions to the Bill of Rights?

One of the articles from the National Review recently was by Kevin Willliams. We got into this a little bit earlier. There was an important article because it talked about what our concern is about what standard we will use. What will be the standard for how we kill Americans in America? He talked a little bit about how his belief is that al-Awlaki was targeted mainly as a propagandist. An interesting thing about al-Awlaki is that before he was targeted, he was actually invited to the Pentagon. We considered him to be a moderate Islamist for a while.

We got to the Pentagon. I think he actually gave and said prayers in the Capitol at one point.

The question is if we made a mistake the first time about whether he was our friend—and I think we did—could you make a mistake on the other end? The question is, if governments are to decide who are sympathizers and people who are politicians, with no checks or balances, are to decide who is a sympathizer, is there a danger that people who have political dissent could be included in this?

The way Williamson describes al-Awlaki was that he was first and foremost an al-Qaeda propagandist. He was a preacher and a blogger who first began to provoke United States authorities through the online bile which earned him the faintly ridiculous sobriquet the bin Laden of the Internet.

Was he an active participant in planning acts of terrorism against the United States? FBI did not think so, at least in the wake of 9/11 attacks. The Bureau interviewed him four times and concluded he was not involved. The Defense Department famously invited him to dine at the Pentagon as part of the Islamic outreach efforts, and in 2002 he was conducting prayers in the U.S. Capitol.

Throughout the following years, al-Awlaki became a sort of al-Qaeda gadfly, dangerous principally because he was fluent in English and, therefore, a more effective propagandist. It was not until the first Obama administration that al-Awlaki was promoted by United States authorities from propagandist to operation man.

You may remember the context. The Obama administration had been planning to try 9/11 conspirators in New York City when the country was thrown into a panic by the machinations of the would-be underpants bombers, Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab.

The Obama administration, in an interesting about-face—whereas it had been planning to try Khalid Shaikh Mohammed in New York and his co-conspirators there, definitively turning our back on Guantanamo—turned around and made a decision that it couldn’t do it in New York. Al-Awlaki was a part of this. He was a propagandist and part of this. They said Abdulmutallab actually sought out al-Awlaki in Yemen and al-Awlaki had blessed his bomb plot and even introduced him to a bombmaker. This, according to the Obama administration, is what justified treating al-Awlaki as a man at arms earning him a place on the nation's kill list.

Williamson asked this question:

If sympathizing with our enemies and propagandizing on their behalf is the equivalent to making war on the country, then the Johnson and Nixon administrations should have bombed every elite college campus in the country during the 1960s.

These are his words, not mine. He goes on:

And as satisfying as putting Jane Fonda on a kill list might have been, I do not think that our understanding of the law would encourage such a thing, even though she did give priceless aid to the communist agitators in Vietnam. Students in Ann Arbor, Minn, were actively and openly raising funds for the Vietcong throughout the war. Would it have been proper to put them on kill lists?

I don’t know.

Williamson said:

I do not think that it would. There is a difference between sympathizing with our enemies and taking up arms against the country.

They aren’t the same thing. We have to ask ourselves, what is the standard? Could political dissent be part of the standard for drone strikes?

You say, well, that is ridiculous. We have listed people already on Web sites and said they were at risk for terrorism for their political beliefs. The Fusion Center in Missouri listed people who were of pro-life origin and listed people who believed in secure borders. They listed people who were supporters of third-party candidates in the election. The Libertarian Party. These people were listed in a mailing sent out to all the police in the State to be aware of these people. Be aware of people who have bumper stickers on their cars supporting these people.

That, to me, sounds dangerously close to having a standard where the standard is sympathy not for your enemies but sympathy for unpopular ideas or ideas that aren’t popular with the government concerns me. It concerns whether we could have in our country a standard that is less than the Constitution. The Constitution is a standard where I can’t imagine we can’t kill noncombatants. You can’t kill people in a cafe in Seattle. That is what we are asking. It is blatantly unconstitutional to kill noncombatants. I can’t understand why we couldn’t get a resolution. Particularly because I am willing to, with this resolution, move forward and let the vote occur on Brennan.

The second part of the resolution is:

The American people deserve a clear, concise, and unequivocal pronouncement from the President of the United States that contains detailed legal reasoning, including but not limited to the balance between national security and due process, limits of executive power and distinction between treatments of citizens and noncitizens within and outside the borders of the United States, the use of lethal force against American citizens, and the use of drones in the application of lethal force within the United States territory.

Basically, the second part of the resolution asked, basically, we do our job and ask the President to let us know about Brennan. If there is an objection to this, it would be an objection to, No. 1, killing citizens who are noncombatants and, No. 2, to giving us a report on what the program will actually entail.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at a time to be determined by the two leaders tomorrow, the Senate vote on this resolution as I just read it, and which is an addition to it they then turn to Senator Brennan's nomination or be allowed to proceed to a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HINCHEN). Is there objection?

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. I would say to my friend from Kentucky that I am chair of the Constitution, Civil Rights and Human Rights Subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee. We are scheduling a hearing on the issue of drones, because I believe the issue raises important questions, legal and constitutional questions. I invite my colleagues to join us in that hearing if you wish to testify. We will examine some of the things we should look at and look at closely. That is why this hearing is being scheduled. I believe at this moment it is premature to schedule a vote on this issue until we thoroughly look at the constitutional and legal aspects of all of the questions the Senator has raised today, which are important.

Because of that, I have no alternative but to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I am disappointed the Democrats choose not to vote on this. The answer around here for a lot of things is we will have a hearing at some later date to be determined. The problem is this is a non-binding resolution. This is a resolution just stating we believe in the Constitution and, A, Mr. President, send us some information about your plan, how it is going to work. It doesn't change the law. The question is could it do more than the law. We have an actual bill which we will introduce. We will actually try to change the law.

This is a symbolic gesture and a way to allow us to move forward. I am disappointed we can't.

This was an article that was published in Human Rights First in December of 2012. As I said, it has an opening statement by John Brennan I think is actually well thought out and recognizes some of the advantages and disadvantages of drone strikes.

John Brennan begins by saying:

We are establishing precedents that other nations may follow, and not all of those nations may— and not all of them will be nations that share our interests or the premium we put on protecting human life, including innocent civilians. This is an armed conflict with al Qaeda's "associated forces," (a term it has not defined). I think this is an important point because everybody is always saying: You are not a terrorist. We are only going after terrorists. The problem is, as I said, the government has defined terrorism in this country to mean things that may not include terrorists—paying cash, having weatherized ammunition—so there are a lot of different things they have used as a definition. But let's say they are going after al-Qaeda, people working with them or associated forces—what that means I don't know, particularly since al-Qaeda is a little bit gray and becomes a part of the battlefield,ame, the United States is inviting other countries to formally declare, against groups they consider to be security threats for purposes of assuming lethal targeting authority. Moreover, by announcing that all of them are-- of such groups are targetable, the United States is establishing exceedingly broad precedent for those who can be targeted, even if it is not to utilize the full scope of this claimed authority. As an alternative to armed conflict-based targeting, U.S. officials have claimed that targeted killings are justified as self-defense regardless of an imminent threat.

The problem is we have defined imminent to be not immediate. So having a murky definition of what imminent is allows us to run into problems.

It is also not clear that the current broad targeting killing policy is consistent with long-term strategic interests in combating international terrorism. Although it has been reported that some high-level operational leaders of al-Qaeda have been killed in drone attacks, studies show the vast majority are not high-level terrorist leaders. National security analysts and former U.S. military officials increasingly argue that such tactical gains are outweighed by the substantial cost of the targeted killing program, including growing anti-American sentiment and recruitment support for al-Qaeda. The broad targeted killing program has already strained U.S. relations with allies and thereby impeded the flow of critical intelligence about terrorist operations around the world. The problem is, when we talk about this, one of the most important things to our intelligence is actually human intelligence. We get information from people who are our friends, who live in those countries, who blend into the population, who go into a marketplace to conduct operations. But we have gone on to destroy some of this intelligence in the sense that one of the people who helped us to get bin Laden was a doctor in Pakistan by the name of Dr. Shakil Afridi. If we don’t stand by the people who give us intelligence and give us information, we will not get more. But when he did help us, somehow his name was leaked. I don’t know in what order the leaks came from, but his name was leaked, and then he was arrested by the Pakistanis. He is now in prison for the rest of his life.

I have asked several times, both to the previous Secretary of State as well as to the Secretary of Defense, and I asked the current Secretary of State point-blank and directly: Will you use the leverage of foreign aid to say we are not going to give you foreign aid if you don’t release this doctor who gave us information?

It is a little ironic that we will not do it, particularly since at one point in time we actually had. I think, a $25 million reward for any information that led to helping us get bin Laden. So it is a bit disappointing that we have not held out and supported our human intelligence and people such as Dr. Afridi, who helped us get probably the most notorious terrorist of the last century.

While the U.S. Government does not report the number of deaths from drone strikes, independent groups have estimated that the drone program has claimed several thousand lives so far.

Estimates and public comments by some Senators have said as many as 4,700. What we don’t know about the 4,700 but what would be an important statistic, I think, or maybe a troubling statistic, would be how many of the 4,700 were killed in combat—actually holding weapons, fighting, going to a battle, coming from a battle—and how many of the drone strikes were actually on people who weren’t involved in combat. I think if that number were released, if that number were made public, it if you quantified you even more because you may well find out a lot of the people—and we have seen some of the strikes on television, with people in their cars, people walking around without weapons, people eating dinner, people at home in their houses. I am not saying these are good people necessarily. I am just saying the drone strike program we have in place currently seems to have a very low threshold for whom they kill. So the question would be whether you are going to use that as a standard—whether you have a domestic drone strike program in the United States.

I think we are getting to the point, and that is one of the most important questions, as we look at the foreign drone program, is understanding what the parameters are that allow us to kill people in foreign countries and are those the parameters that are going to be used here.

For the most part, over the last decade, they haven’t admitted we even have a drone strike program. But now that they admit it, the President doesn’t want to answer any questions about it. He doesn’t want to deny he will use it here. He just says he isn’t intending to use it here but then says: Oh, probably there will be different rules inside the United States than outside the United States.

This is the President who ought to get involved, instead of putting this to another time. The Senate ought to say we are not going to wait for the President to send us a memo. We are going to send him a memo. We are going to tell him what rules on drone strikes are. We are going to tell him the Constitution does apply to Americans, particularly Americans in the United States, and there are no exceptions. I find it inexcusable that the Attorney General says: Well, the fifth amendment, we will use it as needed, basically. We will use it when we choose. The problem with that is I don’t think the executive branch should get to pick and choose.

Without yielding the floor, I am going to allow a question from my colleague from Texas.

Mr. CRUZ. I thank the Senator from Kentucky, and I want to ask the following question: Is the Senator from Kentucky aware of the reaction the American people are having to his extraordinary efforts today?

Given the Senate rules do not allow for the use of cellular phones on the floor, I feel quite confident the Senator from Kentucky is not aware of the Twitterverse that has been exploding. So what I want to do for the Senator from Kentucky is to give some small sampling of the reaction on Twitter so he might understand how the American people are responding to his courageous leadership, to Senator Paul’s doing something that in the last 4 years has happened far too little in this Chamber, which is standing and fighting for liberty.

So I will read a series of tweets. So proud of Rand Paul standing up for what’s right. Stand with Rand.

Rand Paul: a reason to be proud of your elected representatives again. Keep going, Rand.

Proud of Senator Rand Paul and all who have joined him in this effort. Stand today with Senator Rand Paul.

So happy with Rand Paul right now. Someone finally using the system to aid, not usurp, our rights.

Rand Paul: filibusters Brennan nomination—over four hours now. Glad someone in the Senate has some spine.

That was tweeted a while ago.

Rand Paul is a hero today, a man with a backbone. Today Rand Paul is my hero.

Kentucky Senator Rand Paul is a true constitutional hero in his filibuster against CIA nominee.

I can honestly say, I am proud to currently live in Rand Paul’s State of Kentucky.

So proud of Rand Paul. He’s bringing it. He’s not going to let our constitution get trashed. A breath of fresh air. PRAY 4 THIS FIGHT 4 RAN!

I am so beyond proud of Rand Paul and the way he is standing up for each and every American citizen right now by filibustering the Senate.

I am very proud of Senator Rand Paul. This is an important moment when one person had the courage to yell STOP. Stand with Rand.

So proud of Rand Paul. We need more like him. Stand with Rand.

Rand Paul is now in hour 7 of his filibuster. He is standing up for our rights. Thank you, Stand with Rand.

It is frightening that Obama seeks to have an expanding amount of power. Drones strikes are frightening. Stand with Rand.

Dear GOP, the base is crying out for more of you to stand with Rand. If you want the base’s votes, get it together.

Stand with Rand. We need you now more than ever. This president has usurped his power. We can’t say anything bad against him.

Stand with Rand. So long as Rand speaks, we’ll be tuned in.

It is unconstitutional to target and kill Americans with any kind of drone. Stand with Rand.

A retweet from Senator RAND PAUL. I will commend the Senator from Kentucky. He was so flexible he was able to tweet while he was standing on the floor. A retweet for Senator RAND PAUL’s tweet: “I will not sit quietly and let President Obama shred the Constitution,” with the hashtags #filiblizzard and “Stand with Rand.”

Here is a more mixed one, but nonetheless demonstrating the respect the Senator from Kentucky is earning across the aisle.

I may not always agree with Rand Paul but he has my respect. He’s very willing to do what he feels is right. Stand with Rand.

From Congressman JUSTIN AMASH: won’t President Obama simply state that it is unconstitutional and illegal for government to kill Americans in U.S. without due process? Stand with Rand.

Stand with Rand, because we deserve to know if American citizens should fear murder from our Government.

Everyone should be aware of this important moment in American history. Stand with Rand.

Proud to call Rand Paul my Senator. Stand with Rand.

It is unconstitutional to target and kill Americans on American soil with a drone. Stand with Rand.

The Federal Government does not have the power to kill its citizenry. There is something called due process. Stand with Rand.

Fight for our constitutional rights and liberties. Stand with Rand.

I have gained a lot of respect for Senator Rand Paul today. This is not a right or left issue, it is a civil liberties issue. Thank you Rand Paul, and others who are taking a stand for patriotic Americans.

A great day for liberty when Senator Rand Paul and a handful of others stood up for liberty. Stand with Rand.

It is ironic that a Nobel Peace Prize winner won’t guarantee that he won’t use drones against Americans. Stand with Rand.

I will note to the Senator from Kentucky and ask his reaction to these—this is but a small sampling of the reaction in Twitter. Indeed, in my office I think the technical term for what the Twitterverse is doing right now is “blowing up.”

I suggest to the Senator from Kentucky and Rand Paul and others who—this is but a small sampling of the reaction in Twitter. Indeed, in my office I think the technical term for what the Twitterverse is doing right now is “blowing up.”

I suggest to the Senator from Kentucky and Rand Paul and others who—this is but a small sampling of the reaction in Twitter. Indeed, in my office I think the technical term for what the Twitterverse is doing right now is “blowing up.”
feel too few elected officials in Washington stand for our rights, are willing to rock the boat, are willing to stand up and say the Constitution matters. And it matters whether it is popular or not, it matters whether my party is in power or not. It matters in principle. It matters in practice. It matters in our Constitution. Our rights matter. And I think so many Americans are frustrated that they view elected officials as looking desperate to stay in power, desperate to be reelected to do everything in the fight for the Constitution and fight for our liberties, and I think this pouring out the Senator from Kentucky is seeing is a reflection of that great frustration.

I join with the sentiments of these and many others on Twitter. I ask the Senator from Kentucky if he was aware of this reaction and what his thoughts are to the many thousands more—haven’t been able to read their tweets—and their words of encouragement. The Senator from Kentucky more than anyone is standing with Rand.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Texas for coming to the floor and cheering me up. I was getting kind of tired. I appreciate him bringing news from the outside world.

As you know, we are not allowed to have electronics on the floor, so I don’t really have much knowledge of the electronic outside world. But actually it is probably a good thing for every American eventually not to see their phone or their computer for about 8 hours.

The thing is, people think that we should not—people are always saying don’t fight, get along, and stuff. I think people do want that. I think at the same time they want you to stand up and stand for something and believe in something. It doesn’t have to mean that we do it in an acrimonious way. Even the Senator from Illinois and I usually have civilized words together. There is a smile.

The thing about it is that there are principles we ought to stand for. I think the most important principle here, though, is that really this is a tug-of-war between the executive branch and the legislative branch. There may be some partisanship, that we can’t all get together in the Senate to say to the President that we think his power should be restrained, but I think at the same time there are some on the other side who are saying that. Really, that is what this should be about.

It is about how much power a President can have. Can a President have the power to decide to kill Americans on American soil? But not only that, can the President have the power to decide when the Bill of Rights applies?

Can you be targeted because you have been alleged to have committed some crime and your Bill of Rights is stripped away even if you are here in the United States? I think it is a pretty easy question.

Maybe someone from the media would ask the President tonight—I don’t know if he is still up or not—but ask the President the question. Do you plan on killing Americans who are not in combat? Do you plan on killing Americans who are not in a combat position, people whom you might be accusing of some kind of not engaged in combat? I would think it would be a simple answer. In fact, I am willing to go home if we can get an answer from the President that says: People not engaged in combat won’t be on any target list. It is pretty simple question to ask and a pretty reasonable question to ask.

After much jockeying and debate with the Senator from Texas asking the Attorney General this question, we finally did get to where it seems as though he was coming toward not trying to but being forced to say it is not constitutional to kill noncombatants. It should be an easy question. So we will take a telegram. We will even take a tweet. If the Attorney General would tweet us, we can have that relayed to the floor and let him know—let us know that basically they acknowledge that their power is not unlimited.

I don’t think this is really an overstatement of the cause. This has been written up, Glenn Greenwald has written this up, Conor Friedersdorf has written this up, talking about if you have a war that has no end, if you have a war that has no geographic limit, and then if you have drones that have no constitutional bounds, basically what you have is an unlimited imperial Presidency.

This is not a partisan issue. A lot of things are the same. I admired the President when he ran for office. It seems as though he was coming toward not trying to but being forced to say it is not constitutional to kill noncombatants. That is not enough. The law is what the law is. If the law allows you to be detained as an American citizen, what about the next guy who is not so high-minded? The next guy who decides he is going to detain political opponents and ethnic groups or people he dislikes? What happens when that happens? It is not enough to say: I don’t intend to do something.

I would think the leader of the free world, the leader of I think one of the most important nations if not the most important nation or civilization we have had in historic times—I have high hopes and high expectations of who we are. We are not people. It is not enough for him to say: I don’t intend to break the Constitution. You either believe in the Constitution or you do not.

I think illustrative of sort of this opinion was when I interviewed or asked questions to Senator Kerry when he was being nominated. I asked him these questions about, can you go to war without a declaration of war. His answer was, oh, of course I will support the Constitution, except for when I don’t support the Constitution, when it is inconvenient. It is sometimes hard to go to war, it is messy, there is all this voting stuff, and people don’t want to vote to go to war, they don’t want to raise taxes. It is just hard for the vote for war. So when it is inconvenient, I will not.

That is the problem.

He asked me or sort of insinuated that I was an absolutist. I don’t know how to halfway believe that Congress should be given the power to not know how to halfway believe in the fifth amendment. This is not one we are even debating exactly what it means, what the establishment clause of the first amendment means. There is really not a lot of debate over what due process is. When you are accused of a crime, when you are accused of something, you are indicted. When you are accused, you get a trial, you get due process. Nobody is debating what that means. Yet the Attorney General for this President has said that the fifth amendment will be applied when they can.

To be fair, I think he is referring to foreign strikes. He is talking about foreign strikes. To tell you the truth, it is kind of muddled, whether the Constitution applies to people in foreign lands or in foreign zones. But that is the whole point of this. The point is that this is America. We are not talking about a battlefield. We are not talking about people using legal force. If you are in America, if you are outside the Capitol and you have a grenade launcher, you will be killed without due process. You don’t get due process. You don’t get an attorney. You don’t get Miranda rights. Nobody thinks that you do. But if you are sitting in a cafe, and somebody thinks you e-mailed your cousin in the Middle East, and they think they can conspire with them, you should be charged. You should be imprisoned if they can make the charges stick. But they should not just drop a Hellfire missile on your cafe experience.

We have to realize and the President above all people—someone who taught constitutional law should realize that his opinion is not so important. Even as the President, it is not so important. For him to say that he doesn’t intend to kill people—I would defy a constitutional lawyer in our country to say that is important. The law is what it is, and he is going to give us a legal interpretation of the law and not what his intent is. To say he hasn’t killed anybody yet, he has no intention of killing anybody but he might, is just not a legal standard I chose to live by. It concerns me.

It concerns me that we have documents in the United States that are produced by the government that indicate people who might be a terrorist. The Bureau of Justice came out with one last year, and it said people who are missing fingers, people who have colored stains on their clothes, people who have 7 days of soil, might be terrorists. Ironically, another government Web site says that if you live on the coast, you should have 7 days of food because there might be a hurricane, you might need to have the food. But another Web site says that if you do, you might be crazy and a lunatic and a survivalist, and you might be someone we might need to target with a drone. If you see somebody hiding this, you are supposed to report them. If you hear of people who have guns in their minivan, lots of weatherized ammunition or ready-to-eat meals, they could be on the target list. Of that is whom we are targeting to be terrorists, I would certainly want a trial. I just wouldn’t think it would be enough to be accused.

People say: Oh, well, they are just members of al-Qaida, but they don’t have a membership card. I don’t know that they don’t have one because they are dead; they were blown up with a missile, so no one is looking at their al-Qaida membership card. The thing is in the United States they might say someone is associated with al-Qaeda. But al-Qaeda is a political organization. We have had experience with government offices and officials talking about people who might be terrorists.

The Fusion Centers in Missouri said people who are pro-life might be terrorists. They said people who are for secure borders might be terrorists. They said the people who vote for the Constitution Party or the Libertarian Party might be terrorists. So if they just disagree with the Constitution Party Convention, that could probably hit a caravan and hit a whole bunch of them at once.

People say that is absurd. The President is not a terrorist. He is advocating a drone strike in America, and all we have to compare it with is the drone strike overseas. He doesn’t want to talk about it, but when forced to, he says the rules will probably be slightly different inside the United States than they will be outside the United States. I guess he believes he has a right to have a drone strike program in the United States. He will just have slightly different rules.

I have an important question for him. He needs to give me a call. Is one of the rules of inside the U.S. drone strike program to obey the Constitution that a person will get a trial by a jury of his peers? Is that what he is going to be in the rules for inside America as opposed to outside America?

It is disturbing that it has been so hard to get any information on this. I wouldn’t have gotten any information at all—I don’t think we got any support from the other side.

The Senator from Oregon stood in the committee. In fact, he asked the question before I did. I was fascinated he asked the question. Senator Wyden stood in the Intelligence Committee and asked: Can you do a drone strike on Americans on American soil? John Brennan’s response—I kid you not—we need to optimize transparency and we need to optimize efficiency. That was his answer. Here is the followup question: What does that mean? Does that mean you can kill Americans on American soil? What are you trying to say or what are you trying not to say? To put it another way, I have not been answered the question only when there was a threat of him not getting out of committee—thanks to the bipartisan support of Republicans and Democrats threatening to hold him up. He finally got out, but on the day we threatened to hold him up, he finally responded.

I sent him questions a month and a half previously, and I finally got an answer after the threat of his nomination not coming out of committee. This is not the way it should work. The President is bragging about how transparent the guy is, that he believes in transparency, that he is such a high-minded fellow, but he won’t give any answer about someone that might be a terrorist. The same thing with the President.

So we finally get an answer and John Brennan says: Well, the CIA cannot kill people in the United States, it is not legal under the law. Yes, we knew that. Thanks. Thanks for admitting you are going to obey the law. We feel blessed that you said you will now obey the law. But it is sad that it took a month and a half—and under severe duress—that they have admitted they will obey the law and the CIA will not kill you in America.

The problem is it is kind of a tricky answer because they are not the ones running the drone program. The Defense Department runs the program. We can’t be sure they are not going to kill you, but the Defense Department might. Still the answer is: We haven’t killed anybody yet. We don’t intend to, but we might. So that is what we are going to have to be satisfied with.

I got the answer from the Attorney General, and his was a little more detailed and actually had some good things in it. Basically, he concluded by saying they could conceive of a place where someone could get attacked or where the United States could attack Americans, but the examples they came up with were not what we were asking about. So it is sort of akin to answering a question but answering the question that wasn’t asked.

They said: Well, if planes are flying at the Twin Towers and if Pearl Harbor is happening again, obviously, we could see a use for drone strikes. Well, me too. I mean, if we are being attacked and there is a war or even if there is a war in a country, we have the ability to respond to that. No one is questioning that. The reason this question comes up is that a significant portion of the drone strikes overseas are occurring on people who are not involved in combat.

Now there are allegations that there are bad people and they may have been in combat but are not currently in combat. The question is: Are we going to use the foreign drone strike model and say United States going to kill noncombatants in the United States? Are we going to kill people whom we suspect? That sort of gets us to the other question when we talk about what rules and procedures we expect in our country. Do we expect that the police would come and arrest you and put you in jail for the rest of your life because they suspect something? Is suspicion enough? Obviously not. We believe that is the beginning of it. Usually, it involves probable cause and involves a judge to get information.

I have a message here—not from the White House. It is a message saying the White House hasn’t returned our phone. calls. If anybody knows anybody at the White House and wants to come, we are looking for an answer from the White House. We have called Justice also. I think the answer says something about the sequester. Maybe they are going to call me when the sequester is over.

I think one of the courtesies they ought to think about is—particularly if what they are hearing is something that they don’t object to—why not end the debate by going ahead and letting us know? Why not go ahead and let us know anyway? They are not going to be killing noncombatants. I would think that would be a pretty easy answer for them. In negotiating with any kind of executive branch—this one or others—that when we get a nonanswer or a nonresponsive answer or get a refusal to answer, I think that is when we need to be concerned that the answer is not the answer they want to be public. It is an answer that perhaps the fifth amendment will be optional depending on who is judging the circumstances.

As we look forward and look at some of the information that has been gathered over time on this, one of the interesting articles we have collected on this is also an article in the Los Angeles Times entitled “Police employ Predator drone spy planes on the home front.” This is an article by Brian Bennett.

Reporting from Washington—Armed with a search warrant, San Diego County Sheriff Kelly Janke was looking for six missing children from the Brossart family farm in the early evening of June 23. Three men brandishing rifles chased him off, he said. Janke knew the gunman could be anywhere on the 3,000-acre spread in eastern North Dakota. Fearful of an armed standoff, he called in reinforcements from the state Highway Patrol, a regional SWAT team, a bomb squad, ambulances and deputy sheriffs from three other counties.

