Neil Gorsuch came before the Senate Judiciary Committee for his confirmation hearing. Senators from both sides had the opportunity to ask him questions. Both they and the American people were able to learn more about Judge Gorsuch, about the type of jurist he has been and will continue to be, about his character and temperament, and about his aptitude to serve on the Supreme Court.

His answers reflected what we have all come to find about the judge over the past several weeks. He has sterling credentials and a reputation as a fair and impartial jurist. He is also known to be a gifted writer, who is smart, kind, humble, and independent.

As I mentioned yesterday, his impressive testimony has caught the attention of publications, news outlets, and commentators from across the country and across the political spectrum. In a handout issued just yesterday, an MSNBC commentator noted Judge Gorsuch’s “masterful performance”—one that he called a “tour de force.”

Another panelist and NBC correspondent had a complimentary view of the nominee, as well, noting that “in terms of character, in terms of professionalism, [and in terms of] integrity, there wasn’t, I would argue, anything, or hardly anything there to criticize Gorsuch on.”

The Wall Street Journal noted that Gorsuch “stressed his independence” throughout the hearing. The Detroit news echoed these observations and has urged the Senate to confirm him. It editorialized that “[a]fter two days of often hostile hearings, Supreme Court nominee Neil Gorsuch is proving himself an even-tempered, deeply knowledgeable nominee who should be confirmed.”

The paper also noted that Judge Gorsuch is “[eminently] qualified” and that he “is coming across in the hearings as the very image of a thoughtful jurist. He exhibited an impressive depth of knowledge, and admirable patience. And he’s carefully followed past practice of judicial nominees in refusing to say how he’d rule on specific issues.”

His independence is really without question at this point. The American Bar Association, which awarded Judge Gorsuch its highest rating of unanimously “well qualified,” recently submitted testimony to the Judiciary Committee on what the Bar Association had to say about Judge Gorsuch’s independence:

Our evaluation process provided an excellent opportunity to gain a glimpse at whether Judge Gorsuch is a judge who ascribes to the concept of an independent judiciary. Based on the writings, interviews, and analyses we scrutinized to reach our rating, we discerned that Judge Gorsuch believes strongly in the independence of the judicial branch of government, and we predict that he will be a strong but respectful voice in protecting it.

The ABA went on:

As one interviewee noted with alacrity, “Judge Gorsuch has ‘grit,’ which he gets from being a multi-generation Westerner.” Another stated, “He is dedicated to the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers and to the independence of the judiciary.” Yet another in addition to his outstanding academic credentials and brilliant mind, Judge Gorsuch’s demeanor and written opinions during his tenure on the Tenth Circuit demonstrate that he believes unwaveringly in the rule of law and judicial independence. In my opinion, he is exceptionally well qualified to serve as a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.” We agree.

I certainly agree with that. This is from the American Bar Association, an organization that the Democratic leader and former Democratic chairman of the Judiciary Committee have deemed the gold standard for evaluating nominees. In addition, the assistant Democratic leader acknowledged yesterday that Judge Gorsuch is “very gifted” and “has a great background and service as a judge.”

But despite the Judge’s outstanding performance, his exceptional background, and the extensive support he has received from people of all political leanings, we know that some Senate Democrats will continue trying to delay the confirmation process. It is not the first time we have seen our friends across the aisle engage in obstructionist tactics. In fact, we just saw a historic level of obstruction when it came to confirming the President’s Cabinet. We know that our colleagues are under a great deal of pressure from the far left. We know some of these groups are calling for them to “resist.” We know that even more than 4 months after the election, some on the far left simply refuse to accept the outcome of last year’s election.

Well, it is past time to move on from that mindset and return to the serious business of governing. One way we can do so is by confirming Judge Gorsuch as the next Supreme Court Justice without delay. He is a proven jurist. He is an outstanding intellect. He has earned the respect and admiration of so many—Democrats, Independents, and Republicans alike. He is also unquestionably independent.

Today we will hear even more praise for Judge Gorsuch as witnesses come before the Judiciary Committee. I urge my colleagues to show him the fair consideration he deserves and, ultimately, to come together in supporting his nomination in the days ahead.

REPEALING AND REPLACING OBAMACARE

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, today marks the seventh anniversary of ObamaCare becoming law. In the years since, millions of Americans lost their plans and their doctors. They saw the cost of their premiums and deductibles soar. They watched their choices disappear as insurers were forced out of the marketplace. Former President Bill Clinton called ObamaCare the “craziest thing in the world.” He was right. It was a direct attack on the middle class. These failed policies are affecting real people every day. Americans expected the law to deliver on its promises, but instead they have paid more and received less. ObamaCare has been a flawed system from the start. Over the past 7 years, things have gotten progressively worse.

Our Nation cannot continue on this trajectory as ObamaCare continues to unravel at every level, leaving Americans to pick up the pieces. On this seventh anniversary of ObamaCare’s enactment, Americans deserve a better way forward. Thankfully, we finally have a Congress and a President who are committed to delivering much-needed reform.

The legislation currently before the House will help bring relief. It will repeal and replace ObamaCare, which is exactly what we promised the American people we would do. Instead of forcing Americans to buy something they may not want—like ObamaCare does, this bill gives Americans the freedom to choose what type of coverage is right for them.

I look forward to the House passing that bill soon, and we look forward to taking it up in the Senate, where there will be a robust amendment process. Then, I look forward to collaborating with my colleagues to pass it. It is important, however, to remember that this bill is only one part of a three-pronged strategy to bring relief. The administration is already working to fix the damage 7 years of ObamaCare has done to the health markets across the country, and we will continue to consider further legislation in Congress to bring more competition and reform.

It is time to move on from 7 years of ObamaCare’s broken promises and unyielding attacks on the middle class. The status quo is not an option. So let’s work together to get this done.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

PROVIDING FOR CONGRESSIONAL DISAPPROVAL OF A RULE SUBMITTED BY THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of S.J. Res. 34, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (S.J. Res. 34) providing for congressional disapproval under chapter 8 of title 5, United States Code, of the rule submitted by the Federal Communications Commission relating to the Privacy of Customers of Broadband and Other Telecommunications Services.”
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STRANGE). If no one yields time, time will be charged equally.

The Senator from Maryland.

END RACIAL AND RELIGIOUS PROFILING ACT

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about a bill that I have introduced in prior Congresses. But I think it is particularly important in this Congress. It is the End Racial and Religious Profiling Act of 2017. I am proud to have many of my colleagues as cosponsors. It is led by Senators BALDWIN, BLUMENTHAL, BOOKER, BROWN, CANTWELL, COONS, DUCKWORTHI, DURBAN, FEINSTEIN, FRANKEN, GILLIBRAND, HARRIS, HIRONIC, KAINE, MARKET, MENENDEZ, MERKLEY, MURPHY, MURRAY, SANDERS, STABENOW, UDALL, VAN HOLLEN, WYDEN, AND WARNEN.

In the House of Representatives, the bill’s principal sponsor is Congressman CONVERS. It is needed now more than ever because. I say that for many reasons, one of which is that we have seen a large increase in hate crimes in our community. Yesterday I was on the phone with a father from Harford County, MD, whose son was the victim of a hate crime related to that person’s religion and ethnic background.

We have seen in our community a large increase in hate crimes against the Jewish community. There have been a lot of bomb threats that have been made against schools and to the Jewish Community Centers. We have seen physical attacks and the desecration of cemeteries. So the minority community feels threatened.

That has been escalating as a result of the actions of our President and his Executive orders. The Executive orders—his has issued two now that are dealing with the immigrant community—do raise the temperature in our community and the concern in our community and the feeling threatened because of their religion, threatened because of their ethnic background, threatened because of their status as part of an immigrant community.

All of that has added to the concerns in America today. The legislation that I have introduced would make it illegal for discriminatory policing—for police to use as an indicator for their actions a person’s race, religion, or ethnic background.

Discriminatory policing is against our values. Quite frankly, it is not what we stand for as a nation. We don’t target people because of their religion. I will always remember that shortly after the Trayvon episode, I met with community activists in Baltimore. Many told me examples of how they were with their parents when the police stopped them randomly, for no reason at all, but solely because of the person’s race and how communities felt threatened as a result of it.

It is not what we stand for as a nation. It turns communities against police, rather than working with the police. It is a waste of resources. It does not work. It can be deadly as we have seen in too many communities in our Nation. In my own city of Baltimore, we had the episode concerning Freddie Gray, who died in police custody.

