The Senate met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable Luther Strange, a Senator from the State of Alabama.

PRAYER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Today’s opening prayer will be offered by our guest Chaplain, the Reverend Bruce Scott, pastor of Pentecostals of South Lake, from Merrillville, IN. The guest Chaplain offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Precious Lord, Creator of the heavens and the Earth, and all that dwells therein, we honor You from a grateful heart, knowing all of our blessings that we enjoy every day come from You. Heavenly Father, as the Senators assemble in this Chamber today, let them come together in unity to build a stronger and better America. Thank You for their dedication and commitment, as they labor together with You for what is right and acceptable in Your sight. This Nation was founded on biblical principles. Lord, I pray that You would grant to them wisdom to make right decisions. The Old Testament prophet declares it is not by might, nor by power but by My Spirit, saith the Lord. Bless their families at home with peace and safety.

Lord, bless our military all over this world. Just as You paid the ultimate price for our freedom on Calvary, our brave military men and women are willing to give their all so we may live in freedom today. Strengthen and encourage each family as they wait for the safe return of their loved one. Bless and protect our first responders, police, fire, and EMS personnel.

It is true that God has shed His Grace on us. Lord, surround this Chamber with Your presence.

We pray in Jesus’s Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Presiding Officer led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. Hatch).

The assistant bill clerk read the following letter:

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable Luther Strange, a Senator from the State of Alabama, to perform the duties of the Chair.

Orrin G. Hatch, President pro tempore.

Mr. Strange thereupon assumed the Chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

NOMINATION OF ROBERT LIGHTHIZER

Mr. McConnell. Mr. President, today the Senate will take a cloture vote on the U.S. Trade Representative nominee, Robert Lighthizer. We know the task before Mr. Lighthizer is an important one. I appreciate his willingness to take on this challenge, and I look forward to working with the administration on pro-growth trade policies moving forward.

CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW ACT RESOLUTIONS

Mr. McConnell. Mr. President, over the past 8 years, the American people struggled in an economy that too often failed to meet its potential. Many struggled to make ends meet. Many struggled to pay bills. Many struggled to make the mortgage. Too many couldn’t find a job at all.

Yet, time after time, when Americans looked to the Obama administration, they got tired leftwing ideology instead of serious solutions. When Americans asked for policies that would allow the economy to grow again, the Obama administration gave them just the opposite: a highly aggressive regulatory rampage that sometimes veered outside congressional authority, that often hurt the economy and job creation even more, that nearly always empowered unaccountable Washington bureaucrats at the expense of the American people.

Of course, not all regulations are bad regulations. Many are necessary and even beneficial, but what the Obama administration seemed to forget in its fit of ideological pique is this key point: Regulations are not issued in a vacuum. They can harm the middle class. They can kill jobs. They can raise prices. They can depress wages. They can reduce opportunity. They can harm the vacuum. They can harm the middle class. They can kill jobs. They can raise prices. They can depress wages. They can reduce opportunity. They can harm the middle class. They can kill jobs. They can raise prices. They can depress wages. They can reduce opportunity. They can harm the middle class. They can kill jobs. They can raise prices. They can depress wages. They can reduce opportunity. They can harm the middle class. They can kill jobs. They can raise prices. They can depress wages. They can reduce opportunity.

No matter how well-intentioned, regulations can have undesirable, often unexpected, impacts—and in this regulatory avalanche of the last 8 years, we saw another example of the consequences of putting leftwing ideology over the lives of real people.

It is one reason why Americans decided to go in a pro-growth direction last November. They elected a new President who, as one of his first acts, ordered the elimination of at least two existing regulations for every new one issued. He called for a regulatory budget to cap regulatory costs. He and his administration took a number of actions that are already helping to turn the regulatory tide back in favor of growth and jobs.

Printed on recycled paper.
The American people also reelected a Republican Congress that wasted no time in providing regulatory relief to Americans and restoring legislative power where it rightfully belongs, with the people through their elected representatives in Congress.

We have a tool that has proved incredibly helpful in this regard. It is called the Congressional Review Act. It is the brainchild of a bipartisan group of legislators, including former Democratic Leader Reid, our current Democratic Leader Schumer, and Republicans Grassley and Johnson.

From its inception in 1996 until this February, it had only been used successfully one time. From February until today, it has been used successfully 13 times—with the 14th soon to be signed into law; namely, to overturn a number of Obama administration regulations rushed through at the last minute.

Getting this done hasn’t always been easy, and we have met a lot of obstruction along the way. Although the Democrats once championed the CRA, a tool that is “fair” in the words of former Leader Reid, our current Democratic administration has taken a different view. They have fought against our efforts to deliver relief to the American people, just as they have blocked and punted and forced unnecessary procedural hurdles on the President’s nominees for months, and that, remember, was mostly for the sake of unnecessarily taking up valuable floor time, knowing full well it would not change the end result. Regardless, despite those obstructionist tactics, we have continued our regulatory relief efforts because we knew it could make a positive difference for our country.

This congressional action we have taken already, in coordination with key administration actions, is estimated to result in more than $67 billion in regulatory cost savings and about 56 million hours’ worth of paperwork reductions.

The New York Times says the efforts we have undertaken represent “a historic reversal of government rules in record-breaking time.”

The Washington Post proclaimed it “the most ambitious regulatory rollback since Reagan.”

The Congressional Review Act is so important is because it helps Congress serve as a check and balance on the executive branch. As former Leader Reid, put it, the Congressional Review Act can help “redress the balance [between the executive and legislative branches], reclaiming for Congress some of its policy-making authority.”

When we can’t simply turn back time or completely erase the negative impact that Obama regulations have already, the CRA has allowed us to stop a number of them in their tracks while also preventing agencies from creating similarly harmful rules in the future.

A lot of time and a lot of effort has gone into seeing these resolutions across the finish line so I thank each of our colleagues who had a hand in that effort. Specifically, I recognize those who introduced these resolutions or the Senate companion of House CRA resolutions.

I thank: Senator INHOFE; Senator GRASSLEY, chairman of the Judiciary Committee; Senator JOHNSON, chair of Homeland Security; Senator MURKOWSKI, chair of Energy; Senator SASSE; Senator ALEXANDER, chairman of the HELP Committee; Senator CRUZ; Senator SULLIVAN; Senator CASSIDY; Senator FLAKE; Senator ERNST; Senator HATCH, the Finance chairman; and Senator BARRASSO.

I also thank Senator TILLIS, who was an outstanding advocate for using the CRA process, as well as Senator CORNYN who worked tirelessly to bring these resolutions over the finish line. This historic regulatory rollback would not have been possible without their leadership. Because of their efforts and key actions by the Trump administration, we have begun chipping away at policies that have hurt the middle class and prevented economic growth for far too long. Much work remains to be done, but we are going to keep working together to help our economy fully recover from 8 years of anti-growth regulatory overreach, 8 years of missed opportunities, 8 years of dreams deferred, and 8 years of government that left far too many behind.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RUSSIA INVESTIGATION

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, the dismissal of Director Comey has raised a bevy of troubling questions over the last few days. The President of the United States fired the man in charge of an active investigation about the President and his campaign ties to Russia. The truth is, the dismissal of Director Comey is part of a much longer pattern of this administration interfering with the people who are in a position to conduct an independent investigation of the President and his administration.

The administration requested that the chairmen of the House and Senate Intelligence Committees help them beat back reports in the press about the Russia probe. The administration picked this Attorney General—a very close political ally, then-Senator Jeff Sessions—to lead a Justice Department that was supposed to independently conduct this investigation.

Attorney General Sessions, of course, has since had to recuse himself from the Russia investigation after he misled Congress about his meetings with the Russian Ambassador.

The administration is not shy about removing independent prosecutors and law enforcement officers from their posts if they are simply doing something the President doesn’t like, even if it is required by law. They fired Sally Yates. They fired Preet Bharara. They fired more than 40 U.S. attorneys across the country. Now they have fired Director Comey.

This is not about more than just Mr. Comey. This is part of a pattern of events that casts tremendous doubt on whether this administration has any interest in allowing the Russia investigation or any other investigation that could be politically damaging to them to proceed unimpeded. This is about one of the most sacred things we believe in as Americans, the rule of law—the rule of law being threatened here.

We in Congress, in both parties, should have one overarching goal: to get the full unvarnished truth. That means getting to the bottom of the events that led to Mr. Comey’s dismissal and making sure the Russia investigation is conducted impartially. Here in Congress, the Senate Intelligence Committee is doing its investigation in a bipartisan way, but the executive branch investigation has been compromised.

Attorney General Sessions, who had to recuse himself from the Russia investigation, is playing a significant role in firing the man who was leading it. Not only that, but the Attorney General is now reportedly leading a search to replace Mr. Comey. He is helping select the next FBI Director, who will be in charge of an investigation he cannot oversee—what an irony.

This Attorney General shouldn’t be anywhere near the hiring process of the next FBI Director. His role will jaundice the entire process, if it hasn’t already.

In order to ensure the American people can have faith in the impartiality of the investigation, it must be conducted far from the reach of the White House. It is the overwhelming view of my caucus that a special prosecutor should now be appointed to conduct the investigation into the Trump campaign’s ties to Russia.

This special prosecutor should be appointed by the highest ranking civil servant at the Justice Department. Mr. Rosenstein and other political appointees should not be the ones who decide on a special prosecutor, lest that decision be influenced, or otherwise made at the direction of the administration. I thank my colleague from California, Senator Feinstein, for speaking so eloquently on this proposal.

In addition, there are several things that should happen here on Capitol Hill that will help get us to the bottom of the events this week.

First, Mr. Comey should testify before Congress. There are so many questions that only he can answer. So I applaud Senators Burr and Warner for inviting him to appear before the Intelligence Committee next week. It was the right thing to do. We ought to hear from Mr. Comey, and I urge Mr. Comey to come and tell the whole story.

Second, Attorney General Sessions and Deputy Attorney General Rosenstein should make themselves available to Congress. I am renewing my request of the majority leader to call an 11-Senator, bipartisan I believe, to answer the questions swirling about from Tuesday night’s firing. Attorney General Sessions and Deputy Attorney General Rosenstein should appear separately and partially in a classified setting if necessary, but they must come.

Mr. Rosenstein has played a central role in all of these events. He could help clear up questions about where the decision to fire Mr. Comey originated. So later today, separate and apart from my request that he come before the Senate, I will be sending Mr. Rosenstein a letter with a list of questions for him to answer publicly. America needs to hear them. Many Democrats voted for Mr. Rosenstein a few weeks ago because he had a reputation for integrity. He assured us he would be an independent force inside the Department of Justice, and 94 Senators for integrity. He assured us he would be an independent force inside the Department of Justice, and 94 Senators voted for him. If the events of last week have made many of us question that belief, I hope my Republican colleagues see the wisdom and value in our request and respond appropriately by the end of the day.

CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW ACT RESOLUTIONS

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, just a word on the majority’s use of the Congressional Review Act. The window for using the CRA is closing this week. I heard the majority leader touting the 13 CRAs the majority passed this year.

I want to make two points. First, with respect to the majority leader and the President claim, these CRAs are not a huge accomplishment. They simply overturned rules passed at the very end of the Obama administration. They hardly constitute a legislative agenda. In fact, the use of the CRA shows just how little this majority and this President have been able to accomplish in the first 100-plus days. The fact that they are bragging about these highlights how little else they have accomplished legislatively.

Second, the CRAs are designed to help special interests against the interests of working Americans, belying all the promises President Trump made when he campaigned. Let me give some examples. One of them is on foreign oil bribery. One of them is on a retirement rule. One of them is on stream protections. One is on mentally-ill access to guns. In each of these, it is a narrow special interest who pushed it, not a demand from the American people. Which Americans say “Make it OK for our companies to bribe foreign oil companies or pollute our streams” or “Give the mentally ill access to guns”?

These are narrow interests in each case.

Let’s be very clear about this. The CRAs Republicans passed are not rolling back burdensome regulations. Oh, no. They are giveaways to Big Oil, Big Gas, Big Coal, Big Mining, and wealthy special interests.

The most indefensible one of many is the one on a retirement rule. If localities or States want to set up systems whereby working people want to put money away for their retirement, why not? It doesn’t hurt anybody. It doesn’t require them to do anything. And these days where fewer and fewer Americans have pensions from their companies, it is what is needed. But

EXECUTIVE SESSION

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to executive session to resume consideration of the Lighthizer nomination, which the clerk will report.

The senior assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Robert Lighthizer, of Florida, to be United States Trade Representative, with the rank of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. By unanimous consent, the mandatory 90-day provision has been waived.

The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the nomination of Robert Lighthizer, of Florida, to be United States Trade Representative, with the rank of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, shall be brought to a close?

The yeas and nays are mandatory under the rule.

The junior assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 81, the nays are 15.

The motion is agreed to.

The Senate from Wyoming.
I can tell my colleagues this is just the beginning. These resolutions are just one tool that we have to strike down bad regulations. There is much more that Congress can do and will do, and there is much more that the Trump administration can do.

The administration has already made it clear that the bureaucrats in Washington are not in charge anymore. I plan to make sure the Trump administration keeps up the pace and tosses some of the worst regulations and rules into the garbage where they belong. A good place to start would be for the new Interior Secretary, the Secretary of the Interior, to throw out another rule that makes it more difficult to produce American energy. This regulation supposedly tries to reduce how much methane gets lost in oil and gas production. There is always some unprocessed natural gas that gets released at gas and oil wells. Energy producers try to gather up this gas and then ship it to a processing plant where, of course, it can be sold. It can be used by customers, and taxes are paid on it that go to state and local governments, as well as money that is raised by the sales for the companies themselves.

To gather methane, producers need small pipelines. They need these small pipelines to collect the unprocessed gas from the wells and to get it to the processing plant. Here is the problem: We don’t have enough of these gathering lines, but you have to have gathering lines, the only option is for that gas to get burned, and that extra natural gas will escape into the air.

So what do the bureaucrats in Washington say? They could have addressed the real reason this gas is being lost; that is, the fact that they haven’t allowed enough of these gathering lines on Federal land. Instead, they decided to write a regulation that makes it tougher for us to produce American energy here, which the Obama administration blocked the permits to build the gathering lines.

So this methane rule is a terrible regulation. It is redundant. It is unnecessary. I believe it is illegal, and it needs to go. Secretary Zinke should wipe the slate clean and get rid of this outrageous rule immediately. He should also order the bureaucrats who work for him to start approving more of these gas-gathering lines. That is what really need. We need to make energy as clean as we can, as fast as we can, and do it in ways that do not raise costs for American families. We need to balance thoughtful regulation with a growing economy. We can have both.

The Obama administration absolutely failed to strike the right balance. The Trump administration and Congress have a lot more we can do to make sure we get the balance right.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina, Mr. Tillis. Mr. President, I will be brief. I think the Senator from Oklahoma is going to go into some additional details, and the Senator from Wyoming did a great job of summarizing some of the positive results that have come from our actions. I want to refer to his resolutions of disapproval for regulations that we feel were an overreach.