He also called in a Predator B drone.

As the unmanned aircraft circled 2 miles overhead the next morning, sophisticated sensors under the nose helped pinpoint the three men and the weapons they were armed. Police rushed in and made the first known arrests of U.S. citizens with help from a Predator, the spy drone that has helped revolutionize modern warfare.

But that was just the start. Local police say they have used two unarmed Predators based at Grand Forks Air Force Base to fly at least dozens of surveillance flights since June. The FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration have used Predators for other domestic investigations, officials said.

“We go on every call out,” said Bill Macki, head of the police SWAT team in Grand Forks. “If we have something in town like an apartment complex, we don’t call them.”

The drones belong to U.S. Customs and Border Protection, which operates eight Predators on the country’s northern and southwestern borders to search for illegal immigrants and smugglers. The previously unreported use of its drones to assist local, state, and federal law enforcement has occurred without any public acknowledgement or debate.

Congress first authorized Customs and Border Protection to use unarmed Predators in 2005. Officials in charge of the fleet cite broad authority to work with police from budget requests to Congress that cite “interior law enforcement support” as part of their mission.

In an interview, Michael C. Kostelnik, a retired Air Force general who heads the office that supervises drones, said Predators are flown “in many areas around the country, not only for federal operators, but also for state and local law enforcement.”

But former Rep. Jane Harman (D-Venice), who sat on the House homeland security intelligence subcommittee at the time and served as its chairwoman from 2007 until this year, said no one discussed using Predators to help local police serve warrants or do other basic work. Using Predators for routine law enforcement without public debate or clear legal authority is a mistake, Harman said.

“There is no question that this could become something that people will regret,” said Harman, who resigned from the House in February and now heads the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, a Washington think tank.

The point is it isn’t so much about technology. I am not opposed to drones being used even domestically. It is about what freedom it is, about the process, and it is about how they are used. For example, just like in national defense, if someone is robbing a liquor store and it is safer to get the robber down with a drone, that is fine. But if someone is threatening people in the liquor store and people as they come out, I don’t mind if that person was shot with a drone or a rifle from a policeman. It is what it is. As one of my friends who is a physician would say when people come out of the liquor store robbing someone: Well, I guess that is an occupational hazard if you break into homes. The thing is it isn’t the force we are talking about, it is whether the process is right. So they can use lethal force when lethal force is threatened. The question about drones is whether they are being used with warrants, if they are spying on someone or doing surveillance on someone.

One of the bills we introduced last year was a House bill with warrants for drone surveillance. This is a hot topic, and I think it will probably get up to the Supreme Court. I don’t believe it has yet. There were cases that were talking about GPS tagging of cars, and the Supreme Court ruled they cannot do that without a warrant.

My suspicion is they will rule in favor of warrants on drones too. Although there is some dispute over what they call open spaces. I think that with open spaces, they are concerned that just because you are not inside your house does not mean you don’t have the right to look at what people are doing in their backyard? I don’t accept that. I think it has been abused and we should be fighting against this surveillance state.

Advocates say Predators are simply more effective than other planes. Flying out of earshot and out of sight, a Predator B can watch a target for 20 hours nonstop, far longer than any police helicopter or manned aircraft.

What I would say is law enforcement seems as though that might be somewhat analogous to the GPS case. The Supreme Court ruled that you can’t tag people’s cars and watch them constantly, waiting to see if they break any laws. So I would think the same for a Predator, that you stake them out, watch, and you will eventually get somebody breaking the speed limit or running a stop sign. I don’t think that is what was meant by that.

Howard Safir says, “I am for the use of drones.” He is the former head of operations of the U.S. Marshals Service and former New York City police commissioner. He said, “Drones could help police in manhunt, hostage situations and other difficult cases.”

I agree completely. If someone is being held in harm’s way, if someone is being held and threatened, drones are a great idea. So it is not that I am opposed to the technology. I am not particularly excited about them hovering outside our windows looking over our shoulders at what magazines we read, whether we are reading any free market novels that might be offensive to government officials. So I think we don’t want people looking into our activities in our houses without a warrant. But I think in situations where people have already broken the law, there is lethal force being exposed anywhere in danger, so wouldn’t we want to use a drone versus a policeman to save the life of a policeman going into a difficult situation. So I think those probably will come to fruition, I don’t know why, but they will.

In some ways it is a little bit analogous to the situation we are talking about with drone strikes by the military in the United States. It is not so much that anybody is opposed to using a drone to shoot down a plane that is flying into to attack us, or people who are flying into a building to knock a building down, or flying into the Capitol. Nobody is opposed to using a drone when there is a lethal imminent force. The problem is it has gotten so convoluted. President Obama said an imminent threat doesn’t have to be immediate. So that is the kind of thing we are concerned about. We are not concerned about an imminent or lethal threat where someone responds. What we are concerned about is a drone strike against a noncombatant. It seems as though it ought to be an easy question for the President. Couldn’t he at least respond and say, I have always believed this, I just forgot to mention it, and it is very clear in the way we expressed it but, obviously, we would never use a drone against a noncombatant. He needs to say that, though, because the drones overseas are being used against noncombatants and we need to know what the rules are going to be.

This is a long, drawn-out day, but it is to try to get some answers. It is to try to shame the President into doing the right thing. I think he knows what the right thing is. I think the President of the United States would like to do the right thing. But I think there is a certain stubbornness there too. I think there is a certain belief that he is the President and Presidents have all this power and he doesn’t want to give up any of that power. I think some of that is with Republicans and Democrats, frankly. When people leave the legislative branch and go to the White House, they think, I am a good person. I worked hard, so why would it be worse if I got more power? Why would it be worse if I said, I am going to use the fifth amendment, people will get due process, except for sometimes when I think they are bad people, and if we don’t use the fifth amendment, they won’t get due process.

Privacy advocates say that drones help police snoop on citizens in ways that push current law to the breaking point. Ryan Calo, director for privacy and robotics at Stanford Law School’s Center for Internet and Society, says:

Any time you have a tool like that in the hands of law enforcement that makes it easier to do surveillance, they will do more of it. This could be a time when people are uncomfortable and they want to place limits on that technology. It could make us question the doctrines that you do not have privacy in public.

I think that is a good point. Maybe we will question some of the things we have said before about open spaces now that we can crisscross every inch of our open spaces. We have to imagine that we now have drones that weigh less than an ounce, so we are not even talking about the pictures of you coming down—some of us after a while don’t want pictures of us in our bathing suit, whether it is 2 miles up or whether it is from 5 feet in front of us. So I can’t imagine we would eventually rule that a drone could swoop down and be 10 feet over our fence. What is the question going to be? Can they be 10 feet over our fence or 2,000 feet in the air and still not have any kind of problem at all?

Do we want to live in a police state is basically what the question is. Do we want to live in a surveillance state? It is going to take people to stand up and say enough. We are not going to do this, instead of everybody being like a herd of lemmings and going off the cliff saying, “Lead me, lead me, take care of me.”

We have to ask the question that Franklin asked: Are you going to trade your liberty for security? Are you so fearful, are you so afraid that you are willing to trade your liberty for security? That is sort of the underlying question to this entire debate.

The Los Angeles Times article continues:

This can be a time when people are uncomfortable and they want to place limits on that technology. It could make us question the doctrine that you do not have privacy in public.

This is from a June 13 article, 2012, in “Wired” magazine by Lorenzo Franceschi-Bicchierai:

We like to think of the drone war as something far away in the deserts of Yemen or the mountains of Afghanistan. But we now know it is closer than we thought. There are 64 drone bases on American soil. That includes 12 locations housing Predator and Reaper unmanned aerial vehicles, which can be armed.

Public Intelligence, a non-profit that advocates for free access to information, released a map—which is probably not a very good idea—showing the locations of where our drone bases are the United States.

The possibility of military drones as well as those controlled by police departments and universities flying over American skies has raised concerns among privacy activists. The American Civil Liberties Union explained in its December report that the machines potentially could be used to spy on American citizens. The drones’ presence in our skies threaten to eradicate existing practical limits on aerial monitoring and allow the government to conduct pervasive surveillance, eluding all due process, and the possible use of these tools in a way that would eventually eliminate the privacy Americans have traditionally enjoyed in their movements and activities.

I have told people that when I first read “1984,” I was bothered by it. Everybody is bothered by Big Brother being able to have these two-way television in your house and they see everything you do. You can’t escape Big Brother. But part of the consolation I had and part of the feeling was, Well, they can’t do this. The technology doesn’t exist. When I was a kid it didn’t exist.

It is amazing, though, to think that Orwell writes this in 1949, before any of this technology. We were getting closer in the 1970s when I was a kid and now we are there, though. The technology is there. So while technology is not an end and technology is something we can or should ban, technology makes our privacy more important, it makes the defense of our privacy something that needs to be guarded more jealously, because our government now has these technologies to our every movement, to monitor our every move. So do our enemies, for that matter. So one can imagine, we don’t want the police GPS tracking us and we probably don’t want our political opponents tracking our car, either. So there have to be some protections of privacy.

The issue and discussion of privacy has been one that conservatives and people who have been otherwise unified about. Libertarian on the right have been better with these issues and some conservatives have as well. But the question has always been, Do you have a right to privacy? I have always said, Sure, you have a right to privacy. I can’t imagine why you wouldn’t have a right to privacy.

Some on the conservative side say, Well, you don’t have a right to privacy; nobody talked about it in the Constitution. You don’t necessarily have a right to privacy. I have to disagree because I think what is talked about in the Constitution are the freedoms we gave up or agreed to have limited. The freedoms that you didn’t agree to have limited are unnamed. They are unenumerated. The 9th and 10 amendments say they are to be left to the States and people. The 9th and 10 amendments say that there is a plethora of rights, there is an unlimited amount of rights and they are yours. They are yours unless the government explicitly takes these rights away from you.

So the conclusion I come to, with the right to privacy is I think you do have a right to privacy. I think we have a right to privacy. Private property isn’t listed in the Constitution, either, but I think all of our Founding Fathers believed in private property and some of them talked about actually putting the words in there. But I think some of them liked more the idea—instead of life, liberty, and property, they liked life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, and I think it has a more noble ring to it because it is not talking about the property, but pursuit of happiness.

One of the things about our government and about the rule of law, and one of the things that frankly I think a lot of people don’t think about but that makes us an incredibly prosperous Nation is the certainty of property. By that, what I mean is the certainty of ownership. This gets to sort of the idea of not only do we want these rights for the civil protections so we can’t be incarcerated or have a crime against us, but being able to defend ourselves, we also want the rule of law to be consistent for everyone and not mutable. We don’t want it to be arbitrary. We don’t want the whims of any politician or any executive to be able to decide what the law is.

This isn’t the first time I have had some disagreement with the President on this. When we had some of the bankruptcies, when the car companies were going bankrupt, I believe it was with the Chrysler bankruptcy, that as things went through, there were people who were creditors and they owned part of the company.

I learned this firsthand because I also had some Fruit of the Loom. When Fruit of the Loom went bankrupt, I thought, well, I will get something, right? They will be bought out, and I will get some money when they are bought out. I did not get anything. I was an unsecured creditor. Apparently, in the Chrysler thing, so were the labor unions.

Usually what happens is that as a company, unfortunately, goes bankrupt, all those contracts would be re-negotiated. When Americans peasants, it could become like Toyota or other successful companies that are nonunionized. And they might become successful again.

But instead we took the actual bankruptcy law and turned it on its head. When we do this and when we bail out banks and things and change the rules at midpoint, it changes what investors do, and it changes that certainty investors need either in banks or in car companies.

Pension plans invest in a lot of these things. So a lot of people think, oh, well, the President had preference for the union because he liked the union. Well, that is true. But the government is also a union too, and they had a pension plan, and they owned Chrysler stock, and they got ripped off because he changed the law and gave the money to the autoworkers’ union. But he took it from someone else.

The problem is that you need those pension funds, some of which are for regular working folks. Firemen have them. Police have them. Teachers have them. It is one of the things that were not fully explained in the Romney campaign. He got so much grief for running these funds, but a lot of the people who became successful along with him and who made money were just average, ordinary citizens who are teachers and policemen. Their pension plan was there in Bain Capital. I think that was never fully explained.

But my point is, with the rule of law, that certainty is what creates wealth in our country. One of the reasons it is hard for Africa to get ahead—Africa has great resources—diamonds and minerals. One of the big reasons they do not get ahead is there is corruption in their government. Some of that corruption is alliances, and also because we give foreign aid extremely to corrupt governments that steal it.

Mubarak was one of the richest men in the world—probably one of the highest in the world. So maybe between $5 and $10 billion, maybe between $15 and $20 billion. We gave him $60 billion, so I guess we should be thankful he only stole one-third of it. Mobutu in Central Africa stole billions. There was no winning water, no electricity. He and the soldiers around him lived high off the hog, and they took our money and stole it as well.

But the problem is that not only do you have the kleptocracy and the stealing of foreign aid, but then you do not have the certainty of your property. A lot of capital formation in our country is based on your home loans. It used to be before the housing market went south, but it still is. It is where a lot of capital comes from, particularly from average, ordinary citizens borrowing against their house.

If you do not have that certainty of the law, it is a problem. So what we are talking about today is more certainty of your liberty from unfair prosecution that arrests you or unfair detention. Ultimately, from a drone, which takes consistency of law, which takes that the Constitution will be adhered to and will be adhered to consistently and not in an arbitrary fashion. So it is important what everybody exactly what a rule of law means and how important it is. Hayek wrote that nothing more clearly distinguishes an arbitrary society from a stable society than the rule of law. He said that the rule of law gives that certainty to the marketplace. So it is not enough just to have freedom. You can have complete and random anarchy, and you may well get prosperity if you do not have a law that stabilizes things. You have to have a police force and a judiciary that enforces contracts.

So that is a lot of what goes on in the developing world that they do not have. They have kleptocracy, which we are not used to get by giving them money and giving it to thieves because the thieves are our friends, not somebody else’s friends. But then they also have this instability by not having a rule of law.

The drones’ presence in our skies “threaten to eradicate existing practical limits on aerial monitoring . . . .

This comes from an article in Wired by Lorenzo Franceschi-Bicchieri.

As Danger Room reported last month, even military drones, which are prohibited from spying on Americans, may “accidentally” conduct such surveillance—and keep the data for months afterwards while they figure out what to do with it.

The material they collect without a warrant, as scholar Steven Aftergood revealed, could then be used to open an investigation. The Posse Comitatus Act prohibits the U.S. military from operating on American soil . . .

So once again, if we go back to asking the President this question: Can you do military strikes on Americans on American soil, you know an easy answer is, I will obey the law. The law says he cannot do it. Yet he indicates that he is going to have different rules for drones, which he envisions for his drone strikes, which implies that he thinks he can do it.

The Posse Comitatus Act expressly forbids the military from operating in the United States. So if he is going to kill Americans in America, it will either be in defiance of the Posse Comitatus Act or he is going to have to arm the FBI with drones to kill people.
The problem is that I think once he gets into the FBI, the ludicrous nature of what he is asserting will really be paramount. I cannot imagine that he can argue at that point that we are not going to obey the Bill of Rights with the FBI because we already do with the FBI.

So many of the answers are pretty simple here and pretty easy, and I just cannot imagine why he is resisting doing this.

This new map comes out almost two months after the Electronic Frontier Foundation revealed another one, this time of public agencies—including police departments and universities—that have a permit issued by the Federal Aviation Agency to use [drones] in American airspace.

"It goes to show you how entrenched drones already are," said Trevor Timm, an EFF activist, when asked about the new map. "It's clear that the drone industry is expanding rapidly and this map is just another example of that. And if people are worried about military technology coming back and being sold in the US, this is just another example of how drone technology is probably going to proliferate in the US very soon."

This is another article from February of 2013.

This is in Wired. It is called "Domicile-Drone Industry Prepares for Big Battle With Regulators."

For a day, a sandy-haired Virginian named Jeremy Novara was the hero of the nascent domestic drone industry.

Novara went to the microphone at a ballroom in the Ritz-Carlton outside Washington, D.C., and did something many in his business want to do: tenaciously challenge the drone regulators at the Federal Aviation Administration to loosen restrictions on unmanned planes over the United States. Judging from the reaction he received, and from the stated intentions of the drone advocates who convened the forum, the domestic-drone industry expects to do a lot more of that in the coming months.

There has been a lot of hype around unmanned drones becoming a fixture over U.S. airspace. . . .

You may have seen just 2 days ago, I think, a pilot coming into New York City saw one on the way down. And I saw the report, I think yesterday, saying they are still asking whose drone it was. You would think certainly we would have found out in 24 hours. I would think for certain it probably would be a government drone. But it is a little worrisome that they are seeing drones and not knowing who is flying them or where they are as far as getting in the way of our commercial airliners.

There has been a lot of hype around unmanned drones becoming a fixture over U.S. airspace for all kinds of private use. And for operations by businesses as varied as farmers and filmmakers.

It sort of leads to another point—that it is not the technology that we are opposed to. There are going to be all kinds of private uses for drones. There have to be some rules for where they are flown so they do not get in the way of airplanes. But I would think farmers and ranchers might want to use drones to, I don’t know, count their cattle or their sheep. I do not know if you do that. But there are going to be private uses for these drones that will not be objectionable.

All have big implications for traditional concepts of privacy. Unmanned planes can loiter over people’s backyards and snap pictures for far longer than piloted aircraft.

The government is anticipating that drone makers could generate a windfall of cash as drones move from a military to a civilian role.

Jim Williams of the Federal Aviation Administration told [a conclave of the drone industry] that the potential market for government and commercial drones could generate "nearly $90 billion in economic activity."

But there’s an obstacle: the Federal Aviation Administration.

The FAA has been reluctant to grant licenses out of fear that the drones, which maneuver poorly, have an alarming crash rate, and are spookish, don’t have the savvy to spot approaching aircraft, which could complicate and endanger U.S. airspace.

The FAA has been criticized some by—there is a group called the Electronic Frontier Foundation, and I think they have done a transparent job about its licenses. And they have filed Freedom of Information Act because they would like to know whether the intentions of those putting the drones up is benign or whether it involves some kind of surveillance.

We talk a lot about the government spying on us, but I think there is great potential for your competitors, your enemies, and other people to spy on you with drones, particularly as they become cheaper. Those issues will be complicated. I think one way to sort of rectify or give an answer to those is to say your property from where it starts on the ground up is yours. People can fly over it, but I do not think they should be able to swoop and look down in it—I think probably private or public looking down on your property. That will be something, though, that the courts will continue to have to work out.

There was a push last year by Congress and the Obama administration directing the FAA to fully integrate unmanned aircraft into American skies. It has not been nearly enough for the drone makers. The FAA is months late in designating six test sites for drones around the country. The question is when the test site selection will begin.

"I’m sure that’s what all of you are asking now," says Williams, the head of the FAA’s drone division.

Drone makers are also frustrated by the logic of existing FAA regulations. Currently, a drone weighing under 55 pounds, flying below 400 feet within an operator’s line of sight and away from an airport is considered by the FAA to fly without a license. That is, if it is not engaging in any for-profit activity—sort of. "A farmer can be a modeller if they operate their aircraft as a hobby for whatever purpose they wish," according to the FAA.

Enter Novara, a 31-year-old who owns a small drone business in Falls Church, Va. called Vanilla Aircraft. "If a farmer, who follows the FAA regulations to use a drone in a hobby setting, such as a hobbyist an unmanned aircraft," Novara challenged Williams, "why can’t I, as the owner of an unmanned aircraft company, fly as a hobbyist my own unmanned aircraft over property that I own? The guidelines before this were that any commercial intent is prohibited, but . . .

The bottom line is that there is going to be a lot of things we are going to enter into with private drones. But opposition to the technology, either for military purposes or for private purposes, is not something we are going after. What we are asking is whether your privacy will be respected and whether your constitutional rights will be protected.

This is a new article from today by Conor Friedersdorf. It is called "Killing Americans on U.S. Soil: Eric Holder’s Evasive, Manipulative Letter."

On December 7, 1941, Japanese warplanes bombed the U.S. naval base at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Six decades later, al-Qaeda terrorists flew hijacked airplanes into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. Neither President Roosevelt nor President . . . Bush targeted and killed Americans on U.S. soil in the aftermath of those attacks. Doing so wouldn’t have made any sense.

How strange, then, that Attorney General Eric Holder invoked those very attacks in a letter written to a Haitian company that believes there are circumstances in which he could order Americans targeted and killed on U.S. soil.

It is kind of strange. The things that he gives as justification are things in which we did not and did not think it was.

It’s possible, I suppose, to imagine—

These are Eric Holder’s words now.

It’s possible, I suppose, to imagine an extraordinary circumstance in which it would be necessary and appropriate under the Constitution and applicable laws for the President to authorize the military to use lethal force within the territory of the United States. For example, the President could conceivably have no choice but to authorize the military to go into a country in order to protect the homeland in circumstances of a catastrophic attack like what happened in 1941. Again on occasion to be guarded against is a President using the pretext of a terrorist attack to seize extraordinary powers. Isn’t that among the most likely scenarios for the United States turning into an authoritarian police state?

To be sure, if Americans are at the controls of fighter jets en route to Haiti, of course Obama could order that they be fired upon. If Americans hijacked a plane, of course it would be possible to order them to crash it before they could crash it into a building. But those are not the sorts of targeted killings we are talking about. What we are talking about is killing people not engaged in combat because you suspect them of being a terrorist.

point is, though, that they are saying they are applying the fifth amendment sort of in private to al-Awlaki.

The question is, if this is the stand-actual use of the fifth amendment, going to be the pretend use that is done

But that is the way they are admin-to when to administer the fifth amendment. I do not know how that is going to work. I also do not think that is ap-we need to ask whether he is going to—

This is an additional quote from Holder from the same speech:

The Constitution’s guarantee of due proca recent court decision makes clear, “it does not require judicial approval before the President may use force abroad against a senior operational leader of a foreign ter-

Well, that is kind of confusing. If that is going to be the standard here, I

Elsewhere in his letter, Holder writes that “the US government has not carried out drones in the United States...and has no intention of doing so. As a policy matter moreover, we reject the use of military force where well-established law enforcement authorities provide the best means for incapacitating a terrorist threat...”

Threat for the Obama Administration, conceding that the executive branch is legally forbidden to do

So it is kind of interesting. When they are willing to admit to any kind of limitations on their power they say: “Policywise” they might be limited, but they are not willing to say “legally” they are limited. This is a problem of not just this administration, but the previous one of thinking that any kind of which they give to another branch of government, that they will be losing some of their power and they are unwill-

Friedersdorf goes on to say that:

For the Obama administration, conceding that the executive branch is legally forbidden to do certain things is verboten, despite the fact that an unchecked executive is much more dangerous than the possibility of a future vigilant failing to do enough to fight back against an actual attack on our homeland.

Any thinking person can see that Holder’s letter is non-responsive, evasive, and delib-

The time to discuss the appropriate scope the nation, as Holder suggests. The fact that he disagrees speaks volumes about team

Obama’s real shortcomings.

This is another article from Wired.
This is from today. This is by Spencer Ackerman.

The Obama administration calls it “targeted killing.” Steven Segal would call it getting marked for death. It’s the practice of singling out an individual linked to a terrorist group, then killing him. It has been played out hundreds of times in the 9/11 era—inccluding more recently against U.S. citizens like Abdulmutallab—without obtaining a warrant for al-Awlaki. The Obama team has said next to nothing about how it works or what laws restrict it, Until Monday.

Attorney Eric Holder explained the administration’s reasoning for killing American citizens overseas—and only overseas—with drone strikes and other means during a speech at the University of Northwestern University. Holder claimed that the government can kill “a U.S. citizen who is a senior operational leader or associated forces” provided the government—unilaterally—determines that citizen poses “an imminent threat of violent attack.”

Once again, a little bit of a problem on the imminent doctrine is that “imminent” does not have to mean “immediate.”

—he can’t be captured; and “law of war principles,” like the use of proportional force and the minimization of collateral damage, appl.

The reason why some of this is important—even though he is talking about overseas now and not what we are trying to figure out is that since we have not been given sort of the parameters for how they will kill Americans in America, we can only assume that they will work with the parameters they have overseas. The whole idea that an imminent threat is not immediate is problematic no mater where that doctrine is used.

The idea that the law-of-war principles—I think proportional force is a good idea as far as trying to restrain how much force we use. But there are other things within the law of war that we need to be concerned about; things that happen in war are not quite the same kind of standard that we would have in the United States.

Ackerman goes on and he says:

does not like us around the world. I am not sure if there is ever an end to that. I think there are problems overseas. But particularly the problem is—I think the problem at hand that we are trying to get to the root of is, is this the case? If you’re using this standard overseas are you going to increase the standard here that basically the fifth amendment applies when we think it applies, and it does not apply when we do not think it applies?

This is Ackerman, at this point, from Wired again.

Holder did not explain why Awlaki’s 16-year-old son, whom a missile strike killed two weeks after his father’s death, was a lawful target. Holder did not explain how a missile strike represents due process, or what the standards for due process the government must meet when killing a U.S. citizen abroad. Holder did not explain why the government can only target U.S. citizens suspected of terrorism for death overseas and not necessarily domestically.

As I said, a lot of these things overseas you can debate and try to decide whether this is a war zone or not a war zone. But they obviously do not apply in the United States. The most troubling thing about the killing of the 16-year-old son of Awlaki is the President’s spokesman’s response to this. You know, the flippancy of it and the irresponsible nature for him to have said: Well, he should have chosen another son. I think you have more responsible parents. If that is the standard we are going to have for killing Americans on American soil, that we are going to kill people who do not have this irresponsible nature for him to have said: Well, he should have chosen another son.

I think al-Awlaki was killed—I don’t know. I have not seen the classified information. I think the son was killed probably when they either targeted someone else or they did what they called these signature strikes where they don’t know whom they are killing necessarily. They just think they are bad people, they came from a meeting of other bad people: the son was killed.

The decision to kill an American, Holder said, is “among the gravest that government leaders can face.” Targeted killing is not assassination, he argued, because “assassinations are unlawful killings.” Among the few external limitations on the government’s war power that Holder mentioned were the approval of a local government where the strike occurs. Article 51 states that the U.S. may use force against States that are ‘unlawfully belligerent, unsteady U.S. Allies in Pakistan and Yemen.

He is saying an interesting thing, and probably Pakistan has approved of most of the killings. However, Pakistan wants to come in and wants to convince and say: No, we haven’t. They are doing it against our will, but my guess is they have been told.