I went to Sandtown, where Freddie Gray came from, shortly after that episode and met with the community, and I heard comparable stories about how good community activists felt like they were betraying their community if they worked with the local police, because the police were just stacked against their community and their race.

So let me, if I might, quote from the Department of Justice report on the Freddie Gray case. Our congressional delegation asked for a pattern or practice investigation. In part of that investigation, they came out with this finding:

There is overwhelming statistical evidence of racial disparities in Baltimore Police Department’s stops, searches, and arrests. . . . BPD officers subject African-Americans to a disproportionate number of pedestrian and vehicles stops on Baltimore City streets and African-Americans disproportionately during these stops. . . . The profiling practices that cause the racial disparities in BPD’s stops, searches, and arrests, along with evidence suggesting intentional discrimination against African-Americans, undermine the community trust that is central to effective policing. . . . Indeed, we heard from many community members who were reluctant to engage with the officers because of their belief that the Department treats African-Americans unfairly. These concerns were echoed by BPD leadership and officers, who explained that lack of trust—particularly in many of Baltimore’s African-American communities—hinders officers’ efforts to build relationships that are a key component of effective policing.

I say that because racial profiling—discriminatory profiling—is ineffective and is counterproductive. It actually makes communities less safe. I have the honor of being the Special Representative for Anti-Semitism, Racism and Intolerance in the OSCE, or the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe’s Parliamentary Assembly.

In that capacity, I have identified four major areas of concern within the 57 countries that represent the OSCE, including the United States. Those priorities are discriminatory actions against race, national origin, religion, rise of anti-Semitism, the concerns of discrimination against the immigrant community, and also the concerns on discriminatory policing.

Discriminatory policing is very much engaged in many community members’ rise of anti-Semitism, racism, and intolerance. Now, I want to make it clear: The overwhelming majority of people in law enforcement are good people. They are professionals. They are trying to do their job. They are against racial profiling. But we need to protect the professionalism within the police departments and establish a national policy against racial profiling.

My legislation is supported by over 1,150 organizations. Let me just, if I might, mention a couple of those, by quoting their leaders. Wade Henderson, president and CEO of the Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights, who supports this legislation said:

Jennifer Bellamy, the ACLU legislative counsel, who also supports this legislation, said:

For centuries, discriminatory profiling practices have harmed communities of color. It is not enough to be ‘against’ racism and racial profiling. We need national leaders to end discriminatory practices. We know that profiling of any kind is ineffective and diverts law enforcement’s time, money, and attention from actual threats. The time is now to end racial profiling once and for all.

Then, lastly, Hilary Shelton, the director of the NAACP Washington Bureau and the senior vice president for policy and advocacy.

This important legislation takes concrete steps to put an end to the insidious practice of profiling individuals by federal, state and local levels based on physical attributes or an individual’s religion. It is difficult for our faith in the American criminal justice system not to be challenged when we cannot walk down the street, cross an interstate, go through an airport, or even enter into our own homes without being stopped merely because of the color of our skin, who we are perceived to be, or what we choose to wear.

I could mention many of the other groups and many other quotes. This legislation is pretty straightforward. It establishes a national uniform standard against discriminatory profiling at all levels of law enforcement—State, local Federal.

For example, it tells us that we can’t use as descriptors a person’s race. We can do so when we are using it to describe a particular crime, but not as a predictor of future crimes. Let me close by quoting from Ron Davis, the former police chief of East Palo Alto, CA, where he said:

There exists no national, standardized definition for racial profiling that prohibits the use of race, national origin, or religion, except when describing a person. Consequently, many state and local policies define racial profiling as using race as the “sole” basis for a stop or any police action. This definition is misleading in that it suggests using race as a factor for anything other than a description is justified, which it is not. Simply put, race is a descriptor not a predictor. To use race along with other salient descriptors when describing someone who just committed a crime is appropriate.

That is what this legislation does. It establishes a national definition. It provides training and support in implementing it in agencies across our country. It provides Federal grants for best practices. It requires the Attorney General... to issue reports. It is legislation that is needed in our country.

Former Attorney General Eric Holder adopted it at the national level, and he said:

In this Nation, security and liberty are—at their best—partners, not enemies, in ensuring safety for all. In this Nation, the document that sets forth the supreme law of the land—the Constitution—is meant to empower, not exclude. . . . Racial profiling is wrong. It can leave a lasting scar on communities and individuals. And it is, quite simply, bad policing—whatever city, whatever state.

The 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution guarantees “equal protection of the laws” to all Americans. Racial and discriminatory profiling is abhorrent to those principles, and it should be ended once and for all.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRUMP CARE

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I want to start by addressing the news last night that Republican leaders have decided to try to make their awful TrumpCare legislation even worse. TrumpCare wasn’t enough of a give-away to insurance companies, and it didn’t do enough harm to women, seniors, and people with preexisting conditions, so Republican leaders decided to double down in efforts to appeal to their extreme conservative base.

They are now claiming that they can take away essential health benefits like maternity care, mental health care, and preexisting conditions through the reconciliation process, but here are the facts: Republican leaders know they can’t do that, and measures to take away these critically important protections cannot survive the reconciliation process and could never get 60 votes in the Senate. They are simply trying to sell conservatives a bill of goods today in the rush to jam this through, but the more they ... them is no generic form. She is one of those people in this country. I am deeply worried about the process of this bill. They are...
Mr. President, I yield the floor.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader is recognized.

THANKING THE SENIOR SENATOR FROM WASHINGTON
Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, first, I would like to thank the senior Senator from Washington, the ranking member of the Health Committee, for her outstanding work on this issue. She knows this issue better than just about anybody in this Chamber. She is passionate and also fact-driven. She knows this well and has had great influence on this Chamber.

I hope my colleagues on the other side of the aisle will review what she said. To rush through a bill for a campaign promise—a bill that is fraught with problems and difficulty, many of which will probably not come to light until after the bill comes to the floor—is the wrong thing to do. I thank the senior Senator from the State of Washington.

TERROR ATTACK IN LONDON
Mr. President, first, I want to just say a few words. My heartfelt condolences go to the families of the victims in London.

Terrorism strikes everywhere. It was so close to the symbol of Great Britain—Parliament. Big Ben, a place we have all seen in pictures and some of us have had the opportunity to see in person. It reminds us that the scourge of terrorism needs to be eradicated in any way we can. I am committed to that, and I know the 100 Members of this Senate body are as well.

Our hearts go out to those who were lost.

NOMINATION OF NEIL GORSUCH
Mr. President, now I will move on to the subject I wish to speak about at length this morning, and that is Judge Gorsuch.

I had the opportunity these past 3 days to watch Judge Neil Gorsuch in the Judiciary Committee and to review his credentials and record on the Tenth Circuit and before that.

I would particularly like to recognize the outstanding work done by every Democratic member of the Judiciary Committee. They were outstanding in questioning Judge Gorsuch despite his lack of candor and desire to answer. I would like to particularly call out our exceptional ranking member, Senator FEINSTEIN, who has done a wonderful job leading that committee.

I have thought long and hard about his nomination and what it means for the future of the Supreme Court and for the future of our country. What is at stake is considerable. The decisions we make here in the Senate over the next few weeks about Judge Gorsuch, as on any Supreme Court nominee, will echo through the lifetime tenure of that judge, through a generation of Americans.

Discussions of the Supreme Court can get wonky and technical, with invocations of precedent and canons of interpretation. What is at stake, however, is not at all abstract; it is real and it is concrete for Americans, whose lives, health, happiness, and freedoms are on the line at the Supreme Court. Closely divided decisions recently have meant the difference between the ability to marry the person you love or not, the ability to have your right to vote protected or not, the ability to make personal choices about your own healthcare or not. The Supreme Court matters a great deal. It matters for workers who want to protect both their lives and their jobs, for employees who need to be able to seek redress for discrimination, and for parents who want their kids to get a fair shake in the education system.

It is with all this in mind that I have come to a decision about the current nominee. After careful deliberation, I have concluded that I cannot support Judge Neil Gorsuch’s nomination to the Supreme Court. His nomination will fail by not a single vote. He will have to earn 60 votes for confirmation. My vote will be no, and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

To my Republican friends who think that if Judge Gorsuch fails to reach 60 votes, they will change the rules, I say: If this nominee cannot earn 60 votes—a bar met by each of President Obama’s nominees and George Bush’s last two nominees—the answer isn’t to change the rules, it is to change the nominee.