When we went through the 14 votes—we actually had 15, but we were not able to succeed in 1 last regulation of disapproval yesterday—there were arguments put forth against our disapproving these regulations. It was as if we were completely deregulating the subject matter area that we were focused on, but that was not the case. What we were trying to do is eliminate the duplication and the costs associated with layering regulations on top of regulations.

We have a lot of discussion around here about tax reform, and we need to do that, but if we look at the regulatory burden on businesses and homeowners and State and local governments, then that is surely a much bigger problem. We need to implement regulations, and there is a costly, complex, wrong way to implement regulations.

So I am proud we were able to get 14 resolutions of disapproval completed. I think that there were some that were not necessary. They are obviously areas that if Congress ever needed to act, we could go back and implement regulations, if necessary.

What we ended up doing through this action, the one you have the option to pass, the gathering lines, the only option is for that gas to get burned, and that extra natural gas will escape into the air.

So what do the bureaucrats in Washington say? They could have addressed the real reason this gas is being lost; that is, the fact that they haven’t allowed enough of these gathering lines on Federal land. Instead, they decided to write a regulation that makes it tougher for us to produce American energy here, which the Obama administration blocked the permits to build the gathering lines.

So this methane rule is a terrible regulation. It is redundant. It is unnecessary. I believe it is illegal, and it needs to go. Secretary Zinke should wipe the slate clean and get rid of this outrageous rule immediately. He should also order the bureaucrats who work for him to start approving more of these gas-gathering lines. That is what really need. We need to make energy as clean as we can, as fast as we can, and do it in ways that do not raise costs for American families. We need to balance thoughtful regulation with a growing economy. We can have both.

The Obama administration absolutely failed to strike the right balance. The Trump administration and Congress have a lot more we can do to make sure we get the balance right.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma, Mr. Inhofe. Mr. President, first of all, I appreciate the comments made by my colleague from Arizona. It is even more meaningful to me because during all of the time the regulations were coming on, I happened to be the one who was chairing the Environment and Public Works Committee, and we knew what was going to happen. I am almost speechless when I think about the success. We went 20 years only taking up 1 CRA, and then we end up passing 14 of them—all but 1. That is a huge, successful record. My colleagues understand, this gives us the opportunity for people who are answerable to the public—people who are elected and have to stand for elections—to have a part in what is sometimes considered to be the action of an unelected bureaucrat.

We have had great opportunities here. I think the “midnight” regulations—a term that is used quite often—so that a party going out of office, such as President Obama, can do a liberal—very proud liberal. I might add—wanted to get as many of his rules in at the last minute. We were able to come in and pass these in the time required. We were able to pass 14 of these, in addition to the other regulations and other methods of doing regulations, which I want to address a little bit. It is just not something that we really anticipated would happen.

Now, I am particularly proud because mine was the first CRA to be passed in 20 years, and that was the very first one that came from what President Obama wanted having to do with the oil and gas industry, but the fact that nothing passed in that long period of time just shows now that people are really taking away. They ask questions that make sense. They ask questions about war zones or someplace like that. I go there really for my therapy because they ask questions that make sense. We don’t get these questions in Washington. One of them I remember was in Shattuck, OK. When I was there, somebody said: Explain this to me. We have a person who was supporting the war with fossil fuels and he wants to do away with nuclear energy. Now, we are dependent upon fossil fuels, coal, oil and gas, and nuclear energy for 89 percent of the power it takes to run this machine called America.

Well, I am proud to say that the war against fossil fuels is over. The particular CRA I sponsored came out of the Dodd-Frank Act. It is successful in doing away with it, how do we run this machine called America?

By the way, overregulation is overregulation. When I talk to people back in my State of Oklahoma, if they are in... the banking business or the financial services business, they are concerned about the overregulation that comes from Dodd-Frank. If they are farmers, they are concerned about the regulation that would take the jurisdiction of regulating our water resources away from the Federal bureaucrats between control in Washington—it takes the power of the Chamber who are legitimately liberals away from the Federal bureaucrats as opposed to indiergation. They actually vacated the rule. That was a major accomplish-to the Federal Government. I was very proud that I had the courts on my side, for a change.

anyway, the SEC finalized the second rule under the authority of Dodd-

So thanks to the Congressional Re-

We passed other critical CRAs being debate.

There are two ways of doing away with these regulations, and one is through the Congressional Review Act. Some of the Executive orders, for example, are the WOTUS, the one we have been talking about; clean energy, something which repeals the Clean Power Plan and something which officially ended the war on coal. We ought to add the Executive order on rebuilding the military; the Executive order on the Keystone and Dakota Access Pipelines—we are all familiar with that and the ongong debate.

Some of the CRAs really aren’t talked about too much, and we are talking about regulations that came from the Obama administration that now have been done away with through use of CRAs—the educational rule mandating Federal standards for evalu-aturing teacher performance; the educational rule establishing a national school board, with an effort to get away from local control of the schools; the Interior rule that blocked Alaska from controlling their own hunting and fishing in that beautiful State; the So-ial Security rule that put seniors on a gun ban list—Second Amendment rights.

All of these things are very significant, and I am very proud, quite franky, of this body. With the exception of one, we passed all 14 of the CRAs, and I can’t think of any time that has been done in the past. So it is a great thing. It did put the power back in the hands of the people who are affected here, and I am very glad to have been a particippant in that.

Mental Health

Mr. BLUNT. Madam President, I want to talk today about a topic that I think is getting more attention now than it has gotten for some time—but still not the attention it deserves—and that is to talk a little bit in May, which is Mental Health Month, about mental health.

I was on the floor of the Senate the last day of October 2013, the 50th anniversary of the last bill that President Kennedy signed into law, which was the Community Mental Health Act. Through the Community Mental Health Act, you saw the facilities that were about to be closed, but the anticipated alternatives, in so many ways, never really developed. According to the National Alliance on Mental Illness, approximately one in five adults experiences mental illness in a given year, and one in five young people between the ages of 13 and 18 will experience severe mental illness sometime during their lifetime.

The National Institutes of Health says that one in four adult Americans has a diagnosable and almost treatable, mental health disorder, a mental behavioral health issue, and that one in nine adult Americans has behavioral health illness that impacts how they live every single day. So whether it is the statistic that relates to one in four or one in five or one in nine, this is an issue that affects the lives of lots of people.

Half of the children in that age group, 13 to 18, rarely get the help they need. After adults do, about 40 percent of adults who have behavioral health issues receive the treatment they need for that issue. I think we are beginning to make great strides on this. Certainly, the discussion has changed. The opportunity to treat mental health like all other health has changed.

In the 113th Congress, just a few years ago, Senator Stabenow from Michigan and I worked to get a bill passed known as the Exceptional Children’s Health, Access, and Treatment Act, or the ExCEA Program. That program is generally not available now to doctors who go on to specialize in the field. The National Health Service Corps student loan repayment program. are watching the students whom they get to know so well, to identify what students need help and what students don't. Often teachers get the first chance outside the child's home to see that they are clearly challenged or they are not dealt with at all.

So while we celebrate Teacher Appreciation Week at the very end of school and National Health Month, I hope we commit ourselves to look at these mental health issues for what they are.
They are health issues. They need to be talked about. The right thing to do is to deal with them.

I think we are seeing new and better things happen there, but we are not nearly where we should be yet. As I

Kennedy signed and 50 years later talk about how few of the goals set in that bill have been met in five decades by society, we really have a lot of catch-up, and I hope this is a month where people really think about telemedicine,

in mental health in ways we haven't before.

MEDICAL RESEARCH

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, before the Senator from Missouri leaves the floor, I want to say a word about him and the topic he raised today about health and, in this particular case, children.

Senator BLUNT and I have adjoining States, Illinois and Missouri. We have joined up, as well, on the issue of med-cal research. I salute him. Even though he is my Republican colleague,
I want to make clear that this is a bipartisan issue. He has made it a bipartisan issue, the good support of Senator ALEXANDER, Republican of Tennessee, and Senator MURRAY, Dem-crat of Washington.

The Senator from Missouri has done some amazing things. I want to say specifically for the Record that America owes him a debt of gratitude, as chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee that is responsible for the National Institutes of Health, the foremost public medical research agency in the world.

Let me tell you, with his leadership, what we accomplished. For two straight years, Senator BLUNT has been able to raise the appropriations for medical research at the National Institutes of Health by $2 billion or more.
The net result of that is that a $30 billion budget has grown to almost $34 billion. What does it mean? It means that researchers don't get discouraged.
They stay on their projects. They keep working to find cures.

Secondly, we are making dramatic advances in medicine because of it. His leadership has been absolutely essential. If there is ever a bipartisan issue, this is it. The Senator has been quite a leader in this regard.

I want to salute you for that while you are on the floor on the topic of healthcare and children.

Mr. BLUNT. Madam President, I appreciate my good friend's comments on this but also his commitment to seeing that we make this happen. As he mentioned, this is a bipartisan effort, but it is an effort that had about a 10-year lag, and we are doing our best to dramatically catch up with what is really an important time in healthcare research.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank my colleague from Missouri. I will tell you that he set a standard. I hope that both parties will agree that this is the starting point. For every year's budget, the starting point is at least a 5-percent real growth increase in medical research.

Thank you, Senator BLUNT, for your leadership.

HEALTHCARE LEGISLATION

Madam President, I also want to address an issue that came up in debate last week in the U.S. House of Representatives in connection with the repeal of the Affordable Care Act.
This is an issue where reasonable peoples can disagree about how exactly to run our healthcare system.

But at the end of the day, I hope that, and I think it will run in the United States, that we can all come together with some basic issues. Congress should not pass a law taking away health insurance coverage from Americans. Let's start there. Congress should work together on a bipartisan basis to find ways to reduce the cost of healthcare and health insurance premiums. I think we should agree on that too.

Third, we have a way to make sure that consumers and families have a guarded health insurance pool for health insurance that is there when they need it. Now, it was a little over a week ago when I became a statistic—not just a Senator but a statistic—in healthcare. I went through a heart catheter procedure in Chicago last week on Tuesday. After that procedure—which turned out just fine;

Mr. DURBIN. I am a statistic. I am a person in America with a preexisting condition. I have to check that box
that says I have had a heart procedure.
It is a significant thing. I checked a box
like that—diabetes, asthma, whatever
you checked—it ended up having a direct impact on what you paid for health insurance or whether you could even buy it. There were people who survived cancer—children, adults—who

Mr. DURBIN. I am a statistic. I am a person in America with a preexisting
condition. I have to check that box
that says I have had a heart procedure.
It is a significant thing. I checked a box
like that—diabetes, asthma, whatever
you checked—it ended up having a direct impact on what you paid for
health insurance or whether you could
even buy it. There were people who survived cancer—children, adults—who could not buy health insurance because they were too big a risk for health insurance companies.

Well, we changed that. The Affordable Care Act changed that and said:
Just because you have a preexisting condition—and one out of three Americans has one—you should not be denied coverage. Now, the House of Represent-aves passed a bill that allows Governors literally to take away that requirement in health insurance plans.
What are they thinking?
Do they think they are so darn lucky that they will never have an accident, that they will never have the cancer that ends up with a preexisting condition? It can happen to anybody, and it does. So what the House of Representatives did in this regard is a step backward.

They also changed the Medicaid system. People have trouble with what you say Medicaid: Oh, that is the same as Medicare. No, Medicare is for seniors and disabled people. Medicaid is a pol-cy of health insurance that is available for people who do not have a lot of money. Well, who qualifies for that?
Well, it turns out that the largest number of people who qualify for Medicaid are children and their moms.

In my State of Illinois, half of the kids who are born in the State are covered by Medicaid. So the moms, when they have their prenatal care or if they care for the babies are healthy, and the babies,
when they need care after the hospital, rely on Medicaid. But that is not the most expensive thing when it comes to Medicaid. The most expensive thing in Medicaid is what the House of Representatives did to the Medicaid Program across America? It ends up cutting over $800 billion in coverage. What it means in Illinois is that 1 million people—out of our 12.5 million population—are likely to lose their health insurance because of the action taken by the House of Representatives.

Even my Republican Governor in Illinois came out publicly and said what they did in the House of Representatives is disastrous for our State. It has a serious negative impact on the cost of healthcare and the coverage of health insurance. So why would we want to do that? Why would we want to take health coverage away from the groups I just mentioned?

Do we want to put less money in prenatal care? Well, if we do, we run the risk that children will be born with problems and challenges that could cost us a fortune and compromise their lives.

Do we want to put less money into supporting elderly people who are in nursing homes? Well, what are they going to do? What are they supposed to do? They stay in a place where they know it is good for them and with the right kind of care, does that mean the family now has to find a spare room for grandma or your mom? I hope not. These folks want to live in dignity, and they don’t want to be in a situation where they have to look for charity or beg for help from their families.

The third group is disabled people. For goodness sakes, we are lucky. We have people with disabilities who are doing amazing things today. But many who are in lower income categories need the help of Medicaid.

I had a group of hospital administrators come in to see me this week from Illinois. They were from every part of the State. If you go down to our beautiful, charming towns area, there are some great towns. One of them is Anna, IL, right near Cobden, IL. It is down in the southern end of our State. It is a very rural area with smaller towns.

Then I had administrators in the same group from Quincy, IL, from Springfield, IL, my home town, and from the city of Chicago. They all came here to tell me the same thing: The bill that passed the House of Representatives last week is a disaster when it comes to Illinois hospitals. They estimate they are going to lose up to 60,000 people who are currently working in hospitals in Illinois, because of that bill, and they are also going to see closures and reductions in services at these same hospitals while we see the Medicaid cutbacks take place.

Now, why is that? Let’s assume you have a small rural hospital in a town that is very rural. Do you value it very much because that means there is healthcare there, right next door, when you need it. You don’t have to drive 50 miles or more. You have it right there. You also know it is a great employer in your area. You also know, as well, that is the way you keep a lot of businesses in your town and attract new ones.

So what these hospitals are telling us is that the bill that passed the House of Representatives last week is a disaster to the Affordable Care Act. It is figure out how to make sure that we do not have to deal with. I would make that part of the Congress. Of course, I want to support the Medicare-type public plan, but I also know that the cost of healthcare has to be reduced. We have to come up with a better way to do it.

The result of it is that more and more pharmaceutical companies have their drugs being prescribed and more and more profits coming their way. So I, for one, think this is that consumer advertising is really hurtful in terms of the cost of healthcare in our country, and it is something we ought to deal with. I would make that part of the reform of the Affordable Care Act. The second thing we need to do is to make sure, I believe, that in every place in America, if you so choose, you can choose a Medicare-type public plan the next drug. But do I want these hedge funds and others—investment bankers—to buy out the rights to those drugs and drive their prices through the roof? That is not fair. It adds dramatically to the cost of healthcare.
to cover your family. Right now, it is private health insurance companies. You may choose to stick with the private health insurance company. That should be your choice. But you also ought to have a Medicare-type plan.