Some Members of Congress don’t consider that a sufficient safeguard.

The argument would explain exactly how much evidence the president needs in order to decide that a particular American is part of a terrorist group,” says Sen. Ron Wyden (D-Ore.), chair of the Senate’s Intelligence Committee. “It is also unclear to me whether individual Americans must be given the opportunity to surrender before lethal force is used against them. And I’m particularly concerned that the geographic boundaries of this authority have not been clearly stated.

The point on the geographic boundaries is a pretty important point because this is one of the concerning items about what they maintain. They say there are no geographic limitations. They say they get the authority for war everywhere around the world, as well as war here, because they say there were no geographic limitations to the use of authorization of force when we went to war in Afghanistan.

I think people for that—and I would have voted to go to war in Afghanistan—thought we were going to Afghanistan to fight the people who got us on 9/11.

I don’t think they thought, when they say a lot more that resolution, it meant we could have war in the United States under that resolution and that the standard would be one of the laws of war or one of martial law within the United States. I don’t think anybody voting for it was thinking that. That is a real problem. Those people are saying, including the administration is saying, no geographic limitations and, essentially, there are no temporal limitations. We have a perpetual war without any geographic limitations, which now they want to apply war principles to killing in the United States.

Ackerman continues quoting Senator WYDEN:

“And based on what I heard so far, I can’t tell whether or not the Justice Department’s legal arguments would allow the President to order intelligence agencies to kill an American inside the United States.”

He is unclear about it, and he has some of that same information than I have because he is on the Intelligence Committee and sees secure and classified information. He is unsure of it.

This makes me think nobody in the Senate or the Congress knows whether they are asserting they can kill Americans on American soil.

Mary Ellen O’Connell, the vice president of the American Society of International Law, found Holder’s legal rationale flimsy, stating:

“First, [Holder] restates the renamed global war on terror, which Obama himself condemned. Then he tries the United Nations Charter Article 51 but does not include the whole article: It says member states of the U.N. have an ‘inherent right of self-defense’ if an armed attack occurs. Article 51 does very appropriately not provide a legal green light for targeted killing.” O’Connell said in an e-mail. “Finally, he adds the argument that the U.S. may use force against States that are ‘unable or unwilling’ to act. This argument has no basis in international law. It simply does not exist. So regardless of how carefully you target under the law of armed conflict, there is no right in the first instance to target at all.”

Without yielding the floor, I would like to entertain a question from the Senator from Utah.

Mr. LEE: Senator PAUL recently sent a letter requesting some information from the Obama administration relating to drone strikes.

It is significant that on March 4, 2013, just a couple days ago, Senator PAUL received back from the administration a letter signed by Eric H. Holder, Jr., which reads as follows:

Dear Senator PAUL:

On February 20, 2013, you wrote to John Brennan requesting additional information concerning the Administration’s views about whether “the President has the power to authorize the use of lethal force, such as a drone strike, against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil, and without trial.”

As Members of this Administration have previously indicated, the U.S. government has not carried out drone strikes in the United States and has no intention of doing so. As a policy matter, moreover, we reject the idea that the use of military force against a U.S. citizen at home is permissible, even where we are satisfied that due process rights have been asserted. As I said, a lot of these things overseas you can debate and try to decide whether this is a war zone or not a war zone. But they obviously do not apply in the United States. The most troubling thing about the killing of the 16-year-old son of Awlaki is the President’s spokesman’s response to this. They say they get the authority for war everywhere around the world, as well as war here, because they say there were no geographic limitations to the use of authorization of force when we went to war in Afghanistan.

I think people for that—and I would have voted to go to war in Afghanistan—thought we were going to Afghanistan to fight the people who got us on 9/11.

I don’t think they thought, when they say a lot more that resolution, it meant we could have war in the United States under that resolution and that the standard would be one of the laws of war or one of martial law within the United States. I don’t think anybody voting for it was thinking that. That is a real problem. Those people are saying, including the administration is saying, no geographic limitations and, essentially, there are no temporal limitations. We have a perpetual war without any geographic limitations, which now they want to apply war principles to killing in the United States.

Ackerman continues quoting Senator WYDEN:

“And based on what I heard so far, I can’t tell whether or not the Justice Department’s legal arguments would allow the President to order intelligence agencies to kill an American inside the United States.”

He is unclear about it, and he has some of that same information than I have because he is on the Intelligence Committee and sees secure and classified information. He is unsure of it.

This makes me think nobody in the Senate or the Congress knows whether they are asserting they can kill Americans on American soil.

Mary Ellen O’Connell, the vice president of the American Society of International Law, found Holder’s legal rationale flimsy, stating:

“First, [Holder] restates the renamed global war on terror, which Obama himself condemned. Then he tries the United Nations Charter Article 51 but does not include the whole article: It says member states of the U.N. have an ‘inherent right of self-defense’ if an armed attack occurs. Article 51 does very appropriately not provide a legal green light for targeted killing.” O’Connell said in an e-mail. “Finally, he adds the argument that the U.S. may use force against States that are ‘unable or unwilling’ to act. This argument has no basis in international law. It simply does not exist. So regardless of how carefully you target under the law of armed conflict, there is no right in the first instance to target at all.”

Without yielding the floor, I would like to entertain a question from the Senator from Utah.

Mr. LEE: Senator PAUL recently sent a letter requesting some information from the Obama administration relating to drone strikes.
unless it has done so through operation of law with what we call due process of law.

It is on this concept, due process of law, that the 5th and 14th amendments of our Constitution focus so intently. Due process of law is a familiar phrase to many Americans. We have heard this phrase over and over. We understand on some level what it means, but I would like to talk for a few minutes in response to Senator Paul’s question about in order to have due process of law, you need to have a familiar legal standard or at least a legal standard. You have to have a law that is capable of being applied in a way that American citizens can understand.

They can read the law. They can review it. They can understand what the law requires of them. They can understand what it is that the law demands and what it is that the law authorizes the government to do. In the absence of such a law, a law that can be applied, a law that can be understood in advance of its application, you run a very real risk of arbitrary and capricious government where government action is arbitrary, capricious and where it threatens to undermine life, liberty or property but especially life. There is the greatest level of concerns where the greatest level of detail must be examined with regard to what the government wants to do.

In this circumstance, where the question relates to under what circumstances, to what extent the government may take an American life, the government may snuff out the life of an individual American citizen, the government has an obligation to see to it and to assure its citizens that it will not ever undertake such an action without due process of law. To have due process of law, you need to have a discernible legal standard. A discernible legal standard is not entirely evident on the face of this letter. That is understandable. It is just a brief response to Senator PAUL’s inquiry.

It is, however, a little troubling Eric Holder doesn’t do more to assure Senator PAUL in this response to his letter that these kinds of actions wouldn’t be necessary to undertake on American soil, that these kinds of actions would be fraught with constitutional problems when undertaken on American soil.

It is difficult to understand why the Attorney General wouldn’t just say we will not do that. This would be fraught with constitutional problems. This is not something we would do.

Also troubling is the related point that the Attorney General has apparently no legal analysis provided by the chief advisory body within the U.S. Department of Justice. The U.S. Department of Justice is something one might loosely describe as the largest law firm in the United States. It is the law firm of the Federal Government.

Within any law firm you have lawyers who do different things. There are lawyers who specialize primarily in litigation, lawyers who specialize primarily in attracting agreements or in giving advice to people.

The Office of Legal Counsel within the U.S. Department of Justice is the chief advisory office within the U.S. Department of Justice Office of Legal Counsel which drafted one or more memos outlining the circumstances in which the Obama administration might consider undertaking actions involving lethal force against American citizens.

Sadly, many in the Senate have been unable to review those. The American people generally have been unable to review them, but it is particularly frustrating those of us who are members of the Senate Judiciary Committee and, therefore, have an oversight responsibility over the U.S. Department of Justice, have not been fortunate enough to review the memorandum upon which the Obama administration has apparently relied in undertaking this legal action.

I had the opportunity to question and did question this morning Eric Holder with regard to these memorandum. I explained to him the great need we have to be able to review these memorandum, that the Senate Judiciary Committee, the Senate Judiciary Committee, I explained to him this is part of our oversight responsibilities. This is our duty. It is our right to see such documents, and it is very frustrating we have not been allowed to see such documents, and it is unfortunate we have not been able to have such documents as the memorandum.

I added to that my concern what we do have is a different document, not the Office of Legal Counsel memorandum but something simply captioned as the “Department of Justice White Paper.” I always thought that was an interesting phrase, “white paper.” I don’t know why they feel the need to call it that, why they don’t just call it a paper. Normally, we don’t have legal analyses or other important documents that bear this kind of term, that is this white paper. Nonetheless they call it a white paper.

This paper was leaked by the Obama administration to the news media. This particular paper purported to contain some analysis, perhaps in summary form, the same type of analysis of what was used in the still secret Department of Justice Office of Legal Counsel memorandum.

There were a couple things I found very disturbing about the contents of the white paper. First, the white paper focused on the fact that the U.S. Government may use lethal force to kill an American citizen only where there is an imminent threat of some sort. Where the other conditions outlined in the memorandum are satisfied, there still has to be an imminent threat of some sort. There needs to be an imminent threat that the use of lethal force by the government on the U.S. citizen in question is designed to confront.

That is a somewhat familiar legal term. It is used in other context to identify a circumstance in which one thing has to occur in order to prevent something else even worse from happening.

(Mr. SCHATZ assumed the Chair.)

An individual, for example, when confronted with an imminent threat to his or her life, may use lethal force in defending himself or herself in order to avoid that attack—in order to avoid death. But it does have to be an imminent threat. There are other examples. When a person argues that a certain action was undertaken under duress, there does have to be some degree of imminence. And it is appropriate in this circumstance, where we are talking about authorizing the Federal Government of the United States of America to use lethal force on an American citizen, that there ought to be some sort of imminent threat to American national security that necessitates and fully justifies that action.

The strange thing about the white paper is this white paper that was leaked by the Obama administration to the news media, is that it redefined “imminence.” It redefined it completely. It defined it to be something else, something that bears no resemblance to what you or I would call an imminent threat. It suggested that a threat that an imminent threat may occur even when there is nothing that is about to occur on an immediate basis that would involve a loss of American life or an attack on an American compound or in an area or any kind of a loss or a deprivation to American national security.

This is a problem because, as we discussed just a few minutes ago, in order to have due process of law, you have to have law operating, and you have to have law operating as something other than a tool to justify arbitrary and capricious behavior by government. You have to have a discernible, judicially manageable legal standard. Even if it is certain action that was undertaken under duress, there does have to be a legal standard that means something, that has teeth to it, that doesn’t just say government officials may undertake action X, Y, or Z if the government official in question feels moved upon to take such action. There needs to be something that has the capacity to restrain government action, and it needs to be—and the basis of and by operation of generally applicable standards—generally applicable rules of law. That is what we mean when we say due process.

Again, due process and the restrictions that accompany it are at their highest when government wants to take an action that is designed to or could lead to the ending of a human life. The sanctity of human life requires nothing less than that.

Now, there was another part of the memo that was also a little bit disturbing. The other part of the memo suggested it would, of course, be necessary in order to carry out an action involving lethal force against an American citizen; that efforts to capture that individual would somehow prove to be futile; that those efforts wouldn’t work. But there, again, the definition supplied by the white paper suggested something else. The language of the white paper suggested almost that the government official in question, in charging someone to enjoin an American citizen’s life, could be made somewhat arbitrarily, somewhat capriciously. This is a problem.

You don’t want someone sitting there and saying that you say so-and-so is a troublemaker, so-and-so shouldn’t be there, so-and-so has been involved with some very bad actors. So-and-so may in fact be a bad individual, may in fact be associated with people who want to harm the interests of the United States or may even have been involved in the planning of attacks on the United States, but you don’t want the government official in question to be able to end that American citizen’s life just on the basis of flimsy stories. I say flimsy because I have standards, those standards are written down. Those standards are rules that are generally accepted and generally applicable, that govern the conduct of individuals in society, and both the governors and the governed will themselves determine the behavior of those involved in our society.

So our law of laws, our rule of rules, our most fundamental law, is the U.S. Constitution—this 225-year-old document that I happen to believe was written by wise men who put their ideas to writing. Those standards are rules that are generally accepted and generally applicable, that govern the conduct of individuals in society, and both the governors and the governed will themselves determine the behavior of those involved in our society.

You see, that is what this document, our Constitution, the Constitution of the United States, was designed to ensure: that we, as Americans, would live free, and we would live free because our laws would govern us, not the whims or the caprice of individuals.

Now, I do have another letter that I would like to share. This is a letter that was sent to my friend, Senator Paul, from Mr. John Brennan, currently the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and Counterterrorism. This letter is dated from just earlier this week. In fact, it is dated March 5, 2013, and here is what it says:

Dear Senator Paul:

Thank you for your February 20, 2013, letter regarding the power to authorize lethal force, such as against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil, and without trial.

The Department of Justice will address your questions regarding the President’s authorities under separate cover. I can, however, state unequivocally that the agency I have been nominated to lead, the CIA, does not conduct operations outside the United States—or does it have any authority to do so. Thus, if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed as CIA Director, I would have no power to order operations outside the United States.

In addition, I have asked the CIA to respond to your letters of January 25 and February 12, 2013, which raise a number of important questions regarding issues pertaining to the advancement of America’s strategic priorities around the globe.

Sincerely, John O. Brennan.

This is helpful. This is a helpful indication from a government official who has been nominated to head the Central Intelligence Agency, and who acknowledges if he is confirmed to this position, he would have no authority as Director of the CIA to order lethal drone strikes within the United States. So that is helpful.

It is still significant that we be allowed to ask from time to time what the CIA might do with regard to other persons—other individuals non-American citizens outside the United States and under what circumstances a lethal drone strike or a different type of lethal force might be appropriate when directed toward an American citizen outside the United States.

I notice one phrase he uses in his letter, when he says: “… such as a drone strike against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil, and without a trial.” Whenever we are talking about a person within our jurisdiction, whenever we are talking about an American citizen, regardless of where that American citizen might be found, it seems to me we do owe that person certain responsibilities. We owe the duty of following the law, of following our most fundamental law—the U.S. Constitution—and following other statutory authorities we have in place specifically to protect the rights and the interests, the life and the liberty and the property of the American people.

We are told those things cannot be taken by the government without due process of law. Now, normally, when we take away someone’s life or their liberty or their property, we entitle that person to a trial. This is where our constitutional protections overlap a little bit and they complement each other. We have in the fifth amendment that protection that says that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. There, again, at a bare minimum, that entails the operation of these generally applicable laws that actually have some standards to them. It typically means that a jury trial, which is an opportunity on the part of the person being acted upon by government to have a trial.

We have elsewhere in the Constitution other protections that guarantee this. We have protections indicating that if a person is charged with a crime by our government, under the sixth amendment they have a right to a jury trial, and they have a right to counsel in that connection with that. They have a right even to counsel paid for by the government if they can’t afford an attorney in connection with that. The seventh amendment, likewise, protects the right to a trial in the context of civil disputes.

So these and other protections overlap to guarantee that Americans will have due process. Frequently, what due process entails, among other things, is the privation of a jury trial. You see, juries do perform an important function. Jurors are there to help protect our rights. When we have a jury of our peers deciding critical questions with regard to our interests in life, in liberty, in property, we see to it that a person has the opportunity to decide if a non-American government official, a panel of citizens who have sworn an oath to do justice will do precisely that, and they will not shrink from the obligation to enforce the demands of the Constitution. They will not shrink to enforce the demands of the law. They will not shrink from their duties, and they will not see themselves as part of a government establishment.

This is how our constitution protects us, this constitutes us, this government because we are the people, and we, the people, control the government. We, the people, have the right to a jury trial. And when we actually get a jury trial, we are able to see our rights protected.

So, in response to the Senator’s question, I do think there are some problems that we confront as a society. I think the security of the United States is, of course, of paramount importance. We need to protect our national security. We need to protect Americans. As we do so, we also need to protect the inalienable rights of individual Americans to the due process guarantees that are hundreds of years old, that extend at least as far back as the drafting and ratification of our constitution, and are, of course, much older than that. They are centuries, indeed, they are millennia old. We must continue to honor them.

MR. PAUL. Mr. President, I would like to thank the Senator from Utah for his expert constitutional analysis, and I rely on his advice and analysis of legislation and want to thank him very much for being part of this debate.

We are in contact with the White House, and we have told the White House we will allow debate on Brennan as soon as they will give a clarification of what their opinion is on drone strikes in America.

I think after Holder’s cross-examination, his opinion may not be too far off from what we are asking for. But we want it clarified and in writing because we think this is an important battle.
for the American public and an important battle for the Constitution. So if the President or the Attorney General will promise to give us something, even give us something by morning, we are more than willing to go ahead with the vote in the morning with that information.

At this time, without yielding the floor, I wish to entertain a question from the Senator from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. HARRKAMP). The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. BARRASSO. Madam President, I come to the floor of the Senate in great admiration for the Senator from Kentucky, for what he is doing to try to get information. All we are asked to do is to give advice and consent to the President on this very important nominee to be the head of the Central Intelligence Agency, the key to central intelligence in this Nation. I come to the floor this evening to thank my colleagues, friends for the leadership he has continued to show by asking questions which are not just questions of his, they are questions of the American people.

I was traveling around the State of Wyoming last week, talking to folks. I went to 13 different counties in our State of 23 counties. There were many questions being asked about drones, not just their accuracy but their intent and what this administration’s policy is really and how they can be used. People in my home State of Wyoming are concerned about drones being used in the United States, not just specifically for attacks against American citizens but also the concept in observation, in surveillance. What about our rights as citizens to privacy? Those are the questions that come up as I travel around the State.

I had a telephone townhall meeting the other evening with many people from all around Wyoming on the line. They admire the questioning from the Senator from Kentucky. They have concerns: Is Big Brother watching? What is happening and what role has government in observing and surveillance and looking into the lives of the American people?

It was not until Senator PAUL asked the question would there be strikes on American citizens in America that I think things became very focused at home and all around the country. Then we got more e-mails, more concerns, because the specific question that Senator PAUL is asking is a question that is on the minds of all Americans. I believe Senator PAUL deserves an answer. The American people deserve an answer. And it is not just Senator PAUL who deserves an answer, it is an answer to all of the people of this country. But I appreciate Senator PAUL’s leadership in asking the specific question.

The Intelligence Committee, the Select Committee on Intelligence met, they had hearings, they had debates, discussions, deliberations, and actually they voted. That is why we are here on the floor tonight, to ask finally from the White House and from the nominee what the specific position and policy of this administration happens to be on drones. I know we have a unanimous consent request from Senator PAUL and in a second I am going to ask him to explain and maybe reiterate his unanimous consent request, explain the resolution he wishes to vote on. I think the Senator deserves a vote. We want to make sure the public understands what is happening here. That is why I appreciate the leadership of Senator LEE who has come here as a constitutional scholar to address some of these concerns.

I think before many Senators are able to make the final decision of how to vote, how to give advice and consent to the White House, we need more information. We need to hear from the White House. We need to hear from the President on this very important nominee on the floor of the Senate as soon as his question is answered. He would be happy to proceed with that vote as early as tomorrow morning.

The American people deserve better than they are getting right now from this administration in so many ways. This is but one. That is why I think all of us try to go home every weekend to learn what is on the minds of folks in our home States, in our home communities. This is clearly what I have been hearing about, traveling around Wyoming, a State of vast open spaces, a State of great majesty and beauty, but we have the technology, we have the overhead surveillance and of course not just their own personal privacy but their security.

What are the rights and responsibilities of our nation? What do we do when new technology exists, as we have seen with drones? I had the privilege of visiting our soldiers overseas in Afghanistan with a number of Senators in January. We have seen up close, through detailed video, the capabilities of drones, capabilities that were not there that many years ago. Questions such as this would have never arisen a number of years ago because the technology was not there. But now the technology is there and the technology, that raises new questions. That is why I think so many Americans are appreciative of the work by Senator PAUL to specifically ask questions that have never been asked before because the technology has changed. Now that we have the technology, we have the know-how, and the question continues to be asked.

I ask my friend and colleague from Kentucky if he could explain perhaps what he thinks, what vote he is asking for, why it is so important, and what it means to all of us as free citizens in this great Nation.

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, I thank the President from Wyoming for coming to the floor and helping to advance this debate. One of the points that was made toward the end is about our soldiers he visited and that he saw the capacity of the drone. The one thing he could not be lost here is that we are not arguing about the use of drones, particularly in defense of our military. When people are shooting at our soldiers I want the best equipment in the world that we have to defend them and to win battles. That is something I think we should all want. But I think our American soldiers would be disappointed in us here at home if they felt, which I think many of them do, that they are fighting for our Bill of Rights, they are fighting for our Constitution, they are fighting for our conception of freedom—in doing so, I think they would be disappointed if they felt the drones that were being used against the enemy in the mountains of Afghanistan were going to be used against Americans in America without any kind of due process, because the whole idea of the Constitution is what they are fighting for. That is what the President has pledged to uphold and preserve. So it is such an important battle.

The unanimous consent that we put forward, which we had hoped they would let us vote on in the morning also but they have disagreed with, basically, the use of drones to execute our target American citizens on American soil who pose no imminent threat clearly violates the constitutional due process rights of citizens.

The point we are trying to get at, which I think for the administration ought to be an easy question—we are not talking about someone attacking the Twin Towers. We are in agreement that the military can repulse attacks by American citizens in planes. Some of the hijackers—I think some of them were citizens or not—but, yes, some of them were citizens, I think. The point is, no matter who you are, if you attack the United States you can be repelled and that lethal force can be used.

The point is we are concerned that some of the drone strikes overseas are of people not involved in combat at the time, and that is another question, but here at home I don’t think we want to see attacks against Americans who we think might be a terrorist, who we think might be engaged in something, who is in a restaurant eating dinner, would be killed. I think we want more protections for Americans. We want, if you are accused of a crime, to have the ability to defend yourself in a court of law.

I, without relinquishing the floor, would be happy to entertain any other questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. BARRASSO. Madam President, I come and ask my colleague if this is
Mr. PAUL. Madam President, one of the other things about drones, which is not particularly related to this, necessarily, but I know in Wyoming, and the Senator from Wyoming is talking about, is that we hear people worried about the erosion of their rights. They worry about statements from the President when the President says he intends to protect the Constitution—except for maybe when it is infeasible or when it is inconvenient. I think that worries people.

can specifically ask Senator PAUL about the response he has received to this. Perhaps then we can share that with the American people as to why so many folks who have been focused on this believe it is of key importance.

The letter from Senator PAUL says:

Dear Mr. Brennan, In consideration of your nomination to be Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, (CIA), I have repeatedly requested that you provide answers to several questions clarifying your role in the approval of lethal force against terrorism suspects, particularly those who are U.S. citizens.

It goes on to say:

Your past actions in this regard, as well as your view of the limitations to which you were subject, are of critical importance in assessing your qualifications to lead the CIA.

That is what we are doing. We are here in our role to advise-and-consent the President on a nomination he has made.

The letter goes on:

If it is not clear that you will honor the limits established by the Executive Branch by the Constitution, then the Senate should not confirm you to lead the CIA.

The people of Wyoming carry their Constitutions in their breast pockets. We have been but as Senator Bob Byrd used to do right here on the Senate floor, and many Members of the Senate do. We need to make sure the limits placed upon the executive branch by the Constitution are still upheld; otherwise, the Senate should not confirm Mr. Brennan to lead the CIA.

So the letter from Senator PAUL goes on to say:

During your confirmation process in the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, committee members have quite appropriately made requests similar to questions I have raised in my previous letter to you.

I agree. Members of the committee did make appropriate requests and wanted to have those same questions answered that Senator PAUL has been offering, and they are that you ex- pound on your views. Mr. Brennan, on the limits of executive power in using lethal force against U.S. citizens. This is against U.S. citizens, especially when operating on U.S. soil.

That is among the fundamental ques- tions I have been asked during telephone town hall meetings when I travel inside the United States.

Mr. Brennan, in your testimony of vague. They said it would have to be a drone strike, against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil, and without trial.

Mr. Brennan, in your testimony of vague. They said it would have to be a drone strike, against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil, and without trial.

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, we sent our last letter to John Brennan, I believe, in the latter part of January. We got no response. We then sent him a second letter in the first or second week of February and got no response. We then sent our third letter, which I believe is the letter the Senator was referring to, and that was a couple of weeks ago. We got no response to any of these letters.

However, when the committee—both Republicans and Democrats—was holding up his nomination last week and the chair of the committee asked for a response, all of a sudden we got a response. The response from Brennan was actually encouraging. The response, I believe, was this morning or yesterday. The day has kind of run together. That response specifically that the CIA doesn’t have the authority to operate in the United States and that is the rule. It has been the law since the 1947 National Security Act.

Our concern is that the Attorney General’s response has been a little more vague. Basically they have not done any killings in the United States yet. They don’t have any intention to, but they might. The problem with the “they might” part is they left it kind of vague. They said it would have to be extraordinary, but they pointed out two occurrences in which they would not have targeted drone strikes. They point out Pearl Harbor and 9/11.

In both of those instances, I think it is appropriate to respond militarily, but they would not have targeted drone strikes. They might use drones, but they would not have targeted drone strikes because they would be responding immediately to someone attacking us. I think we all agree that we can respond to lethal force at any point in time. I think the problem is the drone program around the world often targets we want to optimize transparency and we want to optimize secrecy, and that was his conclusion. It was like, what does that mean? So that is when we got more and more involved with asking this question and asking it repeatedly.

But I think there are limitations. Ultimately, there is a limitation of the Constitution, but also there is a big debate that needs to go on about what are the limitations of what we voted on when we went to war. I was all in favor of doing everything possible to those who attacked us in Afghanistan. We need to figure out how and what the completion of that mission is, and whether that use or authorization of force is open-ended, forever, or whether we are ever going to vote on that again, which I think means when we vote on that again, we retain that power to bring it back to the Senate, to the Congress. It doesn’t mean we would not do it again, but we should have that debate and a vote again if we are going to have another war.

At this time I would be happy to entertain another question from the Senator from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. BARRASSO. What I just heard from the Senator from Kentucky is that these questions were asked in a bipartisan way. This was not partisan at all. I heard Senator WYDEN from Oregon had similar questions. So this is a request for information.

Now, I have been able to find a copy for the first time of that January 25 letter that Senator PAUL referenced to John Brennan, the letter of February 20 which, asks, really, the ultimate question: Do you believe the President has the power to authorize lethal force such as a drone strike against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil and without trial?