This morning, I would like to lay out the reasons I will be voting no on this nomination.

First, Judge Gorsuch was unable to sufficiently convince me that he would be an independent check on a President who has shown almost no restraint from Executive overreach.

Second, he was unable to convince me that he would be a mainstream Justice who could rule free from the biases of politics. His career and judicial record suggest not a neutral legal mind but someone with a deep-seated conservative ideology. He was groomed by the Federalist Society and seated conservative ideology. He was the outstanding power of someone who has advocated extreme positions abounded.

Finally, he is someone who almost instinctively favors the powerful over the weak, corporations over working Americans. There could not be a worse time for someone with those instincts. Judge Gorsuch’s opportunity to disprove all of these objections was in the hearing process, but he declined to answer question after question after question with any substance. Absent a real description of judicial philosophy, all we have to judge the judge on is his record.

First, I want to address the first issue I raised, that of judicial independence. It is so clear that at this moment in our history, our democracy requires a judge who is willing to rule against this President. This administration seems to have little regard for the rule of law and is likely to test the Constitution in ways it hasn’t been challenged in decades. It is absolutely the case that this Supreme Court will be tried in ways that few courts have been tested since the earliest days of the Republic when constitutional questions abounded.

The President himself has attacked individual judges and the credibility of the judiciary at large. The President has attacked a three-Judge panel of the Ninth Circuit and said if they didn’t decide with him, they would be responsible in the next terrorist act. I have never heard any President in my lifetime or read about any President in previous history who dared do that. We are in uncharted territory with this President and with judicial independence. It requires a strong independent backbone. Judge Gorsuch has shown none. Senators on the Judiciary Committee rightly asked Judge Gorsuch direct questions about this issue. I did so myself in my meeting with the judge. While the judge repeatedly asserted his independence, he added to anything in his record to guarantee it. Judge Gorsuch offered the Judiciary myriad platitudes on this point. “No man is above the law,” he said. He said he was “disheartened” by the President’s attacks on the judiciary. The President, for his sake, said that Judge Gorsuch didn’t mean him, and everyone left it at that.

If Judge Gorsuch had an ounce of courage, he would have specifically said: No, Mr. President. No, President Trump, I did mean you. Instead, he just tells us in general that he is demoralized, disheartened. Telling us is not the same as showing us. He is asking us to take him at his word, but his record suggests that he has long been someone who has advocated extreme deference to assertions of broad Presidential power.

That leads me to my second point: that Judge Gorsuch was unable to convince me that he would be a neutral judge, free of ideology and bias. The hearings this week were an opportunity for Judge Gorsuch to explain his record, to tell us how he thinks and how his judicial philosophy does not fundamentally advantage the powerful. Instead, we got banalities and platitudes. We didn’t get any real answers to any real questions about what he thinks about the law and why. He refused to answer questions on abuse of dark money in politics, LGBTQ rights, the constitutionality of the Muslim ban. I couldn’t believe it, when I asked him: Is a law that bans Muslims, a law that just said all Muslims are banned from the U.S. unconstitutional, he couldn’t answer that. He refused to say whether he agreed with Supreme Court decisions in seminal cases like Brown v. Board, Roe v. Wade, Griswold v. Connecticut, despite the fact that his predecessors, Justices Roberts and Alito, said they agreed with those cases.

He refused to answer questions about the emoluments clause, a section of the Constitution that prohibits foreign corruption of U.S. officials. Instead of an umpire calling balls and strikes in baseball, what we really saw was a well-trained expert in dodgeball. My friend, the ranking member of the committee, warned it best to worry ‘me,’ she told the nominee, ‘is that you have been very much able to avoid any specificity like no one I have ever seen before.’

Let me repeat. There is no legal standard, rule, or even logic for failing to answer questions that don’t involve immediate and specific cases that are or could come before the Court. It is evasion, just evasion, plain and simple, and it belies a deeper truth about this nominee.

If anyone doubts that Judge Gorsuch doesn’t have strong views, that thinks he would be a neutral judge calling balls and strikes as Judge Roberts once put it, just look at the way he was chosen. He was supported and pushed forward by the Heritage Foundation and the Federalist Society, and groomed by billionaire conservatives like Mr. Anschutz. President Trump simply picked someone from off their list.

Presumably they sought the advice and consent from the Federalist Society instead of from the U.S. Senate. Does anyone think the Federalist Society would choose someone who just called balls and strikes? Does anyone think that’s what they would put on their list for a neutral, moderate judge when they haven’t even supported anyone but judicial conservatives, almost all hard-right judicial conservatives in their history? The Federalist Society has been dedicated for a generation to influence the courts to favor corporations and special interests. If anyone doubts that Judge Gorsuch could be an activist judge with views eschewing the interests of average people, look at how he was selected—by a group that is not a group that has been dedicated to changing the judiciary and placing activist, hard-right judges on the bench. Now that he is nominated, look at how much money, dark, secret, undisclosed money—it is a good bet from the very corporations Judge Gorsuch has been defending his whole career. If he were so neutral, would they be spending this money? I doubt it.

Anyone groomed by the Federalist Society will not call balls and strikes. Their views are best foretold by the ideology of the people who groomed them. To say Judge Gorsuch has no ideology whatsoever is absurd. He just will not admit it to the American people. To say he is just neutral in his views is belied by his history since his college days and by his own judicial record. He even tried to deny it. In the hearings, Judge Gorsuch repeated the hollow assertion that judges don’t have parties or politics. He said there are no Democrat or Republican judges, but if that were true, we wouldn’t be here, would we? If that were true, if the Senate were merely evaluating a nominee based on his or her qualifications, Merrick Garland would be seated on the Supreme Court right now. Merrick Garland is not a Justice. We all know why. We all know my friends across the aisle held the Supreme Court seat open for over 1 year in hope that they have the opportunity to install someone hand-picked by the Heritage Foundation and the Federalist Society to advance the goal of Big Money interests entrenching their power in the Court. They don’t think that’s what this nomination is moving forward under a cloud of an FBI investigation of the President’s campaign. The Republicans held a Supreme Court seat open for a year under a Democratic President who was under no investigation but now are rushing to fill the seat for a President whose campaign is under investigation. It is unseemly and wrong to be moving so fast on a lifetime appointment in such circumstances.

Finally, Judge Gorsuch came into this hearing with a record that raises deep concerns about whether he would consider fairly the plight of the average citizen before the interests of powerful special interests. I examined his record. I saw a judge who repeatedly decided with insurance companies that wanted to deny disability benefits to employees. I saw a judge who, in unemployment discrimination, sided with employers the great majority of the time. I saw a judge who, on the issue of employment discrimination, decided with insurance companies that wanted to deny disability benefits to employees. I saw a judge who, in unemployment discrimination, sided with employers the great majority of the time.

In the hearings, Judge Gorsuch did nothing to explain his philosophy, did nothing to assuage those concerns. We will just have to go by his record, a record that shows time and time again his rulings favor the already powerful over ordinary Americans.

Judge Gorsuch ruled against a teacher, Grace, Grace’s son having been through two bouts of cancer, was advised by her doctors not to return to the college campus during a flu epidemic lest she put her life at risk. She was fired for taking sick leave. Judge Gorsuch, true to form, voted to uphold that dismissal. Her daughter Katherine told us last week:

This decision to protect her health cost my mom her job. When Judge Gorsuch issued his ruling, he didn’t think about the impact that this has on our family. The law calls for ‘reasonable accommodation for those who are disabled.’

Judge Gorsuch ignored the human cost.

Judge Gorsuch ruled against a truck-driver, Alfonse Maddin, who had to make a similar choice between his employer and his life. I met with him. He told me a harrowing story of being stuck in the cab of a tractor-trailer with frozen brakes, no heat, temperature down to zero, to death. He radioed his company to explain his predicament. They told him that the cargo was the most important thing; he couldn’t leave it. Rather than risk the lives of other motorists on a freezing highway by driving a trailer with broken brakes, Mr. Maddin struggled to unhitch his trailer and drive his cab to safety—returning later for it once he was not at risk of dying from the cold. For that, his company fired him. He sued. Seven judges heard this story, believed Mr. Maddin, Only one, Judge Gorsuch, in dissent, ruled against him. Judge Gorsuch used an exceptionally technical and illogical reading of the statute to reach the absurd conclusion that Mr. Maddin was obligated to risk his life to protect his cargo.