Overall Americans who are covered by Medicare, and most of them—the overwhelming majority of them—are happy with Medicare. What if we had a Medicare-type plan, a public option, available to every American to choose? I think that could reduce the cost of healthcare, and I think it is an option we ought to consider.

The third point I would make is that when we are dealing with reforming the healthcare system, we have one group in particular who is giving us a real challenge: individuals who are buying health insurance. The vast majority of Americans get their health insurance through their employment and many others through Medicaid—a program I described earlier—and then there is that group out there buying insurance on the open market. They are the ones who are seeing the runup in premium, and increasingly, they have to face, seeing copayments going up and the like. We need to find a way to deal with this group to give them affordable health insurance. There are a lot of ways to approach that, but that ought to be a target of what we do for the ones who are facing the toughest increases in health insurance.

It will just say this too: The good news about this conversation in the Senate is that it is finally reaching a new level. Now there are 12 Republican Senators who are meeting with Senator McConnell, and they are setting out to draw up a plan and try to pass it with just Republican votes. That is a goal that does not succeed, and I will tell you why. If we can do this on a bipartisan basis and sit down in good faith and work out these improvements to the Affordable Care Act, that is the best path forward. Senator Collins of Maine and Senator Cassidy of Louisiana are trying to start that conversation. I have said to them that if this is a good-faith effort not to repeal the Affordable Care Act but to repair it, I want to pull a chair up to the table.

Let's have this conversation. We may not agree, we may not be able to come up with the best solutions, but the bipartisan approach of solving the current problems within the current healthcare system is a much more sensible thing to do than to have an all-Republican bill trying to force its way through here. I hope that doesn't happen. It is far better to do this on a bipartisan basis, and I hope that is what will be done.

I will be going home, as I do regularly, to talk about the impact of the bill passed by the House of Representatives. I have just touched on some of the major points of it.

There is one thing I do want to mention, though. It has an age tax in it that many people between the ages of 50 and 64 may not be aware of. Currently the law says that there cannot be a disparity in premiums charged of more than 3 to 1; that is, the most expensive premium to insurance, no matter what their health or condition, cannot be more than three times the lowest premium charged. That is current law. The bill passed in the House of Representatives changed that dramatically. It says: Instead of 3 to 1, let's make it 5 to 1. Who is going to pay the difference? Folks who are older and those facing chronic illness.

If you are between the ages of 50 and 64, watch out for your health insurance premiums under this measure that passed the House of Representatives. That is something which should not have been included. That is why the American Association of Retired Persons has come out against this bill. It is another reason we have to ensure that the bill that passed the House of Representatives does not become the law of the land. To have this discrimination against people because of their age is unfair, and I agree with the American Association of Retired Persons on that score.

Let's hope we can find a bipartisan path to making healthcare even better in America. I don't care who takes the credit for it. If at the end of the day more families have peace of mind with health insurance that they can afford, that provides them quality care when they need it, that is something we need to achieve.

As I said earlier, I again learned this lesson last week. The lesson is simply this: If you go in for a diagnosis and learn that you need quality healthcare, you want to have health insurance. You want to have access to the best doctors and hospitals. Everyone in America wants that. That shouldn't be a privilege enjoyed just for the rich and lucky; that ought to be there for every single American.

I believe healthcare is a right, not a privilege. If we start off with that premise, we can build a healthcare system in this country that is still the envy of the world.

Mr. McCain, Madam President, today I come to the floor in opposition to the nomination of Robert Lighthizer to be United States Trade Representative, USTR. After close examination of Mr. Lighthizer, the administration's incoherent and protectionist message on trade is especially troubling because granting the Trump Administration additional legal authority to negotiate trade deals that Congress must consider under 'fast track' procedures. Given these circumstances, granting the Trump Administration additional legal powers through your confirmation without understanding how you or the Administration intend to use those powers would be irresponsible.

I am going to vote against the nomination of Mr. Lighthizer, and I urge colleagues to join me.

Mr. Van Hollen. Madam President, I support the nomination of Robert Lighthizer to be the United States Trade Representative.

Trade agreements should meet two tests: Does the agreement improve worker wages? And does the agreement add American jobs? For far too long, U.S. Trade Representatives have prioritized profits of large multinational organizations over the interests of the American people and our country as a whole.
The USTR should be someone who negotiates on behalf of the American worker and advances labor and environmental protections, and the USTR should be someone who works to enforce agreements. While I don’t agree with everything in Mr. Lighthizer’s statement, his summary suggests that he will be a USTR who will approach trade policies in the ways I have outlined. I hope the approach he takes going forward will reflect the positions he has taken in the past. I expect him to ask: Does it improve worker wages? How much? And does it add American jobs?

I believe that Mr. Lighthizer will bring fresh eyes to trade policy. I hope that he will focus on increasing transparency at the USTR. I hope that he will stand up for worker rights, both domestically and internationally. I hope that Mr. Lighthizer will work to enforce trade policies that protect the environment.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MORAN. Madam President, I come from a State that in some ways is very similar to yours, the State of Kansas. You get to see firsthand the impact of trade and exports on the people, on jobs, and on the economic opportunity of my communities. Our State economy relies on our ability to sell the products we grow and manufacture to people around the globe.

Strengthening our trade relationships and expanding market access for exports provides the United States a greater opportunity for Kansas today and those who follow us. One of my goals has always been to make certain that communities across Kansas remain a place in which the young men and women who grow up there find it to be a place to raise their families. Our ability to do that, especially in a small, rural community with agriculture and agricultural exports, is so important. It is a way that we can really put America first.

If our goal is to have an America that has strength and prosperity, we ought to continue to focus on improving our Nation’s economy. That is one of the things that I appreciate—we seem to be focused on such a significant way on our ability to grow an economy, I think we are poised for much greater things economically.

“Economics” may sound like just one of those words, but what that means is more jobs, better jobs, more secure jobs, jobs our children so that they can pay back their student loans. This country desperately needs the jobs in the communities across Kansas and around the country, and it is really what we call the American dream.

Trade, including our ability to sell the food and fiber we grow in our State, is a key part that drives our economy. The majority of the corn, sorghum, and soybeans grown in Kansas is exported to foreign markets. What that means is, if you weren’t doing that, nearly half of the acres planted in our State would be idle. That means the communities those farmers and ranchers live in and the ground would have half of the amount of economic activity that currently is occurring. American ranchers ship over 1 million metric tons of beef to consumers abroad. Thousands of acres of corn, sorghum, and soybeans being planted this spring across Kansas and the Nation will ultimately be exported. Approximately 95 percent of the world’s consumers live outside America’s borders. To reach those consumers, our Nation must produce a trade policy that reinforces existing export markets while continuously building and developing new ones. Without export markets, both production and prices would fall for farmers and ranchers, and rural communities supported by agriculture suffer. The revenue generated by exports not only keeps family farmers and ranchers afloat, it drives rural economies and supports small businesses.

The aerospace industry, which is so important in Kansas, relies on an integrated supply chain and strong trade policy. Wichita, KS—appropriately labeled the “Air Capital of the World”—manufactures more than half of the world’s general aviation light aircraft and business jets. Without trade, aerospace and manufacturing facilities in Wichita and surrounding areas and Kansas City and surrounding areas would not exist and workers in those factories would be left without job opportunities.

It is critical that we protect these jobs, many of which depend upon the United States having a strong economic relationship with Canada and Mexico. The North America Free-Trade Agreement, which went into effect in 1994, plays a significant role in supporting trade with those two neighboring nations.

Of course, the world and technology have changed since 1994 when that agreement was signed into law. There are areas of the agreement that can be improved and modernized. Many of those changes have been discussed and are issues that the United States, Canada, and Mexico agreed to during TPP negotiations, such as strengthening our intellectual property rights and new provisions for e-commerce.

If we work collaboratively with Mexico and Canada to address the issues with NAFTA, including the issues on which we strongly disagree, I am confident we can improve the agreement for all parties. But efforts to pull out of NAFTA completely or to weaken our trading relationship with Canada and Mexico during renegotiations would cause significant damage to the American economy. We must have willing negotiators sitting across the table when discussing NAFTA, and that starts with treating our neighbors as partners and friends. We need to treat these folks as friends, and we need to seize the opportunities we have.

Working together to improve NAFTA or building economic relations with our trading partners is not something that America should take a step back from enforcing the current rules. Oftentimes in the past, we have been too focused on striking trade deals and selling them to the public, but we haven’t necessarily enforced them. When those exaggerated promises did not come to fruition, many people lost confidence in those trade agreements.

America should strengthen its commitment to holding other countries accountable in order to inspire greater confidence from the American public in our Nation’s ability to reach a trade agreement that benefits us all.

Weakening our trade relationships will cause Kansans, our farmers and ranchers will no longer be able to pursue their careers and lifestyle. But with strong leadership and smart negotiating, I am convinced that America can improve our trade relationships in the world and continue to build on the economic successes we have today.

A robust U.S. economy that provides market opportunities for farmers, ranchers, and manufacturers, and jobs for workers is an essential pillar of America’s strength and well-being. Strong trade relationships, particularly with Canada and Mexico, are primary drivers of our Nation’s economy. We must protect those relationships and carefully consider changes in our approach to trade to be certain that Americans continue to benefit from economic opportunities that are created by a strong trade policy.

Madam President, our relationships with Mexico and Canada are important and in many ways determine the economic future of the people of my State at home.
Madam President, I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant legislative clerk proceeds to call the roll.

Ms. HIRONO. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, is so ordered.

RUSSIA INVESTIGATION

Ms. HIRONO. Madam President, these are not ordinary times. It is not ordinary for a winning Presidential campaign to be under investigation for collusion with a foreign adversary to influence our 2016 election and undermine our democracy. It isn’t ordinary for a President to fire the man responsible for conducting this very investigation. It isn’t ordinary for a President whose campaign is under investigation for having the important task of holding an Oval Office meeting with that country’s Foreign Minister and only invite the Russian press. This meeting came only a day after firing the person in charge of the Russia-Trump investigation. Yet we are left with the question: What should we do next?

The events of the past 48 hours have been shocking and concerning. Firing FBI Director James Comey in this manner, under this pretext, and at this time is a total disservice to the American people.

President Trump hopes the American people will believe he fired Director Comey because of how he treated Hillary Clinton during the Presidential election. This is really about protecting our democracy. This is not just about our Presidential election; it is about our democratic institutions. We have a profound testing the strength of our democratic institutions. We have a profound testing the rule of law here in America, which is more than a passing resemblance to Nixon’s Saturday Night Massacre, the infamous incident in October of 1973, when President Nixon ordered the Attorney General, Elliot Richardson, to fire the special prosecutor who was investigating Watergate. Nixon wanted to derail that investigation. The Attorney General, Elliot Richardson, refused to do so and resigned.

The firing of James Comey has more than a passing resemblance to Nixon’s Saturday Night Massacre, the infamous incident in October of 1973, when President Nixon ordered the Attorney General to fire the special prosecutor who was investigating Watergate. Nixon wanted to derail that investigation. The Attorney General, Elliot Richardson, refused to do so and resigned.

Day by day, we have seen more connections, bits and pieces, come to light—conversations involving Michael Flynn, former campaign manager Paul Manafort, Carter Page, and Attorney General Sessions.

The President insists there is no “there” there, but we have seen a pattern of conversations that we don’t fully understand. Was there coordination between the Trump campaign and the Russians to interfere in the U.S. Presidential election? Was there coordination? We don’t know. We know there were a lot of conversations, but what was the substance of those conversations? And who instructed those meetings to take place? What is the full extent of the Trump campaign collusions?

It is important that we get to the bottom of it because what every American understands is, if you contrive to call the times that we find ourselves in right now “interesting” would be certainly an understatement. The fact is, we find ourselves and our country in a moment that is profoundly testing the rule of law here in America, profoundly testing the strength of our democratic institutions. We have a President who has now engaged in a pattern of removing individuals from office who are executing their responsibilities under the law.

First, on January 30, just 11 days into the Trump administration, it was Sally Yates, the Acting Attorney General, who warned the administration that Michael Flynn had been compromised by his connections to Russia—an incredibly irresponsible act for her to take, but she was fired.

On March 10, it was Preet Bharara, the U.S. attorney in New York, who was reportedly investigating whether Secretary Price had profited from his position in Congress. He had been told he would be retained as the administration when suddenly he was fired.

Then this week, Tuesday, the President fired James Comey, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; James Comey, who was leading the FBI investigation into possible collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia in the Presidential election and who was scheduled to testify before the U.S. Senate this week; James Comey; who had just recently asked for more funding and resources in order to appropriately and substantially investigate Russian interference in our elections and possible connections to the Trump campaign; James Comey, whose investigation just handed down its first round of subpoenas.

The firing of James Comey has more than a passing resemblance to Nixon’s Saturday Night Massacre, the infamous incident in October of 1973, when President Nixon ordered the Attorney General to fire the special prosecutor who was investigating Watergate. Nixon wanted to derail that investigation. The Attorney General, Elliot Richardson, refused to do so and resigned.

Mr. MERKLEY. Mr. President, there is a Chinese curse that reads: “May you live in interesting times.”
with a foreign government to undermine the integrity of the American elections, you are conspiring to undermine the integrity of the American Government itself; that this is a terrible assault, a terrible crime against our country.

The President’s team says this firing of Director Comey had nothing to do with the Russia investigation. They did so through a series of documents, including a letter from Attorney General Jeff Sessions to the President, a memo to Jeff Sessions from Rod Rosenstein, and the President writing a letter to James Comey saying you are fired. So the memo from Rosenstein to the AG, the AG’s letter to the President, the President’s letter saying you are fired, and all of this claiming the basis of the investigation was because they were dissatisfied with the way James Comey had treated Secretary Clinton.

Now, that doesn’t really fit with the history we are familiar with. The President told audiences at a campaign rally in October: “I tell you what, what he did, he brought back his reputation.”

He is referring to James Comey. “He brought it back.”

And then when the President talked to “60 Minutes,” he said: “I respect him a lot,” when he was asked about Director Comey in the context of the actions he had taken in regard to Secretary Hillary Clinton.

We remember the chants at his rallies: “Lock her up.” I don’t think there is a single American—not a single Member of this body of 100 Senators—who believes for a moment—not for a microsecond—that the reasoning in this memo from the Deputy AG to the AG and the letter from the AG to the President and the President’s memo to James Comey, that the arguments made here were the basis of his firing.

If you believe the President woke up and said: I am so concerned about the way James Comey treated Hillary Clinton that he just has to be dismissed, then I have some oceanfront property in Arizona I would be happy to sell you.