So now I have all three of those letters sent by Senator PAUL to Mr. Brennan in his capacity currently as the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and Counterterrorism, and I just wanted to go through some of that and perhaps ask Senator PAUL some specific questions related to it because it is my understanding that he has not gotten any kind of response to that.

The Senator mentioned three specific letters: First, the January 25 letter, then the letter of February 14, and then the letter of February 20 which, asks, really, the ultimate question: Do you believe the President has the power to authorize lethal force such as a drone strike against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil and without trial?

So now I have all three of those letters sent by Senator PAUL to Mr. Brennan in his capacity currently as the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and now the nominee to be the head of the Central Intelligence Agency.

So the letter goes:

As the Senate moves forward with its consideration of your nomination to be the next director of the Central Intelligence Agency, it will be necessary to examine not only your qualifications and record, but also to determine whether you will provide the necessary leadership as a director of an agency that operates under unique rules for transparency and that quietly holds significant influence over the administration of America’s strategic priorities around the globe.

No other agency is like the CIA—unique rules for transparency. So Senator PAUL goes on:

After reviewing your record as well as the record of President Obama to whom you have provided a great deal of advice and direction on issues of national security and intelligence, I must ask several questions to help inform my decision on your nomination.

That is what a responsible Senator does, a Senator who has taken quite seriously his role in providing advice and consent to the President on a nominee—a key nominee of a specific agency that operates under unique rules for transparency.

So I think it is absolutely appropriate that Senator PAUL would write such a letter, and the questions raised are appropriate, many of which have been raised in a bipartisan way.

So question No. 1: Do you agree with the argument put forth on numerous occasions by the executive branch that it is legal to order the killing of American citizens and that it is not compelled to explain its reasoning in reaching that conclusion? Do you believe this is a good precedent for the government to set?

What better, clearer question to ask than that? He goes on:

Congress has denied access to legal opinions and interpretations authorizing placement of U.S. citizens believed to be engaged in terrorism on targeting notices, thus denying Congress the ability to perform important oversight.

Oversight is a key role of the Congress. Oversight is a key, critical role of this branch of government, of Congress.

Senator PAUL goes on:

Will you provide access to those opinions as well as future opinions?

Very reasonable question.

The Senator said:

Would it not be appropriate to require a judge or a court to review every case before the individual in question is added to a targeting list?

Legitimate question.

Please describe the due process requirements in place for those individuals being considered for an addition to a targeting list.

I agree that you are right that if the Federal Government would need to go before a judge to authorize a wiretap of a U.S. citizen overseas, but possibly not to order a lethal drone strike against the same individual?

I want to go back to this question when I am visiting with Senator PAUL, but this is the kind of thing I get asked in Wyoming, and I am sure the Senator from Kentucky is hearing the same thing. Would you agree that it is paradoxical that the Federal Government would need to go before a judge to authorize a wiretap on a U.S. citizen overseas, but possibly not to order a lethal drone strike against the same individual?

So what you have to do if you wanted to perform a wiretap would be more than you would have to do if you wanted to do a drone strike. I think it is a very legitimate question because if not, Senator PAUL goes on to ask:

Please explain why you believe something similar to the FISA standards should not be applied in regards to illegal action against U.S. citizens. Is it still your intent to codify and normalize the so-called disposition matrix, a targeting list that you helped to establish—

This would be Homeland Security Council Coordinator Assistant Brennan to direct counterterrorism operations in future administrations as well as the targeted killing procedures you have outlined in your playbook?

Then Senator Paul goes on and asks:

Aside from the President, how many people have been removed from the disposition matrix? Of those, how many participate in the process to add individuals to the targeting list, and how many have the authority to veto an individual’s inclusion?

This is a very thoughtful letter from Senator Paul to Mr. Brennan dated January 25, 2013. I want to continue to share with the American people the questions that have been asked by Senator Paul because I think they are so telling and so apposite:

How many times have you specifically objected to an individual’s inclusion on a targeting list? How many times have you recommended to the President against including an individual on the targeting list?

These are questions people want to know the answers to:

How often are the criteria used for determining whether an individual should be included on a targeting list amended?

Not simply reviewed; he is not asking about a review but an amendment.

How many government officials and which agencies participate in establishing these criteria? Does the National Counterterrorism Center have final say over all criteria?

Anybody who watches this issue closely has asked these questions and wants to know the answers.

Of those individuals who have been but are no longer included in the disposition matrix or other target list, how many have already been subject to a successful drone strike? How many have been removed from the list by other means?

How many individuals remain in the disposition matrix or other targeting list today? And how does the number of people on the number in prior years? Is the number growing? Is the number shrinking? Is the number static? What is happening to those numbers?

How many U.S. citizens have been added to this disposition matrix or other targeting list? How many remain on the list? How many U.S. citizens have been intentionally killed by U.S. drone strikes since 2008? How many have been unintentionally killed by U.S. drone strikes during that same period of time?

In how many countries has the United States executed a drone strike against a presumed terrorist?

In each of the countries where the United States has executed a drone strike in the past 4 years, please provide a year-to-year estimate of those who self-identify or otherwise associate with al-Qaeda within that country.

I come to read this as somebody who has just come to see the capacity of the drones. I see the junior Senator from Texas has been on the Senate floor as well. He and I traveled together to Afghanistan and have been able to see direct casualty from drone strikes. We know the capacity, we know their ability to target precisely. These are questions that in previous wars were not asked because the technology was not there, but now these are questions that are asked, that are being asked, which is why I am so grateful for the leadership of Senator Paul in asking these questions.

The letter goes on:

You have indicated that no credible evidence exists to support recent claims that civilian casualties resulted from U.S. drone strikes.

Again, this is the letter from Senator Paul to John Brennan. He asks:

Please indicate how you define credible evidence and what process is in place to evaluate the legitimacy of alleged civilian casualties.

Which countries have publicly stated their support for U.S. drone strikes within their territory? Have any publicly indicated support for U.S. drone strikes in the long term?

In this letter:

How relevant is the opinion of the public in the countries where U.S. drone strikes are ongoing? In those countries, how would you characterize public opinion toward U.S. drone strikes?

In light of civilian casualties caused by the extensive use of drone strikes under your guidance, do you continue to stand by your remark that at some times you have to take life to save lives? Do you condone the CIA’s practice of counting certain civilians killed by U.S. drone strikes as militants simply because they were of military age and within close proximity of a target? Do you believe such accounting provides an accurate picture of our drone program?

These are key questions to be asked for a nominee to the Central Intelligence Agency and they deserve answers before anyone makes a vote yes or no.

What changes to the CIA review process will you put in place or have you attempted to put in place in your previous role to prevent further unintentional killings of U.S. citizens? What role did you play in approving the drone strike that led to the death of the under-aged U.S. citizen, son of al-Awlaki? Unlike his father, he had not renounced his U.S. citizenship. Was this young under-aged U.S. citizen the intended target of the U.S. drone strike which took his life? Further, do you reject the subsequent claim apparently originating from anonymous U.S. Government sources—

Always a concern when you hear anonymous U.S. Government sources—that the young man had actually been a military age male of 20 years or more of age, something that was later proven false by the release of his birth certificate.

Senator Paul goes on in the letter:

Do you believe that the inadvertent killing of civilians and the resulting anger from local populations should cause us to limit rather than expand the drone program?

Key question:

The CIA has and will reportedly continue to have authorization to carry out lethal drone strikes in Pakistan, autonomously and without approval from the President. Will you seek to reduce or eliminate this practice or keep it in place? Will you hold to the discussed 1 or 2 year phaseout of this authority or work to expedite the phaseout?

I could go on and on because these are key questions Senator Paul asked, and it all gets back to the fundamental question of: Do you believe the President has the power to authorize lethal force, such as a drone strike against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil and without trial?

So as I look at this letter of January 25 and look at the questions being asked:

Do you believe the lethal drone strikes constitute hostilities as defined by the War Powers Act?

On what legal basis does the administration derive authority to conduct such strikes?

Then the President’s own words:

The President has stated that al-Qaida has been decimated. Do you believe this assertion is correct and, if so, what is it that we now target if not al-Qaida?

That is a fundamental question that came up in the hearings with then-Secretary of State Hillary Clinton. When she came to the Senate, to the Foreign Relations Committee, they changed their tune and said: No, it was core al-Qaida; not just al-Qaida but core al-Qaida in Afghanistan, but, fundamentally, the tune has changed.

Senator Paul goes on:

Is the U.S. drone strike strategy exclusively focused on targeting al-Qaida or is it also conducting counterinsurgency operations against militants seeking to further undermine their governments such as in Yemen? Would you support expansion of the CIA’s drone program in Mali to provide support to counterterrorism operations?

We all know what happened there and the impact in Benghazi and the concern that those who weren’t captured or tried in Benghazi for the atrocities they were doing went to Mali. So, again, a key question.

The Senator goes on:

Do you believe a long-term, sustained drone strike program can eliminate al-Qaida?

Please describe in detail the steps you have taken as Assistant to the President as well as transparency measures you would support as Director of the CIA to improve the transparency of the administration’s counterterrorism policy.

Mr. President, I would just say that they are extremely well-thought-out questions by a very thoughtful Senator and questions to which the American people would like to have answers.

There is more to the letter, but I would like to take a second to ask Senator PAUL if he feels those have been adequately addressed and if he feels he has gotten closer to the solution to the question of, do you believe the President has the power to authorize lethal force such as a drone strike against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil and without trial? That would be my question to Senator PAUL.

(Mr. SCHATZ assumed the chair.)

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, we have sent three different letters over the last month and a half or so, and we really have not gotten a detailed response to any of the letters. We finally had one question answered from John Brennan, and that question was answered by him by saying the CIA does not operate within the United States. That is a reassertion of the law, which we at least appreciated. But they have not responded by saying they will follow the law. We have not gotten an adequate answer yet, although we are getting closer to it.

Maybe the Senator from Texas can give us a little insight into this in the sense that the question now really is not just Brennan. Brennan has answered that the CIA cannot operate in the United States. But there is a question: Can the military operate in the United States? And this question was asked. I think very poignantly, by the Senator from Texas today, trying to get an answer from the Attorney General on this question: Can you kill Americans on American soil who are not involved in combat? The answer has been evasive because he has brought up basically a red herring: Pearl Harbor or the Twin Towers, which none of us are disputing that the military can respond to a lethal attack with lethal force.

So what I would like to do without relinquishing the floor is see if the Senator from Texas would like to respond as to his interpretation of what he was hearing from Attorney General Holder and whether the comments he was hearing—if Attorney General Holder were willing to sort of try to complete that conversation in a letter to us—whether actually we might get close to actually being on the same page.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky for allowing me to ask him a series of questions and to address both what the Attorney General said and the substantive issue.

I wish to begin my questioning, though, with simply an observation. I would like to take a moment to thank the Senator from Kentucky. I have had the privilege of serving in this body 9 weeks, and today is the first day I have ever had the extraordinary privilege of speaking on the floor of the Senate. On my first day, to speak on the floor of the Senate, I found myself being given the chance to read from Travis's letter from the Alamo. As I observed walking off the floor of the Senate, as they say in the beer commercial, it don't get no better than this. So I thank the Senator from Kentucky for giving me the opportunity to be welcomed to the floor of the Senate and having a chance to start off on the right foot for our country.

There are a number of things I would like to address and ask the views of the Senator from Kentucky. I will begin by observing, as I did the last time the Senator from Kentucky and I had a colloquy, that I never sleep, and we heard from a number of tweets across the country. But those have not ceased. So since the Senator from Kentucky is still prohibited from looking at his cell phone, I wanted to prevent him from going into technology shock and withdrawal and provide an in-person feed for him.

This is about The Constitution. Stand with Rand. Get it together GOP. Stand with Rand. Rand praising Dem OR Sen Rom of for raising the same questions and concerns he has. Where are all the other Dems?

Sad day when killing Americans is up for debate. Sad day that every Senator is not up there with him. Stand with Rand. We are watching you guys.

I don't know how Sen Rand Paul does it... I'm tired just from watching him... a tip of the cap to you, sir. Thank you. Stand with Rand.

Sen Rand Paul is extemporaneously giving a better human rights speech than Barack Obama ever has. Stand with Rand.

And I am pretty certain that for the record I can confirm that no teleprompters were in front of the desk of the Senator from Kentucky.

Sen Rand Paul, Jimmy Stewart would be proud, sir.

It's been awhile since I could say I am a proud American. Thank you, Rand Paul. Stand with Rand.

Rand Paul might be waiting a long time for an answer from The White House. Stand with Rand.

I would note that it has been 10 hours, so this would indeed be a correct observation of fact.

Stand with Rand, please.

Sen Rand Paul not filibuster for the right or the left, he did it for every person in this country. Stand with Rand.

Once you give up your rights, you will not get them back. Believe that. Stand with Rand.

We should all go to the U.S. Capitol and Stand with Rand.

I would note that quite a few Members of the House of Representatives have crossed over the Capitol and joined us precisely to stand with Rand, as have the men and women in the gallery who have been here throughout this long and historic stand.

I stand finally and watch the Rand Paul filibuster. Just epic. Stand with Rand. Read the constitution and explain why each sentence is relevant to today. Not worthless and not for the driftwood that has been brought up basically a red herring: Pearl Harbor or the Twin Towers, which none of us are disputing that the military can respond to a lethal attack with lethal force.

This can end, Brennan, just say u won’t unilaterally kill us. Stand with Rand. America is watching. Stand with Rand. I get the feeling that a more libertarian stance is the only thing which can bring about a fresh start for the GOP. Stand with Rand.

I stand with Rand in his 9th hr awaiting the President saying he doesn’t have the power to kill Americans at will. “I haven’t killed anyone yet and I have no intention of killing Rand, too.” But I might—Barack Obama. Stand with Rand.

The federal government was closed today. Yet Sen Rand Paul working overtime. Yea Rand.

D-a-M-a-n is the precise spelling of that.

Sen Rand Paul, 100% support you. Keep going. Stand with Rand.

This isn’t a filibuster. This is a line in the sand drawn with a quill pen that penned the constitution.

I think that one is particularly cool. Do you agree with your colleague, Rep Justin Amash? Stand with Rand.

Almost always the answer to that one should be yes. Do you stand with Sen Rand Paul and demand an answer from the WH on extra- judicial assassinations of Americans?

There is a word we do not hear too often within our own borders—assassinations. Yet that is exactly what we are talking about here tonight.

Don’t think I’ve ever been quite so proud to say I’m from Kentucky. Stand with Rand. Sen Rand Paul getting to the heart of issues. Not partisan politics, but a question of the process. He’s just about 8 hours away from having the 9th longest filibuster.

I apologize to the Senator from Kentucky if that is less than encouraging. Stand with Rand.

I have a renewed sense of hope for our leaders in Washington today. Thank you, Sen Rand Paul, for standing by We The People. Stand with Rand.

I am a strong liberal supporter and two time Obama voter. I Stand with Rand. Dr. Rand Paul, Excellent, excellent work today. We stand with Rand.

I hope Sen Rand Paul Can keep them up all night. There hasn’t been a real filibuster on the Senate floor in years. Stand with Rand.

And I would note, as I was walking in, that this is certainly by the least well-shaven I have been on the Senate floor. And it is particularly ironic that the desk at which I am standing, in addition to having been the former desk of a great hero of mine, Senator Barry Goldwater, was also the former desk of Senator Richard Nixon. So perhaps that spirit is animating the 5 o’clock shadow that I find myself at 10 o’clock at night sporting.

Stand with u I do. Stand with Rand.

I wonder if that one was from Dr. Seuss.

Stand with Rand because you have the freedom to do so. Obama is going to have to address the points raised by Paul. Stand with Rand.

I stand with Rand... best line of the filiblizard thus far. RT?

Yet another of Senator Rand Paul’s miraculous tweets that he did from the floor of the Senate, a tweet of Senator Rand Paul: “They shouldn’t just drop a hellfire missile on your cafe experience.”
I would suggest to the Senator from Kentucky that at the end of what I am sure will be a long and very distinguished career in politics, fighting for every American, that with statements such as that, a subsequent career at Starbucks may indeed be promising.

The other day I happened to read a book, a book that has a real hero. May the spirits of past patriots fuel you.

Until you get an answer, Rand, keep on going. Let’s take it into tomorrow.

If you have family or friends in the Middle East, you might be a terrorist. Stand with Rand.

For the first time since November, I feel like I see a light at the end of the tunnel. It is a long tunnel. Stand with Rand.

Sen Rand Paul: If you have no bounds, you have an unlimited imperial presidency. So true.

Thank you, Rand Paul, for standing up for our Constitution. We are behind you. Stand with Rand.

I hope we do not make it to that individual’s next birthday.

Best TV I’ve seen in a while. Stand with Rand.

Sen Rand Paul, I’m a proud of my Senator today. I have always been proud of him, but today I am more proud than ever. STAND WITH RAND.

My kids—watching Rand Paul give a lesson to the country—on their own, without me telling them to. Stand with Rand. Thank you. Sen Rand Paul.

This is different. There is a constitutional principle not necessarily an individual. Constitution forbids him and that overreaching, is usurping power that when one branch of the government is unchecked power. It is, indeed, the responsibility of this body to do what we are doing now. If a President of the United States decrees the power to take the lives of U.S. citizens on U.S. soil without due process of law, I would suggest it is integral to the oath of office of every Member of the Senate and every Member of the House of Representatives to stand and say: My President, respectfully, no, you may not. The Constitution gives you no power. Every branch of government in turning office—in my case just a few weeks ago standing on those steps, the Vice President asked me to raise my hand and take an oath to honor and defend the Constitution. Every Member of this body must do that.

It is our responsibility, especially when one branch of the government is overreaching, is usurping power that the Constitution forbids him and that is threatening to the liberty of the people, it is the responsibility of all of us to stand and resist that.

One of my alltime heroes, Ayn Rand in “Atlas Shrugged,” described how the parasitical class would put into place arbitrary power, standardless rules precisely so the productive citizens in the private sector would have to come on bended knee to those in government seeking special dispensation, seeking special privilege that arbitrary and standardless rule empowers the political class and disempowers the people.

I could not help but think about Ayn Rand’s observation this morning as I heard Attorney General Eric Holder testify over and over refuse to say it would be unconstitutional for the Federal Government to kill a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil. He would say it would be inappropriate. He said that three times in response to direct questioning. It would be inappropriate and we should trust him. The Federal Government would not do so.

I found myself thinking of those arbitrary standards Ayn Rand talked about; that if the only protection we the people, the against the Federal Government choosing to take the life of a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil is our trust that they would refrain from doing what is inappropriate rather than not. As Jackson observed in the Youngstown Steel seizure case, Justice Jackson, as the Senate from Kentucky knows, was a giant on the U.S. Supreme Court. My former boss, Chief Justice William Renquist, served as a law clerk to Justice Robert Jackson.

Indeed, Justice Jackson took time off from serving on the U.S. Supreme Court to serve as the chief prosecutor at the Nuremberg trials, during which he made the powerful observation following World War II, when the United States brought to trial the horrific war criminals in the Nazi regime.

Justice Jackson observed at Nuremberg that four great nations, flushed with victory and stung with injury, stay the hand of vengeance and voluntarily submit their captive enemies to international laws. When a President acts in absence of either a congressional branch or denial of authority, he can only rely upon his own discretion. The President acts pursuant to an express or implied authorization of Congress, his authority is at its maximum, for it includes all that he possesses in his own right plus all that Congress accords him. Justice Jackson explains:

Justice Jackson explains the third category of Presidential powers.

When the President takes measures incompatible with the expressed or implied will of Congress, his power is at its lowest ebb, for then he can rely only upon his own constitutional powers minus any constitutional powers minus any constitutional powers of either a congressional branch or denial of power. But as of 11:45 today, they can no longer claim that.

Indeed, when we think about the concentration of power, no judicial opinion is more important than Justice Robert Jackson’s concurring opinion over in the Youngstown Steel seizure case. I want you to remember that no “fellow” ever won a war by dying for his country. He won it by making the other poor “fellow” die for his country.

Men all of this stuff you’ve heard about America not wanting to fight, wanting to stay out of the war is a lot of horse dung. Americans traditionally love to fight. All real Americans love a winner and will not tolerate a loser.

Americans play to win all the time. I wouldn’t give a hoot in hell for a man who lost. That’s why our teams have never lost and will never lose a war because the very thought of losing is hateful to Americans.

George C. Scott continues as Patton:

“Now there is another thing I want you to remember. I don’t want to get any messages saying we are ‘holding our position.’ We’re not ‘holding’ anything. Let the Hun do that. We’re advancing constantly. We’re not interested in holding on to anything except the enemy. We’re going to hold on to him by the nose and kick him in the ‘posterior.’ We’re going to kick the ‘heck’ out of him all the time and we’re going to go through him like crap through a goose.

Thirty years from now when you’re sitting around your fireside with your grandson on your knee and he asks you, ‘What did you do in the great World War II?’ You won’t have to say, ‘Well, I shoveled ‘manure’ in Louisian.’”

That same sentiment, the same sentiment in St. Crispin’s Day speech, talked about a tradition that has been a tradition in America for centuries, of men and women rallying against hard odds, rallying against challenging obstacles.

(Ms. HEITKAMP assumed the chair.)

I would observe that fight should not be a partisan fight. This is not a question of Republican or Democrat, liberty, the right to life of every American citizen. Arbitrary taking at the hands of the Federal Government should not simply be a value that one side or another of this Chamber embraces.

Indeed, I would note during the hearings this morning with Eric Holder, some of the most enthusiastic audience participants in that hearing were self-identified members of Code Pink, who I would suggest are not ordinarily individuals who would be described as card-carrying members of the Republican Party.

But liberty does not have a partisan affiliation. Indeed, to the Senator from Kentucky, I think it is an interesting question what the reaction in this Chamber and outside would be if the very same statements that have been made were made by a President who happened to be Republican. I think there is little doubt the outcry would be deafening, and rightly so. I will say to the Senator from Kentucky, if a President made the identical representations and happened to have an “R” behind his or her name, I have not one doubt that the outcry would happen to be Republican. I think it is an interesting proposition if the President made those identical statements that have been made at that hearing, the Chamber of Representatives and the Senate.

During that time, we faced a tragic and epic battle in a case called Medellin v. Texas.

Medellin began with a crime that shocked the conscience. Two little girls were horrifically abused and murdered by a gang in Houston. They were apprehended, confessed, and were convicted by a jury of their peers, quite rightly.

At that point, the case took a very strange turn because the World Court, which is the judicial arm of the United Nations, issued an order to the United States to reopen the convictions of 51 murderers across this country, including one of the murderers in this case, Jose Ernesto Medellin.

I will tell you, Jose Medellin wrote a four-page handwritten confession in that case. It is one of the most chilling documents I ever had the displeasure of reading. In it he bragged about hearing those little girls beg for their lives. A tiny detail he included in those letters was in many ways the most haunting, and I know it will remain with me for the rest of my life. He described how the youngest of those girls was wearing a Mickey Mouse watch and how he kept it as a trophy of that night because he was so proud of the atrocities they had committed. It is truly sickening what those young boys did that evening. And yet the World Court asserted a power that heretofore has never been asserted. It was the first time in history a foreign court has ever tried to bind the U.S. justice system. The World Court claimed the authority to reopen those convictions, so Texas stood up and fought the World Court.

I had the honor of arguing this case twice in front of the U.S. Supreme Court. On the other side, 90 foreign nations came in against the State of Texas—90 nations came in and argued the U.S. justice system should be completely subject to the authority of the World Court and the United Nations.

Also on the other side, most disturbingly, was the President of the United States. The President signed a two-page letter attempting to order the State courts to obey the World Court. Again, that order, like the World Court’s order, was unprecedented. It was the first time in history any President had ever attempted to order the State courts to do anything. Unfortunately, the President at issue in that case was a Republican. It was President George W. Bush, a man for whom I worked, a man who, in many respects, I respect. Yet in that case, he asserted a power that could be found nowhere in the Constitution.

So I stood before the U.S. Supreme Court and argued on behalf of the State of Texas that the President of the United States has no authority to give away U.S. sovereignty.

That was done notwithstanding the fact that he was a Republican, notwithstanding the fact that he was the former Governor of my home State of Texas. Because at the end of the day, defending liberty, defending sovereignty, defending the Constitution is not a partisan choice. It is not a game of dodge ball with shirts and skins; that’s what you do when you play the ball, you stick together. Every one of us has taken an oath of office and we have an obligation to stand up.

So I stood before the U.S. Supreme Court representing the State of Texas and arguing that no President of the United States, be he Republican or Democrat, has the authority to give up U.S. sovereignty and make the State courts subject to the World Court.

I would note in that case the State of Texas had support from a number of unlikely sources. Indeed, we had a wide range of amici—friends of the court—who came in and supported us. One brief was filed on behalf of law professors. It was joined by several law professors from the University of California at Irvine School of Law. Dean Chemerinsky is a very well-known and proud liberal academic. I suspect it may well be right that this is the only time ever that John Yoo and Erwin Chemerinsky joined a single brief before the U.S. Supreme Court. And both agreed, despite the fact they are often two different places in the legal academy, that unchecked power in the hand of the executive is fundamentally a threat to liberty.

Indeed, I would note for the Senator from Kentucky, in talking to both of them and asking for their support in Medellin, I made the point to each to imagine a President from the other side who might have the power that was being asserted.

I suggested to them, mine on the right, I suggested that if a President had the power to set aside State laws on grounds of international comity, which was the basis that was being asserted in that case—without any sanction from Congress, without any sanction from another branch of the Federal Government, but simply on his own unilateral authority—an activist President on the left could use that power to assert, for example, that in his or her judgment the marriage laws of all 50 States should be set aside.

It may well be that all 50 States will choose to set their marriage laws aside. That is a judgment right now that has been in the hands of the voters in each State. But regardless of what the 50 States decide—and I suspect they will not decide the same thing—it seems to me clear that no President has the authority unilaterally, with the flick of a finger, to remove laws from the State books of all 50 States.

Likewise, to my friends on the left, I asked them to envision their nightmare of a rightwing President. They each said something different in querulous arguments, but they all managed to do that.

And I said: If this assertion of power is correct, that any President can set aside any State law if he or she deems it inconsistent with international comity, then in the old left-right scheme of things—and, indeed, in Medellin the Justice Department maintained no treaty required this, this was simply a power that was being asserted to further comity, to further our relationships with foreign nations—I suggested if the President has that power, what is to stop a President on the right from saying: I am setting aside the punitive damages laws in all 50 States? It upsets common sense.

For that matter, there are States such as California that persist in putting in place incredibly restrictive environmental laws. If the President has the authority to flick aside State laws, what would prevent a President on the right from saying those environmental laws are no more?