Mr. Maddin said that Judge Gorsuch’s nomination to the Supreme Court gives him “pause for concern” because he “demonstrated a willingness to artfully diminish the humane element that encompassed the issue.”

Judge Gorsuch also ruled against a parent of a severely autistic child, Luke, who sought individualized education for his child with Disabilities in Education Act guarantees him—the right to an education that met his needs. Jeff Perkins, Luke’s father, is testifying before the Judiciary Committee today. Their story is powerful. Judge Gorsuch ruled that Luke was not entitled to attend a specialized school because he was able to make more than de minimis progress in the normal educational system.

Just yesterday, the Supreme Court unanimously—including Justice Alito and so many others who are so conservative—rejected Judge Gorsuch’s interpretation of the IDEA. The Court held that “when all is said and done, a student offered an educational program providing ‘merely more than a de minimis progress from year to year can hardly be said to have been offered an education at all.’” That puts Judge Gorsuch’s interpretation of the IDEA law to the right of even Justice Thomas—a very difficult feat.

Whom we put on the bench, their basic judgment, matters. While I do not think that the personal views and experiences should bear on the decisions of day-to-day cases, there is a reason we don’t program computers to decide cases. We do not want judges with ice water in their veins. What we want need are judges who understand the litigants before them and bring a modicum—at least a modicum—that human judgment into the courtroom. You can call this trait empathy or mercy. I think it falls in the category of common sense. It is commonplace that results from each person’s own, unique life experience. Even Judge Gorsuch acknowledged this when he told the committee “I am not an algorithm.” Yet he wouldn’t tell us how, as a human—a person—he would uniquely approach a case.

When it comes to the application of the law, that empathy, that mercy, that “humane element” of common sense—as Alphonse Maddin, the truck-driver, put it—is the most important judicial trait of them all because ultimately the law is abstract, but the people and situations are real. The task of the judge is to apply those abstract legal principles to very humane and sometimes very messy situations. It is a hard thing to do to bring fairness and justice to a world that is too short on both.

I am reminded of the words spoken by Portia, the great lawyer in “The Merchant of Venice,” who spoke of the blessings and necessity of mercy in applying the law.

He said:

The quality of mercy is not strain'd, It dropeth as the gentle rain from heaven Upon the place beneath. It is twice blessed: It blesseth him that gives and him that takes.

’Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes The thron-ed monarch better than his crown; His sceptre shows the force of temporal power, The attribute to awe and majesty, Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings; But mercy is above this sceptred sway,

It blesseth him that gives and him that takes.

And that is true, but his humanity does not excuse him from the attribute of mercy. Instead, his humanity should require it.

Alphonse Maddin sought the mercy of the law. The Hwang family sought the mercy of the law. Luke, the autistic child whose school was failing him, sought the mercy of the law. The man who had the power to see plain sense in their cases, who could rule in their favor and right the wrongs that had been done to them as other judges had done in each of those cases—Judge Neil Gorsuch—said no.

I am voting no on Gorsuch for Alphonse Maddin and workers across the country, the Hwang family and others who do not want to choose between their health and providing for their children, and for the Perkins family, who loves their children just as they are and wants for them no fewer than the opportunities afforded to every other child in America.

The American people deserve someone who sees average litigants as more than incidental consequences of precedent, when that precedent produces an absurd result, whose view of the law is not abstract and so arid as to wring every last drop of humanity and common sense. It requires only the bare minimum of judicial decency to rule the right way in the cases I have mentioned, and Judge Gorsuch did not.

That is all the evidence my colleagues should need to vote no, and I urge them and will urge them in the days ahead to do so.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. President, today, we are truly in a historic fight, a fight to protect one of the most treasured and revered American values—our right to privacy. Make no mistake, our privacy has never been more in danger, and the American public knows it.

The American public knows its privacy is in danger when a smart TV can listen to its most intimate living room conversations with your children, with your parents, with your spouse.

The American public knows its privacy is in danger when it seems that every other day new data bases of one of our country’s largest companies—Yahoo!, Target, Home Depot, JPMorgan Chase.

The American public knows its privacy is in danger when the Russian surveillance machine—fire on all cyclinders—hacks the U.S. election, threatening to undermine our sacred democratic system.

The American public knows its privacy is in danger when both Chambers of Congress hold countless hearings, launch investigatory briefings on the rapidly growing cybersecurity threat to our Nation and the impact both on our national security and to the public.

The American public wants us to do more to protect its privacy. The American public wants us to do more to protect its sensitive information. Yet what do the Republicans in Congress want to do today on the Senate floor? They want to make it easier for Americans to be spied on by the government. They want to sell that information to data brokers or anyone else who wants to make a profit off of you.

They want to document how many times you search online for heart disease, breast cancer, opioid addiction treatments, or AIDs treatment, and then sell that information to your insurance company. They want to know what games your teenagers play or shows they watch so they can then target ads to your family—and all of this done without your consent.

The American people are bringing to the floor today is going to basically change the definition of “ISP”—internet service provider—to “information sold for profit.” It will stand for “invasion of privacy.”

The American public knows its privacy is outraged about fake violations of his own privacy, but we should all be alarmed by this very real violation of privacy that will occur today if the Senate decides to roll back these important consumer protections.

Here on the Senate floor, the Republicans are fighting to make it easier for your broadband provider to use and sell that same type of information—remarkably detailed and sensitive dossiers of information about you, your kids, your parents, your grandparents—320 million Americans.

The Republicans want to rescind the Federal Communications Commission’s broadband privacy rules, which simply require your cable, wireless, or telephone company provider to obtain consumer consent before using consumer data. And 18 companies—CenturyLink, Cox, Charter, ATT, and others—have already violated those rules.

The American public knows its privacy is in danger when the Federal Trade Commission only enforces the privacy rules that companies create for themselves, and then they bring an enforcement action if a company violates its own very low standards.

Today, the Republicans are seeking a vote on a Congressional Review Act resolution that would allow Comcast, Verizon, Charter, ATT, and other broadband companies to take control away from consumers and relentlessly collect and sell their sensitive information without the consent of that family.

That is sensitive information about your health, about your finances, even about your children. They want to track your location and draw a map of where you shop, where you work, where you eat, where your children go to school, and then sell that information to data brokers or anyone else who wants to make a profit off of you.

They want to document how many times you search online for heart disease, breast cancer, opioid addiction treatments, or AIDs treatment, and then sell that information to your insurance company. They want to know what games your teenagers play or shows they watch so they can then target ads to your family—and all of this done without your consent.

The American public knows its privacy is in danger when the Federal Trade Commission only enforces the privacy policies companies create for themselves, and then they bring an enforcement action if a company violates its own very low standards.

Today, the Republicans are seeking a vote on a Congressional Review Act resolution that would allow Comcast, Verizon, Charter, ATT, and other broadband companies to take control away from consumers and relentlessly collect and sell their sensitive information without the consent of that family.

That is sensitive information about your health, about your finances, even about your children. They want to know what games your teenagers play or shows they watch so they can then target ads to your family—and all of this done without your consent.

That is what this whole debate is about—whether consumers, not the broadband providers, have control over their sensitive information.

The big broadband companies and their Republican allies say we need a light touch regulatory framework to protect Americans’ broadband privacy—a light touch approach, like with the Federal Trade Commission, which does not prescribe actual privacy rules. The Federal Trade Commission only enforces the privacy policies companies create for themselves, and then they bring an enforcement action if a company violates its own very low standards.

Let’s be clear here. When the broadband behemoths say “light touch,” they mean “hands off.” They mean hands off their ability to monetize captive consumers’ sensitive information.

Let’s be clear. When the big broadband barons and their Republican allies are firing their opening salvo in the war on net neutrality, they want broadband privacy protections to be the first victim.

When Republicans say we need to harmonize regulations, they really mean self-regulation. Self-regulation is the ultimate dream of the Republicans, who are beholden to those special interests. They really want to allow broadband companies to write their own privacy rules.

Is this really what the American public wants—a harmonized, light-touch approach, without sensible consumer protections? Does the American public really want us to allow our broadband companies to ignore reasonable data security practices, making consumers’ sensitive information more vulnerable to breaches and unauthorized access?