We know from the reporting of the last few days that there is quite another story—an accurate story—about why the President fired James Comey. We now know the President had become frustrated with Director Comey because he wouldn’t go along with the story line the President wanted. The President wanted him to support his claim that the Obama administration had wiretapped Trump Tower, but Director Comey, caring about the integrity of his team at the FBI and the office, refused to do so. In fact, he clarified that there is absolutely no information that corroborates the President’s claim that Trump Tower had been wiretapped by President Obama.

We know the President was frustrated that the Director was doing his job to explore—that is, to investigate—Russia’s actions in our campaign, in our Presidential campaign, and that he was frustrated that there was looking into potential ties between his campaign and the Russians. He didn’t like a lot about the fact that Director Comey was asking for more resources to be able to do a thorough investigation.

Well, we know the result.

According to a report in the Washington Post this morning, President Trump made his final decision to fire the Director last weekend while he was golfing on his property in New Jersey. He then tasked the AG and the Deputy Attorney General to come up with a cover story.

This is an astonishing chain of events. What we have here is the President making a decision based on the appropriate efforts of the FBI to investigate a potential crime against the United States of America. What we have here is a President determining the investigation from the President himself, and he went to the AG and the Deputy AG to say: Help me do this. Help me derail this investigation. Give me a cover story I can sell to the American public.

And Attorney General Sessions complied—approved Attorney General Rosenstein complied.

Now, that is quite different than what happened in the Saturday Night Massacre. In the Saturday Night Massacre, when the President said to the Attorney General, Get rid of that special prosecutor so I can derail the investigation, the Attorney General stood up and said: No way, and resigned—the Deputy Attorney General resigned, but that is not what we have here. We have now our AG agreeing to develop a cover story for the President.

Now, this memo from Attorney General Sessions reads as follows: “As Attorney General, I am committed to a high level of discipline, integrity, and the rule of law to the Department of Justice.”

Let me ask this question, Where is the integrity in collaborating in a false story in order to derail an investigation, an important investigation to the very heart of the integrity of our system of government? Where, I ask the Attorney General, is the integrity in developing a cover story—a false story to cover up the action of derailing an investigation. That is the opposite of integrity.

To the Deputy, who also agreed to conspire in this deception of the American public, where is your integrity? Where was your commitment to justice?

So here we have events that are deeply disturbing not only in terms of the President’s decision to falsely mislead the American public but also to the Attorney General’s decision to collude in that and the Deputy Attorney General’s decision to support it. How is this not obstruction of justice?

If anyone here thinks for a moment that the President is going to nominate a new head of the FBI and ask that individual to conduct a robust investigation of Russia’s entanglement in the U.S. elections, I have another thought for you: It is not going to happen.

The President has deliberately, intentionally derailed this investigation, and Attorney General Sessions has no intention of making it go forward again.

We need to hear from these top officials. We need to have these officials come to the U.S. Senate, to a committee of the whole, to tell us their story and answer the questions about what they have just done to violate the integrity of the Department of Justice.

We need to have a special prosecutor. We know the head of the FBI, when we have one, is not going to be able to conduct a robust investigation. Therefore, we need a special prosecutor to get to the bottom of this. The American people deserve no less. The restoration of integrity of the U.S. Government deserves no less.

Lady Justice carries scales in her hands, and where is the blindfold? The whole point is that no one in America is above the law, no one—not Presidents or Vice Presidents, not AGs or Deputy AGs. Lady Justice up and down getting the facts, following the facts where they go, holding individuals accountable, when we get those facts, when we get that information.

That is what we need to do now. We need to get to the bottom of this. We need to have that special prosecutor. We need to make sure that if anyone did conspire with the Russians, they are held to the full account of the law because conspiring with a foreign country to undermine the integrity of U.S. elections is treasonous conduct. This is not a traffic ticket. This is a question of treasonous—conspiring with a foreign government, undermining the U.S. Presidential election.

I am deeply disturbed about this turn of events. I am deeply disturbed about the information we have. We need to get the full, the complete, the complete story, and make sure justice is served.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. RISCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that following the remarks of Senator MURPHY, there be 20 minutes of postcloture time remaining on the Lighthizer nomination, equally divided between the chairman and ranking member of the Finance Committee; that following the use or yielding back of that time, the Senate vote on the Lighthizer nomination; and that, if confirmed, the motion to reconside be considered made and laid upon the table, and the President be immediately notified of the Senate’s action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. RISCH. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. President, I thank Senator MERKLEY for his remarks this week, as this body has been rightly focused on the firing of James Comey.
I was the first & only potential GOP candidate to state there will be no cuts to Social Security, Medicare & Medicaid.

Mr. President, secret meetings have been happening amongst our Republican colleagues to draft a healthcare bill that could have devastating consequences on the people we all represent. I know we are about to have a vote on the floor, but I wanted to come to the floor to simply remind all of my friends on both sides of the aisle of the promises that have been made about this healthcare reform bill and the legislation that emerged from the House last week with devastating consequences. Those consequences include 24 million people losing coverage and people with preexisting conditions being subjected to $200,000 premium increases, potentially.

I just reference the words of the President of the United States, who told us repeatedly over and over again, during the campaign, that the result of this healthcare reform debate was going to be a healthcare system that was better. President Trump outlined that in a number of different ways. Here is what he said on April 30, just a few weeks ago. He said:

The healthcare plan is on its way. Will have much lower premiums & deductibles, while at the same time taking care of pre-existing conditions.

That is not true. That is a lie. The healthcare bill that emerged from the House of Representatives did none of those things.

CBO did not come out with its final estimate. It is unbelievable that the House voted on a reordering of one-sixth of the American economy without a CBO estimate, but we can pretty much be sure that the first CBO estimate will hold, in that it will say that premiums are going to go up by 15 to 20 percent immediately for everybody, and then for the nonyoung healthy and wealthy, premiums are going to go up even higher.

If you take care of preexisting conditions, it did the opposite—allowed every State to be able to walk away from the protection of the Affordable Care Act, which makes sure people with preexisting conditions, which could be one-third of all Americans, can’t be subject to higher rates, and it substituted that requirement with a high-risk pool which is dramatically underfunded to the point that it is laughable, in the opinion of many healthcare economists.

Here is what Donald Trump said earlier this year:

We’re going to have insurance for everybody. People covered under the law can expect to have great healthcare... Much less expensive and much better insurance for everybody.

CBO says 24 million people will lose their insurance, and that number might be higher when the new estimate comes out. This wasn’t true. This was a lie.

Finally, the President said, during the campaign:

We’re going to have insurance for every single one of these promises.

I yield back.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there are 20 minutes of postcloture time remaining, equally divided between the chairman and the ranking member of the Committee on Finance, prior to a vote on the Lighthizer nomination.

The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I thank my colleague and good friend, Chairman HATCH, for his courtesies. We have worked very closely together on this nomination. This was a challenging task, and I thank Chairman HATCH for his cooperation.

Mr. Lighthizer needed a waiver because he had represented foreign interests. It was extremely important that we work with Chairman HATCH and other colleagues to address the enormous needs of the miners, and we had a whole host of Members with a variety of extremely important trade issues—matters like steel, aluminum, and digital goods in our part of the world; we also care about softwood lumber tremendously.

Chairman HATCH and I worked with all the members of the Finance Committee. It was a unanimous vote, and I thank him for his cooperation.

We have talked a little bit about trade and what a modern trade policy is going to look like. The Lighthizer discussion is the beginning of the debate on trade in this Congress, and I have tried to be clear about my agenda. My agenda is to create more red, white, and blue jobs in America—high-skilled, high-wage jobs. Very often, the trade jobs pay better than do the nontrade jobs because there is more value added in them; there is a higher level of productivity. So my view is, as we set out on this journey to get more high-skilled, high-wage jobs, look to Asia where there are going to be 1 billion middle-class people there in a few years. What we ought to do is focus on growing them in the United States, making them in the United States, adding value to them in the United States, and then shipping them somewhere. That is my idea of a modern trade agenda.

So far, the administration’s trade agenda amounts to a muddle of 140-character tweets, mixed messages, and overhyped announcements that seem to be backed by not much substance. I think we are going to have to put together a coherent strategy quickly to promote our exports and fight back against trade cheats. That is not exactly what we have seen from the administration to date.

We can almost suffer whiplash from the reports about what happens with various trade deals. Late at night, it was reported that the President is about to pull the United States out of NAFTA; then suddenly there is another report saying he has changed his mind after a conversation with the Canadians. Next, at a moment of extreme tension on the Korean Peninsula, it is reported that the President is threatening to pull out of the U.S.-Korea trade agreement. Then suddenly the threat is walked back. So the President has made some major statements with respect to trade deals on the books, but he has yet to give us much in the way of specifics on how he would like to bring that about.

If one is trying to run a business in Oregon or around the United States that exports to foreign markets, it is pretty hard not to feel rattled and confused by some of the President’s statements and tweets about trade. One might even make the decision not to invest and not to hire additional workers. I hope the President will soon see that some of the uncertainty and confusion that has been stoked as a negotiating tactic is not a recipe for creating red, white, and blue jobs. I do think Robert Lighthizer knows what the challenge is really all about, and I want to tell him I have appreciated our conversations. He is a real pro at this. I have appreciated his views on digital goods, which I think are so important to our burgeoning technology sector, and his views on Canadian lumber.

I would also like to state at this time that I think very highly of Secretary Ross. He has been very constructive in our conversations, particularly on Canadian softwood lumber.

 Obviously, the U.S. Trade Representative will lead our country in trade negotiations, and that will be Mr. Lighthizer’s role. The bulk of the expertise of trade does reside within his office. When Mr. Lighthizer is confirmed, as I hope he will be and expect he will be, this expertise will no longer be silent. I will wrap up simply by way of saying that the United States may be the world’s largest economy, but it represents only 4 percent of the world’s consumers. Red, white, and blue jobs in the United States depend on our ability to sell to the other 96 percent. The number of middle-class households around the world is going to double over the next decade. This represents a lot of potential buying power for the American brand, the Oregon brand. The fact is, over the world we love buying the goods and the services we make. It is going to take a lot of hard work to smash through the barriers that block American-made goods and fight back against trade cheats.

Lastly, the trade rules in many particulars are out of date, so we have a lot of work to do to promote labor rights, combat human trafficking, crack down on trade in illegally taking wildlife and endangered species, and get the trade system updated so it includes modern tools like digital goods and small businesses that now have an international reach, which is especially important. The trading system has to respond more quickly to countries that break the rules or are unfairly producing basic commodities, such as steel and aluminum. This is especially true with respect to China.

As policymakers, we must continue to take an honest look at the trade rules and fix what doesn’t work so that American workers aren’t left behind. It is long past time to invest more resources in monitoring, investigating, and enforcing our country’s obligations, including China’s. The United States must respond more aggressively and more rapidly to threats to U.S. workers and businesses.

There was a recent example of how this is done right when the Commerce Department said “enough” to Canada’s unfairly traded softwood lumber. The steps the Commerce Department took were undeniably warranted after mill towns in Oregon and many other States over the next decade. This represents a circumstance in which our trade representative will be negotiating trade agreements with countries in which the President or his family have active business interests, whether it is trade-related golf courses or construction deals. I have introduced a bill requiring the President, when initiating trade negotiations, to disclose whether he has business interests in the country that we will be negotiating with. I intend to press this issue as trade negotiations move forward. Trade should be about fighting on behalf of American workers and businesses. It is not about the President’s bottom line.

Finally, on an issue that has been closely related to this nomination, I want to commend several of my colleagues for working together to provide relief to retired mineworkers regarding their healthcare costs. Senator MANCHIN has been a crusader on behalf of the mineworkers. Hardly a week went by over the last several months when I didn’t hear from JOE MANCHIN about how important it was to get the mineworkers the healthcare benefits they have earned. And he has worked hand-in-hand with Senators BROWN, CASEY, and WMAN, all of whom serve on the Finance Committee. Chairman HATCH deserves thanks for working with us to get this across the finish line as well.

I see that my good friend, Chairman HATCH, is here to make his remarks. I thank him for the cooperation he has shown. I think the interests of both sides in processing this nomination have been advanced.

A lot could have gone awry here. We had challenges with getting the waiver Mr. Lighthizer needed. We needed the space to make sure the miners were protected. Members had strong views.

I thank Chairman HATCH for the diplomacy and cooperation he showed me and our side. I think that is why there was a very large vote for Mr. Lighthizer in the committee. I will be voting aye this afternoon and look forward to the Chairman’s wrap-up remarks.

The PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

S2905

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE
Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I thank my colleague, who is an excellent person to work with. We enjoy each other and enjoy working together. We are getting a lot done, and I appreciate his kind remarks here today.

I rise today in support of the nomination of Robert Lighthizer to be the next United States Trade Representative. Mr. Lighthizer was reported out of the Finance Committee unanimously—Democrats and Republicans—and I hope he receives a similarly strong bipartisan vote here on the floor.

By statute, Congress has designated the USTR as the primary official for developing and coordinating U.S. trade policy, advising the President on trade, and leading international trade negotiations. The USTR must also report directly to and consult closely with Congress on a wide range of issues affecting international commerce. The USTR is Congress’s first and most important point of contact when it comes to trade policy. Therefore, in order for Congress to have an effective voice in shaping our Nation’s trade agenda, we need to have a fully staffed and functional USTR office.

For that reason, I have been very critical of the pointless and unprecedented delays we have faced in filling this vacancy, in filling this position, due to some unreasonable demands from some of my friends on the other side of the aisle. This delay has served only to weaken Congress’s position in trade policy and has hampered our ability to provide the new administration with substantive input. Despite this ill-advised delay, I am pleased that Mr. Lighthizer’s nomination has finally been brought to the floor, and I thank my colleagues for that.

Mr. Lighthizer’s years of experience in public service, including as staff director for the Senate Finance Committee, Deputy USTR during the Reagan administration, and in private practice, make him extremely well qualified to serve as our Nation’s representative. Mr. Lighthizer’s knowledge and experience will be vital to his service in this position and vital to our country.

Put simply, growing our economy and creating better paying jobs for American workers require increased U.S. trade. Toward that end, I have spoken to Mr. Lighthizer about the importance of removing trade barriers for American businesses, workers, consumers, and, where those barriers have already been removed, maintaining the status quo.

I know there is quite a bit of discussion going around about potential changes to the North American Free Trade Agreement. As I told Mr. Lighthizer, there are definitely opportunities to update and improve NAFTA, but it is important that the administration follow the spirit of the Hippocratic Oath: First do no harm.

Mr. Lighthizer and I have also discussed the importance of protecting U.S. intellectual property rights around the globe through strong enforcement and better rules in trade agreements. I believe he recognizes the importance of this priority, and I will work to ensure that this issue plays a prominent role in our future trade negotiations.

I have also made clear to Mr. Lighthizer that I believe consultation on trade policy between Congress and the administration is essential, particularly if our agreements are going to advance the standards Congress put forward in the Bipartisan Congressional Trade Priorities and Accountability Act of 2015, the statute that included the most recent reauthorization of trade promotion authority.