I would note for the Senator from Kentucky that my view on all those questions was very clear and very straightforward. No President may do so, whether he or she is of the right or of the left. If the Federal Government is to set aside a State law, it may do so only through exercise of the supremacy clause. The Framers required that in order for a State law to be void, it had to be adopted by the democratically elected legislature in the State, that two branches had to work together in concert, either through legislation that passed both Houses of the Congress, or through a treaty that required this, this was simply a power that was being asserted to further comity, to further our relationships with foreign nations—I suggested if the President has that power, what is to stop a President on the right from saying: I am setting aside the punitive damages laws in all 50 States? It upsets common sense.

Given the topic of this discussion, the asserted power of the President to take the life of a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil without due process of law, that last portion bears reading again. “Those who would trade our freedom for security have embarked on this downward course to the ant heap of totalitarianism.”

In this vote-harvesting time, they use terms like the “Great Society,” or as we were told a few days ago by the President, you must accept a greater government activity in the affairs of the people. But they’ve been a little more explicit in the past and among themselves; and all of the things I now will quote have appeared in print. These are not Republican accusations. For example, they have voices that say, “The cold war will end through our acceptance of a not undemocratic socialism.” Another voice says, “The profit motive has become outdated. It must be replaced by the incentives of the welfare state.” Our traditional system of individual freedom is incapable of solving the complex problems of the 20th century.” Senator Fullbright has said at Stanford University that the Constitution is outdated. He refers to American government as not only a teacher and our leader,” and he says he is “hobbled in his task by the restrictions of power imposed on him by this antiquated document.” He must “be freed,” so that he “can do for us” what he knows is best. Another articulate spokesman, defines liberalism as “meeting the material needs of the masses through the full power of centralized government.”

Well, I, for one, resent it when a representative of the people refers to you and me, the free men and women of this country, as “the masses.” This is a term we haven’t applied to ourselves in America. But beyond that, “the full power of the government” cannot do this was the very thing the Founding Fathers sought to minimize. They knew that governments don’t control things. A government can’t control the economy without controlling people. And they know when a government sets out to do that, it must use force and coercion to achieve its purpose. They also knew, those Founding Fathers, that outside of its legitimate functions, government does nothing as well as or economically as the private sector can do.

Now, we have no better example of this than government’s involvement in the farm economy over the last 30 years. Since 1955, the cost of this program has nearly doubled. One-fourth of farming in the U.S. is responsible for 85 percent of the farm surplus. Three-fourths of farming is out on the free market and has known a 21 percent increase in the per capita consumption of all its produce.

I am going to skip further along, to the end of the speech which, I will confess, not unlike the speeches given on this floor, was not a short speech. I will move to the end where President Reagan continued and said:

Those who would trade our freedom for the soup kitchen of the welfare state have told us they have a utopian solution of peace without victory, their policy “accommodation.” And they say if we will only avoid any direct confrontation with the enemy, he will forget his evil ways and learn to love us. Is our security, our freedom from the threat of the bomb by committing an immorality so great as saying to a billion human beings now enslaved behind our borders that your dreams of freedom because to save your skins we are making a deal with your slave masters.”

Alexander Hamilton said, “A nation which cannot danger is prepared for a master, and deserves one.” Let’s set the record straight. There is no argument over the choice between peace and war, but there is only one guaranteed way you can have peace—and you can have it in the next second—surrender.

Admittedly there’s a risk in any course we follow other than this, but every lesson of history tells us the greater risk lies in appeasement, and this is the specter that we face. You and I and do not believe that life is so dear and peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery. If nothing in life is worth dying for, when did this begin?

You and I have the courage to say to our enemies, “There is a price we will not pay. There is a point beyond which they must not advance.” And this, this is the meaning in the phrase of Barry Goldwater’s “peace through strength.”

Winston Churchill said, “The destiny of man is not measured by material computations. It is measured by the acts, not the words, the deeds and not the gestures, the moves in the world we learn we are spirits—not animals. And he said, “There is something going on in time and space, and beyond time and space which, whether we like it or not, spells duty.”

You and I have a rendezvous with destiny. We will preserve for our children this, the last best hope of man on Earth or we will sentence them to take the last step into 1000 years of darkness.

We will keep in mind and remember that Barry Goldwater was in faith in us, he has faith that you and I have the ability and the dignity and the right to make our own decisions and to determine our destiny. That path, the path of standing and fighting for freedom, even when it seems daunting, even when it seems the gestalt of the moment is on the other side, is a path with many honorable forebears.

I can tell you, speaking and echoing the sentiment of the millions on twitter, of the people following this stand for principle tonight, if the 100 Senators in this body stand together and say to the President, your memos on drones will not prevail; regardless of party, the Constitution is the governing body, the governing document in this Nation, then we will be doing our jobs.

I commend Senator Paul for a lonely stand that this Iron Curtain has not won on... has not proven quite so lonely. Indeed, were he the only Senator standing at his desk this evening, it would not be lonely in that circumstance either because he would be standing shoulder to shoulder with millions of Americans who do not believe that government to assert arbitrary power over our lives, over our liberty, over our property, but who, instead, want a government that remains a limited government of enumerated powers that protects the God-given rights each of us is blessed to have.

The question I ask: What in the Senator’s judgment is America without liberty? Who are we, if we are not a free people?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Texas for his remarks. I think he has hit exactly on the head. The question is a very pertinent question. Senator Paul’s question is really where do we go from here.

I see this as a struggle. I see that we are engaged in an epic struggle, but it is not a struggle between Republicans and Democrats; it is a struggle between the President and the Constitution.

The question is, Does the President have the power and the prerogative to have his way regardless of the Constitution?

The question is, Does the Attorney General get to say to where he will adhere to the fifth amendment when he chooses to? Is there a choice for American citizens on American soil that they either get the fifth amendment protections or they don’t get the fifth amendment protections? This really is a struggle between a President and the Constitution but between the Senate and the Congress and the President, to say whether the President gets to determine this policy or whether this is a policy that should come from Congress.

I think we should be asking not just for the President to give his memos on drones, we should be giving him our memos on drones. We need to be dictating the law to the President and not acquiescing and giving the President this authority. This should be a battle between the executive and the legislative. It should involve Republicans and Democrats trying to restrain the President from saying that he has the ability to expand the war. We need to protect the Constitution but when you do not.

At this time, I, without yielding the floor, would like to entertain a question from the Senator from Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHUYT). The Senator from Florida.

Mr. RUBIO. Mr. President, let me congratulate the junior Senator from Texas on a fantastic question. In that question he used Shakespeare references; he used references to the Shakespeare book, so let me just begin by quoting a modern-day poet. His name is Wiz Khalifa, called “Work Hard Play Hard.” That is how it starts.

If you look at time, I think it is a time when many of our colleagues also expected to be back in the home State playing hard, but we are happy we are still here working hard on this issue. It is actually pretty stunning. If you watch from home you hear the audience of people watching on the news or on Twitter, and they’re doing it. They’re doing it here. I think it is important to explain what exactly is happening here. What is happening is pretty straightforward.
The Senator from Kentucky has asked a question of the administration. It is a pretty straightforward question. Is it constitutional for the Federal Government to kill a noncombatant citizen in the United States? We all have strong feelings about that, but I am expect the Senator from Kentucky will correct me in a moment—my understanding is he has offered two ways to bring this to a resolution. One is a clear, unequivocal statement from the White House that says, of course, it is unconstitutional. That is not going to happen. Unconstitutional. Just a straightforward statement of that magnitude.

I have been watching on television the last few hours. I saw the Senator from Kentucky say they have reached agreement and they have reached out to the White House. They have been, I believe, unable to get a direct response.

The other is I heard he made a motion to have a resolution heard that made clear that was the sense of this body. The sense of this body would be that this is unconstitutional. Again, pretty straightforward.

Let's just say there are those among us who feel that is important. We don't know anybody in this body who believes a noncombatant U.S. citizen in the United States who is not doing anything of imminent danger should somehow be killed by the U.S. Government, nor do people at home believe that either. It was the sense of the Senate that this was the case, and in exchange for that vote, of course the vote on Mr. Brennan would move forward, and that has been rejected. This doesn't make a lot of sense to me.

I also think a movie one of the great American movies, "The Godfather"—and there was a quote in that movie. I don't have the Paton quote, but I have "The Godfather" quote, and this is the best known one, "I'll make him an offer he can't refuse." To me these are straightforward offers they can't refuse. Yet they have been refused. I think that is stunning.

The third thing I wish to say—I want you to imagine what this conversation would be like if the President was George W. Bush and if this issue was about George W. Bush. Just imagine for a moment now—if he had been asked this direct question and refused to answer—what this Chamber would look like and what the arguments being made would look like tonight. Imagine that for a moment.

That takes me back to another modern day poet by the name of Jay-Z from one of the songs he wrote: It's funny what seven days can change, it was so good just a week ago, don't know if it was all good a week ago, but I can tell everyone that things have changed.

If the President was George W. Bush and this was the question asked of him and the response was the silence we have gotten, we would have a very different scenario tonight except I actually believe the Senator from Kentucky would hear some arguments he is now making on the floor. I want everyone who is watching to clearly understand—and if I am wrong, the Senator from Kentucky is going to correct me—and what he is asking is a simple, straightforward response or, if we cannot get that, a simple and straightforward response from the Members of this body in a sense of the Senate resolution vote. Both have been rejected.

The last observation I would have tonight is that there have been pretty phenomenal legal analyses on the floor. That reminds me of the most famous quote from "The Godfather" that was that instant. They go to the heart of the United States who is not doing things that distinguish our Nation. They go to the heart of our civil liberties. They go to the heart of the things that distinguish our Nation.

I think what is stunning to me—clearly the constitutional issue is important—is how simple and straightforward this was how easily it could have been resolved. I don't know how many hours we are into this now—I think it is about 11 hours and 15 minutes—but we cannot get a straightforward answer. The Members of this body deserve that. The Members of this body deserve an answer. It doesn't matter what party you or the President is in. This is an important question that is being asked.

All of this would be over if we get a straightforward answer. I think that is something every Member of this body should care about. It is not a Republican question. It is not a conservative question. It is a constitutional question, a relevant question, and one that should be easy to answer.

They are refusing to answer it for some reason. I don't know if it is because of pride or it is beneath them or they have something else going on or the answer department was shut down. Either way I don't understand how they cannot answer this very straightforward question.

It reminds me of another line from "The Godfather" when Michael turns to Fredo and says: Fredo, you are my older brother, and I love you but don't ever take sides with anyone against the family again. That is kind of what is happening here. As an institution—grandparents, Senate—those answers. It doesn't matter who the President is. We have a job to do that we are held accountable for and that we are held accountable.

Sixty years from now, forty years from now, twenty years from now, ten years from now, these sorts of decisions will have ramifications long after we are gone. All of us here will be gone and there will be other people in these chairs. Maybe it will be our children, grandchildren or great-grandchildren who will visit this building, and they will read about the time we served here. If we make mistakes, history will record those mistakes and hold us accountable for those mistakes. If things improve, those decisions will be the groundwork for future administrations—because that is the other thing we need to remember. No matter how anyone feels about the current President, he is not going to be President forever. The precedence he sets could very well guide what future Presidents do.

So the point is, if we are laying the groundwork and making mistakes by not asking certain questions, history will hold us accountable and that is all of us. It is not one of us, not five of us, not the Republican part of the Senate but all of us. We have a right to ask these questions and to get these questions answered. That is not being an obstructionist, that is not being partisan, that is being a Senator. I have only been here 2 years, but I know enough of this process already to know that when the majority changes or when a new President is elected, at least one President every 4 years is going to want to have an answer from the administration or some other branch of government and they are going to hold us off. They are going to give us the Heisman and stiff-arm us and not answer the question. I would have hope that that moment—whether you agree with that person or not—that you would stand and defend the prerogative and right as a representative of their State to get legitimate questions answered in a straightforward way.

As I said earlier today when I came to the floor, this issue is about this institution as much as anything else. It is about the right of every single Member of this body to be able to ask legitimate questions of the administration or other branches of government and to get a straightforward answer.

I guess the question I have for the junior Senator from Kentucky is—just to clarify my understanding—that this is not about the administration or Senate resolution quite a long time ago if the White House had made their feelings well known in a statement. They could just put that out in a 30-second statement, and it would be done. Just come out and say it, that it is unconstitutional to kill U.S. citizens that are noncombatants who are in the United States. That is one route.

The other route that could have ended this is the unanimous consent motion he made to have this body vote on the Senate, and that would have brought it to a vote. Is that accurate? Are those the options before us?

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, that is exactly the sequence of things. We have been in contact with the White House throughout the night. We have made several phone calls to the White House. We told them we are willing to allow a vote on the Brennan nomination. All we ask in return is that we get a clear implication of whether they believe they have the authority under the Constitution to target Americans on American soil. I think it is a question that has been asked of the President that, No. 1, the use of drones to target American citizens on American soil who pose no imminent threat clearly violates the constitutional due process rights of citizens.

No. 2, the American people deserve a clear, concise, unequivocal public statement from the President of the United States that contains detailed legal reasoning including, but not limited to, the balance between national security and due process, limits of Executive power, and distinction between treatment of citizens and noncitizens within and outside the borders of the United States, the use of lethal force against American citizens, and the use of drones and the application of lethal force within the United States territory.

It is a very straightforward resolution, a sense of the Senate, and all that the Senator from Kentucky is simply doing is trying to get a response and a statement that would make it clear that the statement of the Senate. He obviously wants to get the President of the United States, the White House, and Mr. Brennan—whose nomination is pending before us—to make a clarification on this.

It is not like this issue popped up overnight. The Senator from Kentucky has been trying for some time to get an answer to this question. He has submitted numerous letters addressed to Mr. Brennan.

This is a letter from February 12 where he poses numerous questions, one of which is: Do you believe that the President has the power to authorize lethal force, such as a drone strike, against a non-U.S. person on U.S. soil? What about the use of lethal force against a non-U.S. person on U.S. soil? These are straightforward questions to which the Senator from Kentucky deserves an answer.

I want to say to the Senator from Kentucky—and I have a question for him in a moment—that it is remarkable to see this process unfold. In my time here—and I came in the 2004 election; started my service in the U.S. Senate in January of 2005—I have not seen a time where we had a Senator who as a matter of principle stood up here for the answers he has today and insisted on getting some answers. I give him great credit for the job he has done in pressing this issue.

He has not been given that answer yet. It sounds as though it has kind of come up to the line a couple of times. It is very simple. They could put this thing to rest. All they have to do is come forward and answer that very simple question about the legal authority to target American citizens on American soil with drones. It doesn’t seem to me, at least, that it would be that hard of a question to answer. They say as a matter of policy
Mr. PAUL. Madam President, I thank my colleagues who are here this evening, support the Senate from Kentucky, and some of the great debates that have occurred in the past. I ask for a discussion and debate about a major constitutional issue, a major constitutional question.

I, as do many of my colleagues who have come before, the place of great characters of our history, including Calhoun and others who have graced the U.S. Senate and some of the debates that have occurred in the past. So to stand here and use his powers as a Senator in a way that is very fitting with the tradition and history of this great institution—we look at the U.S. Senate and those who have come before, the place of great characters of our history, including Calhoun and others who have graced the U.S. Senate and some of the great debates that have occurred in the past. I ask for a discussion and debate about a major constitutional issue, a major constitutional question.

If I understand the issue the Senate from Kentucky feels so passionately about, it is that the administration should answer a question that is pretty easily stated, as I understand it, as follows: Does the administration take the view that a drone strike against a U.S. citizen here at home would be an appropriate use of that weapon? Am I correct that the question the Senate from Kentucky hopes to get an answer to from the administration?

Mr. MCCONNELL. And I assume the Senator from Kentucky shares my view that it is a pretty easily understood question. It strikes me that the question again is pretty easily understood and has to be something the administration has given some thought to, given the development of this new weapon.

I heard Senator BARRASSO earlier today talking about how this technology has changed—we would never have thought of this a few years ago, how this technology has actually changed warfare in a very dramatic way. So as I understand it, what the Senator from Kentucky is looking for is how this new weapon applies to the U.S. Constitution—how the use of it applies to the U.S. Constitution on American soil.

So I think it is entirely appropriate that the Senate from Kentucky engage in an extended debate with the support of his colleagues to get the answer to this question. I wanted to congratulate him for his tenacity, for his conviction, and for being able to rally the support of a great many people, as well as people who have come over from the House of Representatives who feel also, I gather, that this is a legitimate question the administration ought to be answering.

I might say, at whatever point we get to a cloture vote to extend debate on the nomination of Brennan, it is my hope that we will not be invoked. This is a controversial nominee. Should cloture be invoked, I intend to oppose the nomination.

I congratulate my colleague from Kentucky for this extraordinary effort. Mr. PAUL. Madam President, I wish to thank the minority leader for his remarks and for his insightful questions. The question about whether the President actually agreed to violate with what the rules will be actually been somewhat broached. He was asked at Google about whether this could occur and he said, Well, the rules would have to be different outside than inside. So it implies they have thought about that the rules should be outside, but to my knowledge no one in the Intelligence Committee has been informed what the rules are inside.

It troubles me that they think they have the authority to do targeted drone strikes inside, particularly when there are examples of the Twin Towers and 1941 Pearl Harbor. Those would be attacks we would repulse no matter who we knew was coming in. There wouldn’t be a targeted strike on an individual. We would repulse those attacks militarily and they wouldn’t even fall into the category of what we are talking about here as targeted drone strikes. We might use drones, but they wouldn’t be what we are talking about. These are questions we have been asking all day. So they have answered a question, just not the question we asked.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I thank my friend from Kentucky.

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, I wish to yield for a question to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. TOOMEY. Madam President, I wish to spend a couple of moments here revisiting the context in which this discussion occurred. I want to commend the Senator from Kentucky for raising what I think is an extremely important issue and forcing the attention of this body to this issue at an appropriate time, which he has done, and, I might add, at great personal inconvenience to himself.

This arose from a letter the Senator from Kentucky sent to Mr. Brennan, the nominee for the Director of Central Intelligence, and the response he got. These are short letters. I want to review this so it is very clearly exactly what was posed and what the response was and where we are at the moment in this debate.

The letter from the Senator from Kentucky begins:

Dear Mr. Brennan: In consideration of your nomination to be the director of the Central Intelligence Agency, I have repeatedly requested that you provide answers to several questions clarifying your role in the approval of lethal force against terrorism suspects, particularly those who are U.S. citizens. Your past actions in this regard as well as your view of the limitations to which you think the President is bound by the Constitution, should be made clear to the Senate.

I, as do many of my colleagues who have come before, the place of great characters of our history, including Calhoun and others who have graced the U.S. Senate and some of the great debates that have occurred in the past. I ask for a discussion and debate about a major constitutional issue, a major constitutional question.

The letter goes on to say:

The letter goes on to say:

During your confirmation process in the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, committee members have quite appropriately made a request similar to questions I have asked in previous letters to you, that you expound on your views on the limits of executive power in using lethal force against U.S. citizens, especially when operating on U.S. soil. In fact, the chairman of the SSCI—

The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence

Senator Feinstein, specifically asked you in post-hearing questions, for the record, whether the administration could carry out drone strikes inside the United States. In your response, you emphasize that the administration “has not carried out such strikes, and “has no intention of doing so.” I do not find this response sufficient.

Let me just add editorially, I do not know how anyone could find that sufficient. It clearly is an evasion of the question. That doesn’t answer the question that was posed by Senator Feinstein, just as we haven’t been able to get an answer to the question posed by the Senator from Kentucky.

The letter goes on to say:

The question that I and many others have asked: do you believe the President has the power to authorize lethal force against U.S. citizens, especially when operating on U.S. soil, and if so, under what circumstances?

The evasive replies from the administration believe it has the authority to carry out a lethal strike by a drone against an American citizen on American soil.

The letter goes on to say:

Just last week, President Obama also avoided this question when posed to him directly. Instead of addressing the question of whether the administration could kill a U.S. citizen on American soil, he used a similar line that “there has never been a drone used on an American citizen on American soil.

The letter goes on to say:

I would say that is—again, this is my editorial comment—I think that is a generous assessment. When a direct question is asked and the party to whom the question is directed repetitively evades the question, it makes one seriously wonder what their intentions are.

The letter goes on to say:

For that reason, I, once again, request you answer the following question: Do you believe the President has the power to authorize lethal force against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil and without a trial? I believe the only acceptable answer to this is no. Until you directly and clearly answer, I plan to use every procedural option at my disposal to delay your confirmation and bring added scrutiny to this issue and the administration’s policies on the use of lethal force.

The American people are rightly concerned and they deserve a frank and open discussion of these policies.

Sincerely,

Raul M. H da Silva
United States Senator

I have to say, this is a very straightforward and simple question. It has been posed clearly. It has been posed repeatedly.

Now I want to share with my colleagues the answer, such as it is, that we have received, the most recent answer that was directed to the Senator from Kentucky which, again, I suggest is not responsive to the question.

A letter dated March 4, addressed to Senator Paul, says:

On February 20, 2013, you—

Referring to Senator Paul—wrote to John Brennan requesting additional information concerning the Administration’s views about whether “the President has the power to authorize lethal force, such as a drone strike, against a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil, and without trial.”

The letter goes on to say:

As members of this Administration have previously indicated, the U.S. government has not carried out drone strikes in the United States and has no intention of doing so. As a policy matter, moreover, we reject the use of military force where well-established legal procedures in this country provide the best means for incapacitating a terrorist threat. We have a long history of using the criminal justice system to incapacitate those who pose a threat to the United States and its interests abroad. Hundreds of individuals have been arrested and convicted of terrorism-related offenses in our federal courts.

The question you posed is therefore entirely hypothetical, unlikely to occur, and one we hope President will have no cause to confront. It is, instead, to imagine an extraordinary circumstance in which it would be necessary and appropriate under the Constitution and applicable laws of the United States for the President to authorize the military to use lethal force within the territory of the United States. For example, the President could conceivably have no choice but to authorize the military to use such force if necessary to protect the homeland in circumstances of a catastrophic attack like the ones suffered on December 7, 1941, and September 11, 2001.

Were such an emergency to arise, I would examine the particular facts and circumstances before advising the President on the scope of his authority.

Sincerely,

Eric H. Holder, Jr.
Attorney General

The reason I read the entire letter is because I did not want anyone to think any part of this was taken out of context or anything was being left out.

When you read the entire letter, in response to the entire letter that was sent as a request, I think it is very clear that the Attorney General refuses to answer a simple and very important and very legitimate question.

Our Attorney General suggests that under a certain set of circumstances—which he will not specify any guiding principles—neighbors allow us to decide to use overwhelming force to kill American citizens. He would examine the facts and circumstances and then advise the President of the scope of his authority.

There is no suggestion of what legal authority he has to do this. There is no discussion of constitutional authority. I find this very disturbing. We have all observed the very new developments that we are experiencing in national security. The minority leader alluded to this in some respects.

As I mentioned earlier today, there is no question we have a relatively new phenomenon in our national security challenges. It is only in very recent times that we have understood the nature of a whole new kind of enemy. It is not just a nation state anymore, which has historically been the nature of military threats. But now there is a very different kind of enemies—dispersed, al Qaeda affiliated, sometimes affiliated, hard to discern—a geographically widespread network of terrorists. That is very different than the traditional nation state. That is a different kind of threat, and we have spent a lot of time trying to come to terms with how best to address this.

In an overlapping period of time, a new technology has emerged. We have developed it. It is an amazing technology that gives us the ability from vast distances away to send out a very sophisticated unmanned aircraft that is quite lethal and quite capable of destroying a target. I think most of us probably feel that there are many cases where this is an appropriate tool under an appropriate set of circumstances. But more quickly, I think the subject of this letter is the subject of an ongoing discussion: How would we use this? Under what circumstances? Does the President have unlimited unilateral authority? That is a discussion we ought to have about that use of this new technology overseas where I think, as I say, it has a very important, very useful, very legitimate function.

But when we are talking about using this, the American Government using this military asset to kill American citizens on American soil. I am a little shocked that there is not an automatic presumption that that is not permissible—certainly not legal. I cannot understand the constitutional basis for that. I would certainly suggest that the burden ought to be on those who would suggest that is permissible.

So what the Senator from Kentucky has said is: Just tell us the answer to this question. Do you believe you actually do have this authority? And could you tell us that? If they believe they have this authority—and since they will not answer unequivocally that they lack the authority, it is hard to infer anything other than that perhaps they think they have the authority.

It obviously raises a whole lot of very important questions, such as under what circumstances would you feel you have the authority to exercise this power? And exactly who would be targeted? And how would you decide whom to target? And in the event you are carrying out a strike using lethal force of this magnitude on American soil against an American citizen, what kind of criteria would govern your judgment about the risks that would be imposed on innocent people who are in the vicinity? And what about any judicial review at all? Would there be any appropriate role for it because, of course, we have a very long tradition of due process. There are a lot of Americans who have serious reservations about the idea of indefinite detention on American soil. Indefinite detention is pretty tame compared to being destroyed by a drone.

So I would suggest the failure of the administration to answer this basic question of whether they believe they have the authority to do something that is unprecedented, is a very fundamental and important question and completely legitimate. And it is completely appropriate for this body to insist on an answer to this question before we would go ahead and confirm a person who would have enormous power and authority over a variety of national security issues.

I want to commend the Senator from Kentucky, and I apologize to my friend from Wisconsin. I know he has been waiting. But the question asked by the Senator from Pennsylvania prompted me to recall a specific set of circumstances which I think address his concerns, our mutual concerns, about the use of lethal force.

I know we are talking about this in the context of drones, but a drone is a weapon, and other weapons by which our government can use lethal force to kill people.

So I think, going to the question the Senator asked Mr. Brennan, in a more generic sense, the question is: When can our government use lethal force in the United States against perhaps U.S. citizens? I think it is a legitimate question.

I was not misleading the Senator earlier when I said there is a scheduled hearing—the only scheduled hearing on this question coming up before the Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution, which I chair. And the ranking member is Senator Cruz of Texas who was here earlier.

So I think it is important, and it is an important constitutional question, but, while my colleague from Pennsylvania is here, I wish to recount a set of circumstances for him, and then pose a question to the Senator.

The circumstances were September 11, 2001. Some of us were in this Capitol Building, in fact, just outside this door. As we came to work, we heard that some plane had crashed into the World Trade Center in New York. As we were watching on television, a few minutes after that, another plane crashed into the World Trade Center—the adjoining building. We all know what happened following that.