This resolution does just that. The internet service providers even oppose following reasonable data security practices.

We should know better. The American public wants us to strengthen our privacy protections, not weaken them. The American people do not want their sensitive information collected, used, and sold by any third party, whether that be your broadband provider or a hacker.

At its core, this debate is about our values—our values as a people, our values as a society. While technology has certainly changed, our core values have not changed as a country. For generations, we have valued the right to choose whom we let into our homes, whom we communicate with, whom we share our most sensitive secrets with, but now the Republicans and the broadband industry are telling us that we must forgo those rights just because our homes are connected to the internet and our phones are connected to the internet.

With many Americans across the country having only a couple of broadband providers, at most, to choose from, they will not have the option of changing service providers if their privacy protections are not transparent or robust. And throughout it all, while the internet service providers monetize your personal information, the monthly bill will continue to show up for the service that is siphoning off your sensitive information.

My colleagues, we know the attack on the free and open internet is coming. Net neutrality is on the chopping block, and this is the first step in ensuring that the few and the powerful control the internet. We must stop this today, so I urge my colleagues to join with me.

The fundamental principle here is that every person should have the knowledge that information is being gathered about their families when they use the internet; second, that they have notice from the company that that information is going to be resold to a third party, to someone else, not to the broadband company; and third, that you have the right to say no, that you do not want that information about your family member to be resold.

When we were all younger and the salesman came to the front door and knocked, your mother told you to tell the salesperson, knock on the door, get them out of your house. The American people have the right to say what they have always said: No, you cannot take those secrets of our family. You cannot take how we use that information.

So this vote that we are about to take in the next couple of hours on the Senate floor goes right to the heart of who we are as a country.

We now hear more about the Russians, and we hear more about companies whose information has been hacked. Then the Republicans are crying their crocodile tears about the vanguard of people in our country, and then they come to the floor and take all of the information online in the family and allow it to be sold as a product. That is just fundamentally wrong. It goes contrary to the values of our country.

I urge very strongly a "no" vote from the Members of the Senate. Just remember: This is the privacy vote of all time on the Senate floor—of all time—because there has never been anything like the internet going into our homes. No one should have to give all of that information and just sell it without getting their permission.

Mr. President, I urge a "no" vote on this resolution.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, before he leaves the floor, I just want to commend my colleague from Massachusetts for an excellent presentation. He has really outlined A to Z with respect to what this issue is all about. I commend him, and I also commend the ranking member of the committee, Senator NELSON, our colleague from Florida, for his excellent job.

Before he leaves the floor, picking up on the remarks of our colleague from Massachusetts, I am particularly struck by the fact that I have always thought that it is a classic conservative principle to empower the individual to make fundamental choices about what would be important to them and their family and their wallets and all of the activities that are central to the life of a working class family.

What we have been touching on—very eloquently by my colleague from Massachusetts—is we are going to be voting in a little bit to strip rights from individuals, to retreat from that classic conservative principle of empowering the individual to make these fundamental decisions and allowing the gatekeepers of the internet to collect, share, and profit from personal information of consumers without their consent is an extraordinary mistake for our country at this time.

I serve on the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence. I think, for many people, these issues have, in effect, converged with respect to privacy policy as it relates to the private marketplace, which is what this ill-advised proposal that we are going to vote on today is all about.

We are constantly offered up ideas that suggest that you really are faced with what amounts to a flawed set of choices. In the intelligence area, we are consistently told: Well, you just have to give up a little bit of liberty to have security. And the reality is that liberty and security are not mutually exclusive. Smart policies give us both. They give us security and liberty. Unfortunately, around here, we are coming up with policies, like weakening strong encryption, that are reducing both—reducing security and reducing liberty. I think what we are dealing with here on this ill-advised resolution in the Senate, with respect to the FCC rule, is yet another set of false choices—that you can either have access to the internet or you can have privacy protections. Those are not mutually exclusive. Just as we can have security and liberty, we can have internet access and privacy for all of the reasons that my friend from Massachusetts has been outlining. The FCC acted on the responsibility given to them by the Congress to protect browsing history—arguably the most intimate, personal information imaginable. Browsing history makes what the Senate did in the past with wireline phone customers, the FCC said it was going to keep up with the evolution of telecommunication networks by ensuring privacy protections would apply to broadband internet use. This is a lot of us as just common sense. Again, building on the conservative principle of empowering the individual, the judgment was that by creating what are called "opt-in" consent agreements, that the consumer makes an affirmative decision about what they want—it is not what government wants, it is not what big companies want, it is what the consumer wants. The judgment was that by creating this opt-in consent agreement, the consumer would get a clear understanding of what their provider knows about them from, for example, their computer or from their smartphone.
The big internet service providers are in a unique position to see where information flows over the networks and can see more of Americans’ data than probably anybody else in what we might call the internet ecosystem. The website we visit, what we look for, what time we do it online—all of this even our location—would be considered highly personal and highly sensitive information.

The responsibility of the internet service provider is to protect consumer privacy. It is compounded by the fact that the majority of broadband consumers have only one option for fast internet service to their home. There is only one company offering them service. So it seems to me what we are talking about—what Senator MARKEY has outlined—really looks like bad news for folks in rural areas where they are only going to have one provider, and, frankly, I think in a lot of metropolitan areas, particularly where there are only one or two companies.

Without these protections in place, most consumers are left with the choice of giving up their browsing history for an internet service provider to sell to the highest bidder or to have no internet service provider at all. It is that simple. Without these protections, customers, especially those, as I have indicated, who are captive to one internet service provider, deserve to know how their internet service provider is using their data.

The broadband privacy rules are not some kind of attack on monetizing consumer data, but simply a recognition of the importance of consumer consent. I will close by saying that more and more in this area, the American people are getting presented false choices. They are being told, as I see on the Internet Intelligence Committee, that you have to give up some of your liberty to have your security. Those are false choices. They are not mutually exclusive. Everyone in America, everyone paying attention to this debate ought to know that they have a right to both. Don’t ever let a politician tell you that you have to give up some of your liberty to have your security. You have a right to vote, and it is our job, colleagues on both sides of the aisle, to come up with policies that do both.

Today, we are sure that people aren’t presented with another choice—that to have Internet access you have to give up your privacy rights. You can have both, and the Federal Communications Commission has sought to come up with a sensible policy to do that.

So I join my colleagues, particularly my friend from Massachusetts, who knows so much about this field, and our terrific ranking minority member, Senator NELSON, in urging colleagues to oppose a harmful resolution that, in my view, turns class conservativism on its head and strips consumers of their rights in a truly ill-advised manner.

I yield the floor.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Mr. President, I oppose the resolution to repeal the Federal Communications Commission’s rule to protect consumers from having their data sold by internet service providers, or ISPs, without their permission.

Passing this resolution of disapproval would represent yet another victory for big business and a defeat for hard-working Americans who use the internet to do their job, connect with friends, or read the news.

The internet started as a system to facilitate communication among academic and military networks. In 1995, I introduced an amendment that was adopted. Today more than 87 percent of Americans and more than 40 percent of the world’s population use the internet.

Today the internet has become nearly indispensable. Increasingly, our toasters, refrigerators, and cars can connect to the internet, but legislation has been slow to keep up with technology. Every website we visit and every link we click leaves an unseen trail that tells a story about our lives. ISPs can collect information about our location, children, sensitive information, family status, financial information, Social Security numbers, web browsing history, and even the content of communications. ISPs sell that highly sensitive and highly personal data to the highest bidder without any consent or knowledge.

Recognizing that telecommunications companies have little incentive to tell consumers what they are doing with their personal data, the FCC promulgated a rule to make sure that consumers can protect their privacy through transparency, choice, and data security. The rule’s name explains its purpose: “Protecting the Privacy of Customers of Broadband and Other Telecommunications Services.” The FCC rule would not stop companies from selling consumers’ information, but the rule would require ISPs to get consumers’ consent before using, disclosing, or allowing others to access this information.

As former FCC Chairman Wheeler said, “It’s the consumers’ information. How it is used should be the consumers’ choice.”

With this resolution, Congressional Republicans are telling 9 out of 10 Americans that they should not be able to decide how private corporations collect, disclose, and sell their personal data. This resolution is a special interest that benefits data users above those of consumers. I oppose the resolution.

Mr. WYDEN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, what is the parliamentary situation? Are we in morning business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is considering S.J. Res. 31, calling for the appointment of a special prosecutor.