On this key point, I believe Mr. Lighthizer and I are in agreement. As U.S. Trade Representative, Mr. Lighthizer will have the task of holding our trading partners accountable, ensuring that Americans don’t pay more for the products their families need and helping American businesses and workers sell more of their goods and services around the globe.

This is not an easy job, but I am confident that Mr. Lighthizer is up to the task. As chairman of the Senate committee with jurisdiction over our Nation’s trade policy, I am committed to working with him to ensure that we advance a trade agenda that will grow our economy, create more jobs, and expand market access around the globe for American farmers, ranchers, and manufacturers.

Mr. President, I suggest we vote on Mr. Lighthizer.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. All postcloture time has expired. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the Lighthizer nomination?

Mr. WICKER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from West Virginia (Mrs. CAPITO), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON), the Senator from Alaska (Ms. MURKOWSKI), and the Senator from Alaska (Mr. SULLIVAN).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from West Virginia (Mrs. CAPITO) would have voted “yea.”

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PERDUE). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote? The result was announced—yeas 82, nays 14, as follows:

RUSSIA INVESTIGATION

Mr. BLUMENTHAL. Mr. President, there is a saying, an old adage, that history doesn’t repeat, but it rhymes. Over the past week, the dramatic firing of James Comey has recalled past events—history that involved one of the major scandals in our Nation’s past—the Watergate scandal.

In Watergate, the saying originated—another very common saying—that the coverup is worse than the crime. The danger now in the United States—the greatest country in the history of the world, with the most effective and fair justice on our planet—is that, in fact, there may be a coverup, and that the truth will be stifled, and people who should be held accountable will not be.

That is the danger.

In this instance, in comparison to Watergate, actually, the crime is extraordinarily serious. In Watergate, there was a two-bit break-in or burglary, and the coverup, in fact, involved obstruction of justice. What we have here is a deliberate, purposeful assault on our American democracy by the Russians through a cyber attack that involved, really, in effect, an act of war—a combination of cyber, propaganda, and misinformation spread deliberately; it involved hacking into both major parties and the spread of the results of that hacking for one of those parties—possibly influencing the outcome of the election.

The issue of whether and how the outcome of that election may have been influenced will be discussed and contended through the annals of history. Regardless of your point of view on what the impact was, the fact is, the criminal action by the Russians interfering with our election must be investigated aggressively and impartially. That means, anyone who aided and abetted them, must be held accountable. That is what the American people want. They want the truth uncovered, and they want to hold accountable anyone who collided with the FBI investigation, anyone who aided and abetted them, anyone who bears a responsibility and should be held criminally culpable.

The Watergate scandal was eventually successfully prosecuted. It took years to do so. The appointment of a special prosecutor was key to that effort. In fact, Elliott Richardson was not only requested, he was required to appoint a special prosecutor as a condition of his resignation. He was specifically directed by the Judiciary Committee of the U.S. Senate, and he agreed to do so. Archibald Cox was appointed, and then President Nixon fired Elliott Richardson as well as his deputy, William Ruckelshaus, because they refused to dismiss Archibald Cox.

The principle here—the rhyming of history if not its repeating—is that sometimes investigations come so close to power and the truth about the power that there is an effort to stifle them.

Watergate involved a two-bit burglary. This crime involved the theft of our democracy by the Russians and by others who may have colluded with him. So a successful investigation here goes to the fundamental principle that our elections will be free and credible, that they will be honest, without allegiance to meddling by anyone.

The firing of James Comey as FBI Director is reminiscent of what happened with the dismissal of two Attorneys General and then a special prosecutor because it raises the possibility that an investigation will be catastrophically compromised and undermined by the President of the United States.

Just last week, I asked James Comey whether the President of the United States might currently be a target of the criminal investigation. Director Comey responded that he could not say out that possibility because he cannot speak about targets freely and openly, but we know some of the individuals implicated are close associates of the Trump campaign, including Michael Flynn, Carter Page, Roger Stone, and Paul Manafort. Each had different roles; for example, Paul Manafort was a leader of the campaign.

We know that subpoenas have been issued from a grand jury in the Eastern District of New York for materials relating to Michael Flynn and to his associates. We know that then-Deputy Attorney General Sally Yates went to the White House and warned that he might be vulnerable to blackmail because he had lied to the Vice President.

We know also that very possibly he lied to the FBI. He deceptively omitted from materials or responses he gave in his security clearance information, about his contact with the Russians and the Turkish Government and that he may have committed other very serious violations of criminal law, punishable by years in prison. That investigation is ongoing now.

As I speak of the U.S. Senate, my hope is that agents of the FBI are doing their work, as they have done for decades, with integrity and determination. And I know the work the FBI does, having worked with them as the U.S. Attorney in Connecticut. It is not only one of our premier law enforcement agencies, there is none finer in the world. I have confidence that they will continue this investigation successfully, meaning that they will achieve a just result, if there is the right leadership.

That is why I believe now there is no question that an independent special prosecutor must be appointed. There is no longer any doubt that an independent special prosecutor is necessary for the appearance and credibility, the appearance of integrity, and the credibility and objectivity of this investigation.

The different contradictory stories surrounding the firing of James Comey emphasizes this point. Initially, the decision was made by Rod Rosenstein as Deputy Attorney General, but of course it involved the Attorney General, Jeff Sessions, who never should have been involved because he was recused from the investigation. The reason given by Deputy Attorney General Rosenstein involved the Hillary Clinton emails and statements made by Jim Comey 10 months ago—an explanation that defied belief, a pretense that was laughable and especially unfortunate—even tragic—from a career professional prosecutor like Rod Rosenstein.

Well, that explanation now has been supplanted; in fact, as recently as this morning, in an interview the President gave to Lester Holt of NBC, acknowledging that he made the decision because he had lost faith in Jim Comey. Never mind that he reaffirmed that faith shortly after his inaugural. Never mind that he praised Jim Comey on the campaign trail. His reasons for dismissing Jim Comey also defy belief.

This set of shocks to the core the trust all of us should have in our justice system, in the integrity of our public officials, in the capability of that system to uncover the truth and hold accountable anyone who has violated the law.

President Trump has now fired not one but two high-ranking Justice officials after they told him about suspicions that he or his associates have broken the law: first, Sally Yates and now Director Comey.

Attorney General Sessions has witnessed through his role in the Comey firing that even after he has recused himself from an investigation, he will help the President punish Justice Department officials who are pushing that investigation forward.

Maybe most disappointing, Deputy Attorney General Rosenstein—the man who has led the Russia investigation—has permitted himself to become a pawn in President Trump's game. His credibility and integrity may well have been irredeemably sacrificed. The only way for him to restore it is to appoint a special prosecutor. That power is his alone. The rules and regulations of the Department of Justice not only permit it, in my view, the standards of ethics require it because he now is irrevocably conflicted.

President Trump, Attorney General Sessions, and Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein want Americans to believe Comey was fired because he publicly discussed his investigation into Hillary Clinton. That kind of statement betrays contempt for the intelligence of the American people because we remember President Trump applauding Director Comey's decision to discuss the Clinton investigation. He even used his letter firing Director Comey to publicly discuss the details of an FBI investigation, saying he has been told three times that he is not under investigation—albeit details I find very hard to believe.

He has called this investigation a charade. He has called the allegations of Russia meddling and Trump associates' collusion with it a hoax. He has belittled and demeaned not only the judges of our Federal bench, but, by implication, the hard-working men and women of the FBI who are doing an investigation which he says is "a tax-payer-funded charade." That statement is a disservice to the FBI—a nonpolitical, nonpartisan law enforcement agency without superior in the world. They deserve and need a special prosecutor who can lead them in this moment of crisis.

Make no mistake, we face a looming constitutional crisis. The case of United States v. Nixon, which involved enforcement of subpoenas against the President, is no longer a matter of idle speculation; it is a real possibility.

What the FBI also needs now are resources to make sure that investigation is conducted fairly, impartially, objectively, and independently, with sufficient agents, staff, and other support. In fact, in my view, one of the precipitating factors in the firing of James Comey was his going to the Deputy Attorney General and asking for more resources. As a prosecutor, I know resources are the lifeblood of a successful investigation. An investigation deprived of resources cannot reach a just result; it will be strangled, stifled, and barren. And it is clear from the purpose of some in this administration, perhaps because it is coming close to people whom they want to protect.
Congress can and must use every tool at our disposal to make sure the investigation of the Trump administration’s and campaign’s ties to Russia and the potential ongoing coverup of those ties is affirmed. The true and independent special prosecutor is the only path we can choose. Our Intelligence Committees can produce findings and recommendations. An independent commission, which I support, can hold hearings in public and also produce a report. But only a special prosecutor can bring charges and hold accountable anyone and everyone who should bear a price.

On both sides of the aisle, we have said the Russians must pay a price or they will do again in 2018 what they did in 2016, but so should the people who aided and abetted and colluded with them. If they fail to pay a price, they will do it again, too, corrupting our system, undermining the rule of law, and imperiling our democracy.

If the President continues to object to an independent investigation or special prosecutor, people of good will on both sides of the aisle must stand up to him and demand one. I am encouraged by some of what my Republican colleagues have told me over the last 24 hours.

I believe we are at a rhyming moment when the integrity of our justice system and our democracy is at stake. People, regardless of their political affiliation, are coming forward to recognize the gravity of this moment, and to stand up and speak out. I hope my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will do so.

We may disagree about a lot of things, but on this point, we should agree fundamentally. Part of our obligation is to call before us Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein and, separately, Attorney General Jeff Sessions, as well as former FBI Director Jim Comey to hear from them their views of this tragic and terrifying episode in our history. This firing must be a subject for our investigation. We owe it to the American people.

I thank my colleagues in advance for proving that this investigation is no charade. It is no hoax. It is deadly serious, and the failure to appoint an independent prosecutor could be deadly to our democracy.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

HEALTHCARE LEGISLATION

Mr. CASSIDY. Mr. President, before we as the Senate right now, aside from issues Mr. BLUMENTHAL referred to, is the repeal and replacement of the Affordable Care Act.

I am a physician, and I have been practicing in hospitals for the uninsured for the last 25 years. I would like to in one sense say that gives me special standing to speak about this issue, but in reality, it does not.

Senator Moran from Kansas spoke up the other day at our lunch. He said that healthcare is like no other issue.

He spoke of a friend of his approaching him at church with tears rolling down her face. Her mother had a preexisting condition, and she was so concerned that we get this right.

I don’t need to say I have special standing, being a physician. We all have special standing from living, having families and friends who—sooner or later—healthcare will affect the family.

The Affordable Care Act for many is not working. Premiums are going sky high.

Two or 3 days ago, I had communication with someone from San Francisco. Her young family has a $20,000-a-year premium, a $6,000 deductible for each member of the family—in San Francisco, already paying so much for housing, food, and transportation, and $20,000 on top of that for a family of relatively modest income.

Then I spoke to someone in Washington, D.C. His family’s premium is $24,000; they have a $13,000 deductible. He said: I am out $37,000 before my insurance kicks in. I reassured him that his colonoscopy would be free. I don’t think he thought that funny.

Then a friend of mine who last year in Louisiana—his quote for a policy for himself and his wife, 60 and 61, was $39,000 for 1 year—$38,000 for 1 year—with a deductible.

Now we are being told there will be premium increases this coming year. In Connecticut, they just announced they are going to be 15 to 35 percent higher. In my own State, I have been told they may approach 30 to 40 percent higher, although that is not certain.

The reality is that premiums have become unaffordable. President Trump campaigned on this. There were four things he told the American people. He said he wanted to cover all, care for preexisting conditions, eliminate the Affordable Care Act mandates that people hate so much, and lower premiums.

I would like to say I think it is part of President Trump’s intuitive genius. Whatever your political affiliation, he certainly has an intuition sometimes about how things work. Of course, the way you would lower premiums is that you would cover all, and by covering all, you expand the risk pool, which then lowers premiums for those with preexisting conditions but keeps them lower for the rest of us.

Folks ask how you can do that without mandates, and I say you can do it through the mechanism of the Cassidy-Collins—The Patient in San Francisco, which is to say you have an auto-enrollment feature.

By the way, here is President Trump. He said it many times, but here he is in the Washington Post on January 15, 2017, just before he takes the oath of office:

"We’re going to have insurance for everybody," Trump said. "There was a philosophy in some circles that if you can’t pay for it, you don’t get it. That’s not going to happen with us.”

You cannot have a stronger statement from a fellow who is about to rise to be inaugurated and gives a speech in which he speaks passionately about the forgotten man and the forgotten woman. President Trump pledged to remember them.

The question is: How do you lower premiums? How do you fulfill President Trump’s goals?

There are several ways to lower premiums. I just described one, where you fulfill the other parts of his contract that the voter, which you can do, and by doing so, you increase the size of the risk pool, and therefore you lower premiums. There is another mechanism. You can put in price transparency and do other things to lower the cost of medical care, which in turn lowers the cost of healthcare premiums. But there is one way which is not so good. One way that you can lower cost is to have a crummy policy that hardly covers anything. You think you are getting a deal in the front end because you pay lower premiums, but then you or someone in your family gets sick, and it is not such a great deal after all.

I was asked about this on a Sunday morning show and spontaneously came up with something called the Kimmel test. Jimmy Kimmel, the late-night comedian, spoke of his son being born. We can all imagine—this happened 2 weeks ago—his child was born. I suspect somebody is videoging it. It is going to be a moment of celebration. As the child emerges and everybody wants to lean forward and hand the child to the mother and the father to hold and cuddle, instead, the doctor and the nurse notice that the child is blue—"blue" meaning he is not getting enough oxygen. It is quickly realized that something is profoundly wrong.

Instead of mother and father hugging and bonding with the child, they are pushed to the side. The code blue call, which means this child will die if something is not done immediately.

I was not there, but I have been in similar situations. They are being asked to sign forms which would allow this child—their child whom they have not yet held—to be transported by helicopter across Los Angeles to have emergency surgery that day and being told that if they do not sign this form, that child will die.

Now, Jimmy Kimmel pointed out that he is a millionaire, he could afford it, but he also pointed out: Others, not so much.

I think that brings us back to what President Trump said. President Trump said:

"We’re going to have insurance for everybody. There was a philosophy in some circles that if you can’t pay for it, you don’t get it. That’s not going to happen with us.”

The Jimmy Kimmel test: We will protect those with preexisting conditions, but we will do it by lowering premiums and not by giving crummy coverage but, rather, by having adequate coverage. So if our approach passes the Kimmel test, then we feel it is a way to go.
Now, how do we go from here?

We can recognize that premiums are too high for middle-class families. They can no longer afford it, and that is before the premium increases, which are about to occur.

I will also say that as to the way the Affordable Care Act was passed—not blaming or praising anyone—that only one party was engaged is not the path forward. History says that any time there is an important social legislation that has an enduring effect in the United States, both parties engage.