As we were in our meeting here, just a few feet away, we started seeing black, billowy smoke coming across the Mall right outside our window here. A third plane, taken over by terrorists, was crashing into the Pentagon. What we did not know at the time was that there was a fourth plane. But we did discern that the Capitol was under attack. All of us, literally every one, raced out of this building to stand on the lawn outside. It was not a safe place, but we did not know where to go—all the tourists, all the staff, and all the rest.

It was not but a few minutes that we were out there, and we heard something that sounded like a shot, a discharge of a weapon. In fact, it was fighter planes that were being scrambled to protect the United States Capitol. All of us wondered what had gone out to all commercial airplanes in the United States: Land immediately, so that plane not crashed into the country. And had that plane not crashed into the countryside in Pennsylvania and come within the airspace of this Capitol, I think we know what would have happened. Our government would have used lethal force—military lethal force—to shoot down a civilian airplane that was threatening, we believed, the lives of innocent Americans. It would have been the use of lethal force on our soil to stop a person or persons whom we believed were terrorists intent to kill innocent Americans.

So when I listened to the response from Attorney General Holder in hypothetical and put it in the context of 9/11, I can imagine that President Bush might have been called on in an instant to make a decision as Commander in Chief to bring down the fourth plane before it crashed into another building and killed innocent people.

That is a circumstance, I would say to the Senator from Pennsylvania and the Senator from Kentucky, which I think fully understand and expect the Commander in Chief to respond to.

So I do not think this is such a clear and easy situation. It is important that we have this hearing and explore the possibilities—the decision of a terrorist overseas who threatens our safety and the use of lethal force, drones or otherwise, the possibility of a non-U.S. terrorist in the United States and use of lethal force to deter them. And then obvious questions: What if it is a U.S. citizen overseas? What if it is a U.S. citizen in the United States?

I joined 10 other Senators asking for the same legal memos, which I think the Senator would like to see as well, justifying whatever course of action this administration has used. I think it is a legitimate constitutional responsibility of the Senate and the House and this Congress.

But I also understand, having lived through 9/11, that we do not want to create a situation where we would have to go to the moon, or 9/11, the complexity of those decisions that have to be made in such a fashion.

So my question to the Senator—as I said before, we have to end with a question mark—don’t you consider the situation of 9/11 and the use of lethal force, even military force, to shoot down a civilian plane—if it had survived the passenger effort in Pennsylvania and was headed for the U.S. Capitol—to be a legitimate exercise that a Commander in Chief to protect the United States?

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, absolutely. My answer to the question the Senator raised is absolutely. We have the right to defend ourselves. It would have been a decision that has to be made imminently because a lethal threat needs to have a lethal response immediately.

My whole problem with this whole debate is, none of us disagrees with that. I do not think. We all agree that we will repel an imminent attack. We all agree if someone is outside the Capitol with a rocket launcher or grenade launcher, lethal force can be used.
against them. None of us disagrees on that.

We are talking about a targeted drone program where we target individuals. Overseas, the standard seems to include people who are not actively engaged in combat who we think either might be in the future or have been in the past. I do not think that standard can be used in the United States. I think when you are in a battlefield, you do not get due process. If you are shooting at Americans, drones can hit you and your family. There is no due process in a battle.

This is a big debate because many have said the battlefield is here. But if the battlefield is here, that would imply the fifth amendment does not apply here. The President has said he will use the fifth amendment in the process of deciding drone attacks overseas, but he does not get the option to kind of use it privately. Using the fifth amendment privately to me is not using the amendment. I will say, I have a great deal of respect for the Senator from Illinois. We have often been on the same side on civil liberties issues. I do not question his intention to use force.

I do not think there has been a realization that neither side is going away. If we do not resolve this, there is an agreement on that. I think the 9/11 comparison and the Pearl Harbor comparison is a red herring in the sense that none of us disagrees with repelling a lethal attack, an imminent lethal attack, an ongoing lethal attack with lethal force. No one disagrees with that.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield further for a question?

The white paper that has been presented to us by the Justice Department concludes that the right to national self-defense and the 2001 authorization to use military force gave the U.S. Government legal authority to kill a U.S. citizen in a foreign country that is not an area of active hostilities, if the target is a senior operational leader of al-Qaeda or an associated force. So it is qualified in this regard.

The white paper argues, such an attack does not violate the constitutional rights of a U.S. citizen in this circumstance, “if he poses an imminent threat of violent attack against the United States.” Imminent threat, No. 2, “his capture is not feasible,” or the Justice Department white paper goes on to say, “and the operation complies with the law of war principles, such as the need to minimize collateral damage.”

I will say to the Senator, I stand with him. I want an answer to his question. I think we should pursue it on a bipartisan basis. To ask either of us together in the past. I think it is a legitimate question. But I would say that the white paper we have been given relative to this U.S. citizen overseas has some fairly narrow circumstances in terms of the use of force.

When it comes to the use of that force in the United States, I believe the circumstances should be just as narrow, if not more. I would say to the Senator, I am genuine in my concern for bringing these issues out in a full hearing of our constitutional subcommittee. I think I have answered the question. I hope he appreciates my sincerity.

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, in very quick response to that, one of the few problems with that is they also go on to say that imminent does not need to be immediate. You are also implying that you can kill this American citizen in a noncombat situation, not an active battlefield. I do not accept that standard for the United States. It is another debate whether we accept the standard overseas. I think it is an important debate. But the debate about whether that is a sufficient standard for America, I do not accept. When someone is not in combat— one, it is not wise. You are not going to get any information. When someone is eating dinner, why do you not send the police over and arrest them? To kill someone who is in a noncombat situation in America is unacceptable in America under any circumstances. I think we need to come to an agreement on that.

I wish to yield for a question to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. JOHNSON of Wisconsin. Madam President, all of us have come down here to support a very legitimate request to have a legitimate question answered. I think the Senator deserves those answers. If not an answer from the White House, he at least deserves a vote.

I started watching here this morning. The Senator started about 11:57. It is now past midnight. I think my primary action is one of just being puzzled. I have never been a parent who would willingly max out their credit cards, get in debt way over their heads never intending ever to pay it off, but fully intending to pass it off to their children and the grandchildren. I do not know any parent that way, fortunately. But as a society that is exact what we are doing to future generations.

One of the things I do when I talk around the country, I make it a point that fortunately I do not know of any parent who would willingly max out their credit cards, get in debt way over their heads never intending ever to pay it off, but fully intending to pass it off to their children and the grandchildren.

I do not know any parent that way, fortunately. But as a society that is exact what we are doing to future generations.

Mr. PAUL. Madam President tonight—I think all of my colleagues did. I hope the President did— with a pretty strong sense, once again, that there is a great deal of sincerity, a great deal of desire to roll up their sleeves and get to work on solutions, put down partisan differences, work together to solve this problem.

I think there has got to be a realization that neither side is going away. If we are going to solve these problems, we have got to start working together. We have got to return the Senate into that deliberative body that our Founders intended it to be. We have got to be willing to be held accountable. We have got to take votes. It should not be that hard. We should not be afraid.

I would ask the Senator from Kentucky—as I understand it, this is puzzling that we are here now. It is a night. I applaud the Senator for his resolve. That is why he sees every Member coming down here and providing the support. But I think all he wanted was either unanimous consent or possibly a vote on this simple question:

Resolved, that it is the sense of the Senate that:

No. 1, the use of drones to execute or to target American citizens on American soil who pose no imminent threat clearly violates the Constitutional due process right of citizens.

That seems like a pretty simple question, seems like one most Senators would want to express their opinion by taking a vote, or allowing this resolution to pass by unanimous consent. So I guess my only question is, is that all the Senator is looking for, either an answer from the White House or a simple unanimous consent agreement or a simple vote?

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, I thank the Senator from Wisconsin. Yes, we had two simple requests tonight. The first was for a vote on a nonbinding resolution to express our opinion that it is unconstitutional to kill Americans on American soil. That was denied by the majority party.

The second request we have had, in communication with the White House, is for the White House to say or clarify their opinion that they are not going to be doing targeted drone strikes on noncombatants in America. We have not had much success with either one. We will continue to ask that question. I have promised to remove myself from the blockage of John Brennan’s nomination as soon as we get some clarification from the White House. I am still hopeful in the morning that they will do that, and by doing that, we can move forward with it.

But I have been more than willing to compromise, because I do not think it is so much about John Brennan as it is about a constitutional principle, that I want the President to publicly acknowledge the fifth amendment does apply to Americans in our country, and that we are not going to be cherry-picking when we apply the fifth amendment.

At this time, I wish to yield for a question from the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. SCOTT. The drone issue is not an issue. It is not a question about Democrats versus Republicans or the DNC versus the GOP. It is not a question about the executive branch versus the legislative branch. It is not a question about conservatives versus liberals. It is a question about the Constitution.

Another one of our friends said that this Nation, our great Nation, needs to stand and recognize what RAND PAUL is doing today for Americans. All of our aspirations mean nothing, nothing at all without our rights.

Another said you do not have to like our political party. You did not even have to like Senator RAND PAUL to stand with RAND. You only needed to be asking that Americans without due process on U.S. soil.

I will close with the question that we have heard many times already. Why will this administration not simply undo illegal, illicit, and illegal—unconstitutional and illegal—for the government to kill Americans in the United States on our soil or, as I think about it, it is illegal on the soil of Greenville, SC, it is illegal in Oconee County, SC.

It is illegal in Charleston, SC. It is illegal throughout the coast of South Carolina, without due process, to kill an American citizen. Is that what you are asking?

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, I think it is a simple question to have answered, and it boggles my mind. I think the President in general, though, and other Presidents in general, hang on to their power with a tenacious grip, and they don’t want to allow that there is any authority that they don’t have power; let alone, they have given up some power.

I think that is a mistake for Presidents. I think it goes against what the candidate, Barack Obama, was for and as Senator. I hope in the morning when they wake up they will think about what Candidate Barack Obama said in 2007 and what Senator Barack Obama once stood for as a Senator; that is, the power of the Presidency is limited and checked by the Constitution.

Madam President, at this time I would like to yield for a question from the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. FLAKE. I thank the Senator for yielding, and I want to commend the Senator for this 12-hour long quest.

I think it is now. It is an important topic. I recently traveled to Afghanistan and received a briefing there about the drone program and how it is working in Afghanistan. After seeing that briefing, seeing examples of how it is being used, I have to tell you, I was awed by it. I thought what a powerful weapon, what a great weapon, in this case, to use against terrorists.

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, that is what happens when that is in the hands of our enemy. I can tell you, it is a sobering thought to think of what happens when our enemies get this kind of technology. It is also sobering to think of what could happen if we use this technology here domestically. I think the question you have asked is totally right and proper. Where does the President derive authority? Does he believe he has the authority to use these weapons or any kind of weapon for lethal means when there is no imminent threat?

I think the question the Senator is asking, if I understand that question correctly, is right and proper. My understanding is all you want to find out is does the President believe the administration has the authority to use lethal means in this manner domestically; is that correct?

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, that is correct. It is a simple question. I think there are not many heavy lifting here. We are asking: Do you have the authority?

I think it is important that it is a legal question in the sense we want to ask and get a legal, constitutional response. We are asking—probably won’t do it, we don’t intend to do it, or it is not appropriate, or it is not, as a policy matter we don’t like doing it. We want the constitutional answer: Do you really believe you have the constitutional authority to do this?

Mr. FLAKE. I thank the Senator.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I rise today, in support of Senator PAUL’s filibuster on the nomination of John Brennan, to be Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. I have stated my opposition to Brennan’s nomination from the beginning.

During my time on the Intelligence Committee and as chairman, I presided over hearings before which Mr. Brennan testified.

His inability to give a straight yes or no answer was greater than any other witness I experienced. But his approach is exactly what we see from the Obama administration today.

Mr. PAUL has asked a very simple question to which the President refuses to give a direct answer. The appropriate question is: Will the administration clarify any circumstance when it is acceptable to target and kill American citizens on American soil?

Senator PAUL is only asking for a clear, unwavering statement that protects Americans’ fifth Amendment rights as well as our national security. All Americans await the answer.

My personal issue that was raised by my friend a few minutes ago, my friend, my distinguished colleague, the senior Senator from Illinois, touches upon an important point, upon a principle of law which dates back centuries and has application in myriad contexts, one that deals with the concept of imminence.

My friend from Illinois is certainly correct in pointing out the white paper leaked by the Obama Department of Justice to the news media recently does not even use the analysis that talks about imminence.

It is significant, however, to point out, on page 7 of that white paper the administration goes on to essentially eviscerate that concept of imminence. In fact it makes clear that this condition, that is the condition dealing with imminence, with the idea of protecting an imminent threat of violent attack against the United States ‘does not require the United States to have clear evidence that a specific attack on U.S. persons and interests will take place in the immediate future.’

That is at the top of the first full paragraph on p. 7 of the very same white paper that my friend from Illinois was quoting.

In response to that question, it is important to point out that they have taken the imminence out of imminent. There is no more imminence in this standard. So if, in fact, we are to believe the white paper is the correct assessment of the administration’s position, it is no longer an imminent standard. It is something else. It is something else.

I should point out that the Attorney General agreed.

I would point out that the questions of imminence, I don’t think, are difficult as has been suggested. Indeed, I would like to thank the senior Senator from Illinois for bringing this long evening and for expressing his equal and heartfelt concerns about the limitations on the power of the executive to take the lives of U.S. citizens on U.S. soil.

I would point out that at the hearing we had yesterday with the Attorney General there was a series of questions exploring in further depth what the position of this administration was because, in response to the inquiry of the Senator from Kentucky, Attorney General Holder put in writing that he could imagine circumstances in which it would be permissible to take the lives of U.S. citizens on U.S. soil.

The two examples he gave were Pearl Harbor and 9/11. As the Senator for Kentucky responded, and I think everyone agrees in those examples are unobjectionable. But those instances were instances of grievous military attacks. I think nobody doubts that if Kamikazi planes are coming down on our ships in Pearl Harbor, the United States can use lethal force to take out those planes and to save the lives of our service men and women. There is no question about that, legal or otherwise.

Likewise, I think nobody doubts if terrorists have taken over an airliner and are steering it into a building, that tragic a decision would be as heart-rending as the decision on 9/11 must have been for the President to give the order to shoot down that fourth commercial airline—if it began approaching yet another target where it could inflict thousands of deaths—I think nobody disputes that stopping an imminent, immediate, act of violence, and indeed, a military act of war is fully within the authority of the Federal Government.

The question posed to the Attorney General was the question Senator PAUL had asked originally—not that question—rather, it was if there is an individual, a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil who is suspected of being a terrorist, and for whom we can say arguendo there is abundant evidence to demonstrate this individual as a terrorist, and if this individual is on U.S. soil and is not currently an imminent threat of violence—if he or she is sitting in a cafe in New York with a cup of coffee, the question I posed to the Attorney General is, in those circumstances, would it be constitutional for the U.S. Government to send a drone to kill that U.S. citizen on U.S. soil with no due process of law if that individual did not pose an imminent threat?

In my judgment that was not a difficult question. I think the answer, frankly, is I expected of course it would. After all, I expected the Federal Government cannot kill a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil who does not pose an imminent threat. That has been the state of the law from the day our Constitution came into effect and from before.

Instead, the first response of the Attorney General was it wouldn’t be appropriate to use lethal force there, and we wouldn’t do so. I pressed the question again on the Attorney General and said: With respect, the question is not whether it is appropriate, it is not a question of prosecutorial discretion. Do we trust you would not choose to exercise lethal force in those circumstances? Rather, it is a question would it be constitutional to kill a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil with a drone if that individual did not pose an imminent threat?

The second time the Attorney General said: I don’t believe it would be appropriate. Yet a third time I asked the Attorney General: What would it be about inappropriate. As the Attorney General of the United States, you are the chief legal officer for this Nation. Does the Department of Justice have a legal opinion as to whether it is constitutional for the Federal Government to kill a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil if he or she does not pose an imminent threat? Yet a third time the answer was it wouldn’t be appropriate.

Then, finally, when asked a fourth time, the Attorney General said: When I say “appropriate,” I mean it wouldn’t be unconstitutional.

Finally, after asking four times, the Attorney General agreed.

My response to that questioning was: Attorney General Holder, I am very glad you have stated that position. I emphatically agree with that position. I don’t understand why it took such gymnastics to get to that position. I wish you had simply said in response to Senator PAUL now 2 days ago. It would have been a very straightforward and simple thing to say.

What I also said to the Attorney General is Senator PAUL and I have drafted legislation which will make explicitly clear the U.S. Government may not kill a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil who does not pose an imminent threat.

I hope, based on the Attorney General’s representations, the Department will support that legislation. That sought, in my judgment, be legislation which should be bipartisan legislation that should pass this body 100 to 0 because it is truly phrased with unobjectionable a legal truism as I could come up with.

I will admit I have been flabbergasted as these days have gone on why John Brennan, when asked by Senator PAUL this question, did not simply say no. Why didn’t Eric Holder, when asked repeatedly, simply say no—at least not at the first. Why now, over 12 hours since this filibuster has proceeded, the White House has not put in writing the absolutely correct statement of constitutional law the Federal Government cannot kill U.S. citizens on U.S. soil if they do not pose imminent threats.

I would note, with the hypothetical that the Senator from Illinois posed to Senator Paul, even in that situation, Osama bin Laden was a horrible enemy of the United States who committed a grievous act of terror and was the mastermind behind it. I am very glad that after a decade-long manhunt, we were able to find him and we were able to, on a military battlefield, take him out.

I would suggest that if he were not in Pakistan, if he were living in an apartment in the suburbs of Chicago, and if he were asleep in bed—even if he were Osama bin Laden, a really, really, really bad guy—there is nothing in the Constitution that gives the Federal Government the authority to fire a missile at an apartment with a sleeping person in it in the United States of America if that individual was a U.S. citizen. And if he was in the United States and the government would do is what we would expect to do with any other really, really, really bad guy, which is go in and apprehend him.

Behind enemy lines, you can’t always do that. There are things that happen on the battlefield that we would never do at home. But I would suggest that any argument that says someone sleeping at home in bed presents an imminent threat is an argument that stretches the bounds of the word ‘imminence’ beyond where its natural meaning should lie.

If an individual is pointing a bazooka at the Pentagon or robbing a bank or committing another crime of violence, there is no doubt that force—and lethal force if necessary—needs to stop that threat of violence. But I think that there likewise should be no doubt that the Federal Government lacks the authority to kill U.S. citizens on U.S. soil if there is no imminent threat of death or grievous bodily harm.

So I am hopeful that the results of this extended discussion will be several. I am hopeful, No. 1, it will prompt the White House to do what the White House has heretofore refused to do, which is, explicitly and affirmatively answer the question posed by Senator Paul now over a week ago and expressly state as the position of the United States of America that the Federal Government cannot kill a U.S. citizen on U.S. soil if that individual does not pose an imminent threat of death or grievous bodily harm.

I also hope that a consequence of this extended discussion is that we will find widespread agreement in this body behind passing legislation to make clear that the Constitution does not allow such killings. I am hopeful that legislation will command wide support on the Republican side of the aisle but likewise wide support on the Democratic side of the aisle.

I would hope for and would certainly welcome the support of the senior Senator from Illinois and, indeed, every Member of the Democratic caucus. And should that happen, I would be even more hopeful that it will have made clear the limits of the Executive power, and it would be, indeed, carrying out the finest traditions of this body—serving as a check on unchecked government power.

So I would ask the Senator from Kentucky, does he agree that if those were the outcomes of these proceedings, this would have indeed been a beneficial proceeding for helping focus the American people on these issues and helping draw a line that the Executive cannot cross—failing to do so would mean what?

Mr. Paul. Mr. President, I am hopeful that we have drawn attention to this issue; that this issue won’t fade away; that the President will tomorrow come up with a response. I would also like not just to facilitate the voting and the continuation of the debate tomorrow. I hope the President will respond to us. We have tried repeatedly throughout the day, and we will see what the outcome of that is.

I would thank the staff for being here for a long day, for their help. I would like to thank fellow Senators for being supportive of this cause. I would like to thank the Members of Congress who came over to support this cause, as well as the clerks, the Capitol Police, the staff of the Senate, the doorkkeepers—who, apparently, I may have gotten in trouble—and anybody else who came to support us, and even the senior Senator from Illinois, for better or worse, for all the things they support the cause. The cause here is one that I think is important enough to have gone through this procedure.

I sit at Henry Clay’s desk, and they call Henry Clay the ‘Great Compromiser.’ When I came to Washington, one of my fellow Senators said to me: Oh, I guess you will be the great compromiser. I kind of smiled at him and laughed. I learned a little bit about Henry Clay and his career.

People often say they won’t compromise, but there are many compromises. There are many things on which I am willing to split the difference. If the Democrats will ever come to us and say: We will fix and we will save Social Security, what age we change it to, how fast we do it—there are a lot of things on which we can split the difference. But the issue we have had today is one on which we don’t split the difference. I think you don’t get half of the fifth amendment. It didn’t strike me that the President can obey the fifth amendment when he chooses. I don’t think you acknowledge that the fifth amend-

FOR-PROFIT COLLEGES

Mr. DURBIN. Grant Schaffer is a Marine veteran. He attended the Art Institute of Pittsburgh, a for-profit college owned by Education Management Corporation. Grant saw an advertisement for the school and thought the program he enrolled in would give him the skills he needed to succeed in the workforce after he left the Marines. After enrolling at the Art Institute of Pittsburgh, Grant became concerned about the quality of the school. He started doing his own research about the school, the program, and how many of the graduates actually got a job. What he realized was the program wasn’t going to provide him with the skills that were promised. In fact, the jobs that his program would have prepared him to do didn’t even require a college degree.

Grant decided the program at the Art Institute of Pittsburgh was not worth his tuition payment’s money— he was on the GI bill—so he decided to transfer to a community college. The problem was none of his credits from the Art Institute of Pittsburgh would transfer to any school, not even to a community college. Although he received GI bill benefits, those benefits did not cover the costs, all the costs of the inflated tuition of this Art Institute of Pittsburgh. After 1 year in the program, he borrowed $22,000 over and above his GI bill benefits. Now Grant is in debt with worthless college credits from a for-profit school, the Art Institute of Pittsburgh. He is now attending a community college, but to succeed, he needs to find a job. He is still having to pay $22,000 in debt to a for-profit school that was a worthless experience.

Students also discover their credits will not transfer. That ought to be the first question any student asks: If I go to a for-profit school, will any other school recognize my credits? In this case the Art Institute of Pittsburgh would have had to answer no, and that might have given Grant some pause.

These students’ credits are stuck with mortgage-sized debts and end up with no home to show for it and worthless college credits. Grant Schaffer’s credits would not transfer because his school had a different accreditation than the community college he now attends.

It is a little known fact these for-profit schools do not reveal to students: The credits will not transfer anywhere because the school is not accredited. Our current accreditation system favors schools, not students. That is upside-down. Schools pay accreditors to accredit them, creating a cozy relationship that does not foster any real accountability. Once a school is accredited, the Government dollars just flow in, but an accreditation is not always the guarantee of academic quality that most students believe it is and not all accreditations are equal.

For-profit schools have emerged as a profit-driven business and treating its students. More accreditors, both regional and national, should take a closer look at the schools they accredit and the standards used to accredit them.

How many more people have to go through the experience of Grant Schaffer? Essentially, this former Marine wasted his GI bill benefits and got into more debt than he can realistically manage and has nothing to show for it from a for-profit school. We need to look at the current system of accreditation, consider how for-profit schools are aggressively recruiting those who are in charge of the for-profit schools. We need to direct taxpayers’ dollars to affordable, meaningful education that will literally help our men and women in uniform and students across America.

I yield the floor.

TRIBUTE TO LYMAN HUBBARD, SR.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, last year, we lost a great American from my hometown of Springfield, IL, and I rise today to pay tribute to him and his legacy.

Lyman Hubbard, Sr., grew up on a small farm near Springfield that had been in his family for 165 years—long enough that at one point the family’s lawyer for the land was a local attorney named Abraham Lincoln.

In high school, Mr. Hubbard was a member of the National Honor Society, ran track, and played basketball and football. I have heard someone who knew him at the time say that he was “the best athlete in Springfield.” And he was an Eagle Scout.

During World War II, before he had even graduated from high school, he signed up to serve his country in the Air Force.

When he graduated from pilot training, he became the only person from Springfield to join the Tuskegee Airmen the first African-American military aviators in the U.S. Armed Forces. From there he flew both our Nation and for racial equality. He logged more than 7,000 hours of flight time in the course of his multitor career, flying planes from the B-25 bomber to the EC-121 Super Constellation. He flew them well and became a leader among his peers, ultimately earning a Bronze Star, an Air Medal with oak leaf clusters, the Air Force Commendation Medal, and a Vietnamese Honor Medal. Lyman Hubbard accomplished all of this despite the well-documented discrimination that the Tuskegee Airmen faced.

The people of Springfield, and all of us, owe a great deal to Lyman Hubbard, Sr., not just for his exceptional valor in combat but also for his devotion to preserving the history of the city of Springfield.

When the Lincoln Colored Home, one of the first African-American orphanages in the United States and a historical landmark, was at risk of being destroyed, Mr. Hubbard stepped forward, purchased the home outright to save it and planned to turn it into a community center.
Dr. Thacker was a true public health hero whose long and distinguished career at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention began as an Epidemic Intelligence Service, EIS officer in 1976. On his first day, he was sent out on an investigation of an unknown illness which later developed to be the first recognized Legionnaire’s epidemic. Throughout his 37 years at CDC, Dr. Thacker was a leader of public health science and the professionals who practice that science. Programs under his leadership introduced thousands of professionals to careers in public health and brought epidemiology directly into middle school and high school classrooms. He was instrumental in launching the field epidemiology training programs in more than 35 countries.

In all of the many positions he held, Dr. Thacker was a steadfast champion of epidemiology, public health surveillance, and the development of a global public health workforce. Programs developed or expanded under his leadership have introduced thousands of professionals to careers in public health. Given all this, it is no surprise that Dr. Thacker’s accomplishments were recognized through more than 40 major awards and commendations throughout his career, including the Surgeon General’s Medallion, which he received just 2 weeks before his death.

Dr. Thacker’s accomplishments were only exceeded by his treatment of all persons with dignity, honesty, and respect. His called the best of CDC’s commitment to science and, most importantly, to service.