Mr. LEAHY, Mr. President, I have been privileged to serve in this body for more than 42 years, and I thank my native State of Vermont for that.
When I joined the Senate, our country was still crawling out of an intracable war—a war which came to an end with a vote in the Senate Armed Services Committee in April of 1975. Since then, I have seen our country slide into new crises. We have tested our country. But I have never seen a threat to our democratic institutions like I see today.

There is still much we do not know about Russian interference in the 2016 Presidential election, but what we do know is deeply disturbing. Last night, reports indicated that there is evidence that certain Trump officials coordinated the release of hacked documents with Russia. The FBI Director confirmed that the FBI has been investigating possible collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia since July of last year.

Already, the Intelligence Community has reached its conclusion that Russian President Putin waged a multifaceted influence campaign to delegitimize Secretary Clinton and help Donald Trump win the Presidency. Worse, he intended to undermine public faith in our democratic process. What is even worse is that this interference did not end on November 8, election day. It is ongoing. That—whether you are a Republican or a Democrat—should concern every American.

According to the Intelligence Community, President Putin will continue using cyber-attacks and propaganda campaigns to undermine our future elections. This is nothing less than an attack on our democracy. We should not tolerate all Americans, no matter what their political affiliation, and we need to know all the facts.

Frankly, my experience here tells me we need a thorough, independent investigation to send a clear message to President Putin that America, our country—the country that the Presiding Officer and I revere—will not tolerate future efforts to manipulate our most sacred democratic process, our election.

All of us here know that President Trump is not going to lead such an investigation. He is not going to deliver this message. The President, unfortunately, is still part of the 2016 campaign supportive of President Putin. Then-Candidate Trump refused to call on Russia to stop meddling in our election, saying: “I’m not going to tell Putin what to do.” He even encouraged Russia to release “dirty dossiers” in the form of stolen hacked documents. He has admitted to having conversations with “Guccifer 2.0,” the Russian-connected hacker responsible for the cyber-attack on the Democratic National Committee.

They say that where there is smoke there is fire. There is so much smoke here that it is getting hard to breathe. The President unfortunately continues to make matters worse. This week alone, he continued his untruth about ordering the Deputy Director of the FBI personally ordering a wiretap of Trump Tower, something everybody knows is not true. I think members of his own administration’s inner circle are embarrassed every time they have to speak for him.

On Monday, the President ramped up his own influence campaign to undermine the integrity of this investigation, tweeting “fake news” as the Director of the FBI prepared to testify under oath in the House of Representatives.

Now, I have no reason to doubt the integrity of the FBI’s investigation thus far, but I have every reason to believe it is eventually going to be at risk. That is why we need somebody independent—indeed of the Congress, independent of the administration. We need an independent special prosecutor to lead this investigation and to ensure there is sufficient evidence to prosecute. A special prosecutor would not report to the Attorney General, who himself is a witness to this investigation. And a special prosecutor, unlike the Attorney General or even the President, cannot be fired by the President.

I have thought long and hard about this. I went on my experience here with administrations beginning with President Gerald Ford straight through to today. It takes a lot of thought to call for a special prosecutor, but this is one where we need it, where the American people have to have somebody they can trust outside Republicans, Democrats, and the Congress, and certainly outside the administration.

Our Nation is at a precipice. We can either confront what happened in our election and get to the bottom of it with an independent investigation and make sure it never happens again. Or we can just pretend this is another Washington scandal and allow it to be filtered through a familiar partisan lens. That would be a terrible mistake. In all my years here, I have never seen a time another country—one that has shown its animosity toward us—has tried to interfere in our elections. If Russia can get away with interfering with our elections, what else can they interfere with in our democratic Nation? They do not share the ideals we do. They do not allow free elections. They do not allow freedom of expression. They do not allow their people to speak out. Why would anyone think that they would have America’s interests at heart?

Today we have a counterintelligence investigation into the campaign of a sitting President. There is evidence that this campaign colluded with a foreign adversary to impact our Presidential election. This is not normal. We must not treat it as such. I would feel this way no matter who had won the election—no matter if they were Democrat or Republican, because it goes beyond one party.

President Putin’s goal last year was to undermine our democracy to corrode America’s trust and faith in government, something that has sustained us through two World Wars, through a Civil War, through all the other problems this Nation has faced. That trust should sustain us long after every one of us in this body are gone.

This is a responsibility that we as Senators have to our great Nation: not to think of ourselves for the moment, but to think where this Nation is 30 years, 50 years, 100 years from now. We must do that. We owe that to the American people. Republicans and Democrats alike, we owe it... to the American people. We take an oath to uphold our Constitution.

We come here, all of us—and I have great respect for every Senator here in both parties—we come here hoping to do the best for our Nation. Our Nation is in peril. All of us would stand to getget get ourselves attacked. All of us would stand together if somebody declared war on us. We have done that in the past. We did that after Pearl Harbor. We did that other times in our Nation’s history. Well, because this is behind the scenes, it is a great attack on us.

As I said, President Putin’s goal last year was to undermine our democratic institutions—to corrode Americans’ trust and faith in our government, no matter who is President. If we do not get to the bottom of Russian interference, he will no doubt be successful. And if anybody doubts it, if he is successful, he will try it again.

That is why we should stand united and conduct an independent investigation. The American people deserve nothing less. We can sit here and talk about this bill and that bill, and it is so rare that we have something overriding. This is overriding. Let’s have an independent investigation. This Senator is willing to accept that whatever way it goes. I see our distinguished majority leader on the floor. I will yield the floor. The PRESIDING OFFICER, the majority leader.

ORDER OF PROCEEDURE
Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at 12:15 p.m. today there be 10 minutes of debate, equally divided in the usual form, remaining on S.J. Res. 34; further, that following the use or yielding back of that time, the joint resolution be read a third time and the Senate vote on the resolution with no intervening action or debate; finally, notwithstanding Rule XXII, the disposition of the joint resolution, the Senate vote on the motion to invoke cloture on Executive Calendar No. 20, David Friedman to be Ambassador to Israel.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

If no one yields time, the time will be charged equally.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask unanimous consent that the time be charged equally for a truly independent investigation. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BLUMENTHAL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BLUMENTHAL. Mr. President, the report of the Federal Communications Commission recently promulgated—and when I say “recently,” it was October, only months ago—expanded the concept of privacy and consumer protection as applied to broadband. Now we are on the verge of rescinding those rules through S.J. Res. 34.

This resolution is a direct attack on commonsense rights that privacy rules that afford basic protection against intrusive and illegal interference with consumers’ use of social media sites, websites, that often they take for granted. Many Americans simply don’t have broadband to visit websites. As broadband providers, as the carriers of all internet traffic, are also able to collect and use consumer data, to put together a detailed picture of who they are, what they do, where and when they buy things, where they go, what they like to do—all of it an array of data that people assume is private, all of it freely available to those internet providers.

Even when data is encrypted, our broadband providers can piece together significant amounts of information about us. And according to the FTC’s investigation, medical conditions, financial problems—based on online activity. It is a mine that can be used—more valuable than a gold mine—because that information can be sold and bought and used as consumer privacy becomes a completely evanescent and illusory feature of our lives.

Consumers wanting to switch broadband providers are often hit with hefty termination fees, and they have to experience a lapse in internet service at home—something that most simply don’t have the luxury to do or endure in today’s connected society where internet is accessible. They have no meaningful choice about how to safeguard broadband privacy. They have one choice if they want speeds above 25 megabits per second. That is why I applauded those rules when they were promulgated by the FCC back in October, finalizing broadband privacy protections. I applaud them because signing up for the Internet should not mean you sign away your rights to privacy.

Just as telephone networks must obtain consumer approval before selling customer information, broadband providers ought to be required to obtain consumers’ affirmative consent before selling their sensitive browsing or app usage data to advertisers. The FCC rules that this resolution would decimate, utterly destroy, essentially seek to promote invasion of privacy, the only way the FCC’s broadband privacy rules protect consumers is through an affirmative opt-in consent. That is the only real protection that works.

These rules also prohibit pay-for-privacy schemes that would require consumers to waive their privacy protections as a precondition to receiving service. They establish data security and breach notification standards for broadband providers. They also have important national security implications. Just last week, the Department of Justice indicted four individuals, including Russian spies, for hacking into Yahoo! systems in 2014 and obtaining access to at least 500 million Yahoo! accounts. According to the indictment, these Russian intelligence officers spied on U.S. Government officials and private sector employees of financial companies. One defendant also exploited the data for financial gain.