I want this to change. I would challenge my Democratic colleagues to become engaged. Some have said: Oh, my goosh, Republicans are doing this through reconciliation; isn’t that terrible?

I would say it presents opportunity. We don’t need 12 Democrats; we don’t need 8 Democrats. We could have three Democrats or four Democrats. At no time do we have something perhaps a little different than the Affordable Care Act.

I am not pointing fingers. I am just observing that it would only take three or four Democrats to break ranks, to step across the aisle, and to ask for what they would need. This is not: You come to a meeting of the minds so that the people of any State are more important than the political pressure I may feel. They will step forward to influence the final product.

We know that if folks come in from the other side of the aisle, we will have a different product than if it is only among Republicans. If Republicans had participated in the passage of the Affordable Care Act, we would have had something perhaps a little different than the Affordable Care Act.

I am not pointing fingers. I am just observing that it would only take three or four Democrats to break ranks, to step across the aisle, and to ask for what they would need. This is not: You come to a meeting of the minds so that the people of any State are more important than the political pressure I may feel. They will step forward to influence the final product.

We have an incredible opportunity before us to bring relief to those middle-class couples struggling with premiums that they can no longer afford and deductibles that they will never meet. If they don’t meet and can’t afford them and if they do not purchase the insurance, they are being fined and are accumulating resentment toward Washington because they are stuck with this. We can address that issue and at the same time fulfill President Trump’s pledge to cover all, caring for those with preexisting conditions, eliminating mandates, and lowering premiums.

We have a meeting of the minds so that we can come to the policy that fulfills President Trump’s pledge—his pledge to cover all, caring for those with preexisting conditions, eliminating mandates, and lowering premiums.

Without a hearing and discussion of the House-passed American Health Care Act, TrumpCare, I found that one of the sets of reasons really crystallized yesterday. The Democrats had a hearing, and we invited patients to come from around the country to talk about their healthcare experiences.

There were six witnesses in the hearing. One was a Virginian, a man named Michael Dunkley, from Alexandria. His story was a common one but a tough one. He was the caretaker for his wife, who has had multiple sclerosis for many years and then got diagnosed with cancer. He talked about trying to deal with being a full-time caregiver for a wife with multiple sclerosis and dealing with the Affordable Care Act and the unsustainable cost that it led to with his family. But after the Affordable Care Act, he was able to afford coverage for himself and his wife.

We heard from a mother from Indiana whose daughter was born with Down syndrome and how the medical bills connected to her child’s treatment forced her, first, to stop working because she needed to be a full-time caregiver. She described the pain of cuddling her newborn in her arms and going to the mailbox and pulling out a $64,000 bill and knowing that this is what the rest of my life is going to be like and the rest of my child’s life. Then she talked about how her family got relief because of the Affordable Care Act.

We heard from a witness who has multiple sclerosis, a woman who is now a substitute teacher. Because the State she lived in, Texas, didn’t expand Medicaid, she had to move to another State because she couldn’t afford health insurance to deal with a medical problem. So she chose to move to a State that had done Medicaid expansion, Maryland.

We heard other stories as well. These were painful stories.

(Mr. CASSIDY assumed the Chair.)

I say to the Presiding Officer, I give you credit for modesty. You are too modest. You do have an expertise in this. You do understand this. You have heard these stories before, and I had heard some of them, too, even without a medical expertise. What I found so troubling—and during the testimony of this mother from Indiana about her child Down syndrome how I could feel her tears rolling down my face—was this. I had heard stories like this before, but what struck me was that the House voted on this bill without caring about any of these stories, without listening to any of these stories, without allowing a process to address any of these stories. I bluntly said: The folks who voted for this bill in the House don’t care about the challenges you are facing. And when the House passes a bill without listening to you, that by some estimates could take health insurance away from 24 million people and could reimpose deep penalties on folks if they have preexisting conditions. And you watch people celebrate—celebrating it like it is a sports victory?

This is what I found so very troubling during the hearing yesterday—these there were no House Republican votes, were considered, and 121 by both Democrats testifying. Some 239 amendments hearings, and 181 witnesses from both 2009: bipartisan hearings, 100 hours of in history.

The Senate spent 25 days consecutively in session on healthcare reform, the second longest consecutive session that were proposed by Republicans.

The HELP Committee, where you and I serve, was every bit as active. They had an additional 47 bipartisan hearings, roundtables, and walk-throughs on health insurance. HELP considered hundreds of amendments during a monthlong markup, which is one of the longest in congressional history, and many Republican amendments were accepted as part of the process.

When the bill came from the two committees to the Senate floor in 2009, the final Senate bill that was passed in this Chamber included not one or two, not a few dozen but 147 amendments that were proposed by Republicans. This bill, the Affordable Care Act, was shaped by the Republicans. The Republicans decided, for their own reasons, to vote against the final product, but they offered amendments in good faith—147 of them were accepted. The Senate spent 25 days consecutively in session on healthcare reform, the second longest consecutive session in history.

The House did something similar in 2009: bipartisan hearings, 100 hours of hearings, and 181 witnesses from both sides testifying. Some 239 amendments were considered, and 121 by both Demoocrats and Republicans were adopted.

Again, in the House on the floor, there were no House Republican votes, but the bill was shaped by Republicans, amended by Republicans. There was a process that included two parties. I would suggest to you that the difference in the processes—an ACA proccess that included hearings, hearing from patients, the opportunities to have committee hearings, the opportunities for both parties to amend—led to a situation in 2010 where many stakeholder groups supported the Affordable Care Act: the American Medical Association, the AARP, the American Hospital Association, other groups, providers, consumers, busiesses, and other groups.

Compare that to what is the level of support for the bill as it passed out of the House. Patients oppose this bill: the American Cancer Society Cancer Action Network, the American Diabetes Association, the American Heart Association, the American Lung Association, the American Public Health Association, the American Society of Hematology, the Children’s Defense Fund, Families USA, the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, the National Breast Cancer Coalition, the Muscular Dystrophy Association, the National Right to Life Center, the National Multiple Sclerosis Sociey, and the National Organization for Rare Disorders. All of these groups rep-sent patients. All of these groups oppose the House bill that contained no input from patients and no meaningful bipartisan participation.

Doctors and nurses oppose the House bill: the American Medical Association, the American Nursing Association, the American Osteopathic Association, the American Academy of Pedidatrics, the American Association of Family Physicians, the American Congress of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, the American College of Physsicians, the American College of Rheumatology

Hospitals oppose the House bill: America’s Essential Hospitals, the American Hospital Association, and the Federation of American Hospitals.

There are groups fighting for women’s health, the National Family Planning & Reproductive Health Association and Planned Parenthood.

All of these groups oppose the bill that came out of the House without patient input, without a meaningful committee process, without the ability of Democrats to offer amendments.

Mr. President, I think that points us to a lesson, and I do think it is the same lesson that you spoke about a few minutes ago. Democrats have called for a bipartisan process to engage in fixes to the Affordable Care Act. I had been on the committee with you no less than a week. I have been trying to get on the HELP Committee this Chamber included not one or two, not a few dozen but 147 amendments that were proposed by Republicans. This bill, the Affordable Care Act, was shaped by the Republicans. The Republicans decided, for their own reasons, to vote against the final product, but they offered amendments in good faith—147 of them were accepted. The Senate spent 25 days consecutively in session on healthcare reform, the second longest consecutive session in history.

The House did something similar in 2009: bipartisan hearings, 100 hours of hearings, and 181 witnesses from both sides testifying. Some 239 amendments were considered, and 121 by both Demo-

But I deeply believe this: No bill will achieve those aims if it is purely done by one party. No bill will achieve those aims if it is cooked up and put on the floor without a meaningful committee process in HELP and without hearing from expert witnesses, without hearing from stakeholders, without hearing from patients, without hearing the kinds of stories we heard yesterday. If we wall ourselves off from the public presentation of the kinds of information as we are grappling with the most important spending decision anyone ever makes in their life, as we are grappling with the largest sector of the American economy, if we just rush to get this to the floor, the American public, if we just rush to get this to the floor, the American public.

So this is my hope. We want to work together, and the right way to work together is this: Send the House bill or a preferable bill, if you have it—your bill or a consensus bill that the group of 12 on the Republican side has. Put that bill in the two committees. Why not have this bill in the HELP Committee and the Finance Committee? Why not hear from patients and doctors and hospitals and nurses and insurance companies and small businesses that struggle to buy insurance for their employees? Let’s hear from some expert witnesses about what they like about the status quo or like about the new proposals, what they don’t like about them, and how we can fix them. Give us the opportunity to ask questions. Give us the opportunity to offer some amendments, hopefully some bipartisan amendments, to make this better. Let’s treat this at least with the seriousness it was treated in 2009. You are right to critique that the final vote—save the vote of Arlen Specter, who at the time he voted was a Democrat—that the final vote was par-tisan. You are right to critique that. We would want to go beyond that, but we do go back in both houses, we will not eliminate the opportunity for public input, eliminate the opportunity for committee action and amendments. We should be doing that in a full and robust way.

So I just stand on the floor today to say amen to the boards that you put up there—amen to those three pillars that should be the test of the work that we do in this Senate. And to pledge that if you put this in the committees where we serve and we have the opportunity to work together, that is the most natural place for us to work in a transparent and bipartisan way.

To do nothing is simply not to cross the aisle to work on something that will be rushed to the floor with no committee process—that is not really meaningful. But putting it in committees, where we can do our work in the light of day and hear from people like Michael Dunkley and the mother from Indiana and do it with the American public watching—now that is engagement. I guarantee if we do that, we will get to a better result, a result that will be better, a result that will be more likely to meet your criteria and mine, and a result that will be more likely to last.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

ALL-SENATORS BRIEFINGS

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, before the Senate adjourns for the weekend, I wish to address a few things related to the dismissal of FBI Director James Comey.

The story coming out of the White House about why Mr. Comey was fired conflicts and there are no good explanations for the change.

For 2 days, the White House implied that the decision to fire Mr. Comey either originated or was largely influenced by the recommendations from the Deputy Attorney General and the Attorney General. The Vice President of the United States spoke to reporters here on Capitol Hill and said that it was the President’s “decision to accept the recommendation of the Deputy Attorney General and the Attorney General to remove Director Comey.”

Those accounts, by the spokespeople of the President and the Vice President himself, were just blatantly and completely contradicted by the President himself on national television.

President Trump told NBC News that it was his decision to fire Mr. Comey, and he had made up his mind to do so before hearing from either the Attorney General or the Deputy Attorney General, in direct contradiction to what the President and his own press people were saying.

Well, which one was it? Did the Vice President mislead the public or did the President? When was the decision made to fire Mr. Comey, and what was the reason? And why did it take so long for the White House to get its story straight?

These are all critical questions, and the American people deserve answers. We need to understand the true nature of the events that led to Director Comey’s dismissal, why it happened, and what it means for the investigation into the potential collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia as we move forward.

This morning, I made a request of the majority leader to call an all-Senators briefing with Attorney General Sessions and Deputy Attorney General Rosenstein. Given the events of this week, and particularly after what the President said this afternoon, a briefing from these two officials before the whole Senate, where Senators from both parties can ask and get answers to the serious questions over us, is imperative for this body and for the American people.

The all-Senators briefing with the Attorney General and the Deputy Attorney General should be separate and partially classified, if necessary.

The need for these briefings is even greater now than it was this morning, given what the President said this afternoon. The rule of law, the separation of powers, and their strength—hallmarks of American democracy—are at stake.

Now, I have just heard from the majority leader that he will invite Deputy Attorney General Rosenstein to the all-Senators briefing next week. I asked the majority leader to do the briefing early in the week. It is a good first step, and I thank the majority leader for consenting to this request.

Mr. Hill today meeting with Members. He requested to meet with me, and I said I wanted to meet with him along with my 99 colleagues so Members of both parties were given the opportunity to question him on his willfulness to come talk to Congress, and I hope he will accept our bipartisan invitation from Leader McConnell and from me to brief the entire Senate next week.

My caucus still believes that Attorney General Sessions must be made available to the Senate in a similar capacity, given his reported role in firing Director Comey and helping select his replacement. His refusal to resign from the Russia investigation, his close involvement in these events warrants the Senate’s questioning as well, but I thank the majority leader for trying to set up the briefing with Mr. Rosenstein. It is very likely, I believe, that it will happen with Mr. Rosenstein’s consent, and I hope the majority leader soon comes to the right decision and grants our request to question Mr. Sessions as well.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COTTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

REMEMBERING LEO THORSNESS

Mr. COTTON. Mr. President, I am speaking tomorrow at an Air Force ROTC commissioning ceremony at the United States Military Academy. As I prepare these remarks, I have been thinking a lot about the airmen who have left more than contrails behind them—the men and women who served with such distinction that we still revere them to this day, those great Americans, the heroes of the sky.

The first name that came to mind, the name that resounded louder than almost any other is the great Leo Thorsness. So while I had the sadness of hearing about his passing last week. Whenever you hear such a legend has left the Earth, it is like a sudden crack of thunder in the dead of night. It wakes you up. It soberes you. It reminds you of what we have lost because Leo Thorsness was an American classic.

Born in Walnut Grove, MN, his childhood sounds as idyllic as his hometown. He joined the Boys Scouts and later went on to become a Eagle Scout. He met his wife Gaylee in the freshman registration line at South Dakota State College. They married 3 years later and had one daughter. Dawn. He joined the Air Force, went to flying school, and became a pilot.

Soon, he was a fighter pilot in both the Strategic and Tactical Air Commands. Looking back on his life, we can see Leo Thorsness was part of an era—those born during the Great Depression and the greatest of wars, put down roots and built the booming America of the mid to late 20th century.

Of course, Leo was not simply a part of his generation; he inspired it with his courage and self-sacrifice. For many Americans, the only number they remember from the Vietnam years is their draft number. But for Leo Thorsness, there are two numbers that stick out: 88 and 93.

It was on his 88th mission for the Air Force that he performed the noble deeds for which he would later receive the Medal of Honor. He was flying an F-105 Thunderchief with his weapons specialist, Harold Johnson. They were escorting fighter bombers targeting a North Vietnamese army barracks. They shot down a MIG, roughed up another, and had to hit two other MIGs. They were low on ammo and fuel, but they fought on. He continued to fire off MIGs and instructed a tanker plane to refuel another fighter. When he finally landed 70 miles south in Thailand, the fuel tank was on empty. It was a stunning act of bravery.

It was on his 93rd mission, just seven shy of completing his tour of duty, that Leo Thorsness was shot down. He was captured and spent 6 years in the “Hanoi Hilton”—6 years in the darkness. It was there that he met his mate, our colleague and future Senator, JOHN MCCAIN.

Imagining 6 years in such a terrible place, more than most people can handle, never mind 6 years. But Leo Thorsness endured; he saw the mission through. When he returned in 1973, it was to an astonished and grateful nation, but the man himself was unfazed. He called his wife after being released and said: “I would have called sooner, but I’ve been all tied up.”