I offer my deep condolences to Dr. Thacker’s family. Mr. President and colleagues, please join me in honoring the memory of Dr. Steve Thacker. I believe there is no question that Dr. Thacker’s accomplishments were recognized through more than 40 major awards and commendations throughout his career, including the Surgeon General’s Medallion, which he received just 2 weeks before his death.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. ROCKEFELLER (for himself, Mr. MANCHIN, Ms. WARREN, and Mr. BROWN):

S. 468. A bill to protect the health care and pension benefits of our nation’s miners; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, in West Virginia, we revere our miners—the men and women who put their lives on the line every single day to provide for their families and bring light and heat to millions. Their grit, their courage and their determination are inspirational to each of us. The work they do every day provides nearly half of our Nation with power and it helps underpin the economy of the State we call home.

For their hard work in these grueling jobs miners receive promised pensions and lifetime health benefits. Health care for all retirees is vital. But in many cases, it is more so for retired miners, who have the responsibilities of supporting their families and bringing light and heat to millions. Their grit, their courage and their determination are inspirational to each of us. The work they do every day provides nearly half of our Nation with power and it helps underpin the economy of the State we call home.

The miners’ pension fund is on the road to insolvency. It has been hit by the perfect storm—the recent financial crisis, the smaller number of active miners and the large number of “orphans” who receive their pensions under the plan. These “or-

By Mr. CARDIN (for himself and Ms. MIKULSKI):

S. 470 A bill to amend the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal National Historical Park Commission; to extend the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal National Historical Park Commission; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, today I am proud to reintroduce legislation to support greater public involvement in the administration of one of Maryland’s most treasured National Historical Parks. The Chesapeake and Ohio Canal National Historical Park Advisory Commission Act ensures that the communities located along the 184½ mile-long C&O Canal National Historical Park have a voice with the National Park Service regarding decisions affecting the administration of the Park. The Park’s mission keeps the people and small businesses most affected by the operation of the C&O Canal National Historical Park informed and involved in the decisions surrounding the Park. Citizen involvement in the governmental process is a hallmark of our democracy and the C&O Canal National Historical Park Advisory Commission Act exemplifies the goal of ensuring the public’s role in government decision making.

The importance of the Commission is intrinsically tied to the uniqueness of the C&O Canal National Historical Park. The Park covers an area of 20,000 acres wading through the Potomac River from the heart of Georgetown’s old industrial district in Washington D.C. to Cumberland, MD nestled in the valleys and mountains of Western Maryland. The Park’s watered canal, contiguous towpath, popular among cyclists, backpackers, day hikers and runners, hundreds of historic structures and towns like Hancock, Hagerstown, Brunswick, Harpers Ferry, Williamsport and Sharpsburg that grew during the Canal’s heyday. The C&O Canal, and C&O Canal Crossing served as a crucial East/West commercial link. The Park also preserves pristine views of the Potomac River, evocative of the C&O Canal’s working days. At its widest points, the C&O Canal National Historical Park spans less than two-tenths of a mile across and in many areas directly abuts neighboring commercial and residential properties bordering the Park.

Due to the commercial operation of the C&O Canal, the areas were local commercial centers where area farmers and tradesman utilized the canal boats to deliver their goods to market. Today, the hospitality and tourism industries of these communities thrive among cyclists, backpackers, day hikers and runners.

In 2009, more than 3.75 million people visited the C&O Canal National Historical Park. Much of the C&O Canal National Historical Park’s popularity and are integral to enhancing the park user experience. Whether it is a hotel or Bed and Breakfast to spend the night in, a restaurant or diner to grab a meal, stores to shop in and perhaps rent one of the many canoeing provisions, boat houses to rent a canoe for the afternoon, bike shops to service a flat tire or make repairs to your bike or any of the myriad of goods and services park visitors may need, the communities along the C&O Canal are as important to the Park user experience as the Park’s users are to maintaining their businesses.

In 2009, more than 3.75 million people visited the C&O Canal National Historical Park and the Commission has always functioned at a nominal cost. The General Services Administration (GSA) Federal Advisory Committee Act database determined that the C&O Canal Advisory Commission’s expenses totaled $33,199 for fiscal year 2010. All expenses came out of the National Park Service’s general operating budget. Expenses covered the cost of travel for commission members, $295, Federal staff time, $26,074, and miscellaneous expenses, $4,830, like meeting space, printing, supplies and website maintenance.

The National Park System is a showcase of America’s natural and historic treasures. Our National Historical Park System’s success is rooted in the citizen stewardship projects and the involvement of caring citizens and community leaders. Like so many of our National Parks the C&O Canal National Historical Park has an extensive backlog of maintenance and repair projects. The Commission plays a critical role in helping keep these projects moving forward and assisting the National Park Service with their completion because there is recognition of the shared responsibility between the Park Service and the Commission about the importance of continuing to make the Park a desirable tourism and outdoor recreation destination. The Commission provides that bridge between the government and public. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO CANAL NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK COMMISSION.

Section 6(c) of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Development Act (16 U.S.C. 410y–4(g)) is amended by striking “40” and inserting “50.”

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN:

S. 477. A bill to amend the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act to modify a provision relating to gaming on land acquired after October 17, 1988; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to reintroduce the Tribal Gaming Eligibility Act.

This bill sets forth what I believe is a very reasonable, moderate standard for where tribes are allowed to open gaming establishments.

The standard is simple: a tribe must demonstrate that it has a modern and an aboriginal connection to the land before it can open a gaming establishment on it.

The new standard is needed because too many tribes in California and across the nation are “reservation shopping.” They look for a profitable casino location, and then seek to put that land in trust regardless of their historical ties to the area.

To be clear, current tribes do not fit this mold. Most play by the rules and acquire land in appropriate locations.

But as wealthy Las Vegas casino interests search for ways to expand their gaming syndicates, the problem is getting worse. These syndicates have no interest in preserving native cultures and they have little interest in pursuing other forms of economic development; so they also have little interest in limiting casinos to bona fide historical tribal lands.

The tragic part is that these casinos are going up despite objections from communities and other Native American tribes. That is why I am introducing the Tribal Gaming Eligibility Act.

This legislation addresses the problems that arise from off reservation casino locations. It requires that tribes meet two simple conditions before taking land into trust for gaming:

First the tribe must demonstrate a “substantial direct aboriginal connection to the land.”

Second, the tribe must demonstrate a “substantial direct modern connection to the land.”

Simply put, tribes must show that both they, and their ancestors, have a connection to the land in question.

California voters thought they settled the question of reservation shopping in 2000 when Proposition 1A authorized the Governor to negotiate gambling compacts with tribes, provided the casino location only occurred “on Indian lands.” The words “on Indian lands” were critical. This made clear that gaming that is appropriate only on a tribe’s historic lands, and voters endorsed this bargain with 65 percent of the vote.

But fast-forward 12 years and this agreement is being put to the test. More than 100 new Las Vegas style casinos have opened in the State in the last 12 years.

Unfortunately things aren’t slowing down; the Department of the Interior has approved three extremely controversial new casinos just last year, some nowhere close to a tribe’s aboriginal territory or current reservation.

When given the opportunity voters have rejected the idea of reservation shopping. Two years ago in Richmond, CA, a tribe proposed taking land into trust at Point Molate to open a 4,000-slot-machine mega-casino. Proponents touted it as a major economic engine for a depressed area.

But the voters of Richmond knew the reality was far different. The project threatened to burden state and local governments, and it threatened to irrevocably change the character of the community.

So Richmond voters made it clear how they felt by overwhelmingly rejecting the advisory measure by a margin of 52–48. Voters rejected the proposal. Many cited concerns about crime as a reason they opposed the project.

But after the dust settled, the Department of the Interior decided to go along with the project anyway. Despite the fact that voters rejected it and only one of the 21 public officials in the area polled on the issue expressed support for the project.

Moreover, the Department’s claim that even one local official supported the project is dubious. The so-called support is based on a Memorandum of Understanding the County entered into prior to the advisory election. The county never offered a letter of support when consulted and still has not to this day.

As a former mayor, I know the financial pressures that local governments face, especially in these tough times. The temptation to support large casinos, with the promises of hundreds of construction jobs, can be strong.

But I also know the heavy price that society pays for the siren song of gambling. This price includes addiction and crime, strained public services and increased traffic congestion.

Some Indian gaming proponents and their out of state gaming syndicate backers would have us believe that these off-reservation gaming establishment ments are a sign of growth and economic development.

But a 2006 report, titled Gambling in the Golden State, paints a different picture. The report compiled a comprehensive body of research on the effects of casinos on their surrounding communities. The results were staggering.

New casinos are associated with a 10 percent increase in violent crime and a 10 percent increase in bankruptcy rates.

New casinos are also associated with an increase in law enforcement expenditures of $15.34 per resident.

California spends an estimated $1 billion to deal with problem-gamblers and pathological-gamblers, 75 percent of which identify Indian casinos as their primary gambling preference.

The report confirms what many local elected officials and community activists already know: casinos come at a tremendous cost.

Some have tried to mischaracterize my legislation. They have said it limits the sovereignty of tribes or it destroys the ability to undertake economic development.

But I am here today to say that nothing could be farther from the truth.

The bill preserves the right of tribes to acquire trust land in any location, provided they secure the approval of the Governor and meet the strict two-part determination standards.

The bill puts no limits on where a tribe can acquire land for any purpose other than gaming.

Because the fact of the matter is that most casinos are appropriately placed, on historical tribal lands, and there is no need to argue about the legitimacy of these establishments.

My legislation only deals with those proposals that are truly beyond the scope of Congressional intent when the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act was passed in 1988.

I look forward to working with my colleagues on this important issue.

S. 478. A bill to clarify that the revocation of an alien’s visa or other documentation is not subject to judicial review; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, back in 2003, the Government Accountability Office, the investigative arm of Congress, issued a report that revealed that suspected terrorists could stay in the country after their visas had been revoked on grounds of terrorism because of a legal loophole in the wording of revocation papers. The GAO shed light on a serious problem in our visa policies that posed a threat to our national security. The GAO found that many individuals who were granted visas, but later, the FBI and intelligence community suspected ties of terrorism. The FBI didn’t share the derogatory information with our consular officers in time, Consular officers had one tool at their disposal, and that was to revoke the visas. But, many of the individuals had made it to the United States.

What the GAO found was that even though the visas were revoked, immigration officials wouldn’t do anything about it because the revocation didn’t go into effect until after the alien departed. They were handicapped from locating the visa holders and deporting them. Today, our immigration agents may not be able to locate the individual even if they could deport them.

The GAO report opened our eyes and showed us how revocations were not being used effectively, and how terrorists could exploit a loophole to stay in the country. Since the GAO report was issued, I have attempted to plug this hole in the system. Today I am reintroducing a bill to give the Department of Homeland Security a critical tool that allows the Secretary to issue revocations and remove aliens from the United States without the hurdles they currently face.

Let me elaborate. Under current law, visas approved or denied by consular officers abroad are non-reviewable. We give our consular officers great latitude for revocation and remove aliens from the United States but without the hurdles they currently face.

Justice Minton, in his decision, stated, “At the outset we wish to point out that an alien who seeks admission to this country may not do so under any claim of right. Admission of aliens to the United States is a privilege granted by the sovereign United States Government. Such privilege is granted to an alien only upon such terms as the United States shall prescribe. It must be exercised in accordance with the procedure which the United States provides.”

The doctrine of non-reviewability is a long-standing one that allows the Department of State to keep foreign nationals from entering the United States. But, the doctrine should be applied only when a person who is granted a visa, enters the country, and the Government subsequently revokes that visa.

There are some national security implications at stake. The ability to deport an alien on U.S. soil with a revoked visa is nearly impossible today if the alien is given the opportunity to appeal the revocation. So, in effect, the State Department doesn’t use their authority to revoke. In fact, I am told they aren’t doing it at all when the alien is given an opportunity to stay in the country. They need a change so that foreign nationals are not able to freely roam our communities when they shouldn’t be here in the first place.

Secretary Chertoff, former Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security agreed that the policy needed to be changed. When Secretary, he said, “The fact is that we can prevent someone who’s coming in as a guest. We can say, ‘You can’t come in overseas,’ but once they come in, if they abuse their terms and conditions of their coming in, we have to go through a cumbersome process. That strikes me as not particularly sensible. People who are admitted as guests like guests in my house—if the guest misbehaves, I just tell them to leave; they don’t get to go to court over it.”

What’s more, allowing judicial review of revoked visas, especially on terrorism grounds, could jeopardize the classified intelligence that led to the revocation. It can force agencies such as the FBI and CIA to be hesitant to share information. Why would our intelligence community share information with the State Department if they knew State wouldn’t revoke a visa when the alien is in the U.S.? Current law could be reversing our progress on information sharing. Intelligence officials need to share information with immigration and consular officers to prevent terrorists from entering the United States and to impede their mobility.

My bill would give the U.S. Government the ability to expedite the deportation of suspected terrorists by applying the same ‘non-reviewability’ standard as standard revocation decisions. It would treat revocations similar to visa denials. My bill gives the Federal Government the ability to deport an alien who has already entered the United States but shouldn’t have ever been granted a visa.

Terrorists took advantage of our system before 9/11. We can’t let that happen again. We should not allow potential terrorists and others who act counter to our laws to remain on U.S. soil and seek relief from deportation. We need to ensure that the government has all the tools at its disposal to keep the homeland safe.

I urge my colleagues to support my bill.

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself, Mr. NELSON, Mr. PORTMAN, and Mr. PRIYOR):

S. 479. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to clarify the employment tax treatment and reporting of wages paid by professional employer organizations, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. President, today I am reintroducing the Small Business Efficiency Act with my colleagues Senators NELSON, PORTMAN, and PRIYOR. Many small businesses rely on Professional Employer Organizations, PEOs, and to handle many of the responsibilities. The Small Business Efficiency Act will provide an important layer of certainty and protection for small business owners and their workers by eliminating any ambiguity about a certified PEOs ability to assume employment tax responsibility. It further implements safeguards for the certified PEOs small business clients. This will give small businesses peace of mind that their human resources and employment tax responsibilities are taken care of so they can focus on their core business and create more jobs.

I urge my colleagues to support this common sense legislation.

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. SANDERS, and Mr. TEBESTER):

S. 481. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide protections for consumers against excessive, unjustified, or unfairly discriminatory increases in premium rates; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. President, we have made great strides in improving the accountability of health insurance companies and protecting consumers from egregious practices. However, despite the progress we have made, many States still lack the ability to regulate excessive health insurance rate increases.

Health insurance premiums in the individual and small group market continue to grow beyond the rate of medical inflation. The Affordable Care Act has brought greater scrutiny to the market and we’ve seen some great progress. In fact, the number of requested increases in health insurance premiums beyond 10 percent comprised 75 percent of rate filings in 2010, and that has declined to 34 percent in 2012. This is a large step forward but with the remaining loophole not all consumers will be able to benefit from protection from unreasonable rate increases. Health insurance companies will continue to do what they have done for far too long: put their profits ahead of people by escalating insurance costs strain businesses, families, and individuals.

Currently, 15 States still have little or no authority to block or modify unreasonable rate increases in the individual and small group markets. This means that even when the state’s insurance regulators find a rate increase to be excessive, they do not have the ability to block or modify the increase. The Health Insurance Rate Review Act created a Federal role for States currently lacking this authority. This will create parity across the country and give greater consistency of review and accountability for insurance companies seeking to raise rates beyond what is reasonable.

This legislation is a simple, commonsense solution: for States where the insurance commissioner does not have or use authority to block unreasonable rate increases, the Secretary of Health and Human Services will.

Affordability is vital to insuring access to quality health care. A 2010 survey by the Commonwealth Fund found that 70 percent of people with a health problem found it difficult or impossible to find affordable coverage on the individual market. This problem goes beyond the increased cost of overall medical care. From the year 2000 to 2010, average premiums for family coverage increased by 117 percent, compared to medical inflation which rose close to 49 percent.

Insurance premiums make up a higher percentage of household income than increasing around three times faster than wages are. This means that more and more families have to choose between health care and daily living expenses, saving for retirement, and education. This is unacceptable, and more must be done to protect consumers.

The Affordable Care Act made important steps forward in defining the rate review process and making rate increases and reviews public information. This has improved transparency without undermining the cooperative relationship, but falls short of creating a strong rate review system in all States, and relies too heavily on the notion that public disclosure of rates will cause insurance companies to change their behavior every time they publish their rates. I believe there needs to be a Federal fallback in states that lack the legal authority, capacity, or resources to conduct strong rate review.

In some States, like California, companies are not required to go through prior approval before rate increases go into effect. This means that when the California Insurance Commissioner finds rate increases to be unreasonable and excessive, he has no authority to actually stop or modify the increases to consumers. California is facing double digit rate hikes again this year and this legislation would help prevent such excessive increases.

Earlier this year the California Insurance Commissioner found a rate increase by Anthem Blue Cross to be unreasonable and the company decided to proceed anyway. This affected around 250,000 policy holders who saw an increase of around 10.6 percent, and when combined with previous increases the average rate hike over two years reaches 19.5 percent.

In 2012, proposed rate increases across nine States by the John Alden Life Insurance Company and Time Insurance Company were found to be unreasonable but were approved anyway. These increases varied from a 12 percent increase in Louisiana to a 24 percent increase in Wisconsin. These increases in the individual and small group market also affected Arizona, Idaho, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Virginia, and Wyoming.

In some States, insurance commissioners already have this authority and are using it to protect consumers. This bill doesn’t touch what they are doing. In New York, because state regulators have the authority to modify rates, the average individual market increase for 2013 is four and a half percent instead of the initial request of a nine and a half percent increase.

In 2011, the Connecticut Insurance Department found an increase of nearly 13 percent by Anthem Blue Cross and Blue Shield to be excessive, and approved a four percent increase instead. Also in 2011, some North Dakota consumers on the individual health insurance market saw their rates increase by nearly 50 percent before state regulators stepped in and decreased the proposed hikes by almost half.

I strongly believe that we need to take action to strengthen the law so all consumers get the benefit of effective health insurance rate review. I appreciate working with Representative SCHAKOWSKY, who is sponsoring the House companion bill.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the Health Insurance Rate Review Act to stand up for American families struggling to pay for health coverage. I look forward to working with my colleagues on this important issue.

By Mrs. BOXER:

S. 483. A bill to designate the Berryessa Snow Mountain National Conservation Area in the State of California and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce the Berryessa Snow Mountain National Conservation Area Act. On May 12, 2010, Mr. PROMONSON and I introduced this legislation in the 112th Congress, and I am glad to continue working on this effort with him in this new Congress.

This important legislation designates close to 360,000 acres of public lands in Lake, Mendocino, Napa, Solano, and Yolo Counties as the Berryessa Snow Mountain National Conservation Area, or NCA. The area is a haven for hiking, camping, rafting, and horseback riding, and is home to a diverse array of wildlife including black bears and bald eagles.

My bill does not add any new lands to the Federal Government, the lands included in this NCA are already managed by the Bureau of Land Management, the Bureau of Reclamation, and the U.S. Forest Service and it does not apply to state or private lands. A National Conservation Area designation will require these three agencies to develop a multi-agency management plan in consultation with stakeholders and the public, improving coordination on wildlife preservation, habitat restoration, and recreational opportunities. Creation of the NCA will also help the agencies take a more coordinated approach to preventing and fighting wildfires, combating invasive species and water pollution, and stopping the spread of illegal marijuana growth.

By unifying these individual places under one banner, my bill helps put the Berryessa Snow Mountain region on the map as a destination for new visitors. This region is one of the most biologically diverse, yet least known regions of California. By raising its profile, an NCA designation will boost tourism and increase business opportunities in the region’s gateway communities. The Outdoor Industry Association has estimated that outdoor recreation supports 732,000 jobs and contributes $85.4 billion annually in consumer spending to California, underscoring the immense potential of sites such as the proposed Berryessa Snow Mountain NCA to drive local economic growth. Additionally, the region will become recognized by more people as Virginia, and Wyoming.

Also in 2011, some North Dakota consumers on the individual health insurance market saw their rates increase by nearly 50 percent be and pregnant women from the harmful effects of lead. With 20 kids and grandkids, I appreciate the importance of the rule, and the potential it has to further decrease lead exposure. But this rule does add significant cost to the completion of renovation jobs and adds significant regulatory hurdles to many small business owners in situations where it may not at all be necessary.

Fortunately, the original rule included an opt-out provision for homeowners who did not have any at-risk individuals living in their homes. Provided the contractor made them aware of the potential lead-paint risks, the homeowner could give the contractor permission to carry out the job without following the EPA’s lead safe work practices. This makes sense because the health issues caused by renovation work in homes with lead paint are minor for adults and older children who are not members of the at-risk population.

But in July 2010, just three months after the rule took effect, the EPA removed this opt-out provision. By doing this, EPA more than doubled the number of homes requiring safe work practices. This also increased the economy-wide cost of compliance by well more than $336 million by EPA’s own estimate, which is significantly less than reality.

Further, EPA has failed to meet the requirements of its own rule because there is no way to independently verify that lead paint test kits are being used. Service providers have no way to know if the test is being done or not because the kits, which are supposed to be disposable, are way too good to throw away. The bill I’m introducing today is simply a way to give small business owners the freedom they need to carry out these renovations and protect their customers.

In closing, I want to reiterate my dedication to the cause of protecting the health of vulnerable populations, and particularly pregnant women and children. But it is important for EPA’s regulations to be pursued in a way that make sense, and that is what my bill intends to do. This is an ongoing goal of mine as a senior member of the Environment and Public Works Committee.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 3. LEAD-BASED PAINT ACTIVITIES TRAINING AND CERTIFICATION.

Section 402(c) of the Toxic Substances Control Act (15 U.S.C. 2602(c)) is amended—

"(2) EMERGENCY RENOVATION.—The term ‘emergency renovation’ means a renovation or remodeling of existing housing, restoration, repair, or remodeling of target housing, public buildings containing lead-based paint activities occur."

(ii) no lead-based paint hazards remain in the area in which the lead-based paint activity occurs; and

(B) includes a visual assessment and the collection and analysis of environmental samples from an area in which lead-based paint activities occur."

(i) presents a risk to the public health or safety; or

(ii) threatens to cause significant damage to equipment or property.

(c) by redesignating subparagraph (1) as paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(1) for the purpose of providing a de minimis exemption for first-time paperwork violations against contractors. The EPA has focused its enforcement efforts on these violations despite the fact that the contractors may be appropriately following safe lead practices.

Finally, the bill prohibits EPA from expanding this regulation to commercial and public buildings until it has completed a study to determine the risk of such practices. EPA is already in the process of writing these regulations even though it has not yet completed the corresponding study. If there is no risk, why would EPA issue regulations?
and remodeling regulation, and a person carrying out an emergency renovation shall be exempt from any regulation promulgated under section 406(b) with respect to the emergency renovation.

S. CON. RES. 6

Whereas the United States enjoys broad- cast, print, and sound recording industries that are the envy of the world, due to the symbiotic relationship that has existed among those industries for many decades;

Whereas, for more than 80 years, Congress has rejected repeated calls by the recording industry to impose a performance fee on local radio stations for simply playing music on the radio, as such a fee would upset the mutually beneficial relationship between local radio and the recording industry;

Whereas local radio stations provide free publicity and promotion to the recording in- dustry and performers of music in the form of radio air play, interviews with performers, introduction of new performers, concert pro- motion, and publicizes the sale of music, concert tickets, ring tones, music videos, and associated merchandise;
Whereas committees in the Senate and the House of Representatives have previously reported that “the sale of many sound recordings and the careers of many performers have benefited considerably from airplay and other promotional activities provided by both noncommercial and advertiser-supported, free over-the-air broadcasting”;

Whereas local radio broadcasters provide tens of thousands of hours of essential local news and weather information during times of national emergencies and natural disasters, such as on September 11, 2001, and during Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, as well as public affairs programming, sports, and hundreds of millions of dollars worth of time for public service announcements and local fund raising efforts for worthy charitable causes, all of which are jeopardized if local radio stations are forced to divert revenues to pay for a new performance fee;

Whereas there are many thousands of local radio stations that will suffer severe economic hardship if any new performance fee is imposed, as will many other small businesses that play music including bars, restaurants, retail establishments, sports and other entertainment venues, shopping centers, and transportation facilities; and

Whereas the hardship that would result from a new performance fee would hurt businesses in the United States, and ultimately the consumers in the United States who rely on local radio for news, weather, and entertainment, and such a performance fee is not justified when the current system has produced the most prolific and innovative broadcasting, music, and sound recording industries in the world: Now, therefore, be it

HONORING THE RECIPIENTS OF THE 2013 ILLINOIS HOLOCAUST MUSEUM AND EDUCATION CENTER HUMANITARIAN AWARDS

HON. BRADLEY S. SCHNEIDER OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 6, 2013

Mr. SCHNEIDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize William J. Brodsky, Linda Johnson Rice and J.B. Pritzker, this year’s Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center Humanitarian Awards Dinner honorees. Mr. Brodsky, Ms. Rice and Mr. Pritzker embody what is best about the humanitarian spirit in our community.

The Illinois Holocaust Museum & Education Center has, for 32 years, worked to ensure that we will never forget the unspeakable evil of the Holocaust, and that the world works diligently to prevent such evil in the future. The Museum & Education Center has educated countless students, young and old, on the perils of hate and discrimination, and since its new building opened in 2009, the center has stepped to the forefront of global Holocaust studies.

Each year, the Museum and Education Center recognizes the civic leadership of a select few, and this year’s honorees are an outstanding and impressive group, with deep roots in the community and long records of service.

William J. Brodsky is the Chairman and CEO of the Chicago Board Options Exchange, and in more than 15 years in his position, he has successfully guided the company through turbulent economic times and done much on behalf of the Chicagoland community. He is being honored this year for his outstanding commitment to the ideals of promoting human rights and defeating hate through education. His support for the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center has furthered its greater mission and helped elevate the center on a global stage.

Linda Johnson Rice has served as the Chairman of Johnson Publishing since 2010 and before that as CEO beginning in 1987. Throughout her tremendous career, she has maintained a dedication to the causes of women, minorities and, especially, children. Her parents instilled in her beliefs in education and improving society, and she has applied those beliefs to the Holocaust Museum and Education Center. Her continued support of the Museum and Education Center’s goal of combating hate, prejudice and indifference is a true inspiration. The side of equal, global human rights is stronger with her as a ally. My friend J.B. Pritzker, whom I’ve known for more than 20 years, is a titan not only of industry, but philanthropy. Through the Pritzker Family Foundation and his work as Chairman of the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center, J.B. has led international efforts to empower the world’s children. He spearheaded the efforts to fund and build the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center. His tireless work on behalf of survivors and in the cause of ending genocide has accomplished remarkable good. The Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center would not be what it is today without J.B. Pritzker’s efforts.