Without clear rules of the road, broadband subscribers will have no certainty or choice about how their private information can be used, no protection against abuse, and no assurance that security standards will be bolstered against that kind of attack that the Russians and their spies launched.

The FTC doesn’t have jurisdiction over the security and privacy practices of broadband, cable, and wireless carriers. If the Ninth Circuit’s recent decision in FTC v. AT&T is upheld, adopting a “status-based” instead of “activity-based” interpretation of the FTC’s common carrier exemption, the FTC’s jurisdiction and ability to impose privacy and security obligations would be even further curtailed.

Mr. BLUMENTHAL. And we also say that the FCC’s broadband privacy rules would unfairly create a separate regulatory regime for “edge providers,” websites such as Google or Facebook. It is that their real concern, why haven’t they focused their efforts on ensuring that the FTC has meaningful rulemaking authority so that it can implement privacy and data security rules over such websites?

In closing, I have long supported giving the FTC authority to adopt its own rules governing the privacy and security of websites. Giving the FTC authority to adopt new rules would help ensure our privacy, keep our privacy safe no matter where we go on the internet or how we connect. However, I do not see any of our colleagues, in supporting this resolution, rushing to accomplish these goals.

We should all remember that consumers need control over their own information and how it is used. This resolution would subvert and sabotage that control.

All too often, Americans take for granted privacy until it is lost. Once it is lost, rarely can it be recovered. Once that information becomes public, privacy is irreparably damaged.

Today’s vote, if it succeeds, will deprive Americans of important baseline privacy standards that they expect and demand the government to provide. Few Americans are aware of this vote today. Many will be aware of its consequences. It will do extraordinary damage to privacy, if it is approved.

I urge my colleagues to reject it and to help preserve American privacy.

Mr. President, if you agree, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. HARRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PATIENT PROTECTION AND AFFORDABLE CARE ACT

Ms. HARRIS. Mr. President, I rise to celebrate the anniversary of one of the most significant legislative achievements in the passage of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, also known as ObamaCare.

I rise in strong opposition to the American Health Care Act, a callous and precisely written bill that would roll back progress and strip health insurance from millions of Americans.

I rise on behalf of people like Chrystal from my home State of California. You see, I know Chrystal. She works in my dentist’s office. In early 2011, just after I was elected attorney general of California, I went in for a checkup. It had been a while since I had seen her. Chrystal asked me how I had been, and I asked her how she had been, and then she shared with me great news. She was pregnant.

As a dental hygienist, she was working for a few different dentists and wasn’t on the payroll of any of them as a full-time employee. This was before the ACA was in place, so Chrystal was on private insurance with only basic coverage, just enough to cover her annual exams.

When Chrystal found out she was pregnant, she went to her insurance company for prenatal coverage. She was denied. When I asked her why, she told me that they said she had a preexisting condition. So you can imagine I asked her: Are you OK? What is wrong? What is the preexisting condition?

She told me she was pregnant.

When she applied to another healthcare company for insurance, again, she was denied. Why? Preexisting condition. What was it? She was pregnant.

So this young woman was forced to go into her sixth month of pregnancy before she received a sonogram. Instead, thankfully, there was a free clinic in San Francisco, so she could get her prenatal care.

Thank God she had a strong and beautiful baby boy. His name is Jackson. They are both doing well today.

Thank God that situation is no longer the reality for millions of Americans.

I share Chrystal’s story to remind us what America’s healthcare system looked like only a few years ago.

We should not forget that before the ACA, 48 million Americans lacked health insurance. That is more people than the entire country of Canada.

Before the ACA, when these people got sick, they had three choices: Go without treatment, go to the emergency room, or go broke.

Before the ACA, 122 million people—almost one out of every two Americans—could be denied insurance coverage because of preexisting conditions. And the minute you got sick, your insurer could dig up some flimsy reason to drop your coverage. You could be denied coverage for chemotherapy or insulin if you had cancer or diabetes. You could be denied prenatal coverage if you were pregnant, like Chrystal. You could even be denied health insurance if you were a victim of domestic violence.

Before the ACA, healthcare costs were crushing low-income and middle-class Americans. Premiums—which, of course, increased monthly bills that we would pay for our insurance—were going up and up. Sky-high medical bills were the No. 1 reason Americans went broke, causing them to sell their homes, their cars, and even pawn their jewelry to pay off their debts.

One of the worst things about facing the healthcare system without coverage before the ACA was that it left you feeling utterly alone. Most Americans know what I am talking about: that knot in your stomach when you know something is wrong with your health or the health of your child or your parent, but you are not sure what it is, whether it can be fixed or whether your insurance will cover it, and the frustration, the anger as you try to make sense of the fine print to find out if something is covered and how much.

How many of us have walked into an emergency room with a loved one and felt time just stop? Maybe it was your partner or your loved one having trouble breathing. Maybe your partner is being rushed in with a possible heart attack. All you will know is that something is wrong. All you know is that you are overwhelmed and scared, and you know that you should not also have to fight on the phone with an insurance company or wonder if a doctor will even see you at all.

That is how millions and millions of Americans experienced our healthcare system. It was not right or fair. So the ACA set out to make things better, and 7 years ago today, President Barack Obama signed the Affordable Care Act into law. It finally extended good, affordable health insurance to Americans like Chrystal across the nation. Vice President Biden was absolutely right when, at the time, he said that it was a “big”—and then I will not quote the next word; let’s call it blanking—“deal.”

It is a shame that people have been playing politics with this law and with America’s health. The former Speaker of the House said that the ACA would be “Armageddon.” A Republican Presidential candidate who now sits in the cabinet called the ACA—and these are his actual words—“the worst thing that has happened in this nation since slavery.”

Earlier this month, the President of the United States tweeted that the ACA is “a complete and total disaster.” Well, I say: Tell that to the people of California because when a State wants to make the ACA work, it works—whether that is California or Kentucky, and real people living real lives know it.

For example, I recently heard from Myra from Sherman Oaks, CA, who was diagnosed with an aggressive form of breast cancer. She wrote:

We had a Silver Shield plan that covered... well over a million dollars in bills to date. I am happy to report I am now well, but without insurance, I was facing a death sentence. Without the ACA, we would certainly have had to sell our home to pay my bills and try to figure out how to make ends meet.

She wrote that it covered well over a million dollars. That is what the ACA does.

Here is how Cindy of from Oakley, CA, has experienced real life. She wrote:

My daughter was diagnosed with an eating disorder at 13 years old and I can directly thank the excellent care I received at Kaiser Northern California for her good health today at age 17. Without the ACA and the mental health parity it helps provide... I would not have had treatment options available to me.

Again, coverage for mental health treatment—that is what the ACA does.

Honoree, a single mom from Samoa, CA, living with a spinal cord injury that she has worked—whether that is California or Kentucky, and real people living real lives know it.

I want to let you know that I love ObamaCare! My healthcare has steadily improved since the ACA was enacted. ... I can’t tell you how AMAZING it felt to get my teeth cleaned and cared for after waiting more than a decade.

I walked around for weeks saying, “thanks, ObamaCare!” whenever I sensed how good my teeth felt.

I would be saddened to see the ACA get scrapped. It’s made a huge difference in our lives. Actually, I’d be more than saddened, I’d be very scared.

Again, this is testimony about the ACA, in this case about dental coverage and improved healthcare. That is what the ACA does.

I will state that I believe there is a huge disconnect between the over-the-top criticism of the ACA and the law’s actual impact. There is a disconnect between the politics and how people are actually living and thriving under the ACA. In fact, in a recent poll, one in three Americans didn’t even realize that the ACA and ObamaCare were actually the same thing, and they are. So, everybody, let’s be clear about this. The Affordable Care Act is ObamaCare, and ObamaCare is the Affordable Care Act.