He later went on to serve in the Washington State Senate and run for other offices. But his legacy is not one of the titles he won; it is the example he set.

He was quite a man, Leo Thorsness. And though we have lost him, we will keep his memory for a good long time to come.

Leo Thorsness, rest in peace.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate be in a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NOMINATION OF MARK GREEN

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, as ranking member of the Appropriations Subcommittee on the Department of State and Foreign Operations, I welcome the nomination of Ambassador Mark Green to be the next Administrator of USAID.

Ambassador Green brings a wealth of experience to this important position. He has been president of the International Republican Institute since 2014. In 2013, he was president and chief executive officer of the Initiative for Global Development, and before that, he served as senior director at the U.S. Global Leadership Coalition, a network of 400 businesses, nongovernmental organizations, policy experts, and others supporting the role of development in U.S. foreign policy. He served as the U.S. Ambassador to Tanzania from 2007 to 2009. While there, he led a mission of more than 350 Americans and Tanzanians and was ultimately responsible for some of the largest U.S. overseas development programs. Prior to his serving as U.S. Ambassador, Mark Green served four terms in the U.S. House of Representatives, representing Wisconsin’s 8th District.

Ambassador Green also served on the board of directors of the Millennium Challenge Corporation, after being appointed to that position by President Obama. He is currently on the Human Freedom Advisory Council for the George W. Bush Institute and cochairs the Re-Imagine Africa Coalition. Re-Imagine Africa, formed by a coalition of policy and business leaders devising new principles for making development policy more effective and growth-oriented. He is a board member of WorldTeach and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Since 1989, as either chairman or ranking member of the subcommittee that provides the funding for USAID’s operations and programs, I know the critical role that it plays in promoting and protecting the interests around the world. Its field missions are its greatest strength, and countless lives have been saved, conflicts avoided, and government institutions strengthened, thanks to the global health, social and economic development, and democracy programs administered by USAID. These programs are not charity. They are essential and complementary to the roles played by our diplomats and soldiers.

President Trump has talked about “America First.” We all want this country to be the best it can be, but slogans are not a substitute for effective policies. Creating jobs at home is not, by itself, a foreign policy. The United States cannot remain a leader in the global economy, where the gravest security problems we face can only be solved by working with other countries, if we reduce our engagement with the world. The vacuum we leave will quickly be filled by our competitors, and it will be difficult if not impossible to recover lost ground.

At a time when OMB is proposing to slash USAID’s budget and downgrade its overseas presence, the nomination of Ambassador Green is a positive signal. If confirmed, I look forward to working with him and subcommittee Chairman GRAHAM, as well as with our House appropriations subcommittee counterparts Chairman ROGERS and Ranking Member LOWER, to ensure that USAID has the resources it needs to continue and expand its presence and impact around the world.

VOTE EXPLANATION

Mrs. McCASKILL. Mr. President, I was necessarily absent for today’s vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the nomination of Robert Lighthizer to be U.S. Trade Representative, with the ranking of Ambassador. I would have voted no.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I intend to object to any unanimous consent request at the present time relating to the nomination of Courtney Elwood of Virginia to be the general counsel of the Central Intelligence Agency.

I will object because the CIA has still not responded to my letters from April 14, 2018, and April 5, 2017, requesting declassification of two notification CNs, about whistleblower communications. In 2014, the inspector general of the Intelligence Community issued two CNs about whistleblower communications. The first, sent on March 31, 2014, had the unclassified subject line “Whistleblower Communications—Clarification.” Both documents were classified Secret/NOFORN. I requested that the CNs be declassified as soon as possible. More than 3 years have passed since my initial request, and I still have not received declassified versions of the documents or an explanation of why the documents have not been declassified.

The information contained in the two CNs raises serious policy implications, as well as potential Constitutional separation-of-powers issues. The CNs do not appear to contain any information about sources or methods, and there is a strong public interest in their content. As a matter of respect, for a coequal branch of government, my declassification request should have been processed in a timely manner. Moreover, under the executive branch’s own regulations, there are time limits that apply to processing declassification requests and classification challenges that the CIA has failed to meet.

In addition, I have requested copies of the CIA’s PPD-19 procedures and policies which allow CIA whistleblowers to seek relief from reprisal, but the CIA has refused, stating that the documents are classified and for CIA’s internal use only. PPD-19 was largely codified by the Intelligence Authorization Act, and so too required by law to implement such a policy. It is now at issue in a Federal lawsuit challenging the CIA’s failure to adhere to its own procedures under the Administrative Procedures Act.

My objection is not intended to question the credentials of Ms. Elwood in any way. However, the CIA must recognize that it has an ongoing obligation to respond to Congressional inquiries in a timely and reasonable manner.

NATIONAL NURSES WEEK

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize the invaluable work of nurses. With 3 million nurses nationwide, these men and women make up the largest providers of healthcare in the country. I am proud to acknowledge the talents and successes of these dedicated health professionals as we recognize National Nurses Week.

These dedicated health professionals provide quality care to patients every single day. Their dedication and passion to caregiving is constantly on display, often during critical and stressful situations. The work they do helps save lives and gives reassurance to patients facing questions about their health. Wherever, on the front lines of healthcare delivery they are frequently the first line of communication when health problems arise. These healthcare heroes wear many hats.

Providing nurses with the resources they need to deliver quality care needs to be a priority. Last week, members of the Emergency Nurses Association from Arkansas shared with me one legislative fix to improve patient care. Amending the Controlled Substance Act to allow paramedics and other emergency medical services professionals to continue to administer controlled substances like pain narcotics when allowed by State law would improve emergency outcomes, particularly in rural areas where a medical facility is away. That is why I cosponsored legislation to amend the Controlled Substance Act.

Nurses are taking on more responsibilities in our evolving healthcare system in order to meet the needs of our aging population. They are being asked to do more with less and still provide the quality patient care they are known for.

If you are like me and have been cared for by a nurse, you understand the important work they do. I am grateful for the care they provide and proudly support nurses as a cosponsor of the Senate resolution recognizing National Nurses Week.

70TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LISTER-KNOWLTON VFW POST 9389

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize the Rutgers University-Newark senior debate team of Nicole Nave and Devane Murphy as they celebrate back-to-back national championships. Last year, at the National Debate Tournament, NDT, and the Cross Examination Debate Association National Tournament this year.

Last year, I stood on this floor to recognize Rutgers University-Newark’s victory at the National Debate Tournament at the University of Missouri-Kansas City. This year, I am extremely proud to be here once again congratulating Rutgers-Newark on another collegiate National Debate Tournament championship. This is truly an impressive and historic accomplishment. It is only the second time in collegiate debate history that the same team has won both national championships in a single year.

In addition to the national championships, Nicole Nave and Devane Murphy were also honored individually at the National Debate Tournament this year. Devane was named the NDT’s top speaker, and Nicole received the NDT second place speaker award. At this year’s Cross Examination Debate Association National tournament, Nicole earned a record-shattering five perfect scores out of eight. Nicole and Devane, the two best collegiate debaters in America, with their life experiences to shape their uniquely Rutgers-Newark debate style, one which has led the Rutgers University-Newark team to remain ranked as the No. 1 team in the Nation.

The Rutgers University-Newark debate team, founded in 2008, is sponsored by the school of public affairs and administration and the office of the chancellor, Newark. Under the leadership of Mr. KING. Mr. President, today I wish to honor the Caribou VFW on their 70th anniversary. The Caribou VFW, known as the Lister-Knowlton VFW Post 9389, was founded on May 11, 1947, by veterans returning home from World War II. The post was named after two local veterans, Private Evan Lister and CPL Edward Knowlton, who served their country during World War II and made the ultimate sacrifice when they were only 23 years old. Their dedication and service to our country will never be forgotten.

I also want to recognize Nicole Nave and Devane Murphy, the Rutgers University-Newark debate team, for their historic victory at the National Debate Tournament. These 70th anniversaries, of both the Lister-Knowlton VFW post and the ladies auxiliary, provide occasion to celebrate the storied tradition of service, both past and present, that the Veterans of Foreign Wars represent. Each of us is forever indebted to those members of our VFW who have served their country by risking their lives in support of the United States and to their families for the care and support they have provided. We are also grateful to the VFW for their continued service, supporting those veterans who have chosen to continue serving on behalf at all levels of government, and organizing a variety of community building projects.

In closing, I am glad to join with the members of the VFW and the ladies auxiliary in Caribou in honoring this 70th year of working on behalf of veterans, the State of Maine, and our great Nation.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

RECOGNIZING THE RUTGERS UNIVERSITY–NEWARK DEBATE TEAM

Mr. BOOKER. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize Rutgers University-Newark’s victory at the National Debate Tournament at the University of Missouri-Kansas City. This year, I am extremely proud to be here once again congratulating Rutgers-Newark on another collegiate National Debate Tournament championship. This is truly an impressive and historic accomplishment. It is only the second time in collegiate debate history that the same team has won both national championships in a single year.

In addition to the national championships, Nicole Nave and Devane Murphy were also honored individually at the National Debate Tournament this year. The Rutgers University-Newark debate team, founded in 2008, is sponsored by the school of public affairs and administration and the office of the chancellor, Newark. Under the leadership of Rutgers University-Newark chancellor Nancy Cantor, debate director Christopher Kozak, and debate team head coach Willie Johnson, the team has been ranked first in the Northeast for 4 consecutive years. In the 2014–2015 year, the team was ranked 14th nationally. Nicole, Dave, and I—along with the Rutgers University–Newark debate team have brought pride to my beloved city of Newark and to the entire State of New Jersey. I am honored to join with these outstanding students, their families, and the Rutgers University–Newark community in celebrating another landmark achievement in the Rutgers University–Newark debate team’s history.

Thank you.

TRIBUTE TO JACK YOUNG

Mr. DAINES. Mr. President, this week, I have the distinct honor of recognizing Jack Young, a U.S. Army veteran and teacher at Harlem Public Schools. Whether serving our Nation inside an Abrams tank or serving his local community at the front of a classroom, Jack has represented the character of the Treasure State in both settings.

After graduating from high school, Jack enlisted in the Army. He served our Nation on Active Duty for 4 years and completed two overseas assignments. Not long after finishing his military service, he attended Watertown State University—Northern and trained to become a teacher. In 2006, he began teaching at Harlem Public Schools. Since arriving in Blaine County, he has grown into a fixture in the local community. Jack has taught history and government to both high school and junior high school students. During the warm months, you will find Jack in the classroom teaching summer school, helping students rise to the next level academically. For the past 4 years, he has taught government courses at the Aanilith Nakoda College. Earlier in his teaching career, Jack was an assistant coach for the Harlem Wildcats football team. Through all seasons and across multiple academic levels, Jack has served his fellow Montanans by teaching the historic context and hard-earned value of our constitutional system of government.

Jack has excelled in his transition from a tanker to a teacher. The best part of Jack’s story is he loves what he does and plans to continue doing it for a long time. Montanans are grateful for folks like Jack who make our communities stronger. Thank you, Jack, for your service, and I wish you the best in the years to come.

TRIBUTE TO MICHAEL “MIKE” MUNOZ

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, today I recognize the hard work of my Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee law clerk Mike Munoz. Mike hails from Avon, CT, and will soon graduate from Georgetown University Law Center. As a law clerk on the Commerce Committee, Mike assisted the Consumer Protection, Product Safety, Insurance, and Data Security Subcommittee. He is a dedicated worker who has been committed to getting his job done by his clerkship. I extend my sincere thanks and appreciation to Mike for all of the fine work he did for the committee and wish him continued success in the years to come.

50TH ANNIVERSARY OF HELLS CANYON PRESERVATION COUNCIL

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize the 50th anniversary of the Hells Canyon Preservation Council. Without the council and its courageous work, there might be multiple dams despoothing one of the deepest gorges in North America rather than peacefully allowing the Snake River flowing through the Hells Canyon National Recreation Area and Hells Canyon Wilderness.

The story of the creation of the council begins in 1967 as a conflict-simulating damming exercise at Army military camps. For the past 45 years, the Snake River and the Hells Canyon have been designated a wild river and wilderness area, the Hells Canyon and northeastern Oregon and northeastern Idaho.

Mr. President, this is an important day because it marks the 50th anniversary of an organization whose vision of the Hells Canyon and the Snake River is that the River should remain wild and have no dams. For 50 years, Hells Canyon has been protected by the work of the Hells Canyon Preservation Council and its allies, including Senator Packwood and many other fine Oregonians, for their tireless advocacy for preserving wild nature for the benefit of all of us today as well as future generations.

Thanks to their work, we Oregonians today consider the Hells Canyon National Recreation Area, the Hells Canyon Wilderness, and the Snake River a place of natural beauty and a treasure for the people of Oregon and all of the United States.

RECOGNIZING FISHERS JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. President, I wish with great pride today to honor Fishers Junior High School of Fishers, IN, for their impressive victory in the We the People National Invitational held in Washington, DC, on April 28 through May 2, 2017. In light of Indiana’s proud tradition of civic engagement, it gives me great pleasure in honoring these students and future leaders of our communities. These individuals embody the fundamental principles of the Constitution and live by its principles both inside and outside the classroom.

The We the People National Invitational comprised of eight teams from across the United States. The qualified contestants included middle and high school groups from Arizona, Colorado, Florida, Maine, Ohio, Oregon, Virginia, and of course Fishers Junior High School.
School, representing the Hoosier State. To be in the running for the national invitational, student contestants must display their knowledge, as well as current political awareness and constitutional acumen by holding mock or simulated congressional hearings at the local or state level during the current school year. Once qualified, during the final competition in DC, similar to the simulated congressional hearings held at the local level to be one of the eight finalists, each class went before a group of judges. Teams were allocated a 4-minute introductory statement and then faced pressing questions pertaining to existing constitutional subjects as well as past from the judges. The winning team must show an exceptional understanding of constitutional principles applicable to historical and current issues.

For the record, I want to acknowledge each student of the Fishers Junior High School team who participated in achieving first place in the We the People National Invitational: Mackenna Adams, Izzy Alexander, Addi Arena, Blake Backes, Jackson Bakle, MacKenzie Boyer, Milan Colzani, Joe Conde, Kamryn Dean, Grace DeLong, Sydney Doyle, Madison Ewart, Faith Ferrall, Maya Fotedar, Abby Funk, Ray Gao, Abigail Garrison, Meg Gibson, Liberty Hayes, Morgan Joiner, Braden Kirkendall, Shea Koley, Ben Lilley, Tatiyana Lockridge, Olivia Lux, Ali Mohamed, Cassidy Robertson, Gracey Scholl, Kara Van Dyke, Jonah VanDer Kamp, and Bailey Wilson. Furthermore, I would like to recognize Mr. Mike Fassold for his efforts to teach and implement a passion for constitutional and civic engagement in his students.