At a time when Congressional gridlock has prevented critical work from being accomplished, seeing people like these three, with deep senses of civic duty, step up and take the lead on important issues is something we can all be thankful for. I congratulate Mr. Brodsky, Ms. Rice and Mr. Pritzker on their awards and wish them continued success. I look forward to following their future philanthropic endeavors.

HON. TED POE OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 6, 2013

Mr. POE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, proud Texans naturally believe everything is bigger and better in Texas—because it is. Texas has the nation’s biggest and longest highway system with nearly 80,000 miles of Texas highways. It is 880 miles from the Louisiana border to the New Mexico border and 500 miles from the Oklahoma border to the Mexican border. As Texas travelers are packing up and headed out across the great Lone Star State, odds are, they will make a pit stop at a Texas phenomenon—a convenience store called Buc-ee’s.

In 1982, Arch “Beaver” Aplin, founder and CEO of Buc-ee’s, along with his business partner, Don Wasek, opened their first store in Lake Jackson, Texas. Super size dreams, determination and hard work proved successful for this duo; they now own 27 stores and employ over 1,000 Texans. At a Buc-ee’s, you can always spot an Aggie, either from their personalized license plate, their maroon pick-ups adorned with A&M stickers, or the ring—don’t forget the ring! Aplin himself is a proud Aggie. He graduated from Texas A&M in 1980 with a degree in construction science. At the age of 22, newly graduated Aplin began working for the family-owned construction business. Two months later, he got the idea to open the Lake Jackson convenience store. The rich heritage of tradition that sets Texas A&M apart from all the rest is evident in Aplin’s approach to owning a convenience store.

Like camels in a caravan, motorists follow the famous billboards to find their own road trip oasis. Buc-ee’s are well known for their jerky and fudge to T-shirts and Texas proud merchandise—even deer feeders and deer stands for sportsmen. Nowhere else on earth, but Texas, can you find a gas station bigger than a football field! I am not making this up. They have 5 flagship stores open 24 hours a day located in New Braunfels, Luling, Madisonville, Bastrop and Wharton. These stores are bigger than the average Buc-ee’s—maybe we should nickname them the 8th Wonder of the World.

It is truly an honor to recognize this Texas-owned business; not only for its standing as one of the top convenience stores in the State of Texas, but for the great services that it provides to the citizens of our great State. The employees are happy, Texas friendly, and helpful. On behalf of the Second Congressional District of Texas, I commend all Buc-ee’s employees on a job well done, not only in our community, but throughout Texas.

And that’s just the way it is.

FEDERAL ELECTION LAWS SHOULD APPLY TO ALL FEDERAL ELECTIONS

HON. GREGORIO KILILI CAMACHO SABLAN OF THE NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 6, 2013

Mr. SABLAN. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation that provides the full protection of federal election law to the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, and the United States Virgin Islands. The people of these territories deserve to have their elections protected by the same laws that safeguard elections and voters everywhere else in our Nation.

Because of various anomalies federal election laws do not always apply in the territories as in the states. There are gaps in application from one territory to the next. My legislation simply closes those gaps, so that the laws that govern federal elections apply in the same way throughout our country.

The result will be that voters in the territories will be protected from intimidation, threats, and coercion, when they cast their ballots in federal elections—just as voters are protected in the rest of America.

The result will be that the manipulation of elections for federal office by public officials will be illegal—just as in the rest of America.

By extending federal election law, as it does, my bill makes clear that aliens are prohibited from voting and extends the penalties of fine and imprisonment that apply in the rest of our country.
By extending federal election law, as it does, my bill makes sure that persons employed in federal or territorial government offices are barred from using their official authority to interfere with the nomination or election process for any federal office and penalizes those who do.

By extending federal election law, as it does, my bill gives voters assurance that their votes will not be diluted with votes cast by persons using false information to register or identify themselves at the polling place, just as federal law assures voters in the rest of America.

My bill simply adds the Northern Mariana Islands and other U.S. territories to those parts of the law where we are not included, in the Voting Rights Act of 1965, for example, and in the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971.

Each and every Member of Congress from each and every State abides by and is protected by these same laws. I believe that Members of Congress from the non-State areas and their constituents must abide by the same standards and deserve these same safeguards in their elections for federal office.

I urge my colleagues to support this measure.

HOONING FORMER MONROE COUNTY COMMISSIONER JERRY STEELE

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Speaker, it is with sadness that I rise to note the recent passing of a longtime community leader and public servant, former Monroe County Commissioner Jerry Steele. Commissioner Steele was 85.

A lifelong resident of Beatrice, Alabama, Commissioner Steele graduated from Beatrice High School in 1946. He only left for a few years to attend Auburn University from which he graduated in 1951. Jerry loved Beatrice so much that he often told his friends, "If you need me, you can always find me in Beatrice. I never intended to move until I move to the cemetery."

Jerry’s love for Monroe County was demonstrated in his many contributions to the community. A supporter of local education, he founded Monroe Academy in 1970, and served as Board Chairman for eight years.

He was a dedicated member of the business community as well. He organized F. S. Steele Timber Company and later Hines, Steele and Steele, Inc. in 1969. He was Vice-President of Peoples Exchange Bank and a former member of the Alabama Cattlemen’s Association.

He was first elected to public office in the 1950’s when he served on the Beatrice City Council. In 1964, he was elected to the Monroe County Commission, a position he held for 24 years. While a commissioner, he earned a reputation as an honest and dependable leader and a devoted shepherd of the people’s business. He also had a well-known sense of humor. According to the Monroe Journal, Jerry possessed a wit that seems particularly appropriate to today’s political climate. He once said, “I’m telling you the sorriest administrator of money is a government office, and that includes us.”

Jerry was a Charter member of the Beatrice Community Church and a member of the Beatrice Baptist Church. He taught Sunday School, served as a Deacon, and held many other offices in each church throughout the years.

An avid sportsman, Jerry loved hunting and fishing with his children and grandchildren, who were the joys of his life.

On behalf of the people of south Alabama, I wish to extend my heartfelt condolences to his wife, Patricia; their two sons, David and Harvel; their seven grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, and their many relatives. You are all in our thoughts and prayers.

INTRODUCING THE INVASIVE FISH AND WILDLIFE PREVENTION ACT OF 2013

HON. LOUISE MCINTOSH SLAUGHTER
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 6, 2013

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to rise today to introduce the Invasive Fish and Wildlife Prevention Act. This legislation significantly strengthens the ability of federal regulators to make science-based decisions on whether non-native fish or wildlife species pose a risk to ecosystems within the United States and cause economic damage or threaten public health.

Invasive species are a persistent and costly thorn in the side of the American taxpayer. In Fiscal Years 2010 and 2011, the federal budget allocated approximately $120 million to control the Asian carp. Meanwhile the U.S. is spending tens of millions more dollars to control other invaders, such as wetland-destroying nutria and two python species established in south Florida.

Yet, federal regulators are frequently slow to respond to emerging threats. Invasive species are currently regulated by the Lacey Act, a 112-year-old law that gives the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) only limited power to declare non-native animals as “injurious” and prohibit their importation and interstate sales. In fact, it takes the FWS an average of four years to officially list a species as injurious and take appropriate action. Experts and interested parties repeatedly describe this regulatory approach as reactive and ineffective.

Alternatively, the Invasive Fish and Wildlife Prevention Act would give the FWS streamlined authority to prevent invasions using modern scientific approaches. The bill also creates a category of “Injurious II” species, which are not suited as private pets or aquarium species, but can be held safely by qualified zoos, aquaria, research facilities and other institutions without any need for a Federal permit. This exemption is broader than current law, which requires a Federal permit for transactions in all listed species, a requirement that is becoming unworkable as more animals are listed.

We must take critical steps now to prevent the next Asian carp, Burmese python, or red lionfish crisis. These destructive invaders will continue to cost us into our country via globalized trade until Congress steps in to make a difference.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this important legislation.
slavery, the TIP Office has the lead role on such issues within the Department, and should maintain that lead. Section 1201 should not provide the basis for a mechanism that is independent from the work of the TIP Office, or from the recommendations set forth in the annual Trafficking in Persons Report. Rather, it should base regional prioritization on the recommendations of the State Department, with support for those priorities at the country level.

Furthermore, the host government consultations contemplated by section 1201 should focus on implementation of Department-set goals and objectives, rather than become a bilateral negotiation on their initial formulation in a way that might subvert the purpose of section 110 of the original TVPA, which mandates actions against governments that fail to meet minimum standards.

Section 1204(b) of the bill would change the TVPA “minimum standards for the elimination of trafficking” to include consideration of whether a foreign government has entered into effective partnerships or agreements with other governments, civil society or nongovernmental organizations, or others, “that have resulted in concrete and measurable outcomes.” I regret the thinking behind what such outcomes must be. The numbers of traffickers prosecuted and convicted, and the number of trafficking survivors assisted, should be indispensable components of any concrete, measurable outcomes for purposes of this section. At the least the language is clear that such outcomes must already have occurred in order to qualify. This section must not be used to allow a government to avoid a Tier 3 designation by signing a new agreement or MOU promising prospective progress, even if that new agreement with the U.S. Government, Foreign government promises to take action just don’t count.

I appreciate the considerable anti-trafficking work of the TIP Office at the Department of State over the past dozen years, under both Republican and Democrat administrations. During that time, the leadership of the United States has helped to fuel the passage of more than 130 anti-trafficking laws around the world, though much work remains to be done. I hope that the elements of Title XII that I have discussed will not undercut those efforts. The Foreign Affairs Committee will be working to ensure that.

NATIONAL SLEEP AWARENESS WEEK

HON. BILL FOSTER OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 6, 2013

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today on behalf of the millions of Americans affected by sleep disorders and insufficient sleep in observance of National Sleep Awareness Week, March 3rd–10th. National Sleep Awareness Week is a week-long campaign to celebrate and bring awareness to the health benefits of sleep.

I urge my colleagues to reflect on the work that needs to be done to ensure that Americans with sleep disorders or suffering from insufficient sleep can expect to see sustained improvement in sleep. The SPS promotes continued research and plays an important role in the National Center on Sleep Disorders Research within the National Institutes of Health's National Heart Lung and Blood Institute.

Sleep disorders affect every age group, from infants to the elderly, and are often an indicator of, or a precursor to, other major diseases and disorders. 50–70 million Americans suffer from chronic sleep disorders, while 5% of the population suffers from sleep apnea. Sleep apnea results in excessive daytime fatigue, increased frequency of road traffic accidents, and arterial hypertension. Prior to diagnosis, patients with sleep apnea also tend to incur higher costs in their overall health care. I urge my colleagues to reflect on the work that needs to be done to ensure that Americans with sleep disorders or suffering from insufficient sleep can expect to see sustained improvement.
and meaningful improvements in their health and healthcare. I urge my colleagues to stand with me and recognize National Sleep Awareness Week.

HONORING REVEREND HECTOR VILLEGAS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 6, 2013

Mr. DENHAM. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge and honor the life of a beloved leader in the Newman Community, Reverend Hector Villegas, and to recognize his tireless work as the Pastor of St. Joachim’s Catholic Church. Ministering to thousands, Reverend Villegas earned the respect of fellow clergy and civic leaders alike.

The Rev. Hector Villegas of Newman passed away March 1 at the age of 48, only days before his 49th birthday. The Rev. Villegas was known for serving the parish with compassion and devotion, a spiritual leader whose own life was guided by his deep faith.

He was born and raised in Tijuana, where he was surrounded by many friends and enjoyed childhood adventures with his older sister, Patricia. He had a lifelong passion for exercise, and through adulthood could often be found working out at a gym. His participation in a youth ministry camp inspired him to become a priest.

After graduating from the Tijuana Diocesan Seminary with a degree in philosophy, the Rev. Villegas came to California in 1998 as a seminarian at St. Jude’s parish in Ceres. He attended St. John’s Seminary in Camarillo and St. Patrick’s Seminary in Menlo Park before being ordained June 29, 2002, by Bishop Stephen Blair at the Cathedral of the Annunciation.

The Rev. Villegas served at St. Stanislaus in Modesto from 2002 to 2007, serving as a parochial vicar and later administrator pro tem.

He is survived by his mother, Evangelina Villegas of San Diego; and two sisters, Patricia Hernandez of Chula Vista and Adriana Quiroz Villegas of San Diego.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in honoring Reverend Villegas for his unwavering leadership, and recognizing his accomplishments and contributions as Pastor of St. Joachim’s Catholic Church. The life of Reverend Hector Villegas serves as an example of excellence to those in our community, and his legacy will not be soon forgotten.

CANCEL THE SEQUESTER ACT OF 2013

HON. JOHN CONYERS, JR.
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 6, 2013

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to raise my voice against the set of across-the-board cuts—known as “the sequester”—currently taking effect across the country.

These devastating cuts are unique among American public policies for a simple reason: they were purposefully designed to be a bad idea.

During the debt ceiling standoff of 2011, the “sequester” was designed as a default option so revolting to both Democrats and Republicans that it would force the bipartisan “Super Committee” to adopt a workable budget plan. While that Committee failed at this objective, the American people have been left to pay the price.

The sequester, if fully implemented, will put more than 2 million jobs at risk—more than half of which are associated with small businesses.

The sequester will also create tremendous uncertainty in financial markets and among consumers, ultimately contributing to an estimated one-half of one percent drag on economic growth this year.

These cuts will also undermine military readiness, educational quality, and research output while leaving us with longer airport security lines, more untreated mental illnesses, more hunger, more homelessness, and fewer federal criminal prosecutions.

It should come as no surprise that, according to a Wall Street Journal/NBC News Poll, Americans oppose the sequester by a more than 2-to-1 margin.

If Congress is unable to craft a bipartisan agreement that takes sequestration off the table, this body has a duty to avert these catastrophic cuts by any means necessary. This is why I am working to “Cancel the Sequester Act,” a one-sentence bill that would repeal the section of the Budget Control Act of 2011 that created these senseless, job-destructing cuts.

Please consider cosponsoring the “Cancel the Sequester Act,” so that we can prevent Washington’s dysfunction from inflicting further harm on the American people.

TRIBUTE TO GENERAL WILLIAM LYON

HON. KEN CALVERT
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 6, 2013

Mr. CALVERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today rode my colleagues Congressman DARRELL ISSA, Congresswoman JOHN CAMPBELL and Congressman DANA ROHRABACHER, and on behalf of the entire California Republican Congressional Delegation, to honor and pay tribute to an individual whose dedication and contributions to our country and state are exceptional. We have been fortunate to have dynamic and dedicated leaders who willingly and unselfishly give their time and talent to make their communities, and country, a better place to live and work. General William Lyon is one of these individuals. General Lyon’s many accomplishments are wide ranging, as he has made his mark as a successful businessman, a decorated member of the military and an active supporter of the community. On March 9, 2013, General Lyon will be celebrating his 90th birthday.

General Lyon was born in 1923 in Los Angeles, California. Prior to entering the United States Army Air Corps in 1943, he attended the University of Southern California and the Dallas Aviation School and Air College. He completed the Air War College in 1971 and the Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve Senior Officers Orientation Course in 1972 and 1974. Additionally, he attended the Industrial College of the Armed Forces National Seminar in 1973. In 1943, General Lyon enlisted in the U.S. Army Air Corps as a reservist and continued serving as a civilian flight instructor until he received a direct appointment as a flight officer in June 1944. During World War II, he was assigned to the 6th Ferrying Group and ferried aircraft to the Pacific and European theaters. In 1945 he was assigned to the North African Division of the Air Transport Command and returned to the United States in 1946.

In 1947, General Lyon was commissioned as a Second Lieutenant and participated in various Reserve assignments until his voluntary recall to active duty in 1951. He was then assigned to Headquarters Air Training Command as a staff pilot and was later transferred to the Military Air Transport Service, flying air evacuation and ferrying missions. In 1953 he volunteered for a tour of duty in Korea and flew 75 combat missions in the C-46 and C-47. From 1954 to 1963, General Lyon was assigned to various positions in the Reserve and served as a flight commander and operations officer. In 1969 he was named Commander of the 929th Tactical Airlift Squadron, March Air Force Base, California, and subsequently served as Commander of the parent unit, the 943d Tactical Airlift Group.

In June 1970, General Lyon was assigned as mobilization assistant to the Commander, Sacramento Air Materiel Area, McClellan Air Force Base, California, and in February 1972, he became mobilization assistant to the Commander, Eighteenth Air Force at March Air Force Base. He was promoted to the grade of general on April 15, 1974, with date of rank May 24, 1972. In March 1974 he was appointed mobilization assistant to the Commander, Strategic Air Command, Offutt Air Force Base, Nebraska, where he was involved in the planning of the transfer of designated KC-135 units to the Reserve Forces. In 1975, General Lyon was appointed by President Gerald R. Ford to serve as Chief of Air Force Reserve Headquarters at the Pentagon, where he was responsible for managing a $700 million budget as well as the activities of some 53,000 Air Force Reservists.

Four years later, on April 16, 1979, he retired from military service.

General Lyon’s many military decorations and awards include the Legion of Merit, Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters, Presidential Unit Citation, Air Force Outstanding Unit Award, Combat Readiness Medal, Armed Forces Reserve Medal with hour glass device, and the Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation.

More than 50 years ago, General Lyon started building homes in California; and today, he is one of the nation’s largest private homebuilders. Headquartered in Newport Beach, California, William Lyon Homes has constructed more than 100,000 new residences in Arizona, California and Nevada.

General Lyon’s business success isn’t limited to homebuilding. In 1981 he and a partner purchased AirCal, a regional air carrier based in Newport Beach, California. General Lyon served as the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer until 1987 when AirCal was purchased by American Airlines. His love of flying then led him to acquire Martin Aviation, a fixed based operator, at John Wayne Airport in Orange County, California and in 2009 he established the Lyon Air Museum to preserve and promote the memory of WWII and “The Greatest Generation.”

It is hard to imagine that General Lyon would have any free time with his hands yet he always found time for his community. He currently serves as a Director on the Segerstrom Center for the Arts Board, having been a former Chairman of that Board. General Lyon is the founding Chairman of the Orangewood Children’s Foundation, and past Chairman of Boys & Girls Clubs of Orange County. Throughout General Lyon’s incredible life he has been loved and supported by his wonderful family including his wife Willa Dean Lyon, and children, Christine Lyon Rhoades, Mary Susan Lyon Isola, William H. Lyon, Marcia Stone and Byron Russell.

We have come to know General Lyon well through many years working together on a variety of projects in California. We can all personally attest to General Lyon’s incredible work-ethic, professionalism, and positive attitude. In light of all General Lyon has done for southern California and our country, it is only fitting that he be honored as he celebrates his 90th birthday. General Lyon’s honorable service to our country and tireless passion for public service has contributed immensely to the betterment of our country, state and community. We are proud to call him a fellow community member, American and friend. I know that many people are grateful for his service and salute him on this great milestone.

SUPPORTING PUBLIC SCHOOL WEEK

HON. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 6, 2013

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Public School Week. This weeklong series of events is designed to inform and transform the civic conversation around public education. In order for America to lead in the 21st century, our foremost social and economic imperative should be to provide a quality education to all of our students.

In my city of Dallas, four magnet schools were identified as Blue Ribbon schools. These four Dallas Independent School District (DISD) schools are the Environmental Science Academy, the Townview School of Science and Engineering Magnet High School, the Rosie M. Collins Sorrells School of Education and the Social Services Magnet High School and Irma Lerma Rangel Young Women’s Leadership School. Being identified as a Blue Ribbon school means they are among the finest schools in the country, and I am proud of these four stellar institutions and others like them.

Townview Magnet is one of the most diverse schools in Texas, with minorities representing over half of the student population. Townview is a gem in my Congressional district and home to some of the Nation’s best and brightest students. Newsweek Magazine has consistently rated Townview’s Science and Engineering Magnet as one of the top high schools in the Nation. Townview serves as a model for other institutions of learning across the country.

Mr. Speaker, many of our best and our brightest students attend public schools and with encouragement and support from their principals and teachers they are capable of achieving remarkable success. We cannot allow our schools to lose the critical funding they need to operate simply because we as a Congress cannot work together to solve sequestration. Texas is poised to lose approximately $67.8 million for primary and secondary education, putting around 930 teacher and aide jobs at risk. In addition about 172,000 fewer students would be served and approximately 280 fewer schools would receive funding.

Mr. Speaker, supporting our Nation’s public schools will help us out-educate, out-innovate, and out-build the rest of the world. We must identify ways to help improve schools like these that provide educational excellence to our communities. We must not waver in our commitment to our children and the future of this country.

HARROWISM! IN HONOR OF TEAM LEADER CAPTAIN BENJAMIN CONRAD HARROW 7TH SPECIAL FORCES GROUP THE UNITED STATES ARMY

HON. CHRISTOPHER P. GIBSON
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 6, 2013

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of Team Leader Captain Benjamin Harrow of The United States Army, 7th Special Forces Group, Green Berets. On May 15, 2012 while out on patrol, an IED explosion almost left Benjamin mortally wounded. Losing both of his legs and sustaining numerous other life threatening injuries he has come back from the dead. Already in such a short time his recovery is at full speed ahead. With the help of his and her family and his lovely wife Gina and son Peyton, he has found the strength and inspiration to heal. Spend a little time with Ben, and you will understand why he became Team Leader of one of our Nation’s elite members of The Special Forces Group 7. Ben is a graduate of The United States Military Academy at West Point. He was a star lacrosse player for Army. I submit this poem penned in his honor by Albert Caswell.

HARROWISM!

A hero! And from where do they all so come? Men of honor, who so walk upon battlefields of death . . . as Thy Kingdom Come! And all of those who from out of the ashes, rebuild their lives with not much left who have begun . . . As when they come back home all in this most magnificent quests! Indeed, these are but America’s most heroic of all sons who so bless! Who so go off to war where angels so fear to tread! Who for all of us heroically have so died, and bled! And come back home so very close to death! To somehow lift up their fine heads! All in what their most magnificent hearts have so said! Armèd, with but only their Harrowism which so beats within their chests! As from out of all of this darkness, they must now so pass that test! To so summon up, all of the courage and the strength To Be The Best! Oh what A Special Force this is no less! As they come back home so cheating death! As we so watch all in such awe as we lose our breath! As they rise up to so teach us all about Harrowism no less! As high above all others they now stand so yes! Heroes! Because, Heroes come in all shapes and sizes! But, it’s what’s within their great hearts that which so comprises! But who they are! Moving all out into that darkness of death all at light speeds, as their fine hearts so crest! As out across a nation a mother now so weeps in her sorrow . . . All because for us, her most precious son gave up his tomorrows yes! For they lead! And we will follow! And ah yes, for these are but such a special breed who in pity will not so wallow! And then there is a special breed, The Special Forces! A SPECIAL FORCEx of nature so complete! As all throughout their veins their most heroic blood beats! The ones who the enemy so fears, and so heed’s! Who upon battlefields of honor bright, come all at them fast breaking all at such speeds! The ones who can not so be checked, by any enemy! Whose most selfless souls, now so make the angels weep! As we so pray to our Lord, to watch over them to keep! And for all of those ones, who must now come back home on this night . . . Who must now begin their new most gallant of all fights . . . All on that hard road to recovery, as we watch their brave hearts so ignite! Men without arms and legs, who so teach us all about faith! Whose families, so give to them the strength to meet each new coming day! Who now so stand with tears in eyes! As before them all in pieces their loved ones lie! As these Heroes so touch our hearts and souls, with but all of their most amazing grace as we behold! To so show to this our world how Angels are made! For these are men of such courage and conviction! And of such undying faith we are so witnessing! Rising up from the ashes, Who All In The Game of Life so lead the way All in what their most precious lives have to say! And, from out of all our Nation’s Academex . . . But, have come our Nation’s very best!
Magnificent men and women, who all so live and die to so make a difference no less! Fast breaking on battlefields of honor and in our hospitals beds, all at light speeds with their fine hearts and heads which can not so be checked! Whose Harrowism, our hearts so bless! And whose fine families must bare the greatest of all burdens so yes! Because, The Special Forces . . . are but everything that Superman so wishes he could be!

Who come back home without arms and legs, to so teach us how men of honor behave! As we so watch them rebuild their lives, when they but live just moments away from the grave! As ever onward they so stride, with but tears in their eyes! As their gaits have gotten stronger, as their days have gotten longer!

Reaching for the highest of all heights, as do they!

Benjamin, an American Harrow! And as a Captain and a Team Leader of Special Forces, whose heart and soul runs so very deep as through him so course’s! A man who is Army Strong! Whose fine life is but like a song! A song of God and Family, and all about his beloved Country Tis of Thee.

To a place where valor and faith all so meet! As West Point, would so anoint such a hero who lives on! The kind of man that General Mahollen, would so love to march along! Whether, on fields of green . . . or as a lacrosse player you were seen! Or on battlefields of honor bright, Big Ben would always lead! For he was built for honor, and he was built for speed!

As a winner In the Game of Life, and in all of his deeds! The kind of man that even General MacArthur, as a hero would so concede! As Big Ben, America’s son you live by such a fine heroes creed!

A Real American Harrow, who upon all of us your light we so see . . . As it was on that fateful day, when IED Ben almost took your most heroic life away . . . As when you awoke, as what to your most heroic heart spoke! As upon your face, your most heroic tears were invoked to fight on that day . . .

All for the love of your life . . . your lovely devoted wife Gina, and that future lacrosse player son Peyton you chose to stay! Rising up from the ashes as would you so Green Beret!

As once again, your strong heart is leading out in front the way! All out on that rocky road to recovery! All in what your Harrowism has so to say!

To So Teach Us! To So Beseech Us! To So Reach Us, and Grab Our Hearts in every way! Because, Real Heroes Hearts Never Fade! Oh, what a Special Force Ben you are in so every way! And if ever I had a son, I wish he could be as half as courageous as this one . . .

Who so stands more than a man in today!

Because Big Ben you’ve got the ball, and you are fast breaking to recovery . . . So we better clear out, and get out of your way! As we so watch this Special Force called Harrowism, and so see of what you are made! Showing us all, that arms and legs we all need!

But, we can get by! But, without a most heroic heart we will so surely die!

Better To Die For Something, or lose your strong arms and legs . . . Then, live for nothing in regret in your last days!

Better To Be An American Harrow In Life, and Lead The Way!

Because in Heaven, you need not arms or legs . . . And that’s where Big Ben you are going one day!

In these, the moments of our lives . . . what have we so done and so strived? Will we be the ones to courage find? Will we have the right stuff to go so very deep down inside?

To walk through the valley of death, or come back home with but not much left . . . And somehow new mountains so climb! Could we be a Hero’s Hero? And be the ones to such Harrowism find?

As Big Ben, an American Hero who so shines!