We all know, of course, that there are ways to improve the ACA, but ending it is not the answer. The truth is that the ACA has largely done what it was supposed to do—expand, protect, and shore up the excellent care received at Kaiser Northern California for patients in need of healthcare and who might otherwise be courted by politicians. And it reduced the number of Americans without health insurance coverage. As a result, today, 32 million Americans receive insurance coverage, including Medicaid and incentivized employer-sponsored plans. As a result, today, 32 million Americans receive insurance coverage, including Medicaid and incentivized employer-sponsored plans. more Americans have health insurance. That is the population of the entire State of New York. Thanks to the ACA, premiums are going up at the slowest rate in half a century. Thanks to the ACA, doctors are innovating and providing better care than ever before. Thanks to the ACA, millions of underserved Americans in rural towns and in cities and everywhere in between have access to care for the first time. Thanks to the ACA, young people can stay on their parents’ insurance until they are 26. Thanks to the ACA, 55 million women have insurance that works—mammograms, checkups, and birth control with no copays. When you pick up your prescription at the pharmacy and see that the bill is zero dollars, well, that is the ACA. And thanks to the ACA, you can’t be discriminated against if you have a preexisting condition, including that preexisting condition called being a woman.

Of course, navigating the healthcare system is still daunting, but things are better. There are now some rules of the road to keep insurance companies from taking advantage of you during some of life’s most vulnerable moments. Because of the ACA, health-care providers can’t refuse to treat you because you have a condition, such as depression or cancer. Because of the ACA, if you need to go to the emergency room, you can’t be charged thousands of dollars for things you didn’t get because of limits on your care, meaning your insurance company won’t tell you in the middle of a cancer treatment that they have reached your limit. We are talking about real people. If you are a farmer in the Central Valley of California, you may lose income tax deductions. If you are a Los Angeles senior with diabetes, you may no longer be able to afford coverage on the individual market. If you are a family in Shasta County with a child dealing with a prescription drug addiction, substance abuse treatment likely will not be covered. If you are a couple in Humboldt County with an ailing parent, you will not be able to afford Medi-Cal.

As far as California is concerned, this bill would devastate our families. Here are the facts, and, frankly, here is the fight. Over 5 million Californians have received insurance through the Affordable Care Act. I say they are worth fighting for.

Since the ACA went into effect, California’s uninsured population has been cut in half, from 17 percent to about 7 percent. I say they are worth fighting for.

Medi-Cal went from covering 8.5 million Americans to 13.5 million today. One in two children are covered under Medi-Cal. I say they are worth fighting for.

I rise today to emphasize that it is really important that we understand the everyday consequences of this bill. We are talking about real people. If you are a farmer in the Central Valley on Medicaid, you can lose that coverage.

Well, here is your answer. It gives millionaires a $50,000 average tax cut every year. It gives the top 0.1 percent in this country a $195,000 tax cut every year. It gives insurance companies a $145 billion tax break over the next decade. The President and the Speaker of the House believe that this plan is good for American families, but under their bill, the only thing that gets healthier is the insurance companies’ bottom line.

We are talking about real people. If you are a farmer in the Central Valley on Medicaid, you can lose that coverage. If you are a Los Angeles senior with diabetes, you may no longer be able to afford coverage on the individual market. If you are a family in Shasta County with a child dealing with a prescription drug addiction, substance abuse treatment likely will not be covered. If you are a couple in Humboldt County with an ailing parent, you will not be able to afford Medi-Cal. These are the kinds of Californians and the kinds of Americans who this plan would hurt.

When these folks wake up at 3 a.m. worrying about an ache or pain or their next chemo appointment, when they wake up with that concern and that thought at 3 a.m., I promise you, they are not thinking about that through the lens of being a Republican or a Democrat. They think about themselves as fathers, mothers, parents, daughters and sons, and grandparents. They worry about their health needs and how their health needs will affect not only themselves but their loved ones. These concerns are not about politics. These are universal concerns, and we have all been there.

It is because all of us share these concerns and because all of us would be badly harmed by this new plan that this bill is opposed by the American Medical Association, the American Hospital Association, the American Nurses Association, the American Cancer Society, the American Diabetes Association, and the AARP. They are the most vocal and patient advocacy groups in this country, and they know what is at stake.

Ultimately, I believe this bill is not just about medicine or math; I believe this is about morals. The plan that the House passed on today is a values statement, and it is not a good one. As our former President said about the ACA, this is more than just about healthcare; it is about the character of our country, and it is about whether or not we look out for one another.

I think we need to take a good, hard look in the mirror and ask: Who are we as a country? Are we a country that cuts the deficit by cutting care for our most vulnerable?

Let’s look in the mirror and ask: Are we a country that gives tax breaks to insurers while giving higher medical bills to patients?

Are we a country that tells seniors and cancer patients and women “You are on your own”?

Are we a country that sees healthcare as a privilege for a few or a right for all?

I believe that is what we have to decide.

The ACA is not perfect. It can be strengthened, and I am willing to work with anyone who will work in good faith to do that, but it is time to stop playing politics with public health.

Our government has three main functions: public safety, public education, and public health. We shouldn’t be turning these responsibilities into partisan issues. Instead, we should be figuring out how to improve the lives of all Americans, whether we are Democrats, Republicans, or Independents.

People are counting on us, people like one of my constituents in Kern County—a woman who is suffering from lung disease, who said:

We are not asking for much . . . decent healthcare. . . . Don’t take it away. . . . Make it better.

I say to my colleagues: Do not take away American people’s healthcare. Let’s make it better.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. Fischer). Under the previous order, there will now be 10 minutes of debate, equally divided in the usual form, prior to a vote on S.J. Res. 34.

The majority whip.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, speaking of the vote that we will be having in just a few minutes, for the last several weeks, this Chamber has worked very hard to undo harmful rules and regulations that had been put forward by the Obama administration, at the behest of special interest groups, as he was headed out the door. These are rules that hurt job creators and stifle economic growth.

The FCC privacy rules are just another example of burdensome rules that hurt more than they help and serve as another example of the government’s picking winners and losers. They unnecessarily target internet service providers and, ultimately, make our online ecosystem less efficient by adding more red tape.

The bottom line is that the FCC privacy rules are bad regulations that need to be repealed.

I should also note that this Congressional Review Act vote will not change the entire online privacy protections that consumers currently enjoy, and it will not change statutory privacy protections under the Communications Act. It will repeal something that was done unilaterally by President Obama and his administration, as I said, following the end of his term, as they were headed out the door.

I thank the junior Senator from Arizona, Senator FLAKE, for his work on this CRA and moving it forward.

I urge all of my colleagues to support this resolution of disapproval.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. SCHATZ. Madam President, today, we will vote on a resolution that will take away privacy protections from the American people. By voting for this resolution, Congress is ignoring the fact that people want more protections online, not fewer.

In 2016, Pew did a study to determine the state of privacy in the United States, and the center found “Americans express a consistent lack of confidence in the security of everyday communication channels and the organizations that control them.”

Pew found that this is especially true when it comes to the internet. People no longer trust organizations—public or private—to protect the data they collect.

Today, we are going to make that worse. That is because broadband providers know our complete browsing history. Think about that for a second. They know everything we do online, everything we search for on a daily basis. Think about how personal that information is, how it paints a picture of who we are. It is totally reasonable for broadband providers to know our complete browsing history, what we do online, and sell it to a third party.

That will no longer be the case after the Republicans vote for this bill and it is enacted into law. Broadband providers will be able to take your browsing history and sell it without your permission. The FCC spent months on this rule, and by using the CRA to get rid of it, Congress is taking away the FCC’s authority to do anything like it ever again. That will mean that there is no forced arbitration for the FTC, not the FCC—that will even have jurisdiction over the issue of privacy for broadband providers.

What is the solution here? We should work with the private sector, the FCC, and the FTC to find a comprehensive solution together.

At a time when data collection and use is increasing exponentially, Republicans should not be rolling back protections for consumers. This is yet another repeal without replace.

Fifty-five years ago this month, President Kennedy gave a seminal speech about consumer rights. He spoke about the march of technology—what is the solution here? We should work with the private sector, the FCC, and the FTC to find a comprehensive solution together.

As technology marches on, what stays the same is the bedrock principle that President Kennedy outlined, which is that consumers have a right to be safe, a right to be informed, a right to choose, and a right to be heard. Those rights are in jeopardy. The FCC took a small but important step, but the Republicans are walking it back.

Let me be clear. This is the single biggest step backward in online privacy in many years. I urge a ‘no’ vote.

I ask unanimous consent all time be yielded back.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, all time is yielded back.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

Mr. SCHATZ. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

Under the previous order, the joint resolution having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the joint resolution pass?

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON) and the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Paul).

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROUND). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?