Again, congratulations to the Fishers Junior High School team for their extraordinary victory, and thank you for representing your fellow Hoosiers. It is truly an honor to have brilliant students in the State of Indiana who in spire others with their knowledge, hard work, and dedication.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. DANIES:

S. 1097. A bill to postpone the deadline for the completion of the conversion of certain military technician (dual status) positions to positions of civilian employment by the Federal Government, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. DANIES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1097.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Armed Forces Reserve and National Guard Dual Status Review and Modernization Act".

SEC. 2. POSTPONEMENT OF DEADLINE FOR COMPLETION OF CONVERSION OF CERTAIN MILITARY TECHNICIAN (DUAL STATUS) POSITIONS TO POSITIONS OF CIVILIAN EMPLOYMENT BY THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) A September 2013 study conducted by a federally funded research and development center found that 21 percent of the military and other personnel of the Secretary of Defense as the Secretary shall appoint from among organizations and officials of the Department with an interest in full-time support of the reserve components of the Armed Forces, including the National Guard Bureau and the Adjutant Generals of the States.

(b) DUTIES.—The working group shall undertake a comprehensive review of full time support of the reserve components of the Armed Forces, including the following:

(A) An identification of the missions, purposes, and objectives of military technicians (dual status) in support of an operational reserve force.

(B) A review of the posture of current military technician (dual status) positions, and of the training, requirements, and assignments of dual status military technicians identified pursuant to subparagraph (A).

(C) An analysis of potential restructurings of the workforce of military technicians (dual status) in order to identify a restructuring that fully aligns military technician (dual status) positions with objectives for full-time support of the reserve components.

(D) An identification of the military technician (dual status) positions whose conversion to positions of Federal civilian employment under title 5, United States Code, would best ensure the achievement of objectives for full-time support of the reserve components.

(E) An assessment of the impact on the readiness of the National Guard for domestic operations of the conversion of positions identified pursuant to subparagraph (D) as described in that subparagraph.

(F) An assessment of costs and potential savings associated with the conversion of positions identified pursuant to subparagraph (D) as described in that subparagraph.

5. TRANSMITTAL OF REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Secretary of Defense a report on the comprehensive review undertaken pursuant to paragraph (4). The report shall include the following:

(A) A comprehensive description of the review and the results of the review.

(B) A description of military technician (dual status) positions whose conversion to positions of Federal civilian employment under title 5, United States Code, would best ensure the achievement of objectives for full-time support of the reserve components of the Armed Forces as an operational reserve.

(C) A transition plan for implementing a new force structure for full-time support of the reserve components, including for the conversion of positions as described in subparagraph (B) which mitigates any risks to readiness identified pursuant to paragraph (4)(E).

(D) Recommendations for the reform of personnel management policy for military technician (dual status) positions that address:

(i) the eligibility of military technicians (dual status) for appointment upon retirement from the Armed Forces; and

(ii) the process for appealing employment decisions.

(E) Recommendations for reforms of compensation and benefits policies for military technician (dual status) positions in order to provide military technicians (dual status) with such discussion, and recommendations and benefits with other Federal civilian employees of the Department of Defense under title 5, United States Code.

6. TRANSMITTAL OF REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall transmit to the congressional defense committees the report of the working group under paragraph (5), together with such discussion and recommendations in connection with the report as the Secretary considers appropriate. The Secretary shall publish the report, and any such discussions and recommendations, in the Federal Register at the time of transmittal.

7. CONGRESSIONAL DEFENSE COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term ‘congressional defense committees’ means the committees identified by section 101(a)(16) of title 10, United States Code.

I urge my colleagues to join us in supporting this much needed legislation to modernize our outdated regulatory system for personal care products, and I hope the Senate will pass this long overdue legislation this year.

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. FRANKEN, Mr. MARKEY, Mrs. GILLIBRAND, Mr. WHITEHOUSE, Ms. HARRIS, Ms. BALDWIN, Mr. BOOKER, Mrs. SHAHEEN, Ms. HIRONO, Mr. COONS, Ms. BENNET, Mr. MERKLEY, Ms. HASSAN, Mr. RUGGIERO, Mrs. SCHUYLER, Mr. DURBIN, and Mr. LEAHY):

S. 1114. A bill to nullify the effect of the recent Executive order laying a foundation for discrimination against LGBTQ individuals, women, religious organizations, and under the pretext of religious freedom; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to join with my colleagues in introducing a rescission bill to nullify President Trump’s Executive Order 13786, titled “Promoting Free Speech and Religious Liberty.” Unfortunately, this Executive Order does not live up to its title. Instead, it furthers the aim of this administration to diminish critical protections for women, minorities, and LGBTQ Americans.

I am deeply troubled by Section 3 of the Order, which paves the way for the Trump administration to roll back protections to preventive health services under the Affordable Care Act (ACA), especially for women and LGBTQ individuals.

Through new regulations issued pursuant to this Order, companies could use “conscience-based” objections to deny their employees coverage of certain preventive services that they have a right to under the ACA. This means that because of their employers’ moral objection, women could lose access to contraception, and those in the LGBT community could lose access to essential services, including cancer screenings or counseling for domestic violence.

I respect that we all have religious and moral convictions, but it is wrong to put employers’ religious views above individual’s rights to access basic health care. I also note that this section of the Order invites members of the President’s Cabinet to eliminate an accommodation President Obama administration made allowing religiously affiliated nonprofit employers, including large universities and hospital systems, to opt out of providing their employees with contraception coverage based on religious objections.

I am deeply concerned for objecting employers can receive contraception coverage directly through their insurance companies.

Seven federal courts of appeals have upheld this accommodation in the face of religiously based challenges. But with this Order, the President signals that his administration is likely to do away with the accommodation, which would deny contraception access to women whose bosses want to make this important and intimate decision for them.

The Order also directs the Attorney General to issue guidance to all agencies on “religious liberty protections in Federal law.” This language is concerning as it opens the door for the Attorney General to eliminate protections in federal rules and regulations for LGBT individuals and minorities.

The Attorney General’s duty is to enforce and protect the civil rights and constitutional freedoms of all Americans. This Order’s direction for guidance could represent a diminishment of critical rules affording equal treatment for all in America is a disturbing step backward. For example, there are rules protecting same-sex spouses’ ability to visit their partners in hospitals. Under this provision, new religious exemptions may be implemented to weaken these protections. Shelters could turn LGBT families away because of who they love. As the Human Rights Campaign has described, this provision opens the door to a “license to discriminate” even where basic services funded with government dollars are at stake.

This Executive Order opens the door to weakening the enforcement of longstanding tax laws against individuals, houses of worship, and other religious organizations engaging in political campaign speech. Notably, the Johnson Amendment was proposed by Lyndon B. Johnson in 1954 and is part of our tax code. It prohibits 501(c)(3) tax-exempt entities, including churches, from engaging in political campaign activity to influence an election. The Johnson Amendment does not bar nonpartisan voter education and registration activities, which are important to a strong democracy, nor does it prohibit speech on moral issues.

The President has promised to repeal the Johnson Amendment. Doing so could have a significant impact on political campaign fundraising and would change the current tax consideration for certain political contributions. While repeal of the Johnson Amendment is something only Congress has the power to do, this Executive Order clearly indicates the administration’s intention to undermine the separation between tax-exempt charities and religious organizations and political campaign activity in the tax code.

It remains to be seen whether the President and the administration will implement this Order in ways that will realize our worst fears about the kind of discrimination it could enable. But we know for certain that this Order represents a disturbing statement of principles and values. Instead of seeking even greater protections from discrimination, this administration has set the stage to undermine protections, especially for women and LGBT individuals. That is not what our country stands for.

Mr. President, I strongly urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the bill I am introducing today to nullify this troubling Executive Order.

Thank you. I yield the floor.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 162—REAFFIRMING THE COMMITMENT OF THE UNITED STATES TO PROMOTE RELIGIOUS FREEDOM, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Mr. LANKFORD (for himself, Mr. COONS, and Mr. RUSO) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. Res. 162

Whereas the United States Congress has a proud history of promoting internationally recognized human rights;

Whereas religious freedom is a fundamental human right of all people;

Whereas the free exercise of religion must stand for the right to practice any faith or to choose no faith at all;

Whereas every individual's rights to freedom of conscience, thought, and religion is guaranteed under the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted at Paris December 10, 1948, and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, adopted at New York December 16, 1966, which recognize, "Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief, and freedom, either alone or in community with others, and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief in teaching, practice, worship and observance;";

Whereas, during his 1941 State of the Union address, President Franklin D. Roosevelt noted that the "free practice of religion" was "a cardinal principle of citizenship" and that the world should be founded upon, including the "freedom of every person to worship God in his own way—everywhere in the world;"

Whereas the United States Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF), abuses committed by governments or social groups; and the incarceration of prisoners of conscience for exercising their freedom of religion or belief; and the U.S. government's serious and characterized by at least one of the elements of the 'systematic, ongoing, and egregious' Country of Particular Concern designation, Afghanistan, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Cuba, Egypt, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Kazakhstan, Laos, Malaysia, and Turkmenistan;

Whereas USCIRF also recommended that the Department of State designate the following non-state actors as entities of particular concern: Islamic State in Iraq and Syria (ISIS), Taliban in Afghanistan, and al-Shabaab in Somalia;

Whereas, according to the Pew Research Center Study, the two geographic regions with the highest government restrictions continue to be the Middle East-North Africa and the Asia-Pacific;

Whereas the United States Congress has recently recognized that Christians, Yezidis, Shi'a, Turkmen, Shabak, Sabeen-Mandeans, Kaka’i, and other religious and ethnic minorities in Iraq and Syria have faced severe violence against their human dignity and humanity perpetrated by the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL), and that ISIL seeks to eradicate the communities of these minorities;

Whereas Egyptian Coptic Christians have been repeatedly targeted and their aggressors have gone unpunished, including two suicide bombings conducted by ISIL that killed 44 people at Coptic churches on Palm Sunday 2017 and an attack in December 2016 that killed 24 Coptic pilgrims on Christmas; Coptic Christian, many of whom were women and children;

Whereas, according to USCIRF, Rohingya Muslims and other religious and ethnic minorities, including Christians, in Burma have faced ongoing persecution from state and non-state actors for decades, including incidents of intimidation and violence; the forced relocation and destruction of religious sites; violent attacks by mobs and the military; sexual violence and trafficking in persons; and an ongoing campaign of coerced conversion to Buddhism;

Whereas, according to USCIRF's most recent report, freedom of religion or belief in China continue to decline, with authorities targeting anyone considered a threat to the state, including religious activities of minorities, and arresting Christians for displaying the cross in their homes and printing religious materials, threatened parents for bringing their children to religious classes, and women from holding certain religious activities;

Whereas, according to USCIRF, the Government of Eritrea continues to target Eritrean Christians and Jehovah's Witnesses, suppresses the religious activities of Muslims, dominates the internal affairs of the Coptic Orthodox Church of Eritrea, and has engaged in the torture of religious prisoners;

Whereas apostasy and blasphemy laws are routinely used across the Middle East and North Africa to intimidate and punish minority faiths and those who would leave Islam;

Whereas, according to Human Rights Watch, in Pakistan, Christians, Hindus, and Ahmadis are often the victims of violent extremism; forced conversion and marriage of Christian and Hindu girls and young women; and the use of blasphemy laws are often used as an excuse to settle personal scores or stir up religious animosity against marginalized religious minorities, resulting in a climate of fear and a chilling effect on religious expression;

Whereas, according to the Department of State’s 2016 and 2017 International Religious Freedom Report, the Government of Iran continues to repress religious minorities, including Bahai’s, Christians, Sunni’s, Sufis, Yarasan, and other religious minorities; and the incarceration of new Christian houses of worship, destroying numerous religious facilities throughout the country, and targeting human rights defenders for legally representing the Christian community;

Whereas, according to the February 2014 report of the United Nations Commission of Inquiry on the Human Rights Situation in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK), there is “an almost complete denial of the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion.” Further, the Government of the DPRK “considers the spread of Christianity a particularly serious threat” and enforces severe punishments for the practice of Christianity;

Whereas the global religious freedom crisis we are experiencing today has created millions of victims and undermines liberty, prosperity, and peace in places vital to United States national interests—posing direct challenges to United States interests in the Middle East, Russia, China, and sub-Saharan Africa;

Whereas the absence of fundamental human rights, including religious freedom, contributes to persecution of minorities, religious extremism, terrorism, and instability;

Whereas there is greater peace, political and social stability, economic development, democratization, and women’s empowerment when human rights, including religious freedom, are protected and advanced; and

Whereas the United States has recognized, with broad bipartisan support, in the Frank R. Wolf International Religious Freedom Act (Public Law 114-281), enacted on September 16, 2016, that because the promotion of international religious freedom protects human rights, advances democracy abroad, and advances United States interests in stability, security, and development globally, the promotion of international religious freedom requires new and evolving policies, and diplomatic responses that are drawn from the expertise of the national security agencies, the diplomatic services, and other governmental agencies and nongovernmental organizations, and are coordinated across and carried out by the entire range of Federal agencies: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) reaffirms the commitment of the United States to promoting religious freedom as a fundamental human right and calls on the President and the Secretary of State, in accordance with the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998 (Public Law 105-292), as amended by the Frank R. Wolf International Religious Freedom Act (Public Law 114-281), to develop an action plan on international religious freedom and to integrate that plan into United States diplomatic, development, and national security strategies;

(3) in accordance with section 106 of the International Religious Freedom Act (22 U.S.C. 6415), calls on the President, in collaboration with the Secretary of State, the Ambassador at Large for International Religious Freedom, and the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development, to develop a strategic plan to direct grants funded by the United States Government towards civil society that are implementing innovative programs in key countries to train and work with local religious leaders of all religious communities, including mandated religious groups, in the importance of pluralistic societies, rights guaranteed under international law, and reporting mechanisms available to them within international institutions;

(4) urges the Secretary of State to implement the requirements of section 103 of the Frank Wolf International Religious Freedom Act (Public Law 114–281) and develop a training curriculum for all American diplomats in international religious freedom policy;

(5) urges the President, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Defense, and other relevant agencies to develop a comprehensive response to protect the victims of genocide, crimes against humanity, and war crimes and to provide humanitarian, stabilization and recovery assistance to all individuals from religious and ethnic groups so affected in Iraq and Syria;

(6) calls on the President and the Secretary of State to reestablish the Religion and Foreign Policy Working Group within the Department of State’s Federal Advisory Committee established by the previous administration, bringing together experts from government, universities, religious and other nongovernmental organizations to develop an effective multiyear plan to address religious persecution globally and protect and promote international religious freedom; and

(7) calls on the President, the Secretary of State and the United States Trade Representative to ensure that trade negotiations include religious freedom conditions as mandated by the Bipartisan Congressional Trade Priorities and Accountability Act of 2015 (title I of Public Law 114–26).
